

THE HISTORY ENGLAND.

A True and Impartial Account of the most Considerable Transactions in CHURCH and STATE, in PEACE and WAR, during the ·Reigns of all the KINGS and QUEENS, from the coming of Julius Casar into Britain.

WITH

An Account of all the Plots, Conspiracies, Infurrections, and Rebellions.

LIKEWISE

King WILLIAM the III.

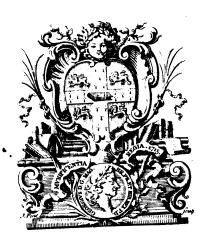

A Relation of the Wonderful Prodigies, Monstrous Births, Terrible Earth-Quakes, Dreadful Sights in the Air, Lamentable Famines, Plagues, Thunders, Lightnings, and Fires, &c. to the Year 1696. Being the Eighth Year of the Reign of his present Majesty

TOGETHER

With a particular Description of the Rarities In the several Counties of England and Wales: With Exact MAPS of each County,

By 70HN SELLER, Hydrographer to His Majesty.

LONDON, Printed by Job and John How, for John Gwillim, against Croßby-Square, in Bishopsgate-street, 1696.

T. O. T. H.E

And the state of t

Creat Sir day, bring the same of

I Presumption in this Dedication would be Unpardonable, were it not that the bject Matter of this Book is such, as does particularly Entitle Your Majesty thereunto, and makes it fit for a Prince to Patronine: For it is not only the History of the Lives and Reigns of Your Majesty's Royal Predecessors, but also a Description of Your Majesty's Kingdom of England, and Principallity of Wales: A Country that has been Rescu'd by Your Majesty out of the Jaws of those Devouring Monsters, Popery and Slavery, which were ready to swallow it up: 'Twas when the Nation lay Expos'd to the Will and Lust of her Insulting Ravishers, that Your Majesty, as the Guardian Angel of Great Britain, came to her Timely Rescue; Exposing Your Royal Person to the Danger of the Sea in the worst Season of the Year, that You might Save It from impending Ruine. And to whom could the History of England be better Dedicated, than to a Prince who has done Such Great Things for it? Who has Rais'd it from that Oblivion to which the Supineness of the late Reigns had Reduc'd it, to make the most considerable Figure of any Kingdom in Europe, of which Your Majesty has also again made it the Arbiter: Having Rais'd the Genus of the Nation, by Your Own Heroick Example, above what it was in our Third Edward, or Fifth Henry's Days. 'Tis true indeed, both those Princes obtain'd Great Victories over France; but it was then Weak and Divided; Void of all those Acquisitions that Lewis the 14th has Unjustly Rauss a from his Neighbours: Whereas Your Majesty has Humbled France in the very Zenith of her Glory, when The was Laying the Foundation of an Universal Monarchy.

The Epistle Dedicatory.

But it would be too great a Boldness in so Weak a Pen to attempt any thing in Your Majesty's Just Praise, when even the most Celebrated Writers must fall far short of Performing it as they ought.

That Your Majesty may long Live and Reign, the Terrour of Your Enemies, the Joy of Your Subjests, and the Delight of all Mankind, shall be the daily Prayer of

Your Majesties

most Humbie

Subject and Servant,

John Seller.

20 Northum berland SCOTLAND Coket I. Cariek Jergul and WALE S By John Seller. THE THE GERMAN IRISH Dublin 1 SEA OCEAN. Wicklaw armouch. Non-fall ) South hold orGEORGES CHANNEL. English Miles THE CHANNEL.

HISTORY

ENGLAND.

CHAP. I.

Of its Situation and Fruitfulness. The Manners, Cufloms, and Religion of the Antient Britains. How is was first Inhabited. Why call'd Britain; and the Name of ENGLAND given to the Part we Inhabit. Julius Cæsar Invited over, &c.

HIS Island of Great Rritain (containing at present Three Nations or People, of different Languages) is the largest in Europe; and inferiour to none in the other parts of the World, for Fertility, Power, good Government, and Glory of it's Great Astions. It is Situated in a healthful Climate, between 51 and 58 Degrees of North Latitude. Bounded on the East with Germany and Denmark; on the West with Ireland and the Atlantick Ocean; on the North with the Ducalidonian Seas; and on the South with France and Normandy.

2 F Λ

ENGLAND

of ENGLAND.

ENGLAND (the noblest and largest part of it. and a distinct Kingdom of it self, though at present all under One bappy Monarch )-formerly fustained many Kings at once, all of them commanding great Powers, as will appear in the Series of History. For in spaciousness it extends it self from North to South, in the broadest place, 386 Miles; and from the Lands End in Cornwal, to the Isle of Thanet in the East of Kent, it stretches 340 Miles; besides the spaciousness of the many Islands, as Wight, Man, Anglesey, and others of note, which I shall have occasion to mention, with every thing else that may give satisfaction to the Reader. It is, for Longitude, placed between the Parallels of 14 and 16, Containing 25 Cities, in which are Bishops Seas. 'Tis full of Parks, Rivers, and Forrests; and abounding in plenty of Arable Ground, Pleasant Pastures and Cattel, throughout its 40 Counties; and the like in the 13 Counies of Wales, once a distinct Kingdom, but now annexed to the English Diadems.

As to the time of the first Peopling this fruitful Land, some will have it soon after the Floud, by Seme-motheus, Sixth Son of Japhet; others that it was Peopled by King Brutus, in the 2887th Year of the Worlds Cteation; and that we are of Trojan Original: So that this mest be about 1231 Years after the Deluge, when Elic was High-Priest. But it is rather generally accepted (though many other Stories, without any good ground, or much credit, are mentioned) That a Colony of some neighbouring Nation (viz.) from Generally accepted over, and sinding it so pleasant a Soile, gladly planted themselves in it.

But fince this is doubtful, and all we can gather concerning the Natives, before the Landing of Julius Cassar, is from Forreign Authors, we must be content to pass these over.

As for the Name of this Island, being call'd Britain. it is held to come from the word Brith, which, fignifies Painting, or Staining their Skins; and also going Naked. (which was the Custom of the Antient Britains.) They Raced their Skins, drawing on them the Figures of Birds. Beafts, Flowers, Suns, Stars, &c. to distinguish their Dignity; which, like the flic'd Bark of a Tree, growing wider as they grew up, made them appear Terrible to their Enemies; and indeed they were, for the most part, Fierce and Cruel, (especially those in the Northern parts, who Traded not with the Civilized Gauls) infomuch that they Sacrificed every Tenth Captive (taken in the Wars among themselves) to their Idols, of which they had a great number, called by the Names of Planets, and in the form of divers living Creatures. And to these senseless Stocks their Druid's. or Magi (whom they accounted their Wise Men, and ferved in stead of Flamins and Priests) compelled them to pay their Adoration; Worshiping in Groves, accounting Fortified Woods their Towns and Cities.

They wore about their Middles Iron Chains, and to them, both Men and Women had short Swords girded; bearing in their Hands a Spear with a Brass Knob or Bell at the end of it, to make a greate noise of Terrour in Combates; the Women usually going to War with them, and not only Fighting Couragiously by their Husbands sides, Animating them by their Courage, but often Commanding Battalions and Armys, as the Romans too satally sound, when they strugled, with much Slaughter, 123 Years for this Island.

The Britains appear by all Authors to have been very sparing in their Diet; and not much given to Venery: Though they had many Wives in Common, amongst Brothers and Kindred, yet the Children redounded to his credit who first Cropt the Mothers

As

Virgin Rose. And by this means, as Plutarch (a very judicious Author) affirms, they were of so Healthful and Lively a Constitution, That many, if not most, in the warm Southern parts, according to the Term of a Natural Life, exceeded 130 Years. Yet they much delighted in Ornaments, as Bracelets, Beads, Iron Rings, &c. And preferred their Paint'd and Carv'd Skins before the most gaudy Cloathing.

Their Agriculture was but little, though the Earth much invited them to it, by its promising Fruitsulness. They had not the use of Ploughs, and only Sowed their Grain on the Mellowest Land after Rain; then laying great weights on bundles of Bushes drag it over, in the nature of Harrowing. Yet they had found out the way of making their Drink with sodden Barly, which (though perhaps in a higher Improvement) continues to this day, to the great Advantage and Health of the Moderate People of the Nation. As for the slesh of Fowl and Wild Creatures, they declin'd it; as they did likewise Fish and Milk. Then Hares were found in such abundance, That they Flock'd together like Sheep, searless of the Hunter or his Hounds.

Their Opinions in Theology were, That the Souls of Men Dyed not, but (according to Pythagoras) had a Transmigration from one Body to another. And on their Solemn Days their Druid's and Bards Sung the Praises of Renowned Heroes, such as had Dyed in War, or been Famous for any Rare Invention; and this they did to Incourage and stir up others to Imitation.

Their Coin was either Rings, or Iron, Imbossed Shieldwise, with the Device outward, on the Imbossment; valued at a rate proper to answer the price of such things as they Traded for at Home or Abroad, which was but little, especially Abroad, for want of Shipping. Casar observing at his coming, that their Vessels were made

Virgin Rijudicious and Live in the wa Natural delighted Rings, & Skins bef

Their much in They hat their Gralaying granthe nathe way which (continued Health continued Health cas the were four gether living the second s

Men Dy Transmit Solemn I of Renov Famous I Incourag Their

Their

wife, wit valued a things as was but !

made of Light Wood; and some of the Carkafes of their Boats Cover'd with Skins, &c.

Nor did they carry any Provisions with them when they fet out, only creeping along the Shoar, or, in Calm Weather, Wafting over to the Gallick or Belgian Shoar: And most of their Business was to carry Grain and Metals, with the latter of which the Island did then, and still abounds: And some are apt to think, for that cause, the Greeks Coasting in these Seas, and finding the Island abounding with Metals, Named it Britania.

from Prytania, Metal, or the Metal-Island.

As for ENGLAND (that now so called, Exempt from Wales and Scotland) it had its Denomination from the East Angloens, who seated themselves in the East Angle Kingdom, to the Eastern Sea, in the time of the Saxon Heptarchie, or Seven Kingdoms; and that Name (through all Revolutions and Changes) it has retained for above 900 Years. This Land has been taken for the Fortunate Island, set forth with many Praises and Encomiums by the Greek Poets; and Charles the Great (rightly) termed it, The Gramary and Store-House of the Western World.

Thus having given you a Brief Account of the Antient Inhabitants of this Country, I proceed to shew how it was divided amongst their several Tribes; and so come closer to the more follid Body of History.

ENGLAND and WALES was possessed by 17 Tribes of Native Britains, under these distinctions, viz. 1. The Canti, possessed Kent. 2. Regni, Sussex and Surry. 3. Durotriges, Dorsetshire. 4. Damnony, Cornwall and Devonshire. 5. Belga, Somersetshire, Wiltstere and Southamptonshire. 6. Artabatij, Berkshire. 7. Dobuni, Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire. 8. Catieuclani, Warwickshire, Buckinghamshire and Bedfordshire. 9. Trinobants, Hartfordshire, Middlesex and Essex. 10. Iceni, Susfolk, Norfolk, Cambridge and Huntingtonshires. 11. Coritani, Rutland Northamptonshire, Lincolnshire, Leicestershire, Derbyshire, and Notinghamshire. 12. Cornabij, Staffordshire, Worcestershire, Shropshire, and Cheshire. 13. Ordovices, Flintshire, Denbighshire, Carnarvanshire, Montgomeryshire, and Merionethshire. 14. Brigantes Paris, Lancashire, Yorkshire, Richmondshire, Durham, Westmoreland, and Cumberland. 15. Silulers, Herefordshire, Radnorshire, Monmouthshire, and Glamorganshire. 16. Dimetæ, Caermarthenshire, Pembrookshire, and Cardiganshire. 17. Ottodoni, Northumberland, Tweedale, Tiffedale, March, and Louthain,

Whilst these Tribes were scattered up and down in the several Counties, then full of Woods, which they Inhabited, Lud, King of the Trinobants, Dyed: He was wonderfully beloved, not only of his own Subjects, but of all the Britains, for the good offices he had done them, in reconciling their Differences, puting an End to many Bloody Wars that fell out amongst them; and civilizing their Manners, constituting fundry wholsom Laws, thereby making them lay aside many of their Barbarous Cuitoms. He held a free correspondence with the Gauls, and was much Honoured by them; their Kings fending him divers Rich Presents, as also Artificers to affift him in Building or Enlarging Troy Novant, or New Troy, which he afterward called by his own Name, Care Lud, or Lud Town, now the famous City of London, which then reached no further than Dong ate Eastward; the Houses standing up and down Angular, and not Regular in Streets: Yet he Inclosed it with a good Wall, defended by Bullwarks, and on it many Watch-Towers, calling its Western Gate Lud's Gate, which Name it retaines to this day placing his own Effigies, in Marble, on the Infide of it. At his Death he Recommended his two Sons, Andras gius and Temantius (being very Young) to the care of Cassibelan his Brother, who held his Regal Seat at Verulam, now called St. Albanes, in Hartford-shire. Upon the Death of King Lud the People came and offered the Principality to him, and the Heirs of his Body, by consent of the Three Estates of the Trinobants.viz. those of Essex, Middlesex, and Hartford-shire. But in consideration of his Trust, and his Nephews Rights, he contented himself with only a Part, for when they came to Age, he placed Andrageus in Troynovant, or London, joyning to it all Middlesex, and the Dukedom of Kent, which in that time he had Conquered, bringing the Canti under his Subjection. And to Temantius he gave the Dukedom of Cornwall his Right by Marriage, Reserving to himself Hartfordshire and Essex only.

Thus, for the space of Seven Years, the Nation continued in a happy state, after the Death of King Lud, before whose Departure a Terrible Blasing-Star, with a Bloody Taile, appeared at South West, for the space of Fifteen Nights; being likewise seen in many other Lands: Fore-running the Miserys that afterward befell this Kingdom. For now Andrageus, a Prince of a haughty Spirit, confidering his Unkle detained from him part of his Inheritance, raised a mighty power and Invaded Hartfordshire: But three Miles beyond Barnet. being Fought with by Cassibelan, he was there overthrown, with a fearful Slaughter, & soon after driven out of most of his Possessions; which so possessed him with Anger and defire of Revenge, That hearing Julius Cæsar, who was then but a Roman Consul, had subdued all Gallia, now called France, and a great part of Germany, and given Refuge to divers distressed

Princes,

Princes, restoring them to their Principalities upon their submiting to become Tributaries to Rome; and that he rather sought Fame and Glory, than to Enslave the People he subdued, being the greatest Captain that, or any former, Ages had produced, he resolved to cast himself upon him for Protection; preferring his Revenge before the Sasety of his Country; and great was the Destruction, and many the Miseries the War brought upon it.

The Young Prince, Armed with this Resolution, (notwithstanding the Grave Counsels of his Fathers Courtiers to dissivate him from it, laying before him, That he ought to submit his Private Injuries to the Publick Peace of all the People of the Nation) he took with him his Treasure, and some of his trusty Confidents, and Sailed in a small Vessel to that part of Gallia now called Normandy, where he found Casar retired from the Toiles of War, and setling the affaires of the Country, with a design to return to Rome, and obtain of the Senate a renewal of his Consulship, or longer continuation of his Government: When being Introduced by Casars Listor's, he bending one Knee to the Ground, and Rising again, Spake, in the Gallick Language, to this effect.

Most Mighty Cæsar, Great Captain of Rome, and of the World; behold a Distressed Prince of the Britains before you, craving your Protestion; and Imploring a Redress of my Wrongs, from you who are the Scourge of Tyrants, and ever compassionate to the Injured.

Cæsar wondering at first (by the strangeness of his Garb) who he should be, or to what this Discourse might tend, till having heard at large (as has been related) the cause of his coming, and the Fruitfulness of the Country; and Thirsting after more Honour to raise his Fame to what it at last aspir'd to, viz. The Empire

pire of the World, he not only comforted him, and eated him in his own Pavillion, but promised him stance, as Romes Confederate, to make War on his kle so soon as the season would permit, and his ires were setled with the Gauls and Germans.

CHAP. II.

Account of Julius Cæsars Landing in this Island. The Battels Fought between Him and the Britains, with various Success. The British Princes that for the Liberty of their Country withstood him and the succeeding Emperours: With Strange Wenders and Prodigies, &c.

7 Hilst Casar sent for fresh Legions of Roman Souldiers, to reinforce his Army, and all Warlike evisions to invade the Britains, they had notice of it m the Friendly Gauls, which much startled them in parts of the Island. Yet, preferring their Liberty bee their Lives; and finding their Embassy's rejected, less they would become Tributary to Rome) they, a General Council of all the Estates, Resolved on a we Defence: And among other Warlike Furniture, y brought into the Field Five Hundred Waggons, ed, by some Authors, British War Charriots. These I fastened to the Sides of them long Sythe-Blades, and rp hooked Sickles, so rank'd and order'd. That if ey were Worsted, they might retire amongst them shelter, or else, drawn with strong Horses, break among the Enemies Foot, and violently hurrying cut and tear them in pieces. And so Dexterous y were in this manner of War, That he who manged, or drove it, would Run swiftly on the Coppis, Raile, smite his Enemy, and return to the Body of Waggon, or Charriot, before he could be Charged Annoyed, Cassibelian.

TI

The HISTORY

watch, and give notice of the Enemies approach. So and then pursu'd the slying Prince, who got into Troythat when Cafar, with twelve choice Legions, which he wovant, now called London, and Fortified himself; brought in 300 Vessels, thought to have Landed by Sur-tauling Stakes to be driven down, with Lead about the prise, he found himself deceived, being beaten off three Heads of them, at the places where the Ferrys usually times by the Britains, leaving many Hundreds of his passed, to hinder the Enemies Boats: For the Thames Legionary Souldiers Dead on the Sands; and the last runing out of its Banks broad, and scattering in the time had his own Sword wrested from him by one Fields) was full of Ouse, and not passible but at certain Scava, a Britain, whom he afterwards Knighted, and places. However Casar (who was Fortune's Darling) for his Valour made him a Centurion, who did wonders with mighty labour laid over Bridges of Boats, and for him in his Wars against Pompey, stopping, at a Breach, Planks of Timber, &c. and took the City by Storm, a whole Army, with his mighty Sword, till his Body wet spared the Lives of the Inhabitants. Cassibelan fled being stuck with Barts like a Wood, after he had Slain to Verulans, but Cingitoria, King of Kent, was made. a Hundred of his Enemies, he fell Dead on the heap of Carkasses, and gained a lasting Memory in History.

Casar finding the Britains so desperately bent, to Sacrifice their Lives for the Liberty of their Country, Manned out Open Vessels with Arobers, and such as were dexterous at Sling-Stones and Casting-Piles, or Roman Darts; and lying out of the reach of the Britains Weapons, (who were not acquainted with that manner of War) found them selves obliged to retire from the Shoar: Whereupon the Roman Foot-men thrust on Land, and made good their Station till the Coborts of Horse came to assist them. Their place of Landing being where the Town of Bright-Hemsted now stands, in the County of Suffex.

Cassibelan perceiving himself at this time over-Match'd, made an orderly Retreat to the Fortified Woods, of which they had then great numbers; fending to the Princes in Confederacy with him for Affitance: But more Romans coming from Belgia to Cafars Aid, in a Bloody Battel Fought on Barbam Downs, Anne.

Mundi

Mundi 3873, he overthrew Cassibelan, wherein 40000 Cassibelan having gotten a numerous Army, Forti. of his People were Shain, and almost as many Romane. fied, as well as he could, the Shoars towards France; Among the Shain Britains were found many Women, setting a great number of Men on the Chalkie Cliffs, to whom the Victor caused to be honourably Interred; Prisoner. And Caravill, Taximagul, and Segonax. (Princes of the Southern parts of the Island) for siding with Calfibelian, had their Countries taken from them. Which so startled the Senimagues, Cegontians, Ancalits, Bribroffes, and Caffians, (the States of the Icenians) Seeing Casars swift progress, they sent Ambassadors to Treat of Peace; and submitted themselves Tributaries to Rome. And then he fixed Andrageus in his Principality; but he afterwards left it, to go with Casar to Rome; and attended him in his Wars abroad. Yet Cafar (who had feen but a little part of the Country, and took it for a Main Continent, or, as his Soldiers complained, when he Encouraged them to Invade the Britains, another World, different from what they had been in before) was no fooner call'd to repais the Seas, upon his other affaires, but the British Princes joyning together, made a great Slaughter of the Roman Souldiers, which compell'd him to come over again to quiet them. The like, upon the same Occasion, he did a Third Time: Laying a Tax of 3001. per Annum Tribute. But having cast in his Mind the gaining the Supream Dominion over Rome, he lest Comius his Deputy; and carrying away great numbers of the British Youth to serve him in his Wars, he departed. And by Pompey's Overthrow in Pharsalia, and two other Bloody Battels, made himself Emperour: But soon after was Stabb'd by the Senators, with 23 Wounds, in the Senate-House.

Augustus Cæsar, Nephew to Julius Cæsar, Succeeding him in his Empire, more Forces were sent into Britain; who still Incroached upon the Natives, and put them to divers servile Labours, as Building Forts, Digging Trenches, and Hewing Timber. So that finding themselves uneasie, betook them again to their Arms: Which made this Emperour three times prepare to come in Person, but was as often hindred by other Business. Till at last the Patace of Peace, in the 24th Year of his Reign, being Born, for the Salvation of Mankind, Anno. Mundi, 3870. A Universal Peace spread it self into all Nations: So the Gates of Janus Temple at Rome was stat, which had not happen'd for 300 Years before.

And in this Emperours time Cunobeline, a British Prince, who held his Royal Seat at Malden in Essex, and was Knighted, had leave to Stamp his Image on his Costn, after the Roman manner; and was made Deputy of Britain by Augustus, and Succeeded by Guiderius, his Son, in his Principality, who denied the Romans Tribute; but was thereupon Overthrown by Claudius Drussus, in which Battel himself was Slain, as some Historians have it, by one Hamo, a Britain, who privately sided with the Romans, & got near him under pretence of receiving Orders from him, so Treacherously thrust him through and Fled: But being suriously

pursu'd

pursued by Anviragus, the Kings Brother, he Slew him at the Sea side: From whose Death the Place was called Hamo's Haven; and is that where the Commodious Town of Southampton, in the County of Southampton, now stands.

Tiberius Casar Succeeded Augustus in the Empire. The Romans finding how advantageous this Island was to them (by reason of the large quantities of Metal and Corn they every Year Received by the Barks they fent: Loading Annually about 800) Encreased their. Collonies, as not being willing to have fo valuable a Prize wrested out of their Hands. Yet the British Princes Laboured earnestly to be rid of so uneasie an Incumbrance; but their designs did not end with Success: Wherefore they applied themselves to the Neighbouring Gaulls for succour, but they were in as bad, or worse condition themselves; being every where bridled with Roman Forts and Garrisons. So that Cogidunus, a Prince of great esteem among the Britains, Submiting. The Emperour bestowed several Cities on him to Hold and Govern them, paying a small Tribute; and by that means he brought over the rest. So that a fetled Peace ensued; and Arts began to Flourish, the Romans Teaching them to the Natives: And so each Nation grew more familiar and friendly.

In the 18th Year of this Emperours Reign, the Sun Rising Fair and Bright in the Morning, immediately drew in its Light; so that a palpable Darkness was over the Earth, which Frighted and Astonished the People; and made them think that the Light of that Glorious Planet was quite Extinguished; Yet, in some Hours, it recovered its Luster: The Cause not proceeding from any Eclipse of the Sun, by the Interposing Moon, but from the Wickedness of Man, who were at that time Crucifying The Son of Righteousness.

Which

Which made Dyonisius Areopagita, a Learned Philosopher, who wondered at the Cause of it, truly say, That either the God of Nature Suffered, or the frame of the World was about to be Dissolved.

Caius Caligula Succeeding Tiberius, his Debaucheries and Gluttony gave him leave to look but little after his Affaires in Britain. Yet he Banished Pontius Pilate, who Adjudged Chtist to Death, whereupon, in Despaire, he Slew himself, Anno. Dom. 41. He, more for humour and extravagancy, than advantage, plained Mountains, caused Fish-Ponds to be filled with Rose-Water, and Built Towers in the Sea.

But hearing that the Britains had Raised a Formidable War, and overthrown his Legions, he came with a powerful Army to the Belgian Shoar; but being Frighted at the Noise of such a War, he caused a Charge to be Sounded, and his Souldiers immediately to March to the Sea-side; where they were Commanded to fill their Helmets with Cockle-shells; and so Returned, braging them to be the spoiles of the Ocean.

He Reigned but Three Years and Ten Months; in which time the Britains had Recovered a great part of what they had Lost. Yet many of them Dyed of a lamentable Famine, which happened in the Last Year of this Emperour, by Reason most of their Corn was spoil'd with mighty Raines, Haile, and a strange Lightening, accompanied with Prodigious Thunder, that not only Burnt and Destroyed the Corn, but many Houses; and Killed Numbers of People and Cattle.

There also Gushed a great Stream of Blood out of a Rock near Flint in Wales, for Three Days; Fore-shewing that the Poor Britains must again Bleed: As in the sollowing part of this History will appear.

CHAP. III.

A Continuation of the Succession of Roman Emperours Commanding in Britain: The British Princes that Opposed their Conquest. Christian Religion first Planited here by the Apostles St. Paul and St. Peter; their Martyrdoms, and the Ten Heathen Persecutions; with the Dreadful Signs and Wonders fore-running them. By what means the Gospel was Established in a National Church. The Romans leaving the Kingdom, &c.

finding by the neglect of his Government, they had a fair prospect of regaining their Antient Liberty (which they prized above all Earthly things, and of the like Value it continues to this day among the Natives of the Kingdom) flew again to Arms (denying the Taxes that were lay'd upon them, and Exacted by the Roman Lieutenants with Rigour) making a great Slaughter of the Roman Souldiers at York and divers other places; which compelled them to send for Aid, when as

Claudius Drussus, who Succeeded Caligula in the Roman Empire, sent Aulius Plautus with a mighty power, constituting him Lieutenant; against whom Charactacus, a British Prince of the Silures, raised great Forces, and many Bloody Battels were Fought, Victory giving the Lawrells sometimes to one side, and sometimes to the other: But in the many consists the Roman Host was so much wasted and Intimidated, that Plautus sound himself constrained to Write to the Emperour speedily to come over with Suctour, and restore the face of War by his Authority and Conduct, or in neg. lecting it expect one of the most fruitful Provinces to be rent from the Empire: Upon this notice, he delay'd not to wast over with 500 Armed Vessels, Fought divers Battels, and took Caractacus Prisoner; and so setling affairs returned to Rome in Triumph; and the Britain finding themselves much weakened (the Plains being almost every where strewed with their Dead Bodies were constrained to live Peaceably during the remain. ing part of his Reign, which Began Anno. Dom: 43 and Ended Anno. 57. In his Reign the Virgin Man Dyed, in the 72 Year of her Age, and was Honoutably Buryed at Jerusalem: Not Translated, or taken up Alive and made Queen of Heaven, as the Papists foolishly imagine, to colcur their Idolatry, in paying Divine Adoration to Hes St. Peter in this Emperours Reign is held by Authentic Authors to have come into Britain, at the time that the Jews by feveral Edicts were Banished Rome: and fuccessfully Preached the Gospel, turning many to the Christian Faith; and having Ordained Bishops Priests and Deacons, he returned to Rome; where, som after, he was Crucified by Nero, the fucceeding Emperour, with his Head downward; at the same time St. Paul (of whose being in this Island, and dispencing the Goffel, there are many pregnant Testimonies, was Beheaded with a Sword.

In this Emperours Reign there was so hard a Frost, that all the Lakes and Rivers were Passible from the mindle of November to the beginning of April. A Con at Glasenbury broughtforth a Lamb. And a Star appeared Triangular, darting its Fiery Beams, like Swords and Javelins, towards the Earth for Three Weeks.

Nero geting himself chosen Emperour after the Death of Claudius Drusius (by the assistance of his Mother) sent Suetonius his Lieutenant into Britgin, where he found found Patrusagus, a British Prince of great Fame, Dead, who, by his Last Will, had Bequeathed Boduo, his Queen, (by some called Bonduca) and his two Daughters to the Protection of the Emperour, together with his Principality: But the Young Ladies (being very Beautiful) contrary to the Trust reposed, were Ravished by a Roman Tribune, after he had labour'd in vain to tempt their Chastity with Gifts and Flatteries. The Queen (upon knowledge of this great Injury done to her Children) exceedingly Grieved; and perceiving she was like to have no Redress, though she had complain'd of the Injury and violation of Trust: Mov'd by her Daughters Tears and her own Courage. the resolved to Revenge the Treachery. Whereupon, calling together the chief of her People, and some of the Neighbouring Princes, she presented the Young Ladies before them, with dishelved Hair, Raining a shower of Tears from their Sorrow-clouded Eyes; and rising from her Seat in a Majestick manner, declared her Misfortunes, inciting them to Revenge, and the regaining their Liberties, in these Words:

Let us Remember, worthy Princes (and others that are Assembled on this occasion) That we are Britains, the rightful Owners of this Country, by so long a possession that none knows any other than the Race we are descended of: You see (through Covetousness of our Wealth, and Thirst of Glory to Tyrannize over us, and Enslave our Liberties) these Romans having enough of their own, notwithstanding, first without a cause Invaded, and then Encroached on our Country, to bring us into Slavery: Behold what breach of Trust they have made, what Insolence they have offered; for which, and many other Injurys, there is no Redress but by the Sword: Let us take Courage then, and to regain our Liberties, and free our Country from such a Yoak of Bondage, freely expose our Live, and so Armed with that resolution.

resolution, we shall find them fly before us like a time-

Hereupon opening the Lappets of her Robe, there started out a Hare that she had purposely concealed, which slying upon the shouts that arose, animated the Assembly, and made them resolve on War.

And so secretly was the business mannaged, that the Britains Assembling by many small Troops in Woods, all on a suddain, at the time prefixed, joyned their Forces and fell upon the Enemy, little suspecting it, with fuch fury, that before they could gather their scattered Forces, Forty Thousand were Slain, and Suetonius compelled to immure himself in Troynovant, or London, and fend speedily for succours; so that most of the Midland Counties were recovered, and the Roman Fortresses, built to bridle the Britains with Garifons, Demolished: But the Carcasses lying un-bury'd corrupted the Air, and brought on a Plague which made great desolation. Yet the Queen pursuing this good fuccels, in divers Skirmishes destroyed 40000 more; however, at last being betrayed for a sum of Gold, the Poisoned her felf to prevent her Captivity, or being carryed to Rome to grace the Victors Triumph.

In this Emperours Reign began the First Persecution of the Christians, he causing the City of Rome to be Fired, and laying the Guilt to their charge: St. Peter and St. Paul fell Sacrifices to his Revenge, and he Tortured Christians by Day for his Pastime, and Burnt their Bodies by Night to light him to his Drunken Revels. His Mother Agripina, he caused to be riped open, on no other account than to see the place where he had layn; his Wife Popæa being great with Child, he Kicked on the Belly that she Dyed; and so far his Cruelty Extended to all Degrees of People, that the Senate Proclaimed him an Enemy to the Roman State, and Proscribed and Condemned bim to be Whipt to Death; whereupon he Fled, and in Dispair Slew himself, when he had Reigned about 14 Years Anno Dom. 70.

Sergius Galba Succeeding Nero, recall'd Suetonius and appointed Maximinus his Lieutenant in Britam; yet scarce had he Reigned Seven Months, e're his Souldiers Mutinied against him for his wicked course of Life; and as he endeavoured to secure himself from their Rage, by geting into a strong hold, one Locrian, a Legionary Souldier, pursued him, and struck off his Head. In his time Britain had Peace, yet a pressing Famine began, which lasted two Years, through exceeding Rains in Winter, and Droughts in Summer, so that many Thousands perished for want of Bread. And to him, Succeeded

Marcus Selvius Otho who Reigned only three Months and five Days, and then was Deposed and Murthered

by the unruly Souldiers.

Aulus Vitellius, for large Sums of Money procuring the Souldiers and others to Proclaim him Emperour, enjoyed it but a short time; for Flavius Vespasian waring with a Consulary Army against the Jews that had Rebelled, being chosen Emperour by the Asian Army, he sent 20000 of them to Depose Vitellius, and Proclaim him in Rome; which they performed, throwing the Murthered Body of Vitellius into the River Tyber which runs by that City, when he had Reigned in Drunkenness and Luxury about Eight Months.

Flavius Vespasian having thus gained the Empire, lest his Son Titus to mannage his Wars in Asia and came to Rome. This Titus after Three Years hard Siege, took the samous City of Jerusalem and utterly Destroyed it, as had been fore-told by our Saviour. So that from that time the Jews were scattered into all Nations of the Earth.

Upon this change of Affairs in the Roman Empire, the Britains were not flow to take the advantage for the regaining the Liberty of their Country; the Brigant; and Silures, gathering great Forces, Fought with Julius Frontius the Roman Lieutenant, and put his Legions to the Rout with so great a Slaughter, that the Fields and Ditches in the place of Battel were filled with the Bodies and Blood of the Slain; but fresh Forces arriving, they found themselves constrained to submit, and had (to augment their Miseries) great Tribute lay'd on them, so that they groaned under the burthen of their Opression. This Emperour began his Reign Anno Dom. 72, and Reigned Nine Years.

Titus Vespasian his Son succeeded him in the Empire, and fent Offers of Peace to the Britains who accepted them. He, for his good Nature and Humanity, was stiled Delicii Humani Generis, The Delight of Mankind: He took off part of the Taxes, and permitted the Exercise of the Christian Religion, which began to flourish in this Island; making it his business every Evening to Examine his Actions of the past Day; and if he had done no Good Deeds, he accounted that Day lost; yet his Reign was short, viz. Two Years and Three Months, Dying greatly Lamented throughout the Empire.

Donitian his Brother Succeeded him, a Person of a cruel Nature, who had fought his Death but was prevented: This Man began his Reign Anno Dom. 83, he turned his rage and fury against the Christians, causing multitudes of them to be Tortured to Death, not only in this Land, but throughout his Empire, inventing New Torments, which he first try'd in his Solitudes, on Flys and other Infects; so that when any one asked Wbo was with the Emperour? It was the usual answer Non Musca; not so much as a Fly. He appointed Julius Agricola his Licutenant, whom the British Princes of the North opposed, posed, making a great Slaughter of his Souldiers; but after many Skirmishes, in a set Battel were overthrown on the borders of the Tweed: Whereupon he Marched his Army through that Country now call'd Scotland, with little opposition; and was the first Roman that found this Country to be an Island, 136 Years after the Landing of Julius Casar. This Emperour began his Reign Anno Dom. 83, and Reigned 15 Years, having caused to be destroyed by several sorts of Deaths 10000 Christians: At his Death, a terible Tempest and Earthquake happened, Flames ascended out of the Ground in Cornwal, and the Sea broak in on the Effex-Shoar, destroying many Villages, Towns, People and Cattel; and Ebbing again, left many Monstrous Fishes on the Plains. Cocceius Nerva Succeeding this cruel Emperour, recalled his Edicts against the Christians, gave Peace to the Britains, and had done many good things, had he not been too hastily disappointed by Death: He was called the Patron of the Poor, being very Charitable. His Reign began Anno 99. and continued only Ten Months.

Trajan Succeeded Nerva; and at his first enterance began the Third Persecutian against the Christians; he appointed Spartianus his Lieutenant in Britain, with whom the British Princes Fought divers Battels with various fuccess, but were at last compell'd to submit, being wasted with Slaughter and a grievous Famine that happened amongst them. This Emperour's Reign began Anno 100, and continued 21 Years and fix Months; before his Death a terrible Blazing-Star appear'd, and the Sea in many places feemed all on Fire in the Nighttime; Strange and Amazing Voices were heard in the Air, and the Water of the Humber seemed for two Days of the colour of BLOOD.

Adrian continued the Persecution of the Christians with great earnestness, making the Streets of the Principal

Trebellus his Lieutenant in Britain, and though he had his Learned Counsellors, to Elutherius Bishop of Rome, no open War with the Britains, he wasted great num- to commune with him, and receive Instructions from bers of them, in digging Mines, draining Marshes, and him for the good Government of his Kingdom: The making Bridges over Rivers; to which servile Labours they were compell'd with rigor. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 121, and continued it 22 Years.

Antonius Pius Succeeding Adrian stayed the Perfecution of the Christians, restoring them to their Goods and Lands that had been taken from them. He constituted Lollius Urbicus his Lieutenant in Britain, against whom the Brigantes made head, surprized him in his fecurity, and cut off a great number of his Souldiers: by the Advice of your Realm, take a Law; and by the same, But afterward, in a bloody Battel, they were overthrown, compelled to submit, and pay large Taxes to be restor'd to their possessions. This Emperour was called the Patron of Virtue, from the gifts and rewards he distributed among pious and learned Men. In his time the Christian Religion flourished, and many places of Publick Worship were errected in Britain. He began his Reign Anno 139, and Reigned 23 Years.

Marcus Aurelius Succeeding Antonius, Abrogated his Edicts in favour of the Christians, and Persecuted them with great fury. Agricola was his Lieutenant in Britain, and kept the Country in Peace all his time. He began his Reign Anno 162, and continued it 19 Years.

Commodus, though of a very wicked Life, was, however, moved at the Sufferings of the Christians, and restrained the Persecution. In his time flourished King Lucius, a Britain, Son to King Coillus, who Built Colchefter, and great Grandson to King Arviragus, who Married the Emperour Drusius's Daughter. He (to the honour of this Nation) was the first King in the World that embraced Christianity; and by it set a good Example to others; and to be the better informed in fo cipal Towns stream with their Blood. He appointed sacred a matter, he sent Elvanus and Medvinus, two of good Bishop at this greatly rejoyced, and not only Infructed them in the Holy Faith, but fent Faganus and Damianus to the King with the following Letter.

Sacred

Good King, you bave received (as I understand by your Messengers, to my great Rejoycing ) in the Kingdom of Britain, by Gods Mercy, both the Law and the Faith of Christ Jesis our ever Blessed Lord; you have both the Old and New Testament; out of the same, through Gods Grace, through Gods sufferance, Rule you your Kigndom of Britain; for in that Kingdom you are Gods Vicar.

By this we fee what different Spirits the Bishops of Rome were of in the time of Primitive Christianity, to what they have fince been; they were then too Modelt to Usurp Authority out of their own Jurisdiction, and claim Supremacy over Kings; yet Luxury, Pride and Riches has fince brought them not only to fuch a prodigious height of Arrogancy to fet the World in a Flame with Wars and Mischiefs, but even to dare to Corrupt the Holy Scriptures, and by bringing in Traditions of their own, jostle out the Dostrine of our Saviour and his Apostles, filling the Nations with Binon, and laying them Disolate, where they have been opposed, or their Revenge could take place.

The King, upon this Advice, called a Council, and changed the Seats of the three Arch Flammins, or Heathen Priests, into Arch Bishopricks, Viz. at London, Glocester, and York; and the 24 Subordinate Flammins into so many Bishops Sees. The Idol Gods of the Britains were laid in the Dust, who were many, viz. Taramis, or Jupiter; Tutates, or Mercury; Helus, or Mars; Hues, or Bacchus; Belenus, or Apollo; Belisama, or the Moon; Owvana, or Minerva; Adreste, or Venus, Victrix of the Romans, Ceres, Proserpina, and other Infernal Deities, to whom they made Nightly Sacrifice, fo that now Christian Churches and Temples were Built in most Cities, Religion and Arts flourished, and the Nation had a prospect of Peace and Happiness, after many Miseries and Toils of War. This Commodus began his Reign 182, and Reigned 13 Years; the Britains living peaceably under him. To him Succeeded Didus Julianus. In this Emperours Reign little can be expected; he began it Anno 194, and Reigned only two Months. Julius Severius his Lieutenant in Britain, keeping things quiet in his time. Yet a terrible Blazing-Star appeared, fore-running Miseries at hand.

Septimus Severus Reigned next. This Man raised The fifth Persecution; and Heraclianus his Lieutenant being worsted by the Calledonians, a People Inhabiting the South of Scotland, he found himself constrained to come hither with a great power; and in cuting down Woods, building Bridges, and draining Fens, Bogs, and Moors, to follow those retiring Britains, and their Confederates, he lost above 50000 of his Men; yet at last he brought them under subjection: But upon his departure, they again betook them to Arms; which caused him to make a fecond Expedition, resolving utterly to destroy them from Sea to Sea; but Death prevented him, he Dying at York, when he had Reigned 18 Years, begining it Anno Dom. 195. After his Death,

Bassianus Caracalla was Proclaimed Co-Emperour with his Brother Geta, but he quickly Slew him, and took the Government upon himself: He had no War with Britain, but liv'd a Lewd Life, lying with his Motherin-Law, being very Proud and Cruel to his Subjects during his Reign, which began Anno Dom, 218; and lasted fix Years. O pilius

Opilius Macrinus began his Reign Anno 218, he Continued it but one Year and two Months; in whose time Britain was at Peace, and Trade Flourished.

Heliogabilus, or The Priest of the Sun, being taken from his Priestly Office, and Crowned Emperour, became fo Debauch'd, and great a Glutton, that he was abhor'd of all Men; his wishes were, That bis Neck might be as long as a Crane's, that he might the longer taste the sweetness of Food in its passage to bis Stomach; and That the whole People of Rome bad but one Neck, so that he might gain him a lasting Memory by striking it off: He lay with his own Mother, and divers of his near Kinswomen; fo that his not minding Publick Affairs, gave the Britains Peace, and Religion time to Encrease and flourish. He began his Reign Anno 219, and Continued it about Four Years. The next was

Alexander Severus. This Man proved a good friend to the Christians; suffered the Britains to live in Peace, and caused Arts and Sciences to be Taught them. In his time Armies of Footmen and Horsemen were seen in the Air over London and divers other places, Fight, ing; together with great Blasts, Thunders and Lightening, followed by mighty Storms of Hail and Tempests, that did much Danimage. He had no Wars with the Britains. The Almain Souldiers Mutinied against him when he had Reigned 14 Years and fix Months; and having first put his Eyes out, Slew him.

Maximinus, a Person of a Cruel Nature, raised The Sixth Persecution against the Christians, more violent (for the time) than any before: He designed to War on the Britains, but Death prevented him. He began his Reign 237, and Reigned only Three Years.

Gordianus Reigned but Forty Days, and had no War with Britain. Yet in his time the Iceni and Coritani Warred on each other about fetling the Boundaries of their Provinces, and made great Slaughter of their Péople, till the Roman Lieutenant decided the matter and fet them at Peace.

Claudius Puppienus and Celinus Balbinus were Co-Emperours, but little in Britain was done in their time, they begining their Reign 239, and continued it only Two Years; nor in the time of Antonius Gordianus who Reigned Four Years. Alfo Julius Phillipus who fucceeded him had no War with Britain. He was a great favourer of the Christians, and fome Historians allow he was Baptized into the Chriflian Faith; fo that the Natives of this Kingdom finding Advantages from the Arts they Learn'd of the Romans, and confidering how long they had strugled in vain, to the vast effusion of Blood, quietly submitted, and became Companions with them as one Incorporated People.

Decius sent out his cruel Edicts for The Seventh Perfecution against the Church of Christ, wherein many fell here for their Religion; but no open War happened. At his coming to the Throne, it Rained Blood in divers parts of this Kingdom, and a Terrible Bloody Sword was seen in the Air for Three Nights, a little after Sunset. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 250, and

continued it Two Years.

Trebonianus and Volusianus Succeeded him, as joynt Emperours, Anno Dom. 252, they had no War with Britain, their Reign continuing but Two Years and odd Days.

Emelianus, who Succeeded them, Reigned only Two Months; for indeed the Pratorian Souldiers having taken upon them to make and unmake Emperours, let the Empire to Sale as often as they pleased, displacing one and placing another for Gain; some of which they Murthered, and others they Banished, as the humour ferv'd them. Valerianus, Valerianus, an Enemy to the Christians, being placed on the Throne, notwithstanding their supplications; and protesting to do any thing for him, for they might enjoy their Religion, he fent out his Bloody Edicts to Persecute them in all the Roman Provinces, spilling their Blood like Water: He caufed St. Laurence to be Broyied Alive on a Gridiron, which the Martyr endured with Invincible Patience, only faying, Turn the other Side, O Tyrant; for this is broyled enough; and so by his constancy in Suffering, Converted even some of his Tormentors, who afterward, for publick owning the Faith, were put to Death. St. Cyprian likewise suffered Martyrdom under him. But God stayed this issue of precious Blood, by cuting off the Tyrant, when he had Reigned about two Years; in which time Britain had no Wars, nor in the time of Galienus who Succeeded him, the he Reigned Fifteen Years.

Flavius Claudius began his Reign Annoi Dom. 269; he Invented divers new Torments to be put in practice against the Christians, but God cut him off before he could put them in practice, when he had Reigned two Years. During his time the Britains were in Peace; but a Terrible Earth-Quake happened, that overthrew many Buildings.

Quintillius, soon after he had taken the Empire, finding a Cohlpiracy of the Great Ones against his Life. retired to a Summer-House in his Garden, and there opening his Veins, prevented their Malice by voluntarily Bleeding to Death. In his time peace was continued in Britain.

Aurelianus began his Reign Anno Dom. 271, he raised The Ninth Persecution against the Christians; and in his five Years Reign, by casting them to wild Beasts in the Amphitheatres, Burning them at Stakes, and divers other Torments, destroyed the Lives of 300000 Tacitus. of them.

Tacitus, who Succeeded him, recalled his Bloody Edicts, and fent Letters of Comfort to the Afflicted Britains, who Suffered Grievously in the General Persecution. But his good intentions were cut off by Death, he Reigning color Sin Manual Persecution.

he Reigning only Six Months.

Florianus, Succeeding him, had a shorter Reign, viz. Two Months: These had no War with Britain, nor Probus his Successor; so that they having a long Peace, built large Ships, and Traded Abroad in divers Countreys before unknown to them, bringing home store of Riches from other Countreys, for the native product of their own; Establishing many wholsom Laws; some of which were,

1. That Religious Worship should be Observed under great Penalties; for the Despisers or Contemners of it were to suffer Death.

2. That a certain number of Ploughs should be used in every County, to prevent Scarcity of Bread, with Penalties to be Institted on those that lessened the Number.

3. That no Oxen, or Labouring Beast, should be Seized for Debt.

4. That Buying and Selling should be by certain set Weights and Measures.

5. That Theeves, Robers, and Idle Perfons, should be severely Punished.

Marcus Aurelius Carus began his Reign Anno Dom. 282. In his time the Britains Levyed War against Carancius his Lieutenant, and he being displeased that Aiestus was sent to take his Command, after divers Battels, reconciled himself to them, and became of their party; but was Slain by Alestus in a Bloody Battel, wherein near 40000 on both sides fell. This Emperours Reign lasted not above a Year; and was Succeeded by

Dioclesian, Anno Dom. 284. This Emperoursound the Britains in War against him, after they had Enjoyed Eighty

Eighty Years Peace, which had much Inriched the Country: Alectus was his Lieutenant, who Slew Carancius; but pursuing the flying Britains into Lud's-Town, or London, he was Slain by Asclepiodotus, Duke of Cornwal, with many Thousands of his Romans; and among them one Gallus a great Commander, flying to a Brook on the East-side of the City, was Slain; from whose Death it took the Name of Gallus-Brook; afterwards called Gallbrook, now corruptly Walbrook. But in the next Battel the Duke of Cornwal was Slain by Coilus. Duke of Colchester. This Dioclesian began The Tenth and Last Heathen Persecution against the Christians, which was continued fo Sharp and Bloody by new invented Torments, that Cities were left desolate, many Thoufands flying into Dens and Caves, where in Wildernesses and Mountains, among Wild Beasts, they led (the poor, yet) contented Lives, in the enjoyment of their Religion. With him Maximinianus was Co-Emperour. Dioclesians Reign continued but Three Years, and the other Four Years, in which time a Sea of Christian Blood (as I may term it) was shed.

Confantinus Clorus came into Britain to quiet the Calledonians and Pists, who took Arms in the Northern parts; which done, he cast his Eyes on the admirable Beauties of Hellena, Daughter to King Coilus of Colchester, and finding her Chastity proof against Gold, Threats or Perswasions, he Marryed her; and for her sake was a great favourer of the Christians; who, like another Hester, stood between them and the Grave: For Alban, stilled The First, or Proto-Martyr of this Island, had lost his Head, and gave the Name of St. Albans to Verulam, the place where he Suffered: Aron and Julius were Martyred at Leicester, and about 1000 Christians (in Dioclesians time) at Litchfield. On this Christian Princes he Begat Constantine the Great, the First Christian Emperour: He began his Reign Anno Dom. 291, and Reigned Thirteen Years, Dying at York, then the chief Seat of the Romans.

Constantinus, Galerius, Maximianus, Severus, Maxentinus, Licinius and Martinianus, after the Death of Constantinus Grasped the Empire; sometimes Reigning Single, and at other times Joyntly; Opressing the People with great Cruclties, giving up whom they pleased to each others Revenge, Destroying many Christians, and tying the Living to the Dead, Mouth to Mouth, till they were Poisoned with the Stench of the Carcasses: At last, in the height of their Tyrany, they were Overthrown by Constantine the Great, who, before the joyning of the Battel, saw a Bright Cross in the Air with these Words, In boc Vincis; In this thou shalt overcome; so gaining the Victory, and being established on the Throne, he became a Christian.

Constantinus Magnus, or Canstantine the Great, Was Born in Britain, and w the Mothers side of this Nation. as has been faid. He affociated with him in the Empire his Sons Crifpus, Constantinus, Constantius, and Constance; each Ruling large Provinces. He Built Constantinople, and removed the Imperial Seat thither; he Commanded the Christians every where to Build Churches and Temples, threw down the Idols of the Heathen Gods, Endowed the Churches and Bishops with large Possessions; he appointed Silvester, then Bishop of Rome, by whom he had been Baptized, to wear a Crown of Gold; but he, in Humility, refused it, for a Phrygian Miter; though a Triple-Crown of Gold adorn'd with Pretious Stones has not been held Ornamental enough for some of his Successors, the Bishops of Rome. The Government continued under these Co-Emperours from the Year 312, to the Year 350.

Rome, himself Digging in the Foundations, and carrying away Twelve Baskets of Earth, in honour of the Twelve Apostes. Some say his Conversion was wrought by a Vision, which told him his Leprose (a Disease with which he was troubled) should be Cured, if he recalled Sylvester, and the rest of the Clergy, from Banishment; others, that being in distress for Water, he commanded the Legion of Christians in his Army to Implore their God to send Rain on the Earth; at whose Prayers the clear Sky was Mantled in Blackness, and the Clouds being rent with Thunder and Lightning, such abundance of Water poured down, that the Army was supplyed, and from that time that Legion was called The Thundering Legion. In his time was the sirst

General Council at Nice against the Arians.

Julius Apostata, or Julian the Apostate, began his Reign after an Interregnum of Six Years, Anno Dom. 256. He was (before his coming to the Impire) a Christian, but then changed to be their mortal Enemy, Writing a Blasphemous Book against Christianity, denying Christ to be the Son of God, calling him Gallilam, and the Curpenters Son, in derision. But going to War against the Persians, he was stricken by an Arrow, from what Hand was never known; when pulling it from his Side, he threw Handfulls of his Blood into the Air, saying Vicisti Galilaa, Thou bast overtome me, O Galilaan? and thereupon breathed out his wicked Soul. He had no Wars with the Britains, though he Reigned Seven Years.

Journamus began his Reign 363. He was Baptized into the Christian Faith, confirmed the Peace with the Britains, lead a good Life, and was used to say, O that I might Govern Wise Men, and Wise Men Govern me! He gave large Gifts to the Ghurch, Wo.

Valentinianes defended the Britains, by Theodofius his Lieutenant, against the Piets, who began to Invade them; he promoted Christianity; and capsed idolations Sacrifices to be lay'd aside throughout his Empire.

Ruling with the former Four Years, beginning his Reign Annu 365. He at first recalled Nazianzen and Basil from Banishment, and was Baptized by Endoxing; but after turned Arian, and Persteuted the Orthodox Clergy; and when they sent Petitions to him, he caused Eighty of them to be carryed to Sea in a Ship, and the Ship set on Fire. But Gratian was more Merciful, and did many good Acts; Building the ruined Churches, and calling home the Banish'd Clergy: He Reigned Six Years; but neither of them hadany Wars with Britain.

Maximimus and Kalentinas, began to Reign Anno Dam. 373, and are held to reign about Six Years; though History forms to take but little notice of the former. The Britan in their time were free from Wars.

Theodosius began his Reign, and continued it about Four Years. Flavius Stillico was his Deputy in Britain; but I read of no Wars with this Nation, his Hands being otherwise fill'd in opposing the Goths, and other Barbarous Nations, who broke like a Torrent into the Roman Provinces. In his time was held The Second General Council, and the First at Constantinople. Great Damages by Sea and Land were sustained by an Earth-Quake, which lasted Six Months.

Arcadius and Honorius, Co-Emperours, began their Reign 384, and ended it 402. In their time, at Noonday, a strange Fire from Heaven penetrated the great Church at Constantinople, fastened on the Bishops Seat, and consumed it; afterwards, sprouting up like a Piradid, it destroyed the Roof; then passing through the midst

Liq the two

Ru

Rei Bas but Cle Eig Shi did and Yea

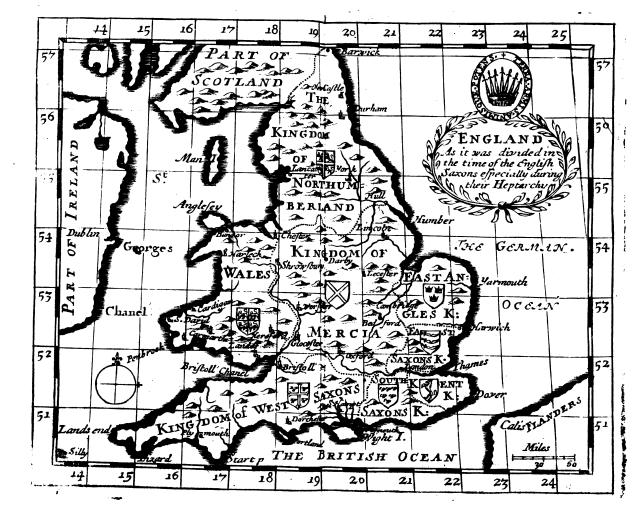

Dan thou form Was

Four but ing Bark

Rom neral Dan

Qual Reig day, Chur

and c

midest of the People, seized on the Senate-House, and lay'd it in Rubish. And soon after the Church and Rolling Empire were over-run, and lay'd wast by the Barbardus Nations, viz. Huns, Goths, Vandals, Alabars, &c. which God by these things no doubt fore-shewed, and afterward suffered, for their Pride, and other reigning Sing.

Theodosius the Youngen, and Valentinianus, began their Reign 402. In their time The Third General Council was held at Epbesus, the first held there. And now the Red Horse with his Rider mentioned in the Revelation seemed to be sent forth to take Peace from the Earth. The Roman Empire was Invaded in all parts, so that they were forced to re-call their Souldiers from Britain and other remote Provinces, to aid them nearer home; leaving this Island after they had possessed it 597 Years. And then the Saxons (being call'd in as Friends to affist them against the Picts) proved greater Enemies; as will appear in the following Chapter.

CHAP. IV.

How, on the Departure of the Romans, the Picts and Scots.
Invaded the Britains. The Succours the Romans fent them; and the Wall built from Sea to Sea, to prevent Incursions. By what means the Saxons were called In, in the Reign of King Vortigern, and how they got Footing so Strongly, as to fetle their Heptarchie, or Seven Kingdoms. Their Original, Manuers, Laws, Customs and Religion.

HE Romans (as is faid) being embrayled in dangerous Wars in Italy, (and other Provinces in their vast Empire) having left this Kingdom naked and defenceless by draining the Youths of Britain to serve them in Transmarine parts, of whom afterwards they fetled a Colony in France, or antient Galling which is now called Britany: The Pids, a People of Germany, who had Established a Kingdom in the Marches of England and Scotland; took this opportunity to engroach on the Britains, in the South and West Counties; but finding themselves too weak to make any confiderable advances, they Leagued with the Scots, who possessed the Northern parts of the Island, and divers small Islands scatter'd in the Ocean towards the Coast of Denmark and Norway. These joyntly raising great Forces broke in violently, making great Slaughter and Ravages in Cumberland, Northumberland, Durham, Yorkshire, and other Northern Counties; laying all Religious Places waste with Sword and Fire, so that the distressed People fled before them: Yet the Britains took Courage, and gave them Battel; but after this, and several other overthrows, they found themselves so weakened, that they were constrained to send Embassa-dors . to Honorius the Roman Emperour, Imploring his Protection, to fave their finking Country out of the Hands of their Merciless Enemies. This good Emperour, compassionating their Sufferings, fent a choice Legion by whose assistance (and instructing them in the Millitary Art ) they with great Slaughter drove the far-advanc'd Picts and Scots beyond the Marches; and to exclude them the British Provinces, a mighty Wall, with vast Labour and Expence, was erected from the Frith of Edenborough, to the City Alcluith on Dumbriton, with Bullwarks and Watch-Towers, in which Guards were placed, to give notice of the Enemies approach, and to defend the Stupendious Work: But it little availed, for no sooner was the Roman Legion recalled, but the Piets and Scots affembled in great Numbers, and with their long Hooks and Bills pulled the half-Starved Britains from their Battelments.

of ENGLAND. ements, and with an Engine called a War-welfe a passage through, and then with all their power H in like a Torrent, laying every thing waste before whilst others from Scotland came in their Carroghs all Barks, and Landed on the Banks of the Humber. arms. The poor Britains finding themselves so v distressed between two infolent Enemies, sent Embassaders a second time to Valentinian the Third. Emperour of Rome, with Ront Garments, and on their Heads, in a mournfulmanner, to implore hat he would not suffer a Province which had been fo hable to the Roman State, to fall under the Scorn and nce of Merciless Pagans; setting forth at large the lies their Country laboured under, with such ing Oratory, that the Emperour compassionating Sufferings, fent two Legions of Foot, and three Coof Horse, who coming unexpectedly on the Ravenboilers, overthrew them with a terrible Slaughter, ling the Fields and Lanes with their Dead Bodies? hg and purfuing them beyond the Wall, taking for the chief City of the Pitts, building a stronger than the former, of Stone, and mighty Piles of er, the Ruins of which are vilible at this Day; it then Twelve Foot high, and Eight broad; traig the Island from Sea to Sea; and for the goodhe Romans bore the Britains, they taught them the of Arms, and manner of Intrenching, furnishing with Weapons and other Necessaries; and having affaires, they took their leave, telling the Natives, Mourned their Departure, That they must take ge and Defend themselves, for as much as the Romans not anymore undertake such chargeable and hazardous es, for their sake, seeing they had powerful Enemies to nd with nearer bome. However, the Romans deing, and they being Oppressed again by their old wards they setled a Colony in France, or antient Ga which is now called Britany: The Picts, a Peopl Germany, who had Established a Kingdom in the ches of England and Scotland, took this opportunit encroach on the Britains, in the South and West C ties; but finding themselves too weak to make confiderable advances, they Leagued with the who possessed the Northern parts of the Island, and vers small Islands scatter'd in the Ocean toward Coast of Denmark and Norway. These joyntly ra great Forces broke in violently, making great Slau and Ravages in Cumberland, Northumberland, Dut Yorkshire, and other Northern Counties; laying a ligious Places walte with Sword and Fire, so the diffressed People fled before them: Yet the Bu took Courage, and gave them Battel; but after and several other overthrows, they found themsel weakened, that they were constrained to send Em dors to Honorius the Roman Emperour, Implorin Protection, to fave their finking Country out c Hands of their Merciless Enemies.

Enemics.

This good Emperour, compassionating their Sings, sent a choice Legion by whose assistance (as structing them in the Millitary Art) they with Slaughter drove the far-advanc'd Pids and Scoyond the Marches; and to exclude them the 1 Provinces, a mighty Wall, with vast Labour and pence, was erected from the Frith of Edenboroug, the City Alcluith on Dumbriton, with Bullwark Watch-Towers, in which Guards were placed, to notice of the Enemies approach, and to desent Stupendious Work: But it little availed, for no se was the Roman Legion recalled, but the Pids and assembled in great Numbers, and with their long I and Bills pulled the half-Starved Britains from

Batteln

Battlements, and with an Engine called a War-wolfe broke a passage through, and then with all their power rushed in like a Torrent, laying every thing waste before them, whilst others from Scotland came in their Carroghs or small Barks and Landed on the Banks of the Humber. in fwarms. The poor Britains finding themselves so hardly distressed between two infolent Enemies, sent their Embassadors a second time to Valentinian the Third. then Emperour of Rome, with Rent Garments, and Dust on their Heads, in a mournfulmanner, to implore him That he would not suffer a Province which had been fo serviceable to the Roman State, to fall under the Scorn und Insolence of Merciless Pagans; setting forth at large the Miseries their Country laboured under, with such moving Oratory, that the Emperous compassionating their Sufferings, fent two Legions of Foot, and three Coborts of Horse, who coming unexpectedly on the Ravenous Spoilers, overthrew them with a terrible Slaughter. covering the Fields and Lanes with their Dead Bodies? beating and pursuing them beyond the Wall, taking Camelon the chief City of the Pilts, building a stronger Wall than the former, of Stone, and mighty Piles of Timber, the Ruins of which are vilible at this Day; it being then Twelve Foot high, and Eight broad; traverling the Island from Sea to Sea; and for the goodwill the Romans bore the Britains, they taught them the Art of Arms, and manner of Intrenching, furnishing them with Weapons and other Necessaries; and having fetled affaires, they took their leave telling the Natives, who Mourned their Departure, That they must take Courage and Defend themselves, for as much as the Romans could not anymore undertake such chargeable and bazardous Voyages, for their sake, seeing they had powerful Enemies to contend with nearer bome. However, the Romans departing, and they being Oppressed again by their old Enemics.

whereupoa

Enemies, sent this Deplorable Letter to Etius Prefident of Galia, for Assistance; Superscribed

To Ætius the third time Conful, the Groans of the BRITAINS, Viz.

The Barbarians drive us to the Sea, and the Sea beats us back upon them; between these Extreames we are exposed. either to be sain with the Sword, or drowned in the Waves; and to avoid either, we find no Remedy, uniess, most Excellent Roman, you will compassionate our extream Missery. and send us speedy Aid, to repel our cruel Enemies. This, however, prevailed not; for the Romans unable to defend themselves against the Huns and Vandals, renounced their claim to this Island, refusing to fend any more Forces: Whereupon, after divers unfuccefs. ful Bantels, some of the Britains, through Famine, were forced, to, yeild themselves Slaves to their Enemies; but others (preferring Liberty before Life) betooke them to the Fastnesses in Mountains and Caves, where many Perished through Cold and Hunger; and foon after a dreadful Blazing Comet appearing, fuch a Pestilence sa fued, that the Living were not able to bury the Dead; which obliged the Fifts and Scots (as if driven out by the hand of Meaven) to relinquish their Conquests, and retire to their own Country's, which gave the Britains leave to come out of their Woods, Caves, erc. and Till the Land, which brought forth fuch Plenty, that the Famine was foon forgot.

And now they thought of chusing from among themsclyes, (according to the manner of the Romans) a chief Captain or Governour, to Lead their Armies; when calling a Council, Vortigern was Elected King; who being too weak to oppose the returning Piets and Scots, (in a fatal time) he sent Embassadors to a prevailing People

People in Germany called Saxons, imploring their Aid, with a description of the pleasant Situation and Fruit-fulness of the Island; which so enflamed them with a desire of possessing it, that they made no difficulty to consent to what was required by the King; so that in the Year of Christ 449. Hengist and Horsas two Brethren of chief Command among them, Landed at Ebstheet in the Isle of Thanet, with about 15000 Men, who joyning with the Britains marched against the Piets and Scots who had ravaged the Country as far as Stamford in Lincolnshire and in a great and memorable Battel overthrew them, killing divers of their principal Leaders, pursuing and forcing them within their own Borders.

For this good Service, the Saxons had the Isle of Thanet appointed them to refide in, with a confiderable Pension; but their two Generals, having before cast in their minds no less than the possession of the Kingdom, Hengist prevailed with Vortigern to put away his Virtuous Queen, by whom he had Three Sons, Viz. Vortimer, Catigern, and Pascentius, to make way for Romena his Daughter, with whom the King was Enamoured upon her Drinking to him, and feeing her naked Breafts at a publick Feast; and no sooner had he Marryed her. but the Saxons were put in possession of Kent; which spacious County, abundantly fruitful in all things, did not satisfie his Ambition; but taking advantage of the Discontent the Britains shewed for the Divorce of their Queen, and advancing a Pagan in her stead, he Quarrelled for enlargement of Pay; which not being speedily complyed with, he made a League with the Pitts; fo that one Army advancing from the South, and the other from the North, layed the Country waste in a miserable manner; especially upon the coming over of fresh Forces from Germany, as Jutes, Angles and Saxons;

whereupon the British Nobles assembled, and reprefented the danger to the King, who (ruled by his new Wife) took little notice of it; which made them, after he had Reigned Sixteen Years, defert him, and Swear Allegiance to Vortimer his Eldest Son; who being a couragious young Prince, assembled to his Standard the whole power of the Britains, and in several Battels overthrew the Saxons, and Picts, forcing the former to retire to their Ships and leave the Kingdom; but in the midst of the British hopes from these slourishing successes and Victories, Cartigern his Brother being Slain in Kent, and Buried at Alestrew, now Alesford where a Monument erected for him is at this day, called Keith Coty House: Rowena, Vortimers Step-Mother, finding by this means a way opened to her own Issue, caused him to be Poisoned at a Banquet of Fruits; whereupon Pafcentius fearing his Life, fled into the Mountains, where he lay obscure for a time, so that the Britains were compelled to fend their Embassadors to Ambrosius a British Prince, Governing in Armorica, or Britany in Gallia, to take the Government upon him, as being near Allyed to the Crown.

When he had heard their supplications, and what distress the Country was in, he called a Council, in which it was Resolved he should pass over with an Army to assist the Britains; which accordingly he brought, in 56 Ships, accompanyed by his Brother Oter-Pendragon, and in conjunction with the Britains, Fought with Hengist the Saxon General, who was returned with great Forces, desiring only upon his Landing to have his Daughter delivered to him; but at a Treaty of the British Nobles on Saisbury-Plain, with the like number of his, for Adjusting Affairs, upon giving the Watch-word, Vir. New Cour Saxes; that is Take (or bandle) your Swords, in the Saxon Language, he caused them Treacherously to be Slam with those Weapons which his Men that Treated with them had privately concealed under their Cassocks; except one Nobleman, then Earl of Warnick, who leaping aside when he saw what was intended, and geting a Hedge-stake, beat out several of their Brains, making his Escape through the rest.

Anabrofius (though his Successes answered not his expectation, yet having pretty well allay of the fury of the Sascons, by the Slaughter he made of them, in divers Battels which he Fought against them) retired for the recruit of his Army into Walish-Land (so Named by the Invaders, now called Wales) where being informed that Vortigern had been the chief cause of the Miseries his Country suffered, by the calling in of the Pagan Saxons, and too long indulging their Rapins and Encroachments, as being Marryed to the Daughter of the common Enemy, he Besieged him and his Queen in the Castle of Genura, which he consumed with Wild-Fire cast upon it by the force of certain Engines, in whose Flames they Perished.

Vortigern being thus Dead, Ambrosus was by the consent of the British Nobles Crowned King, Anna Dom. 481, and Fought many successful Battels against the Saxons, wresting out of their hands many of the Western Counties, as Worcestershire, Herefordshire, Shropshire, and divers others; so that his Name grew Terrible to the Enemy. This however raised the Envy of Pascentius, (the only surviving Son of Vortigern) against him, who secretly withdrawing into Germany raised an Army to restore him to the possession of his Father; but was over thrown in a Battel Fought near Execter in Devonshire, and thereupon shed into Scotland, Anno 496; but Five Years after returning privatly, and

The HISTORY and hearing that Ambrosius lay Sick, he hired one Copa to attend him in the nature of a Physitian, by feigning himself to be a British Monk, though indeed he was a Saxon, and so to take the advantage of Poisoning him; which he Effected: Whereupon. Pascentius raised an Army, and layed claim again to the Grown: But being Fought with by Uter-Pendragon, the Kings Brother, he and most of his chief Commanders were Slain; so that the Line of Vortigern was extinguish'd in his Death. Yet this ended not the Wars, for swarmes of Pagans continually coming dver from Germany, they grew too Numerous and Strong for the Britains; though all the time of Uter-Pendragon and King Arthur, who Succeeded him, they maintained fierce Wars with them, tho with various fuccess; sometimes one, and sometimes the other prevailing. But the Britains at length weakned, and having no recruits, were in a manner shut up, or straightened in the Mountains or Fastnesses of Wales, and Cornwal; which gave the Saxons by degrees an opportunity to form the several Counties their Chiefs had possessed, into Kingdoms.

- 1. Hengist, the first Invader, made himself King of Kent, in the time of Vortigern, Anno Dom. 455, erecting there the Kentish Kingdom.
- 2. Ella a Duke of the Germans who brought fresh Supplies, and Landed at Shoram in Suffex, his Dominions extending through the Counties of Suffex and Surry; he began his Reign Anno Dom. 488.
- 3. Childrick, a Captain of the Low-Country Germans, crected the West-Saxon Kingdom, containing Commal; Devonshire, Dorcetshire, Somersetshire, Hampshire, and Barkshire; Anno Done, 501.

4. The Fast Saxous Kingdom was Erected by Erchenwin Anno Dom. $27, containing Essex and Middlesex.

5. The Kingdom of Northumberland, containing York-(hire, the Bishoprick of Durham, Lansashire, Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, was erected by two Saxon Chiefs, viz. Ida and Ella, who, as Co-partners, began their Reign Anno Dom. 547.

6. The Kingdom of Mercia, containing Huntington. Shire, Rutlandshire, Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire, Shropshire, Leicestershire, Derbyshire, Notingbamshire, Oxfordshire, Cheshire, Glocestersbire, Warwickshine, Staffordshire, Buckinghamshire, Bedfordshire and Hartfordshire, being the largest of all, was erected by Grida one of their great Gaptains Anno Dom. 582.

7. The Kingdom of the East-Angles, containing Suffelk, Norfolk, Cambridgfhire, and the Isle of Ely, was erected by Uffa, who brought fresh Aids against the Britains, when the Saxons were in many parts diftreffed, Anno Dom. 575.

Thus you fee how this Island was coveted and strugled for by strange Nations as foon as they had tasted of its Sweetness, and saw its Fertility! Its Fruitfullness and abundant plenty of all things necessary for the subfiftance of Mankind, being a great Motive to encourage them in its Conquest; and in that sense, a great cause of its own Misery.

But ere I come to give a direct Account of the Kings that Governed these Kingdoms, before they were United under a Sole Monarch, and the British Princes that Opposed them in their Setling, I think it necessary to fay fomething as to what these Saxons were in their Original.

Original, with a Brief Discourse of their Laws, Manners, Habits, Customs, Idolatrous Worship, and other things that shall Occur, suitable to History.

As for their Original, Historians report them to have sprung from the Sace, a People in the Lesser Asia, who being distressed with great Droughts and Famine, sent Colonies abroad to feek more agreeable Habitations, who coming into the North-East part of Europe, and finding Plentiful Countries, they fent for greater Forces to Enable them to fettle therein; and fo after a long and doubtful War with the Strong Nations that bordered on Germany, viz. Prusia, Poland, and Hungary, they got possession; planting their Families in the most Fruitful part of that large Region, calling it Sacasons Land, or Saxony. And in a short time by Warring on their Neighbours, stretched their Dominions from the River Albis to the Rhine, in Length; and in Breadth from the German Ocean, and River Oder, to the Borders of Hessia and Turingia: But the Country held at present by the Dukes of Saxony, is crouded into a narrower compass, having lost by its Neighbours incroachments much of its former Extension. Their Leader in this Expedition was one Tuysco, whom: (for his Valiant Exploits, and giving them Laws to Govern by) they stiled a God, setting his Image on a Pillar, in the Figure of an Aged Man, in flowing Robes of Purple, holding a Scepter in his Hand; signifying he was the first Establisher and Governour of their European Dominions; and ascribed to him a Day in the Week, by the Name of Tuysto's Day; and now by us called Tuesday.

Their Garments were Red Caffocks, Clasped together, or Pinned with sharp Wyer or Thorn, that so if Wounded

The Idols of the Sun Doone Junday. Munday.

The Idol of the Sun was The Idol of the Moon - mude as here Appeareth made for a Woman, but had life half a naked manyet a fhort coat like a man, upon a Piller, his face like with a cap with a larg ears the Image of the Sun. the holding the Moon before her breft.

Ancient Saxons Tupsco Moden Tuesday Weldensday.

The Idol Try Co the first The Idol Woden of lere and Chiefest man of name of a most valuent among the Germans.

and Victorious Prince & Captain & his Idol was worshippedlike God or m B cs vs

rneir eir ed

ls: al∹

to mithe ting

the s or inds, pre-Vor-And Wounded in Battel, they might not see their Blood (to discourage them) from the colour of their Garments. Their Weapons were broad Battel-Axes, and bending Swords like Falchions, with three Nicks or Dents on the Backs of them: When they were drawn out to Battel, they used to go to the Encounter Singing Songs made of Antient Heroes, stirring up their Spirits thereby to a sierce Emulation of their Deeds, always Fighting in a square Battel, and standing very firm together.

As for their Laws or Customs; They Punished Robbers and Adulterers with Death: Their Vingins were permitted to be Marry'd but Once, and their Men restrained from Phirality of Wives, unless the Chief of their Tribes, for the sake of Children, to keep up their Names and Families; tho Barrenness was accounted among them an immediate Curse from their Gods: If any great Difference arose among them, it was usually decided by Champions in single Combate.

As for their Worship or Religion, upon their first coming over, and a long time after, it was pay'd to Idols, of which they had many, and with their Abominations and Heathenish Sacrifices they poluted the Christian Churches, and Temples, grievously Afflicting and Persecuting the Mournful Christians, making them to Wander in Desolate Places.

1. They set up the Image or Idol of the Sun, in the form of half a naked Man, on a Pillar, with Rays or Sun-beams, about his Face, holding in his two Hands, before his Breast, a Wheel of Circling Flame, representing the Element of Fire; and this Image was Worshiped on the day attributed to it, viz. Sunday: And Offerings.

Offerings made of Wheat, and other products of the Earth, in its Temple.

- 2. They had another Idol to represent the Moon having the Face of a Woman, a short Coat to the midle of the Thighs, and a Hood with long Ears, holding the Figure of the Moon in its Encrease with both her Hands before her Breast; and to it they did Nightly Sacrifice in Groves and Mountains: This Idol claimed peculiar Devotions on her day called Moonday.
- 3. Tuysco who claimed Veneration on Tuesday, which I have already described; his Feast was kept every third Moon with Songs declaring his Actions, with Dancing and much Jollitry.
- 4. Woden; this Idol was set up in Memory of one of their Victorious Princes, who had Fought successfully against the Huns and Lumbards, who entered Germany in the wain of the Roman Empire: They placed him in King-like State, on a Pillar, a Crown on his Head, and a Shield on his Left Arm, holding up a Sword in his Right Hand. To him they Offered Humane Sacrifice of the Tenth Captives taken in War; and forbid any to Name him, unless with Reverence and profound Respect, ascribing to him a day, viz. Wodensday now Wednesday; and Lamps were always Burning before his Shrine.
- manner, on rising Steps, under a Canopy of State, in Royal Robes, with a Crown of Gold on his Head; and a Scepter in his Hand; To whom they Prayed in doubtful matters for success in affairs, and that in the deciding of any weighty thing, they might not Err in their Judgments. He,

The Idols of the Thor Friga Fryday. This Idol was Majesti: This Idol Represents cally placed upon a Co: both sexes as Hermo: vered bedonhis head a shrolite in her Right hand Crown of Gold. sheheld a drawn sword, Sinher lest a Bow.

Ancient Saxons Seater Flint Saturday This Idol was placed on This Idol was set on a a Pearch with a sharp great Stone made like prickled back, bare hear the Image of Death, ded, and bare footed. with a sheet about him ded, and bare footed.

it feems, having been a great Law-giver among them, and very prudent in deciding their Controversies; and to him they Offered on Thursdays Garlands of fragrant Herbs and Flowers; That day taking from him its denomination, viz. Thersday; now called Thursday.

of Chaftity and other Virtues, after her Death they fer up an Idol in her Likeness, on a Pillar, resembling Diana, compleatly Armed to the Waste, with a Bow and a Sword; and to her were often Sacrificed those Females that had Violated their Virgin-Chaftity: Some Authors allow her to have been Expert in Arms, by whose Prowess the Antient Sacrificed extended their German Territories: and to her was Dedicated the Sixth Day, called then Frea's-Day.

now Fryday. 7. Seater: This Idol was placed in the shape of an Old Man on a Pillar streading with his bare. Feet on a Pearch with sharp pricks on its Back, holding in his Right Hand a Basket of Fruits, fignifying Plenty, and in his Left a Wheel, fignifying Time, when we ought to be careful in laying up our Stores to prevent Scarcity: He was held in his Life time to be a great Prophet and Astrologer, telling things to come, and Teaching the Saxons the Course of the Sun, Moon, and Stars; and to him they Prayed for Knowledge, Wisdom, and hopeful Children. Spring and Fall, they Offered Fruits to him, and strewed the way to his Temple with Flowers. For his Worship they appointed the Seventh Day of the Week, calling it Sater's Day, now Saturday.

They had another Idol resembling the Image of Death,

Death, with Flowing Crimson Robes, holding a Lighted Torch in his Right Hand, and a Lion Rampant on his Head, by the Left Foot, with his Left Hand. He was placed on a Tomb or Grave stone, to put them in mind of Mortality, and to shew Deaths Obduracy and Inexorableness, they called him Flint. Before his Shrine, which was set in a large place, Walled about, without any Covering, they Executed or Sacrificed Offenders for Extraordinary Crimes, by Fire, Racks, and other Exquisit Tortures.

Having thus given you a Brief Description of the Original and Manners of the Antient Saxons, before their coming into this Island; I should now proceed to give you an Account of the Succession of their several Kings here, during the time of their Meptarchy, or Seven Kingdoms, until King Edgar overcoming and subduing all the rest, reduc'd it again to a Monarchy. But that shall be the business of the next Chapter.

CHAP. V.

The Succession of the Petty Monarchs of the Kentish, South-Saxon, and East-Saxon Kingdoms; with what Remarkably Happen'd, during their respective Reigns, in Peace and War: The Time when they Began and Ended them; with the Limits of their Dominions.

1. Of the Kingdom of Kent, and the Succession of its seventeen Kings.

Fingift, the first Saxon Invader, as is formerly noted, setled Himself and his People in the County of Kent, a Fertil part of England, large in Extent, bounded on the North with the River Thames, by which it is divided from Effex; on the East, with the Channel; on the West, with Surry; and on the South, with Suffex: He began to Erect a Saxon Kingdom there, Anno Dom. 455; and had, during his Thirty Four years Reign, continual War with the Britains; his Brother Horsa Dying of the Wounds he received in Battel, gave Name to a place called Horsa's Tomb, now corruptly called Horsted, where he was Buried, and had a famous Monument erected over his Grave, the Ruins of which, some Hundred Years since were visible. It is held by Authors of great repute those Stones of a prodigious bigness on Salisbury Plain, which have created Admiration in the Beholders, were erected as a Monument where he caused the British Nobles to be Treacherously

cheroully

Laginted Translate His State H Valet on this called to the Late Head in Hoggan and the H

Deaths Obderacy and International they stalled his Flant: Before his Status and the form of the place. Walled about, washoot any Covering, the exercised or Sacrificed Officers for Exercogling

Grienes, by Pire, Racks, and other Exquisit Torthree real molecular section for Maving thus given you a Brief Description of the Original and Manners of the Autimat Suxons before the puring into this the land proceed a part you an Account of the Sucomod of their feveral Kings here, during the time of their Heptarthy, or Seven Kingdoms, until King Edgar over coming and subduing the rest, reduc'd it appears to a Montroly But that thall be the bullette the next Lapter.

The state of the color of the color of the state of

The about the

CHAP. V.

The Succession of the Petty Monarchs of the Kentish. South-Saxon, and East-Saxon Kingdoms; with what Remarkably Happen'd, during their respective Reigns. in Peace and War: The Time when they Began and Ended them; with the Limits of their Dominions.

1. Of the Kingdom of Kent, and the Succession of its seventeen Kings.

Engift, the first Saxon Invader, as is formerly noted, fetled Himself and his People in the County of Kent, a Fertil part of England, large in Extent, bounded on the North with the River Thames, by which it is divided from Essex 3 on the East, with the Channel; on the West, with Surry; and on the South, with Suffex: He began to Erect a Saxon Kingdom there, Anno Dom. 455; and had, during his Thirty Four years Reign, continual

War with the Britains; his Brother Horsa Dying of the Wounds he received in Battel, gave Name to a place called Horsa's Tomb, now corruptly called Horsted, where he was Buried, and had a famous Monument erected over his Grave, the Ruins of which, some Hundred Years since were visible. It is held by Authors of great repute those Stones of a prodigious bigness on Salisbury Plain, which have created Admiration in the Beholders, were erected as a Monument where he caused the British Nobles to be Treale send all things but released in wards the Earth.

cherously Slain, by which means he gained his design on this Kingdom, making way to its Subjection; for indeed they are commonly to this day called Stone Hing, or Hengist Stones. They appear to have been a Treble Row of Stones, circularly placed one within another, Twenty Eight Foot long for the most part, and Seven Foot broad, viz. those that are reared upright; besides others of prodigious bigness that lie overthwart from one to another, and are fastned with Tenents and Mortises; but at this day, the Form of this Wonderful Structure is very much defaced, some of the greater Stones being either faln, or reclining to-

Eske, by some called Osea, succeeded Hengis in the Ringdom of Kent; a Man much inseriour to him in Valour and Condust, therefore to make the People (if possible) to forget what they were, that he might live the more at Ease, he Tollerated such of the Chair would, to live among his Saxons, on condition they would take upon them the Name or Epithite of Eskins; and though he Reigned Twenty Four Years, nothing very Memorable is Recorded of him in History; for the other Saxon Princes, in setting their Kingdoms, Screening him from the Incursions of the Britains, and making the seat of War in the Northern and Western Counties, he had for the most part a Peaceable Reign.

Octa, the Third King of Kent, began his Reign Anno Dom. 513; he provided prudent and wholsom Laws for the Government of his People, Built several Castles on the Sea-Coast, and the Inland Frontiers, commanded the Pagan Idolatries to be strictly Observed, and Christianity to be Extirpated, sheding much Innocent Blood on that occasion. In his time strange sights were seen of Dragons, Lions, and other surious wild Beasts, Fighting in in the Air. In the West of Kent it Rained Wheat, and soon after great Drops of Blood; upon which ensued extream Dearth, succeeded by much Bloodshed between his People and the South Saxon borders about setling their Territories, at the latter end of his Reign, which continued Twenty Years.

Imerick began his Reign Anno Dom. 533: He made an Edil, That Strangrs should be Curteously Entertained, and caused Houses of Publick Resort to be built on the Roads, and the Highways to be Mended, and made Passable; at the Publick Charge; building Watch-Towers on the Sea-Coasts, and setting Lights in them for the guidance of Saylors: He restrained the severity against the Christians, and is numbered among the good Saxon Kings; in his time was the Second General Council held at Constantinople, for all Christendom, Anno Dom. 553. He Reigned Twenty Nine Years, during which space nothing Memorable of any Warlike Actions are Recorded of him.

Ethelbert, The Fifth King of Kent, began his Reign 362: He had not long Reigned, before Cheuline, King of the West Saxons, raised an Army against him; to Oppose whom, he Mustered great Forces, and at Wimbleton both Hosts joyned Battel, where Ethelbert lost the day; Two of his Dukes, and Five Thousand of his People, being Slain; and this is Recorded to be the first Open War among the Saxon Kings; However, a Peace was soon after concluded, and Gregory, Archi-

Deacon of Rome, seeing some fair Youths of this Island Randing in the Market of that City to be Sold, he demanded from whence they were, and being told from Britain, out of a Province called Deira, he sighing said, (when he understood Paganisme predominated) Ab it is great pity but their Country should be Delivered Ira Dei, from the Wrath of God: And coming scon after after to be Pope, he Remembring what he had faid, fent Augusting the Monk, accompanied with Forty Men of several Religious Orders, into Britain, Anno Dom. 596; who making their Address to King Ethelbert, were by him kindly received, and had Canterbury (then but a poor Village) allowed them for their Refidence, with Liberty to Convert his Subjects to the Christian Faitle; so that by their painful industry in Preaching, and exemplary Lives, they made a contiderable progress in the Glorious work of Salvation to poor Souls, leading them out of the Darkness of Paganisme. into the Marvelous Light of the Gospel; so that again the Candle was Lighted, (which God, for the Pride and Lukewarmness of the Christians, had suffered in a great measure to be Extinguished in this Island; and the King falling in Love with their Inoffensive Lives. and conceiving a good Opinion of their Doctrine, was Baptized, with many Thousands of his Subjects, in the Thirty Sixth Year of his Age, and Fourteenth of his Reign, Anno Dom. 596 for which God Blessed him with a long and prosperous Reign, viz. Fifty

Six Years.

Edelbard the Sixth King of Kent, soon after his coming to the Crown was Converted by Lawrence Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, (whom Augustine on his Death-Bed had appointed his Successor in that See) where-upon he Divorced himself from his Mother-in-Law, whom he had Married after his Fathers Death, and recalled Militus and Justus whom he had caused to fly beyond the Seas for fear of Persecution, restoring them to their Bishopricks. In his time Two mighty Whales were taken on the Coast of Kent, and a Fight of Birds of various kinds, were seen in the Air near Rochester, about Noon, whose numbers in that place in some measure Darkened the Sun for the space of an Hour. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 618, and Reigned Twenty Four Years. Ercombert, the Seventh King of Kent, began his Reign Anno Dom. 642. This Man was a great Lover of the Christians, everywhere in his Dominions suppressing the Idol Temples, causing the Christian Worship strictly to be Observed throughout his Dominions, Building divers Churches, commanding the Fast of Long to be kept. He Reigned Twenty Four Years.

Anno Dom. 666. He was of a cruel Nature, Murthering his two Nephews Ethetred and Ethelbert, to secure the Kingdom to his Posterity, casting their Dead Bodies into the Medway, a River runing by Rochester and Chattam, whose Water thereupon for a time seemed of the colour of Blood, and was so corrupted that a number of Fish dyed in it; which was held as a Divine Judgment to upbraid the Murtherer; after which he had a troublesome Reign, his own People murmuring against him, and being often ready to Rebel: A little before his Death, a terrible Blazing-Star appear'd for six Nights, at South East, foon after the setting of the Sun.

He Reigned Nine Years and odd Days.

Lothaire, the Ninth King of Kent, began his Reign Anno Dom. 675. In his time there was held the Third General Council at Constantinople, where 600 Bishops were present, Three of which went from England and had the Precedency given them before divers other Nations; Agatho being then Bishop of Rome. Afterward engaging in a War against Ethelred King of Mercia, and Edrick King of the South Saxons, he charging in the thickest of the Battel, and endeavouring to break in upon the Mercian Standard, where that King stood Invironed with his Nobles, a Dart being thrown overthwart with a strong hand, struck him on the Lest Side, and pierced through the Right, so that he instantly fell Dead on the place, when he had Reigned Eleven Years; and his death fo discouraged his Souldiers, who had before near-gained the Victory, that they quitted the Field and fled.

when

Dom. 682.

of BNGLAND.

Ederick, the Tenth King of Kent, was a Man of great Courage; but using some Cruelty towards his Nobility. they grew displeased with him, and laboured to stir up the common People to a dislike of his Government, and at last raised a Rebellion against him; and in a great Battel near Maidstone, he was Slain, and his Body very despitefully used. The Night before this Battel, there were Groans and Cries beard, as proceeding out of the Air. and most of the Lawrels throughout the Country Withered; after which, great Mischief happened; for the Victors not agreeing about dividing the spoil, fell into parties, and in clandestine Broyles shed much Blood; so that there was no King in Kent for fix years. This Ederick Reigned only two Years, and ten Days, begining it Anna Withred, the Eleventh King of Kent, upon his Brothers Overthrow, fled from the Popular Fury to Inc King of the West Saxons, with whom he remained till the expiration of the fix Years; when agreeing with him for a considerable sum of Money, he Restored him to the Kingdom; which sum, not exceeding 60001. being raised on the Subject, caused great Murmurings; but he quieted them by promiting to Live Frugally. Froclaiming a general Pardon, and granting them many Priviledges which in former Reigns they enjoyed not; fo that he lived rather like a Private Man, than a Soveraigne Prince: Yet he had great Wars with Ethelred. King of Mercia. He Reigned 33 Years, beginning it Anno Dom. 694.

Edbert, the Twelfth King of Kent, Succeeded Withred: He at the beginning of his Reign laboured

for Peace, and fetled the Kingdom that had been harrassed, and in a manner destroyed, by the Mercians in the former Reign; Rebuilding the Churches and Monastries they had Ruinated. But in the Fourth Year of his Reign the Beacons of Heaven foreshewed more Misery to the already suffering Kingdom, two Blazing-Sters appearing successively, the one in the South West and the other at South East; after which, great Dissentions arose among the Saxon Kings; and much Blood was spilt in divers places; the Britains were likwise extreamly distressed by the Invading Norbumbers and West Samons, who penned them within the Streights and Mountains of Wales, till Famine coming on, numbers were Starved in the Rocks and Caves whither they had retired for shelter. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 727, and Reigned 23 Years. Ethelbert, the Thirteenth King of Kent, began his Reign Anno Dom. 750. At his coming to the Crown

he laboured to promote Christianity, gave large Gifts to the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, and to St. Andrews in Rochester, Built by Ethelbert the Second, King of Kent: He laboured also to keep Peace with his Neighbours, yet such was the greedy desire of the Saxons to incroach on each other, having beaten the poor Britains out of all the Counties that were worth Possessing, that Wars enfued, and much Blood was shed: Yet he Dyed in Peace, whan he had Reigned Eleven Years.

Alrick, the Fourteenth King of Kent, began his Reign Anno Dom. 761; but after he had Reigned 34 Years, Offa the great King of the Mercians Quarrelled with him, for Entertaining Duke Edesin who Fled from his Fury; yet this seemed only a pretence, his Ambition aiming to Annex. Kent to his own large Dominions; whereupon both Armies approaching near Ottford, joyned in a Bloody Battel which lasted Twelve Hours, when Airick being beaten down and slain with a Battel-Ax, his Men fled the Field, and were so hotly pursued that many of them were put to the Sword, and great spoil made through all the Country; which was continued from the South to the North, as far as the River Humber. In his time The second General Council was held at Nice, being the seventh General Council for all Christendom.

Ethelbert the Third, and Fifteenth King of Kent, Usurped the Kingdome after the Death of Alrick, whereupon Kenwolfe the Mercian (upon his denying to pay him Tribute and Homage) came against him with a powerful Army, and in a fatal Battel he was overthrown and taken Prisoner, and carried into Mercia, where he continued some Years: But Kenwolfe having erected a stately Church at Winchcomb in Glocester-shire, at the Dedication of it, where were present Ten Dukes and Thirteen Bishops, he sent for him, and at the High Altar freely Released him without any Ransom, so he returned again to his People. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 795, and Reigned Three Years.

cuthred the Sixteenth King of Kent, was (contrary to the mind of the Reople) placed in the Throne by Kenwolfe King of Mercia: but nothing Memorable is Recorded of him. He began his Reign 798 and Reigned Three Years. In his time a terrible Earth-quake happened in this Island, which overthrew many stately Buildings.

Baldred the Seventeenth and last King of Kent, began his Reign 806 but displeasing Kenwolfe King of Mercia, he drove him out of the Kingdom, when he had Reigned Eighteen Years; for the Conqueror annexed it to his own Dominions, when it had continued a distinct Kingdom 372 Years.

2. Of the South Saxon Kingdom, in the Succession of Four Kings.

Ella, a Captain of the Low Germans, was the first Founder of this Kingdom, as in the foregoing Chapter is mentioned: At his Landing at Shoreham in Suffex, he divided his Forces under his three Sons, viz. Cymen, Plettinger, and Ciffa; but finding he was too weak for the Britains that Inhabited Suffex and Surry, he was constrained to go over-Sea, to fetch greater Strength: Then in a fet Battel he gave them a fatal Overthrow, forcing them into a valt Wood on the South of Kent called Andersleger, where many of them perished for want, others stole away by Night, and some submitted to the Victor; whereupon he setled his Borders, Bounded on the North with the Thames, dividing it from Middlesex and part of Buckinghamshire; on the South, with the Ocean; on the West, with Hampshire: and on the East, with Kent; being Counties exceeding fertil in Corn and Rich Pastures stored with excellent

Fruits, and great numbers of Cattle. He began his

Reign Anno Dem. 488, and continued it 32 Years.

began his Reign 520; and confederating with Cherdick King of the West Saxons, allowing him a small Tribute for some part of his Country which that King layed claim to by Priority, he Built Chichester in Sussex, and Chisbary, Fortistying the Sea-Coast, opposing France; after that, he layed heavy Taxes on his Subjects; which Money, when raised, he sent to Cherdick, to maintain his War against the Britains. So that being sheltered on all sides from their Invasions, he had a long and peacable Reign, some Historians alow him 76 Years; but this must needs be a mistake, considering he was at Mans Estate when he came into this Land, and that his Father Reigned 32 Years; so that the more moderate allow him to have Reigned only 36 Years.

Ethelwolfe, the Third King of the South Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 596; at which time divers terrible and amazing Sights appeared in the Air, of Armies in Rout, with great noises of Thunder, and flashes of Lightening, many drops of the colour of Blood falling at the same time in divers parts of Surry, which seemed to Prognosticate the great Bloodshed that afterwards happened, when this Kingdom was Invaded by Ceadwald, then a Banished Prince of the West Saxons, who gathering to him Out-Laws and other Resolute Persons, in a Mortal Battel flew Ethelwolfe, and divers of his Nobles; and pursuing his Victory, entered the Kingdom of Kent, where he put the Monks to the Sword, levelling with the Ground all the Religious Houses that he found in his Progress, and then made himself King of the South Saxons; after which he greatly lamented the desolation he had made. This Ethelwolfe, a considerable time before his Death, as Bede, a very Venerable Clergyman Reports, was Converted to the Christian Religion, by Bishop Wilfrid, though some affirm it to be done by Berinus Bishop of Dorchester. He Reigned Twenty Five Years.

Barthun, the Fourth King of the South Saxons, and Duke Authan his affiftant, soon after Ethelwolfes Death, prevailed with the People to Banish their Intruding King Ceadwell, and within a short time Barthun geting the sole Power into his hands, Ceadwell returned with a great Army, and after a Fight of Eight Hours, on the Plain now called Banstead-Downs, Barthun was Slain and his Subjects submitted to the Conquerer, who made himself by this Victory a second time King of the South Saxons, annexing it by right of Conquest to the West Saxon Kinghom, after the Succession of Four Kings, who upheld it One Hundred and Thirty Three Years; It Begining Anno Dom. 488, and Ending 621. So that by this Addition the West Saxons became very formidable, not only to the Britains, but their own Countrymen who bordered on them.

West

3. The Kingdom of the East Saxons, in the Succession of Fourteen Kings.

This Kingdom Commenced Anno Dom. 522, containing Middlesex and Essay, Counties abounding in Cattle, Corn, Warrens, store of Deer, Fowl, Fish, and other advantagious Commodities: Bounded on the North, with Suffolk, Cambridgshire, and Hartfordshire; on the South, with the River Thames, dividing it from Kent and Surry; on the West, with Buckinghamshire, and on the East, with the Sea,

Erchenwin was the First Saxon that framed it into a Kingdom, after he had affished the other Saxons with the Forces he brought over to drive the Britains out of their possessions in the Fertil parts of England, and then giving himself much to Peace, and framing such Laws from those in Germany as best suited to the wellfare of his People in this Country, he continued his Reign Sixty Years, Dying in Peace Anno Dom. 582.

Sleadda, the Second King of the East Saxons, Succeeding Ercheumin, Encouraged the Idol Temples, and much Oppressed the Christians at the beginning of his Reign; but upon seeing a threatening Vision of Angels with drawn Swords opposing his Progress, he grew much milder at the Latter-end of his Reign, which began Anno Dom. 582, and ended 591.

Sebert the Third King of the East Saxons (though at first a Persecutor of the Christians) was at last so far overcome by their harmless and inoffensive Lives, that he applying himself to Miletus, the first Bishop of St. Paul's in London, by his grave Advice was induced to embrace the Christian Religion. This famous Church was Founded by him and Ethelbert, King of Kent, in the place where before stood a Temple Dedicated to Diana, wherein many Bloody Sacrifices had been offered to the supposed Goddess, and so becoming the first Christian King of the East Saxons, he was a great Encourager of Religious Men and Women, building at their request divers other Churches in London and elsewhere. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 591, and Reigned 21 Years. Sered, the Fourth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 611; He revoked the Indulgences of his Predecessors to the Christians, and in attempting to Prophane The Lords Table, being withstood by Miletus, the Bishop of St. Paules, he Banished him his Dominions; but afterward entering on a War with Kingills, King of the West Saxons, which continued for some time, he was in the conclusion of it Slain, when he had Reigned Six Years: A little before his Death he had a Dream like to that of Smyrdis Son to Cyrus the Great, and Brother to King Cambysis of Persia, viz. That he sat on the West Saxon Throne, and bis Head reached the Skies; which being fallly Interpreted by his flatterers, who pushed him on in his Ambitiaus designs, whilst like the other he lost his Life, though by different means; the first Murthered by his Brothers command, on a Jealousie he designed to Usurp the Persian Monarchy; and the latter Fighting to enlarge his Dominions.

of ENGLAND.

Signsbert, the Fifth King af the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 620. He made several Laws against Murtherers and Thieves, that then much abounded in the Country: In his time a dreadful Fire happened in London, confuming most of the Eastern park of it; but it was foon Re-built, and much inlarged by this Kings Encouragement; and the Michaelmas following a number of Porpoises came up the River; whereupon preat Storms followed, and the Thames overflowing lay'd many Hundreds of Acres under Water in Kent and Surry. He Reigned Twenty Three Years.

Sigebert, the Sixth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 643. He Restored again the True Worship in that Kingdom, being perswaded by Oswy. King of the Northumbers to be Baptized by Bishop Finnan, giving Large Gifts to the Churches and Monasteries, earnestly labouring to settle Peace among his Neighbours; but being of a very wild temper, and fost by Nature, his two Brothers took the advantage of his weakness, Conspired against him, and Murthered him, when he had Reigned Fifteen Years.

Swithelm, the Seventh King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 658; upon the enterance on it he became a Christian, and was Baptized by Bishop Cedda, Ethelwald King of the East Angles being his Godfather. In his time London began to flourish very much in Trade, the Merchants and Traders having large Priviledges granted them. A little before his Death, A Globe of Fire fell on St. Paul's Church, and Burnt the Roof of it. His Reign continued only Three Years and odd Days.

Sighere, the Eighth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 661. He had embraced the Christian Faith, but Apostatized on a slight Occasion; and

The HISTORY

and of a Father of the Church, became a Persecutor; but being afflicted with a grievous Disease, he was smitten with Remorse of Conscience, and (many Thousands of his Subjects being Destroyed by a raging Pestilence) he Remembered frem whence he was Fallen, and Returned to the Christian Communion, into which he was gladly received by an Assembly of the Clergy, who prevailed with him to destroy the Idols and demolish their Altars. He Reigned Five Years.

Sebba, the Ninth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 666, being given much to a Religious Life, and much Repenting the Blood he had shed when he was General in the Wars; whereupon, when he had Reigned Thirty Years, he layed down his Scepter, and took on him a Religious Habit, in the Monastery of St. Paul's at Lendon, bequeathing his Kingdom to Sigherd his Kinsinan.

Sigherd, the Tenth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 696. He sent Forces to assist the West Saxons against the Britains, who made strong Incursions into their Territories, and carried away great Booties; in the mean time divers Pirates from Denmark and Normay Invaded his Sea-Coasts, Burning and Plundering many Villages, but a mighty Tempest arising, they suffered Shipwrack, and so many of them as Escaped to Shoar, were destroyed by the Country Peasants: He Built many Religious Houses, and Reigned Seven Years.

Scofrid, the Eleventh King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 703. He Built Forts on the advantagious Havens to the Sea-Coast, to prevent the Landing of Foreign Enemies by surprize, encouraging his People to Trade with the Neighbour Nations; fo that many of the North East Countries were discovered, and great Riches brought home; which caused others, who had advantagious Havens, to take the like Measures; whereupon the Shiping encreased. He Reigned Seven Years.

Offe, the Twelfth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 711. He was a great Encourager of the Christians, and in his time the Christian Religion spread into all parts of his Dominions: He Invited over Religious Men out of other Countries, and ordered Publick Schooles to be Erected; and being desirous to see Rome, which he had heard so much of by Fame, when he had Reigned Eight Years he went thither; and being much taken with the Devotion of the Religious there, he became a Monk, and Dyed in that station; leaving large Legacies to the Church.

Selved, the Second, and Thirteenth King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 719. In his time a grievous Famine was in this Kingdom for the space of three Years, so that People in many places were compelled to Eat Grass, Roots, Leaves, and Barks of Trees; and yet many Thousands were Famished: Great slashes of Fire likewise Issued out of the Earth, which Burnt up the Trees and Grass, and Destroyed some People and much Cattel; but soon after a great Plenty ensued. He Reigned Thirty Eight Years.

Sutbred, the Fourteenth and Last King of the East Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 757. He had great Wars with Egbert King of the West Saxons, Year of Christ 827.

fo that in various Battels Fifty Thousand of his People being Slain, he was so weakned, that not being able to make head any longer, he withdrew himself, and left his Dominions to the prevailing Enemy, when in much Trouble he had upheld them Eight Years: So that Egbert annexing it as a Province to his own Kingdom, Extinguished the Name of the East-Saxon-Kingdom about the

CHAP. VI.

A Description of the Kingdoms of Northumberland and Mercia; with the Succession of their Kings; and the most Memorable Transactions, Portents and Prodigies, both in Peace and War, that happened during their Reignes.

4. The Kingdom of Northumberland as it Began and continued in the Reignes of Twenty Five Kings.

HE Kingdom of Northumberland Extended very largly in the North of England, containing Yorkshire, Durham, Lancashire, Westmorland, Cumberland and Northumberland: Bounded on the North, with the German Ocean; on the West, with the Irish Sea, and part of Scotland; on the South, with Cheshire, Derbyshire, Notinghamshire, and Lincolnshire; abounding with Sea-Coale, Mineralls, Quarries of Stone, Cattle; Rivers stored with Salmon, Trouts, and other Fish; Fat Pastures, Fowl, and abundance of Corn. Ida and Ella, two Saxon Dukes, first Modelled it into a Kingdom, Anno Dom. 597, causing divers Towns to be Built that had been ruined in the Wars, keeping strong Guards on their Borders, to defend them against Encroachments; yet after they had Reigned Fifteen Years, finding themselves too weak to bandy against the Britains, Piets, and East Angles, who greatly disturbed them in their Settlement, to render them able to keep what they had Seized, they fent for five German Captains, who came with more Forces; by which additional Strength, the Kingdom was Established: But about that time Ida Dying, they Quarrelled with Ella for their Parts or Shares; whereupon (to prevent the effusion of Blood, and rending it in pieces by Civil Dissention) it was agreed they should Reign

CHAP.

The Continuance of their Reigns were as followeth, with him as Co-Parteners Anno Dom. 562.

2. Theadwold, 1 Year. 3. Elappea, 5 Years. 6. Theodorick, 7 Years.

4. Adda, 7 Years.

But Ella Out-living some, and Banishing others, when he found he was powerful in the Love of his People, and they hated for their Tyranny, Reigned fingly many Years after, and in all Forty Two, Viz. till 589.

Elthebrick, Accounted (by the foregoing means) the Seventh King of Northundberland, Succeeding Ella, Anno Dom. 589. His Accession to the Throne was ushered in by a fearful Blazing Star, and the Sca breaking in near Hertle Pool in the Rifhoprick of Durham, fwept away divers Villages, Drowning many People aud Cattle. He had Wars with the Piets, who bordered on the North of his Kingdom, and in a fet Battel, near Wark in Northumberland, gave them a great overthrow, as also the Scots their Confederates; entering their Kingdom, and bringing away large Booties, fo that they were constrained to sue for Peace, which was granted: But intending to War on the Britains, Death put a period to that Enterprize, when he had Reigned Ethelfrid, four Years Anno 593.

of ENGLAND.

Ethelfrid, the Eighth King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 593, being a mortal Enemy to the poor Britains, making Inroads into their Territories, and destroying all before him; when coming to the Monastery of Bangor in Carnarvanshire, the Monks came out with Presents to meet him. Singing a Hymn. as a demonstration of his Welcom; but this, and their Innocence (which they too much trusted in) little availed to Skreen them from his Fury, for being of a Bloody temper, Eleven Hundred of them in that Monastry, and others Adjustient, were miserably Massacred at his Command, a little while after the meeting of Augustin Bishop of Canterbury, with the British Bishops, at Austin's-Oak in Worcestershire, to settle matters of Religion according as it was practiced at Rome; but those Bishops in many Points Dissenting from him, the Assembly abruptly broke up; and for this he is hardly censured (and not without ground) to be the Instigater of Ethelfrids Cruelty. This Ethelfrid Fought with Cadwan King of the Britains near West-Chester, and overthrew him with great flaughter; and after a Peace concluded, which lasted during their Lives, he Warred on the Scots, and defeated Edanaden their King, at

Deglaxion on the Marches of Scotland, and Banished Edwin his Kinsman, and Heir Apparent to the Crown; who flying for protection to Redwald King of the East Angles, they raised an Army; and joyning Battel, many of Ethelfrids Souldiers, who bore good-will to Edwin. feeing his Standard in the Field, Revolted; whereupon Ethelfrid labouring to restore the declining Battel, threw himselse like a desperate Man among the thickest of the Enemies, and was slain when he had

Reigned Thirty Two Years. Edwin, after the Death of Ethelfrid, was placed by Redwald in the Throne of the Northumbrian Kingdom, and. and is accounted the Ninth King. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 626. It is reported by the Monks of those times (who were mightily addicted to fuch Foolish and Superstitions Fables) I hat in his Banishment the Apo-Itle St. Paul Appeared to him in a Vision, Preaching to him the Gospel, and telling him if he would cause it to be freely Preached in the Northumbrian Kingdom, he should be shortly placed in the Throne; which he then promised to do; whereupon the Vision laying one Hand on his Head, and Commanding him to remember that Sign, Vanished: But after he gained his defires, forgeting his promise, the same Apostle appeared to Paulinus the Bishop of York, and commanded him to lay his Hand on the Kings Head, and demand if he remembred that Sign; which he had no fooner done, but Edwin fell at his Feet, begging Pardon for his neglect, and was thereupon, with many of his Nobles, Baptized at York; after which he Built many Religious Honjes, and was himself a great promoter of Christiunity, sheltering and relieving such as sted the Persecution of Pagan Kings; which Charitable fuccour of the diffrested, was the main ground on which Penda, King of the Mercians, founded his Quarrel; fo that a Bloody War enfuing, Edwin and Offrid his Son were flain in Battel; the Mercions at that time being assisted by Cadwallo King of the Britains, when he had Reigned Seven Years. In his time he much inlarged the Northumbrian Kingdom, subduing the Coasts of Britain and the Islands of the Hebrides. To prevent whose progress, one Eumerius was fent by the West Saccon Ring to Murther him, but was prevented by Lillia the Kings Chamberlain, steping between on the push, and receiving the Mortal Wound in his own Body. He Built the Cathedral at York of Stone, which before was only of Wood. Offride, Offride, or Ofrick, the Tenth King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 633. By Edwin's Example encouraging and promoting the Christian Religion. In his time a Little Stream of the Colour of Blood burst from a Rock near York, and soon after entering on a War against Cadwallo King of the Britains he was Slain, when he had Reigned about a Year.

Oswald, the Eleventh King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dons. 634, he followed the steps of his Two Predecessors, in promoting the Christian Religion fending for Adian, a Scotch Bishop of great note, to affift him in fo good a Work; who Preaching in Landesfeorn, or Holy Island, in Scotland, and the King Interpreting it to the People, many of them were Converted and Baptized. He had great Wars with the Britains, and in a fet Battel slew Cadwallo, the last but one of the race of the British Kings, and the greatest part of his Army, at Deniseburn, so that he had Peace on that side; but thinking to gain the like advantage over Penda the Mercian King, instead of revenging the Death of Edwin, he underwent the same fate, being flain in Battel after he had Fought couragioully fix Hours, and hemmed himself in with Dead Bodies. This great Battel was Fought at Oswaltree in Shropshire. Nor did the Mercians Cruelty cease after he was flain, for he Inhumanly caused his Body to be torn in pieces, when he had Reigned Nine Years.

Oswye, the Twelsth King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 643. And though he laboured for Peace, yet the greatness of his encroaching Neighbours suffered him to enjoy little quiet; however, he Encouraged Religion and Trade, and made many wholsome Laws, and one in particular for the Relief of the Poor, and to prevent Robberies and Murthers on the Northern borders; and continued his Reign 28 Years.

E 3 Egfride,

The HISTORY

Egfride, the Thirteenth King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 671; but long he had not enjoyed the Throne, before a fierce War broke out between him and Ethelred King of Mercia, he first drawing it on his Kingdom, whereby his People greatly suffered; yet not content with several Deseats, or seeing the weakness his Subjects were reduced to, he made War on the Irish, because some of that Nation had Pirated on his Coast; but pursuing them too far among the Mountains and Fastnesses of craggy Rocks, he was there sain, and most of his Souldiers that escaped the overthrow, perished for want of Provision, when he had Reigned Fisteen Years.

Alfrid, the Fourteenth King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 686, finding the Kingdom much Impaired in its People and Treasure, so that he made it his sirst endeavour to restore the face of Trade, appointing Fairs and Marts, allowing them great Priviledges to Invite the Borderers to Trade with him; and gave Liberty for as many as would, with their Families, to setle in his Dominions; which caused him to be Envved by the Saxon Kings his Neighbours; yet he pacified them with fair Words and Friendly Offices, making a Law, That distressed Strangers, Travelling about their Lamful Occasions, should be Maintained at the Publick Charge: So that his Reign continued for the most part Peaceable, Religion flourishing under it Twenty Years.

his Reign Anno Dom. 706 but led a Life very contrary to his Predecestor, giving himselfs up to all manner of Debanchery, making it his Business to visit the Nunneries, that he might single out the fairest for his Lust, which he Commanded to his Bed with great rigour; insomuch that some of those Virgins preserving their

Chastity

Chastity before Life, suffered Martyrdom rather than they would yelld to his desires; so that whilst he held on this course, the Kingdom was much distracted with Intestine Broyles, his Nobles grew unruly, and the poorer fort were Oppressed; so that to free the Kingdom from impending Ruine, Kenred and Oswick, two of his near Kinsmen, Conspired against him, and Slew him, when he had Reigned Nine Years, and then Successively Governed the Relm.

Kenred, the Sixteenth King of Northumberland, having Conspired with Oswick, and Slain Osred, caused the Crown to be placed on his Head Anno Dom. 716; yet found a very troublesome Reign, his Co-partner in the Conspiracy labouring to supplant him; and indeed his Reign was very short, continuing only two Years.

Ofwick having made his way to the Throne, Anno Dom. 718, laboured to fettle himself in the Affections and good liking of the People, by giving large Gifts to the Nobles, and in distributing Corn to the Poor out of his Granaries, in his Second Year when a great Scarcity happened; so that in his Eleven Years Reign, he kept his People quiet at home, and for the most part free from Wars abroad.

Cealnulf, the Eighteenth King of the Northumberian Kingdom, began his Reign Anno Dom. 722, devoting himself soon after his coming to the Crown to a Religious Life, causing many Abbies and Monasteries to be Builded, Endowing them with competent Annuities, for the Maintenance of Men and Women qualified to enter into Religious Orders; so that a great many resorted to him from beyond the Seas, whom he kindly entertained; and being much taken with their manner of Living, when he had Reigned Eight Years, growing weary of an Earthly Diadem, he lay'd the weight of Government aside, and withdrawing himself to Holy Island, took on E 4 him the Habit of a Monk; where in a little Monastery he had caused to be Built, he spent the remainder of his Days. In the last Year of his Reign, Two Blazing Stars Appeared; the one after Sunset, and the other a little before its Rising, continuing so to do for the space of a Fortnight, Terrifying the People by seeming often to dart Firey Launces from their Blazing Tails.

Fgbert, the Nineteenth Monarch of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 738, in the beginning of which, Fleeces like Wool seemed to drop out of the Clouds, covering many large Fields and Plains, as if it had been Snow; and soon after a terrible Rot happened among Sheep all over England, &c. He appointed his Nobles to here the Complaints of the Poor, and to redress their Wrongs and Grievances; studdying to keep his Subjects Quiet at Home, by securing Peace Abroad; and when he had Reigned Twenty Years, following the Example of his Predecessor, he was shorn a Monk, and Dyed in that state.

Oswulph, the Twentith King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 758, and continued it but one Year; for growing Proud and Cruel, putting divers undeservedly to Death, his own Servants grew into such a hatred of him, that attending him in his Progress, they found an Opportunity to Murther him at Mickewoughton; of which Conspiracy though he was Informed the day before, yet Fate consented not to its Prevention.

Edilmald, the One and Twentieth King of Northumberland, began his Reign Anno Dom. 759; but being of an easie Temper, and somewhat Supine in the Management of his Affairs, which (after many Troubles that thereupon arose, through the Male Administration of the Government, by such as he placed under sam, in Trust and Great Offices) gave Aured, a Duke, and high in Favour with him, an opportunity to Confpire against him, and Murther him in his Pallace, in the Sixth Year of his Reign.

Alured, having Trecherously Slain Edilwald, compelled some through fear, and won others by large Gifts, to Proclaim him King, Anno Dom. 765. But using much Cruelty, and giving himself up to Riot and Luxury, his Subjects grew weary of his Government, and by General Consent, Expelled him the Kingdom, when he had Reigned Nine Years.

Ethelred, upon the Expulsion of Alured, was admitted to the Throne, Anno Dom. 774. But his Government being distasted by the Nobles, because he advanced mean Persons to great Dignities, and made them his Favourites, two of them, Viz. Edibald and Herbert, made a Faction, and Banished him the Kingdom, in the Fifth Year of his Reign; but he was afterwards Re-called, upon promise of Amendment; yet not keeping of his Word, in many nice particulars, his Subjects rose up in Arms, and Slew him, after his Seven Years Second Reign; whereupon much Misery ensued to the Kingdom by Usurpers, who Tyrannized over the People, and Slew whom they pleased at their pleasure: Till Alfwald, a Prince of the Royal Blood, took the Government upon him, putting some of the Usurpers to Death, and Banished others; but he was Murthered by the Conspiracy of one Siga, when he had Reigned Eleven Years. During these Disturbances and Murthers of Kings, many terrible Sights appeared in the Air, hollow Groanings, and, as it were, Laments, were heard in the Earth, in divers places; and affrighting Apparitions of Ghosts and Spectrums Haunted the Pallaces and Houses of Noblemen and others.

Ofred, the Twenty Fifth King of the Northumbrians, Entered

Entered upon the Government much distracted and difordered by Intestine Troubles, so that wanting Power to keep a steady rein, to bridle the unruly People, they Justled him from the Throne, and Ex. pelled him the Kingdom, when he had Reigned about a Year. And though this Kingdom is held by some to last much longer, Viz. to Anno Dom. 926, yet no Historian, I can find, making mention of any other Kings, I rather chuse to End here, than wade into uncertainties, which would not only break the Thread of History, but leave the Reader to wander in Dark and Doubtful Notions: Therefore concluding that fome Authors, who have alotted so long a time, were Mistaken, for want of comparing the Continuance of this, with the rest of the Petty Kingdoms of the Saxon Heptarchy, from the times they Began till they were reduced under a Sole Monarch; I shall proceed to the next, which is the Kingdom of Mercia, &c.

5. The Kingdom of Mercia, in the Succession of its Twenty Kings, or Petty Monarchs, &c.

The Kingdom of Mercia, seized and settled by the most powerful of the Saxon Invaders, is accounted the Largest of the Seven. It Contained Hartfordshire, Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Warwickshire, Staffordshire, Worcestershire, Gloucestershire, Shropshire, Cheshire, Oxfordshire, Notinghamshire, Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Worthamptonshire, Lincoinshire, Huntingtonshire, and the County of Rutland; so that it was Inclosed by the other six Kingdoms, and consequently (when the Britains were brought Low, and the Saxons Elbowed each other, to Enlarge their Territories) most exposed to War, as will appear in the ensuing Account of the Actions of its Kings, in the Succession of Twenty of them;

them; for so many Reigned, before it ceased to be a distinct Kingdom. It was Bounded on the East, with the Kingdoms of the East Angles, East Saxons, and German Ocean; on the South, with the East Saxon and West Saxon Kingdoms; on the West, with Wales; and on the North, with the Kingdom of Northumberland: Abounding with Cities, Towns, Cattle, Corn, Lead, Fruit, Pastures, Rivers, Parks, Chaces, Woods, and Pleasant Rising Hills, and Flowery Meadows; which soon made them grow Rich and Powerful.

Crida was the First Saxon who made himself King of fo spacious a Country; Beginning his Reign Anno Dom. 582. Against him the Britains Warred, but with various fuccess; sometimes the one, and sometimes the other, prevailing; so that much Blood was spilt: But at last, the Britains being mightily weakened in a Bloody Battel, Caretticus their King inmured himself within the walls of Chester. But being Besieged by Grummond, an Arch Pirate, who commanded part of Cridas Forces; and the Saxons not being able to force the Walls, which were stoutly defended by the broken Army of the Britains, retired thither with their King: Grummond Invented a Stratagem to Fire the City, and drive them out like Bees Smok'd from their Hive, or Perish in the Flames; which was effected by tying Wild-Fire to the Feet of Sparrows and Swallows, who lighting on the Thatched Houses fet them on Fire, and lay'd the whole City in a heap of Ruins; but the British King with a few Followers Escaped by Night to the Mountains of Wales, and there foon after Dyed of Grief, for the loss of his People, and desolation of his Country. This Crida Reigned Twelve Years.

Wibba, the Second King of Mercia, began his Reign Anno Dom. 594. This Man Warred with the Britains, and took from them almost all the pleasant Countries they held on his Borders, considerably Enlarging what he at first Possessed, though not without great effusion of Blood on both sides; so that the Dead Bodies lying unburied, corrupted the Air, and caused a Pession lence that destroyed many Thousands. He Reigned Twenty Years.

and

Ceorle, the Third King of Mercia, began his Reign Anno Dom. 614; He finding his Kingdom Large, fent over for more Collonies to People it, and repair the loss of those that fell in the Wars; and then having setled his Borders, and placed Garrisons on the Frontiers, his next business was, to provide such Laws as might the better Establish him in his Kinn

Laws as might the better Establish him in his Kingdom; especially for The preventing Treason, and apprehending Outlawes, or those desperate Persons that lurked in Woods, Robbing and Murthering such as passed by them;

Commanding a certain quantity of Land to be Sowed every Year, on great Penalties to the Counties where the Land enjoyned lay, if neglected. He had some Wars with the Britains, but nothing considerable to those of his Predecessors. He Reigned Ten Years.

Penda, the Fourth King of Mercia, began his Reign

Anno Dom. 624, and made great War upon his Neighbours. He joyned with Cadwallo the Twelfth King of the Britains, against Edwin King of Northumberland, and in a Memorable Battel Slew him, with Prince Offrid his Son; and afterward Oswald, who succeeded

Edwin: And Warring on the East Angles, he made great waste of their Country, Slaying successively three of their Kings, Viz. Sigesbert, Eyrick, and Anna; and being a Pagan, he pursued with Cruel Hatred

those who Professed the Christian Religion, so that The Church mourned his Anger in Tears of Blood, he turning the places of Religious Worship into heaps of Rubbish, and Slaying

Heads or Chief of the Religious Orders. Then making War on the West Saxons, he defeated Redwald their King, in a bloody Battel, and Slew him with many Thousands of his Subjects, much Enlarging his own Kingdom; so that aspiring to the sole Monarchy, and having strongly Pushed and Elbowed his Neighbours in the East and West, enterprizing the like in the North, he was Slain by Osmy King of Northumberland, in a pitched Battel, with Ten Thousand of his Subjects, when he had Reigned 32 Years.

Peada, alias Wedda, the Fifth King of Mercia, began his Reign Anno Dom. 665. He was the first Christian King of the Mercians, causing the Idols every where to be destroyed throughout his Kingdom, Banishing their Priests that refused to be Baptized, building Churches and Monasteries; but before he had fully brought to pass what he intended in this Matter, the Pagan Priests incited his Wife (some Authors say his Mother) secretly to Murther him, when he had Reigned Three Years.

Wolfer, the Sixth King of Mercia, began his Reign Anno Dom. 659; He Warred on the West Saxons, and won the Isle of Wight from Remald, then King of that Island, and gave it to Edilwach King of the South Saxons, to whom he stood Godfather, upon condition of his being Baptized into the Christian Faith; though so great an Enemy he was to the Christians, before his Conversion, That be Caused his two Sons to be put to Death for being Baptized; but as a Pennance for that Sin, and to Attone for Innocent Blood, he Founded the Abby Church at Peterbourough in Northamptonshire, and Endowed it with large Gifts. He Reigned Sixteen Years, and odd Months.

Ethelred, the Seventh King of Mercia, began his Reign

Reign Anno Dom. 675. He made Wars on the Reign Anno Dom. 716. He raised great Forces, and Wickedly the greatest part of his days. He Reigned Twenty Nine Years. Kenred began his Reign Anno Dom. 704; but Reign Anno Dom. 758. He Warred upon Alrick feemed little to affect an Earthly Diadem, labouring to be at Peace with his Neighbours, by restoring as much as lay in his power what his Predecessor had

Violently taken from them; and when he had Reigned Five Years, he refigned his Kingdom to his Coulin Chelred, and took his Journey to Rome, with Offa King of the East Saxons, and Edwin Bishop of Winchester; where he became a Monk, and Dyed in that station. He was the Eighth King of Mercia. Chelred, the Ninth King of the Mercians, began his Reign Anno Dom. 709, but had not long been in the Throne, e're Ine, or Inas King of the West Saxons, emulating his spreading greatness, Quarrelled with him about the Boundaries of their Kingdoms; fo that a fatal War enfued, and much Blood was shed, they being now the Two most Powerful Kings of the Heptarchy; so that others siding with them, the whole Nation was Embroyled in their Quarrel; nor ended it with his Reign, which lasted Seven Years.

Ethelbald, the Tenth King of Mercia, began his

Kentish Kingdom, laying it desolate in a manner with laying Siege to Summerton, had it Surrendered; Then Fire and Sword; not sparing Churches, or any Religithe turned his whole Power on the Northumbrians, ous Houses. This Desolation was forewarned by the Ravaged the Country, and took great Spoile; but in appearance of two dreadful Blazing Stars, which were his return, Cutbred, King of the West Saxons, gave him Vissible for the space of three Months; at the Instance Battel, for lucre of the spoil, and routed him at Burof his Wife, he turned Willfridus out of his Bishoprick; ford in Oxfordshire; and after that, another great but at last being stricken with Remorse of Conscience, Overthrow near Tamworth in Warwickshire, where by for the Slaughters and other Wastes he had made, he the procurement of one Bernzed, a principal Captain religned his Crown and Government to Kenred his in his Host, he was Slain in a Mutiny of his People, Nepher, whose Right it was before; and turning when he had Reigned Twenty Four Years. He is Monk, made a Religious End, though he had Lived faid to have Builded the Monastery of Crowland, and divers other Religious Houses. Offa, the Eleventh King of Mercia, began his > and made great Spoil and Destruction in his Kingdom, as also that of the South Saxons; and puffed up with Victory, not so contented, he Marched through the Countries of the East Saxons, as far as the Mouth of the River Humber, bringing great Terror on the Northumbrian Kingdom; and at his Return Kenwolf King of the West Saxons, endeavouring to Intercept him with great Power, in hopes to be Master of the Rich Booty he had gathered in divers Counties, he was by him Overthrown, with much Slaughter, near Merton. This Offa caused a Ditch of Forty Eight Foot Wide, and Fifteen Deep.

> to be Cut or Thrown up, running a Line between England and Wales; (the tract of which is yet visible.

and retains the Name of Offa's Ditch) commanding the Britains under the Penalty of being pursued with Fire and Sword, not to pass this Bound. But they

King of Kent, Slaying him in Battel near Otteford.

little regarding his Threats, threw it down in divers places, and came Armed into Mercia, making great Spoil. Reign Spoil, though it proved to their disadvantage; for Offa entering Wales with a Potent Army, Overthrew Marmodius their Prince, and most of his Followers, wasting the Towns and Villages with Fire, for near Fifty Miles. This Offa Reigned Thirty Nine Years. In his time a terrible Earth-Quake overthrew many Churches and stately Buildings.

78

Fgfrid, the Twelfth King of Mercia, began his Reign Anno Dom. 797. This Man was well affected, to the Christian Religion; Restoring the Church to all her Antient Priviledges, which his Father had deprived her of, contributing to the Rebuilding those that had been laid in Ruins by Offa in Kent, and other Counties. He was a great lover of Peace, and laboured to reconcile those that were at difference; yet his Reign was very short, continuing only Four Months and odd Days.

his Reign Anno Dom. 797. He Warred on the Kingdom of Kent and made great Spoil, Overthrowing Ethelbert the Third, and taking him Prisoner, but Released him at the Dedication of a new Church he had Builded at Winchcomb, and afterward much Inlarged his Borders, during his Twenty Two Years Reign.

Kenelm

Kenelm coming Young to the Crown, Anno Dom. 819, was much given to Pléasure and Recreations, leaving the chief Management of his weighty Assaires to Ashbert his Tuter, who greatly Inriched himself by Oppressing the People; and fearing to be called to a strict Account, upon the many Complaints made against him, he Conspired with Quendride, the Kings Sister, whose Favourite he was, to cover the Guilt of his crimes with a greater; so that taking an opportunity, when the King was in his Retirement, he Murthered him, when he had Reigned about Five Months. He was the Fourteenth King of Mercia.

Ceolwolfe Succeeding Kenelm, laboured to fettle Affairs, which were much out of order; but the Methods of his proceedings being difliked, one Bernulfe, (a Duke, very Powerful at that time, among the common People) stirred them up to Rebellion; so that rising Tumultuously, they forced him to Abolitate the Throne by a secret withdrawing, to prevent the directificates of Popular-Fury, when he had Reigned One Year. So that for a time, great Distractions were amongst them; but Anno Dom. 821 Bernulfe got posession of the vacant Throne. This Ceolwolfe was the Fisteenth King of Mercia.

Bernulfe by Flattery, distribution of Money, and fair Promises, getting possession of the Kingdom, sound great Troubles from his Powerful Neighbours the West Saxons and East Angles; Egbert, King of the former, making sierce Wars upon him, wasting his Borders, and destroying multitudes of his People; and after, Bernulfe Warring on the East Angles, who had entered Lincolnshire, and made great Spoil, was Slain in a bloody Battel with many Thousands of his Subjects, in the Third Year of his Reign, Anno Dom. 824. He was the Sixteenth King of Mercia.

. .

Lindecan

Ludecan, the Seventeenth King of the Mercians, began his Reign Anno Dom. 824; but being embroyled in the dangerous War his Predecessor had set on foot. engaging in a Battel against Egbert King of the West Saxons, who joyned with the East Angles against him. he was Slain in the Second Year of his Reign; after which, most of the Towns on the East and Western Borders were Sacked, and some reduced to Ashes: Which Desolation was fore-run by a Comet with a Tail pointing downward, like a flaming Sword. Watlaf, the Eighteenth King of Mercia, began his Reign Anno Dom. 826; and with the Kingdom, was constrained to espouse the Wars his Predecessors had left, as it were, Entailed on it; so that raising the Strength of his much harassed and weakened Dominions, he drove the West Saxons out of Worcestershire. and other Western Encroachments; yet not without confiderable loss, in the several Bickerings between them: But in the Thirteenth Year of this King, Egbert the West Saxon, came upon him with a potent Army, and in a fet Battel overthrewhim, putting a Period to his Life and Reign.

Berthulf, the Nineteenth King of Mercia, came to the Kingdom in a troublesome time, viz. Anno Dom. 839; for he not only found his People in War with his Countrymen, but a more cruel Enemy had Invaded the Country, viz. The Pagan Danes, who being Enemies to all alike, as desirous of grasping the sole Monarchy of this Island, they made fuch Havock and Defolation in all places where they prevailed, That the People of whole Counties, in the Northern parts, flying their fury, left the Towns Naked and Defenceless; for the Saxins in Civil War having much impaired their strength, found that they at this time were too weak to oppose the Torrent of those Multitudes that were po ured poured in upon them from Denmark and Gotbland, and also from Shetland, the Orcader, and other Northern Islands, which the Danes possessed beyond Scotland; from one of which they brought a Cruel People called Redshanks, from the Redness of their long Leggs, occasion. ed by the coldness of that Climate, they going for the most part Naked, except a Mantle thrown over their Shoulders; and are supposed, by some Authors, for their mighty stature, to be of the Race of the Titans or Giants, held once to Inhabit part of Britain: However, they brought fuch a Terror on the Mercian Kingdom, &c. That Berthulf was forced to quit it in the Thirteenth Year of his Reign; after which, in compassion to the oppressed People, who were Slain and Spoiled at the pleasure of the Danes, Burdred took upon him the Government; and being a Prince of great Courage, he fought divers Battels with the Danes, and at last gained a great Victory; infomuch that the Fields and Lanes were strewed with the Dead Bodies. But greater Forces arriving to recruite their broken Army, he was forced, after fome strugling, to quit his Kingdom, when he had Reigned Twenty Two Years, viz. Anno Dom. 872. And with him Ended the Succession of Saxon Kings, as petty Monarche of the Mercian Kingdom.

CHAR VIL

The Kingdoms of the East Angles and West Saxons with their respective Succession of Kings; and what Happened of Note during their Reigns, in Peace and War; Particularly the Danish Invasion; and by what means England was reduced under a Sole Monatchy.

6. The East Angle Kingdom Described, with the Succession of its Fifteen Kings.

HE Kingdom of the East Angles contained Suffolk, Norfolk, Cambridgestire, and the Isle of Ely; Bounded on the East, with the German Ocean; on the South, with Effex and Hartfordshire; on the West, with Notinghamshire, Huntingtonshire, and part of Bedfordsbire; on the North, partly by the German Ocean, and partly by the River Trent, and Northumbrian Kingdom; Commodiously Situate for Navigation, as being accommodated with divers good Havens, famous for Butter, Cattel, Corn, Wooll, Cloath, Stuffs, &c. The First Saxon Founder of this Kingdom was

Uffa, a High German Nobleman, who brought over considerable Forces, upon notice his Countrymen were parcelling out the Southern parts of this Island; and Landing at Yarmouth, he prevailed, with some difficultv, to settle himself and his People, in the Counties above-mentioned; beginning his Reign Anno Dom. 575, and Reigned Seven Years, being for the most part

part at peace. In his time, a great-Eclipse of the Sun happened about Noon, almost total, so that it continued

of ENGLAND.

in a great degree Dark, for the space of an Hour.

Titulus Succeeding Uffa, Anno Dom. 583, laboured to fettle his Borders, and keep a good understanding with his Neighbours; and perceiving the British Forces were rather Retired than Subdued, he made many wholsom Laws to keep his People in order, repaired the Ruined Towns, built Forts on the Sea-Coast, and Reigned about 32 Years, keeping his Country for the greater part of that time in Quiet, he was the Second King of the East Angle Kingdom.

Redwald, the Third King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 616. Soon after his coming to the Throne, he was Baptized into the Christian Faith; but upon some distaste, renounced his Baptismal Vows, and became a great Persecutor of the Christians; amongst others, he intended the Death of Edwin afterward King of Northumberland, who fled to his Court for Refuge, because he interceeded for them. But he being a Favorite of the Queens, and the King imparting his defign to her, she pittying the young Prince, so laboured to disswade him from it, that he not only laid aside his wicked purpose, but entered into a strict League with him, and an Army was raised to place him in the Kingdom of Northumberland; when in a great Battel they Slew Ethelfrid, who had got possession of the Throne, and had Banished Edwin. This Redwald Reigned Eight Years. Erpenwald, the Fourth King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 624. He, by the perswasion of Edwin King of Worthumberland, became a Favourer of the Christians, and was Baptized; he built divers Churches, and Monasteries; but when he had Reigned about Twelve Years, Richebert a Pagan Saxon, (out of a Zeal to their False Gods, whose Idol Temples this King had caused to be converted into places of Christian Wor-ship) Associated him, and fled; but being taken, endeavoring to pass the Seas, he was put to death by exquisit Torments.

Sigebert, the Fifth King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 636. He was Son to Redwald, and having received a good opinion of the Christian Religion, (when he was very Young) he upon his Fathers Apostatizing fled into that Country now call'd France, antiently Gallia; where he improved in the Study of Divine things, so that being a great lover of Learned Men, at his coming to the Crown he Founded a Colledge, Endowing it with a plentiful Maintenance, viz. Anno Dom. 637; and so passionately he was in love with a Religious manner of Living, that laying aside his Crown, when he had Reigoed Two Years, he took on him the Habit of a Monk; yet out of compassion to his suffering People, Invaded and driven to great distress, by Penda King of the Mercians, he laid aside his Coml, and reassimed his Crown; when in Battel against him, he was Slain, in the Third Year after his coming to the Crown.

Fgrick, or Edrick (for by both Namers Authos make mention of this King) began his Reign Anno Dom. 638. He continued the War against the Mercians, and gave them divers Foile; but coming to a pitched Battel, endeavouring to break in upon Penda's Standard, he was Slain; upon which his Army was so disheartned, that many of them throwing down their Weapons, a general Rout and Flight ensued; whereupon the Mercians following with great sury, about Seven Thousand were Slain, and not less than Three Thousand of the Mercians. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 638, and Reigned Four Years.

Anna, the Seventh King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 642, and although he Reigned Twelve Years, yet few of his Actions are Recorded, more than that he endeauoured to fettle his Kingdom, and laboured for Peace with his Neighbours, which at last was accorded, though an very hard conditions.

Ethelbert, the Eighth King of the East Angles, finding he was too weak to oppose the Northumbrians, who had got strong footing in the Northern Frontier Towns, he made a League with Penda King of Mereia, at which Ofwye King of Northumberland, being much difgusted. raifed a great Army; and War being denounced, the East Angles and Mercians thinking it not convenient to flay his coming, resolved to place the seat of War in his Country; but in their March, a fatal Omen seemed to forbid it, viz. Two Flights of Birds, (one from the North, and the other from the South) met, and Encountered over their Host with such Fury, that many drops of Blood, as it had been small sprinklings of Raine, fell from the Wounds made on each other with their Bills and Talons. till at last the Southern Flight turned Taile, with a strange Noise, or Cryes, and were Pursued till out of sight. Soon after this, Penda, Ethelbert, and their Confederates, joyned Battel with Oswye near Leeds in Yorkshire; and in a great Overthrow of their Armys, the two Kings were Slain with 18000 of their Men, and among them 30 Dukes and chief Leaders. This Ethelbert Reigned two Years.

Edelwald, the Ninth King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 656. He purchas'd his Peace with a great Sum, when he found he was too feeble to oppose his Enemies; and gave up Cantionary Towns to the Northumbers, for the security of payment: This caused a Murmuring among his Subjects, which broke into Tumults; so that much grieved at his missortunes Abroad and at Home, he Dyed, when he had Reigned Eight Years.

Aldulfe, the Tenth King of the East Angles, was advanced to the Crown Anno Dom. 664, in a very troublesome time; however with some difficulties, he brought the Kingdom to a settlement, and continued his Reign Ninteen Years. In his time a terrible Earth-Quake happened, giving three violent shocks, which shattered and overturned divers mass Buildings; but the greatest dammage fell upon the City of London, many People being destroyed by the fall of Chimneys, Houses, &c. And soon after so great a Frost happened, That loaded Carts went over the principal Rivers, as securely as if it had been on dry Land.

Elfwold, the Eleventh King of the East Angles, began to Reign Anno Dom. 683. The Danes in his time began to be troublesome, and Invaded the Scots and Callidonians, committing terrible Outrages in Argyle-shire, and other parts, subduing all the Islands belonging to Scotland, advancing after many Battels, upon the Pists, and as far as the Tweed; whereupon those Nations craved Aid of this, and other Saxon Kings, to Expel them; urging, as a main reason, the Mutual Danger they were in, by the Invasion of so powerful an Enemy; which (though it proved fatally true) was at that time little minded. This King Reigned Seven Years.

Beorne, the Twelsth King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 690: And though he continued it Twenty Four Years, yet there is nothing Memorable Recorded of him, as to certainty of History, but his Building some Monasteries, and making divers good Laws for the well Governing of his Subjects.

Etbekred, the Thirteenth King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 71 4. In his Second Year, on Midsummer-Daysat Sunseting, dark Clouds overspread the Shies, and then mithdrawing, the Element seemed on

Fire

Fire; after that, many fearful fights appeared in the Air, of Armies and Monsterous Creatures; upon which followed so great a Storm, that many Ships were broken to pieces in the Havens, mighty Oaks rent up, and Houses overturned. He Reigned, sometimes in War and at others in Peace, Thirty Five Years.

Ethelbert, the Second of that Name, and the Fourteenth King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 749. He, in the last Year of his Reign, sent Ambasfadors to Offa King of Mercia, to treat of Peace, and the restoring some Towns taken from him and his Predecessors, which off a seemed enclinable to hearken to, fending them back with Presents and Rewards, as also a dissembling Letter to Invite Ethelbert to his Court. under pretence of giving him his Beauteous Daughter Alfrida in Marriage, that the League between them might be the stronger; but indeed aiming to add the East Angle Kingdom to his own Dominions; and having gotten the too credulous Prince in his power, he consulted with Quindride how he should dispose of him, to accomplish his designes; who being a Woman Inured to Blood and Mischles, Counseled his Death, which was performed in the heighth of Jollitry, by disguised Russians; so that instead of a Bridal Bed, he had an untimely Grave, when he had Reigned Forty Five Years.

Edmund, the Fifteenth and last King of the East Angles, began his Reign Anno Dom. 794. He was a great encourager of Religious Persons, allowing large Sums to Churches and Church-men; but one of his Nobles whom he had constituted as Vice Roy, Ravishing the Beautious Wife of Beorn, a Nobleman, who in his Progress had sumptuously Feasted him; This Beorn preferring his private Revenge to the good of his Country, called in the Danes, (who before were much discouraged) discouraged) and charge the Guilt on Innocent King Edmund, because he had not put the Offender to Death, as the Law then directed; which indeed, he durst not do, the other being grown too powerful for him. And now the King being Overthrown in divers Battels, his Country scattered over with his Slain Subjects, and most of the principal Towns laid in Ruines, he was constrained to fly for shelter to Framingham Castle, where the Danes Besieged him, and through Famine and loss of Men constraining the Garrison to Surrender, they stripped the King of his Royal Robes, beat his Naked Body with Cudgels, scourging him till the Bones of his Ribs appeared bare, he bearing it patient. ly all the while, calling on the Name of Jesus; which so enraged the Pagans, That Tying him to a Post, they Shot bim to Death with Arrows, then cut off his Head, and threw it into a Wood, which being found by a Shepherd, was Buried, together with his Body, at a place in Suffelk, bearing from thence the Name of St. Edmunds-Bury; he being foon after Cannonized a Saint and Martyr; And with him ceased the East Angle Government; there being no mention made of any more Kings that Governed it, as a distinct Kingdom. About the number of Years he Reigned, Authors disagree; and therefore I pass them over as uncertain, and proceed to the last of the Seven Kingdoms, viz. That of the West Saxons.

7. The West Saxon Kingdom described, with the Succession of its Kings; and what things worthy of History happened during their respective Reigns. Also by what means they at last Obtained the Sole Monarchy of England, &c.

The Kingdom of the West Saxons contained the spacious and fertil Counties of Cornwal, Devonsbire, Dorcetshire, Somersetshire, Wiltshire, Hampshire, and Barkshire: Bounded on the North, with Monmouthshire, Gloucestershire, Oxfordshire, and Bristol-Channel; on the East, with Suffex, Surry, and part of Buckingham-(hire; on the South, with the British-Ocean, and part of the Channel; on the West, with the Ocean. These Counties abound in plenty of Corn, Wooll, Tinn, Fruits, Cattle, and profitable Manufactures; having many Excellent Harbours, opening advantageously to the Sea; so that growing by fuch means Rich and Powerful, they failed not at length to bring under the other Kingdoms. Uniting them in a Sole Monarchy under Exbert their Seventeenth King, as in the Series of this History will appear.

Cherdick, a Valiant Captain of the Low Country Germans, first laboured to form these Counties into a Kingdom; but before he could do it, he had Six Years Wars with the Britains; in which he Fought a great Battel with Aurelius Ambrosius their King, and was put to the Rout; but upon his Death, which happened Two Years after by Poison, as has been related, Uter-Pendragon, Brother to Aurelius, being Crowned King of the Britains, he borrowed Forces of Hengist, who were sent under the Leading of Ebusa and Otta his two Sons; but these Forces were, as the former, overthrown by Uter-Pendragon, and Hengists Sons were taken Prisoness;

but whilst the Victor neglected the Tents of Mars for the softer Alcove of Venus, viz. To sport with the fair Igren, Wife to the Duke of Cornwal, on whom he got the Kenouned Prince Arthur, who Succeeded him as King over the Britains, the Noble Captives Escaped; and again advancing their Standard in the Field; were Slain with most of their followers. These bad beginnings so startled Cherdrick, that he found little hopes to keep the footing he had gained; but more Forces coming unexpectedly to his Aid, he resolved to try another Battel with the Britains, which was Fought near Salisbury, wherein Fortune turning her Wheel about, he put the British Army to the Foil, killing Natauleon, one of their great Captains; and made so great a slaughter of his Enemies, that for a time he had no Interruption in settling his Affairs; but after the Death of Uter-Pendragon, (who Died of Poison put into a Well, whereof he used to Drink every Morning) King Arthur gave great disturbances to him in the settlement of his new acquired Kingdom, much Blood being shed between them in divers Battels; yet beginning his Reign Anno Dom. 501, he continued it Thirty Three Years.

Kenrick, the Second King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 534. He was Son to Cherdick, and a Mortal Enemy to the Britains. In his Fathers time he Commanded a part of the Army, and Fought several Battels, and now coming to the Crown he raised all his Forces, and gave the Britains two great Overthrows, viz. One at Shrewsbury, and the other at Banbury in Oxfordshire. He Reigned Twenty Six Years.

Chewlin, the Third King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Doin. 560. He Warred upon Ethelbert King of Kent, and descated his Army at Wimbledon, slaying two of his chief Commanders; and this is held to be the first Battel, sought between Saxons and Saxons, in England; a little before which, it remarkably, happened at Feversham in Kent, That a Tame Wolfe having brought forth Seven Male Youngones, they lived Quietly together, till grown up. and then never left Fighting till all but one were Destroyed; as it afterward befell the Saxon Heptarchy. This King gave a great Overthrow to the Britains at Bedford, and Surprized Four of their Towns, viz. Liganbury, Ailsbury, Benfington, and Evilham: He Fought another Battel with them at Deorham, and Slew three of their Dukes, viz. Farmnagill, Coinmagill, and Candigan, Taking the Cities of Glocester. Bath, and Cirencester. But not long after, Encountering them at Wodensbridge, his Army was defeated. and Cuth (his Eldest Son) Slain; for here a party of Saxons affilted the Britains under the Command of Cearlick, his Nephew, who had fled to them upon hard usage, and fear of being made away by his unnatural Uncle, He Reigned Thirty Three Years.

Cearliek, the Fourth King of the West Savons, gained the Kingdom by the Overthrow of his Uncle Chewlin, which he gave him at Waines-Ditch in Wiltshire, Anno Dom. 593; after which, he found much trouble ere he could be settled in the Government; but the Britains standing his Friends, he continued his Reign Six Years.

Chelwolf began his Reign Anno Dom. 598; but scarce was he settled in the Throne ere the Britains Invaded his Territories, making great Spoil; but sinding they were too weak to withstand him alone, in process of time they drew the Scots and Piess to their assistance; so that many bloody Battels were fought with various success. In which Wars he Dyed, in the 14th Year of his Reign, leaving his Kingdom in much distress and perplexity. He was the 5th King of the West Saxons, Kingills, the Sixth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 612. He had great Wars with the Britains, and in a pitched Battel at Beandane, he put Cudwan their King to the Rout, Slaying above a Thousand of his Subjects; and having concluded a Peace with Penda King of the Mercians, he grievously Oppressed them, so that for a long time they were confined to the Mountains and Fastnesses in the Country now called Wales: However, after he was Converted to the Christian Faith by Berinus, he abated much of his Severity, making Dorchester a Bishops See, and placing that Religious Man in it. He was the First Christian King of the West Saxons, and Reigned Thirty One Years.

Kenwald, the Seventh King of the West Saxons, made great Wars upon the Britains, Overthrowing King Cadwallo, at a place called Pennum, with incredible slaughter; but growing Proud on the success, and Quarreling with Penda King of Mercia, whose Sister he had Married, and in Contempt of him turned her away, he was by him driven out of his Kingdom. But upon Submitting, and being Baptized by Bishop Felix, he was restored to his Kingdom, and thereby obliged by Penda to receive his Wise into Favour. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 643, and Reigned Thirty One Years:

Eskwin, the Eighth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 674. He had Wars with Wolfere King of Mercia, and a great Battel was Fought between them at Bidambeaford which continued so Obstinate, from Morning till Evening, that both the Kings perceiving the great Loss they had sustained, in the Night time they raised their Camps, and secretly Retreated; as being mutually possessed with a scar of the direful consequences they apprehended

dended would attend the next days Encounter. He afterward Warred on the Britains, but his short Reign affords us no Memorable Achievement in that Enterprize, it continuing only Two Years.

Enterprize, it continuing only I wo Years.

Kentwin, the Ninth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 677, continuing the Waron the Britains, sorely Oppressing them in all the Neighbouring Counties, in the latter end of the Reign of Cadwallo their King, which he continued after the Death of that British Prince; so that Cadwallader, his Son, coming to the Crown, found himself constrained to draw his People into a lesser compass, having at last little more at liberty than the Mountains and some Valleys, being perpetually Alarmed on the Frontiers, so that Blood was daily spilt like Water. This Kentwin Reigned Nine Years. A Blazing Sar of a Whitish or Flame-Colour, appeared in his time for three Months, with a Taile of exceeding length, far longer than before had been Recorded in any Age.

Ceadwald, the Tenth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 686. He made War on the South Saxons, and in a set Battel slew Ethelwolf their King; and continuing to prosecute his Ravages in that Country and Kent, he spit much Christian Blood; Encountering Barthun, Successor to Ethelwolf, he likewise slew him in Battel; after which, repenting what he had done, he went to Rome, and was there Baptized by Pope Sergius, and Named Peter. His Reign continued Two Years and odd Days.

Ine, or Ineas, the Eleventh King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 688. In his time the poor Britains were forely Oppressed with War, Famine, and Pestilence; so that the Living were scarce able to Bury the Dead; which great Calamity, Cadwallader not able to bear, left the Land, and went to Armorica or Britany, to his Cousin Allan, and from thence in Pilgrimage to Rome, and received a Religious Habit at the Hands of Pope Sergius; in which Retirement he Dyed, and with him all the hopes of the Britains, he being accounted the Last of their Kings; the rest being stiled by Au. thentick Historians only Princes of Wales. This Inc made the South Saxons to Submit, and annexed that Kingdom to his own. He likewise Warred with various fuccess on Chelred King of Mercia; and made many wholsom Laws for the good of his People, Translated by Mr. Lambert out of the Saxon Language: He Founded the Abby of Glassenbury, over the Tomb, or Burying. place, of Joseph of Arimathea, who begged our Saviours Body from the Cross, and afterwards (as several Aushors report) came over into this Kingdom, Preaching the Gospel to the Britains, and Dying, was Buried at Glassenbury. This King afterward went a Pilgrimage to Rome; and for the good reception he found there, he made a Law, That every Housholder who had Goods to the Value of Twenty Pence of One Sort, should pay a Penny by way of Gratuity to the Pope, every Lammas Day; which afterward was Claimed by fucceeding Popes by way of Tribute, and called Peter Pence. He Reigned Thirty Seven Years

Ethellard, the Twelfth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 726, being in a manner ushered in by two Blazing Stars, both within a quarter of a Year; one at North-West, and the other at South-East; after which a Famine and Pestilence grievously Assisted all parts of this Island, so that Shiping was sent abroad to setch in Food in Exchange for Metals and other walvable Goods. He streightened the Britains in their Mountanous Country, and caused many to be slain who passed the appointed Boundaries. He Reigned Fourteen Years.

Cutbred,

Cutbred, the Thirteenth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 740; when finding the Britains had gathered Courage by the coming over of Recruits from Armorica, or Britany, with which Country, as an antient Collony of this, they kept a strict Allyance; after several Battels fought with them in Worcestershire, Monmouthshire, and other bordering Counties, which they laboured to recover, he at last in many Encounters proving too weak, Leagued with Ethelbald King of Mercia, and by that means the Britains were beaten out of most of the places they had gained; and being Overthrown in Battel near Carnarvan they found themselves unable to make head against the Victors, by reason half their Army, most of their Nobles, and chief Commanders were flain; so that they sued for Peace, which after much havock and desolation in their Mountainous Country, by the pursuing Saxons, was granted, in consideration of an Annual Tribute of Three Thousand Marks to be payed to Cuthred; but it was not long punctually observed, before new Tumults and Disturbances happened; for Adelm, an Earl of the West Saxons, Rebelling against his King, and drawing a multitude of the Plebeans to his Party, the Britains took that opportunity to cast off their Yoak. This Cutbred Reigned Fourteen Years.

Sigesburt, the Fourteenth King of the West Saxons, assumed the Throne Anno Dom. 754; and being brought up tenderly in his Infancy, and in his Grown Years addicting himself to the conversation of Parasites, Flatterers, and other Vicious Persons; it so corrupted his Manners, that by the Advice of such his wicked Counsellours, who chiestly Swayed him, he caused Earl Cumbria to be put to Death with great Torture, For Daring (as he himself Expressed it) to tell him of his Failings and Desetts in his Kingly Office. But this Earl being a grave Patriot, and a Man of Unblameable Life, was so generally beloved by the People, that his Death cost Sigesbert his Crown and Life; for hereupon they rose up in Arms against him, deseated those that stood by him, and drove him into a Wood in Dorcetshire, where he absconded till he supposed the hear of the Pursuit and Popular Fury was abated; but being found by the Earls Swineheard, Breakfasting on Acorns, under a spreading Oake, he with a Battoon beat out his Braines, in revenge of his Masters Death, no intreaties or promises of reward being able to deter him from this bloody Execution. His Reign continued about Year.

ing

and

Kenwolf, the Fifteenth King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 755, and had no fooner, fettled the Government, (which by reason of Intestine Broyles, and the untimely Death of a King, was much disordered) than he prepared to Invade the Britains. but upon their fending to excuse the non Payment of the Tribute, on the account of their extream Poverty caused by a Famme that had held two Years in their Country; fo that the Poorer fort left no Unclean thing wn-eaten: His preparations were for a time layed a side, but some stragling Parties of Britains, constrained by Necessity, making Incursions into the Saxon Counties, War was Proclaimed, and the Britains being Overthrown in divers Battels, were forced to fly to the Rocks and the broken craggy Cliffs on the Seashoare and the Mountainnous parts for shelter; from thence with aking Hearts, beholding the blazing Fires that confumed their Habitations, and the miserable Desolation made in their (almost before) ruined Countiv. But as if such Cruelty (as no doubt it did) seemed diffileasing in the sight of God, The angry Heavens Warred against him, and did what the feeble Britains were unable wiz, he was driven out of the Country by vioains, which Deluging the Valleys and Plaines, d away Men, Horse, and Baggage; so that by cans he lost a good part of his Army. When so great a misfortune out of his mind, going to to follace with his Paramour, a worse misforfel him; for having Quarreled with Offa King rcia; Clyto, a Mercian Captain, upon privat of his Journy, attended but with a few Servants, an Ambush and slew him; which was the next venged by Ofricus one of Kenwolfs Captains, who ews of what had happened, by a Shepherd (who Hill had beheld the slaughter of the King and owers) crossing the Country by the nearest ways, pted Clyto in his return; and after a sharp flew him, and Eighty Souldiers his attendants; fed the Kings Body to be Interred with much at Winchester. This King Reigned Twenty Years.

rick, the Sixteenth King of the West Saxans, bis Reign Anno Dom. 784. He was given up such to the Love of Women; and though he arryed to a very Beautiful Queen, yet he kept Concubins; so that his Recreations of that kind up much of his time, gave his Neighbours for It part rest, especially to the satisfaction of the who were in a low condition, and unable to b the Charge and Fatigue of a dangerous War. had lately experienced to their smart and imnment; yet in his time several strange Prodigies d, viz. The similitudes of seven Moons in the ent, which by degrees uniting into one, it exceeding Bright for a time, above what that net had usually done, and then became dim and A great Glob of Fire appeared over Winchester, ing a grave Patriot, and a Man of Unblameable I was so generally beloved by the People, that his Decost Sigesbert his Crown and Life; for hereupon a rose up in Arms against him, deseated those that so him, and drove him into a Wood in Doract where he absconded till he supposed the heat of Pursuit and Popular Fury was abated; but being so by the Earls Swineheard, Breakfasting on Acorns der a spreading Oake, he with a Battoon beat ou Braines, in revenge of his Masters Death, no intreor promises of reward being able to deter him this bloody Execution. His Reign continued about Year.

Ť/

Kenwolf, the Fifreenth King of the West Saxons gan his Reign Anno Dom. 755, and had no fo fettled the Government, (which by reason of Inte Broyles, and the untimely Death of a King, was r disordered) than he prepared to Invade the Bril but upon their fending to excuse the non Payme the Tribute, on the account of their extream Pov caused by a Famine that had held two Years in Country; fo that the Poorer fort left no Unclean t un-eaten: His preparations were for a time layer side, but some stragling Parties of Britains, constra by Necessity, making Incursions into the Saxon Q ties, War was Proclaimed, and the Britains Overthrown in divers Battels, were forced to: the Rocks and the broken craggy Cliffs on the shoare and the Mountainnous parts for shelter; thence with aking Hearts, beholding the blazing that confumed their Habitations, and the mife Deselation made in their (almost before) ruined tiv. But as if such Cruelty (as no doubt it did) difficating in the fight of God, The angry Heavens W against him, and did what the feeble Britains were do, viz, he was driven out of the Country by viont Rains, which Deluging the Valleys and Plaines, rryed away Men, Horse, and Baggage; so that by his means he lost a good part of his Army. When o put so great a missortune out of his mind, going to Merton to sollace with his Paramour, a worse missorune befel him; for having Quarreled with Offa King of Mercia; Clyto, a Mercian Captain, upon privat notice of his Journy, attended but with a few Servants, ayed an Ambush and slew him; which was the next day Revenged by Ofricus one of Kenwolfs Captains, who upon news of what had happened, by a Shepherd (who from a Hill had beheld the slaughter of the King and his Followers) crossing the Country by the nearest ways. intercepted Clyto in his return; and after a sharp dispute slew him, and Eighty Souldiers his attendants; and caused the Kings Body to be Interred with much State at Winchester. This King Reigned Twenty Nine Years.

Britbrick, the Sixteenth King of the West Suxans began bis Reign Anno Dom. 784. He was given up very much to the Love of Women; and though he was Marryed to a very Beautiful Queen, yet he kept divers Concubins: so that his Recreations of that kind taking up much of his time, gave his Neighbours for the most part rest, especially to the satisfaction of the Britains, who were in a low condition, and unable to undergo the Charge and Fatigue of a dangerous War, as they had lately experienced to their smart and impoverishment; yet in his time several strange Prodigies appeared, viz. The similitudes of seven Moons in the Firmament, which by degrees uniting into one, it Shined exceeding Bright for a time, above what that pale Planet had usually done, and then became dim and cloudy. A great Glob of Fire appeared over Winchester, and coming near the earth parted or broke into divers lesser Globes or Balls, which Fired some Houses, and killed many People; also a little Blazing-Star appeared three Nights successively; and a Month before his Death, strange Shrieks and affrighting Voices were heard in his Pallace. The manner of his Death was thus: The Queen impatient of the Wrongs he did her in keeping Strumpets in his Pallace, and canfing her fometimes to wait on them, was at length prompted to revenge the Affronts put upon her by one of them he best loved, and therefore having mixed Poison with some rich Wine, she intended to send it to her in the Kings Name as a Present, but being unluckily called away to see some sights that were prepared for the diversion of the Court, she left it in her Closet. and for haste the Door open; when as the King coming thither before her return, and taking it for a Cordial, Drank largly of it; and so by the strength of the Poison. he Dyed in three Hours; and the Queen fearing to fuffer a cruel Death, though this had un-witingly happened by her means, hereupon flying into Erance. through Grief and Want, she dyed in a miserable condi-This King Reigned Sixteen Years.

Egbert, the Seventeenth and Last Petty King of the West Saxons, began his Reign Anno Dom. 800; and whilst he continued in this Station, before he came to be Crowned Sole Monarch, of the Saxons, Uniting the Heptarchy or Seven Kingdoms, he had great Wars with the Britains, who were assisted by the Cornishmen; which from the beginning of his Wars with them, to the time he brought them to acknowledge him their Superiour, lasted about Fourteen Years; in which time he took Westchester, and made a strict Law, That no Britain or Westman should pass Offa's Ditch, without leave. Then Warring on the Mercians, he slew Bernuls nulf their King; subdued Kent, and compelled the East Angles, the South and East Saxons, to submit to him; and in a great measure having brought the Mercians and Northumbrians under, grasping at the Sole Monarchy, which he concluded Fortune had, or foon would, chain to his Sword; he caused himself with great Pomp folemnly to be Crowned Soled Monarch of the Saxons; that had been, for the most part, till now, distinctly Governed by their respective Kings; as appears in the foregoing account of the Succession of them. This was performed at Winchester, (with many of the Ceremonies used at present in the Coronation of our Kings) when he had Reigned over the West Saxons Nineteen Years. But because I am obliged to Trace the remainder of his Reign, viz. Seventeen Years, as Sole Monarch, in the next Chapter; I here omit to mention any more of his Actions.

And now to clear some difficulties that may arise

as far as History gives light into the Truth,

Note, That although Egbert caused himself to be Crowned Sole Monarch, and absolutely possessed himfelf of those Kingdoms whose Succession of Kings ceased before, or when he Reigned, as that of Kent, the East Saxons and South Saxon Kingdoms, &c. yet others were of a longer continuance, and can be supposed only as Tributary to him; for we find Burdred the last of the Mercian Kings, ended his Reign Anno Dom. 874. viz. Thirty Eight Years after Egberts Death. And to the same purpose, it is to be considered further, viz. where Authors make mention of a longer continuance of the Petty Kingdoms than there is any Succession of Kings Recorded, the Judicious Observers and Comparers of History, have looked ou it as a Mistake in them, by taking the Lieutenants, or Vice-Roys, placed by the Sole Monarchs, to Govern under under them, for petty Kings; which Error the Antient Writers of the Affairs of this Kingdom having been too lyable to, their Incoherence, in respect of Time, has not a little puzzled those that came after them; which I have, as well as the matter will conveniently bear, without breaking the thred of History, laboured to Resorm.

CHAP. VIII.

The Succession of the Fifteen Saxon Kings that were Sole Monarchs of England; with what Memorable Things happened in Peace and War during their Reigns; as Wonderful Sights, Prodigies, and Remarkable Accidents, &c. Till the time the Danes wrested the Kingdom (with much strugling) from them Anno Dom. 1017, about 230 Years after they made their first Invasion. Together with a Description of the Counties of England, one by one, after every Kings Reign; which will be continued throughout the Work, giving an Account of what is or has been Rare or Remarkable in each of them, &c.

The Reign of King Egbert, the First Sole Saxon Monarch of England.

HEN the contending Petty Kings of the Saxons had for many Years Elbowed each other, and (discontented with a Part) arugled who should become Masters of the Whole, and Amais the Light Crowns into one more Ponderous, we find Fortune (or rather Providence) gave this advantage to Egbert, the Seventeenth King of the West Saxons; though to attain it, he waded (as I may term it) through a Sea of Blood in his Wars with the Welsh (for so I must henceforth stile the poor remainders of the Antient British Race, as taking upon them that Epithite, and calling their Principality Wales, after the Name the Saxons had many Years before given it ) also with the Cornishmen who Rebelled against him, and were affifted with Supplies from Armorica, or Britany in France; in his Wars against Bernulf King of Mercia, and his subduing the Kingdom of Kent, and compelling the East, South, and Angle Saxons to submit to him. In these Enterprizes, which took him up for the most part the Nineteen Years he Reigned as Petty Monarch over the West Saxons, about one Hundred Thousand are held to be Slain on all sides; so that the Crown, purchased at so large an expence of Lives, being set on his Head (as has been faid) at Winchester, he commanded the Name of Sarons to be changed into that of Englishmen; corresponding with the Name given to the Country they Inhabited, That by this change . they by degrees might forget the Distinctions they before were under, and so firmly Unite as one Kingdom and People, not tending to different, but one and the fame Interest. This Egbert, gaining, through many difficulties, what he long before aspired to, made divers good Laws for the better Establishment of his new acquired Soveraignty; fo that the Welsh (though they put not themselves under his Protection, vet desirous to be at Peace) fent him many Presents out of their divided Dominions, of North and South Wales, which Provincees (for no more must I call them Kingdoms) were Governed by Petty Princes. After this, Fgbert made a Progress through the greatest part of English, appointing appointing Judges and other Magistrates, to see the Laws put in Execution against Offenders, and to redress the Wrongs and Grievances of such as were Oppressed, being received every where with great respect; and then thinking to lead a quiet Life, he found by sad experience the Inconstancy of Fortune.

experience the Inconstancy of Fortune. The Danes having been formerly worsted and driven out of this part of the Island, again took Courage to Invade it, Landing from 33 big Ships, and divers smaller Transport Vessels, an Army of 23000 of their best Souldiers; and before Egbert could raise his Forces to oppose them, they Ravaged the Country, Burning and Destroying all in their way, not sparing the Men from their Swords, nor the Women from their inordinate Lusts, destroying in a more dreadful manner the Religious Houses, and those that Inhabited them; Ravishing the Nuns, and Ripping open some Women with Child for Pastime. This made the grieved King haften towards them, with fuch Forces as he could readily get together, to prevent the further desolation of his Country; commanding his Lieutenants to raise what Forces they could, and hast to joyn him; but ere they could do it, he fought the Danes, and was overthrown by them in a bloody Battel, looking 5000 common Souldiers, two of his Dukes commanding under him, and two Bishops; by his Valour hardly winding himself out of the press of his Enemies, and escaping. However, the Danes sinding the Courage of the English to be beyond what they expected, loning a great many Men, and perceiving the Country in Arms against them, thought it the safest way to depart with the Rich Boory they had got in the spoile of the Counties of Suff It, Norfolk, Essex, Middlesex, &c. But the second Year after they Landed with greater forces at Holy Head in Wales, and between Fear and

Perswasion

appoin Laws drefs to preffed and the experie
The
out of i Invade
fmaller

best Sa Forces . Burning the Me their inc manner them; Women Srieved as he cou defolatio to raile but ere t overthro common under hi winding; escaping. of the En a great i Arms aga with the I Counties But the f forces at

Perswasion, the Welsh were prevailed on to joyn with them; but Fortune turning on the English side, Egbert gave their United Forces a great Overthrow, on the Marches of South Wales; yet having tasted the sweetness of the Riches and Plenty this Kingdom afforded, They made another Invalion in the last year of this Kings Reign; Sacking the Isle of Sheppy by Kent, and with much difficulty were expelled it: This Egbert was the First Sole Monarch of the English Saxons, he began his Reign as fuch Anno Dom. 819, and Reigned Seventeen Years, and was Buried at Winchester. Having promised to give a (Brief) Description of England and its Rarities, &c. To make good my Word I conceive no better Method to do it in, than placing the Counties, and what I find in them worthy of Remark, after the respective Reign of each Sole Monarch, taking them Alphabetically, and first of

Barkshire Described, &c.

T His County is bounded on the North, with part of Oxfordshire, and part of Buckinghamshire; on the East, with part of Middlesex, and part of Surry; on the South, with Hampshire; and partly on the West, with Wiltshire. It is Rich in Clothworking, Fat Passure, abundance of Cattle, rare Artificers, Rivers stored with Fish of divers forts, particularly the River Kennet abounds with Trouts.

It Containes 140 Parishes, 20 Hundreds, 12 Market Towns, and 3 Rivers of note; and to the Parliament, Abingdon sends one Member, New Windsor two, Reading two, and Wallingford two, besides two Knights of the Shire. The Towns Memorable for things of Note are tbese viz. At Reading was Interred the Body of King Henry the

First,

First, in a Collegiate Church of an Abby, Founded by himself, as also his Queen, and Daughter, Maud the Empress. This place is also Memorable for the Birth of William I aud Arch Bishop of Canterbury, the Son of a Poor Clothier.

At Engleshield the Danes were defeated. Wallingford is the Gallena of Ptolomy, it was the Antient station of the Romans, and chief City of the Atrebants. Windsor was Builded by King Edward the Third, who Instituted the most Noble Order of the Garter. The Burying Place of Henry the Sixth, Edward the Fourth, Henry the Eighth, and King Charles the First; Eaton was Founded by King Henry the Sixth, and Renouned as a Nursery for bringing up of Youth, being one of the chiefest Free-Schools in England. Sunning was an Episcopal See during the Residence of Eight Bishops, which afterward was translated to Sherbourn, and so to Salisbury, where it now is fixed.

At Wantage King Alfred (Sir Named the Scourge of the Danes) was Born. Waltham in the East of this County, was an Antient station of the Romans, as also was Sinodum in the North, as appears by many Roman Coins and Medals of their Emperours Digged up there.

Newbury is Renowned for the Birth of Thomas Hide, a famous Historian; and Memorable for the Two great Battels between the King and Parliament in the late Civil War. As for Castles that of Windsor in this County is accounted the most Exalted of all others, having not only been the Burying Place, but Pallace of divers Kings; and much delighted in by King Charles the Second, who made it his chosen place of Pleasure and Retirement; being, besides its delightful situation, advanced on a high Hill, arising with a gradual ascent, which affords the pleasantest Prospect imaginable. On the North side of this County the River Thames glides, washing its verdant Banks in many Meanderings with its Silver Streams; and out of is goes goes many Creeks, which much advantages those parts of the County by cheap Water-Carriage from London, and other places. It is likewise Beaunssed with some Scats of the Nobility, which give a good Prospect to Travelers, viz. A Noble Seat of the Earl of Craven near Newbery, the Earle of Clarendon's at Swallowsield, Hurly belonging to John Late Lord Lovelace Barron of Hurley; with a great many stately Houses belonging to the Gentry of the County; so that it claimes an Equality with most of the English Counties.

The Reign of Ethelwolf, the Second Sole Monarch of England, &c.

EThelwolf, the Eldest Son of Egbert, upon his Fathers decease declined the Crown as being then Bishon decease declined the Crown, as being then Bishop of Winchester; rather affecting a Religious Peaceable Life, than to Incumber himself with the weighty Affairs of Government. But the Nobles perceiving Troubles would arise, if they altered the Succession, used many cogent Arguments to perswade him to lay aside his Pall for a Crown, but their Reasons prevailed not, till they had dealt with his Clergy in a manner to constrain him to a compliance; whereupon bestowing his Bishoprick on Swithin his Tutor, he was solemply Crowned at Winchester, and settling the Civil Affairs as the times allowed, finding part of his Dominions Oppressed by the Danes, he raised great Forces and Encountered them in divers Battels, and in a Bloody one at Ockly in Surry destroyed the greater part of their Army, killing and taking Prisoners their chief Captains or Leaders, which made the routed Danes, that and other Northern Counties; but little was done at that survived the Fatal day, retired to the extremities of Kent; where straightened for Food, and roving to get it, many of them were slain by the Country People. This King Marryed Osburga a fair Lady, Daughter to his Butler, by whom he had Ethelbald, Ethelbert, Ethelbred, and Elfride; who Succeeded in the Kingdom successively; but she Dying, he took Judith, Daughter to the King of France, in a second Marriage; by whom I do not find he had any Children.

In this Kings Reign the Picts were destroyed by Kenneth King of Scotland; their chiefest City Camelon Stormed, and as well Women and Children as Men, who retired thither for fafety, put to the Sword, in revenge of the Death of Alpine the King of Scots Father, who being Overthrown by Burdus King of the Picts, was taken Prisoner, and had his Head struck off on a publick Scaffold, and fixed on the Wall of Came-In, but foon taken thence by some Scots who came thither in Pictish Habit; and so implacable were the Scots, in the utter extirpating this Nation (which had long stood a boundary between them and the Southern parts of the Island, being in a manner placed in the middle of it) that having destroyed all the People that fell into their hands, they flew their Cattel, and suffered them to Rot on the Ground; rooted up their Corn, and layed their Towns and Villages level with the Ground; not sparing Churches, nor any Religious Houses, pursuing the Flyers to their last Refuge, viz. The strong Castle of Maidens, now called Edenbourcugh Caftle, straightly Besieging them; so that the Belieged having endured extream Famine, and dispairing of relief, desperately Sallying, broke (in the Night time) through the Leagure; and as many as escaped, fled into England, craving Aid of Ethelwolfs Lieutenants, or Tributary Regents, in Northumberland, this time, by reason the King expected an Invasion by the Danes, who were preparing in Denmark, to succour their distressed Excess that kept but slender footing in England; and others of the Picts, who before had escaped the miserable desolation of their Country, sled to Norway, and Denmark; and there, in consideration of Resuge and present Support, resigned their Interest in Pictland, in their own, and the Names of the rest of their Nation, that survived the slaughter: Which giving the Danes a colourable Title to make their Claim, occasioned great calamities to England and Scotland, to the subduing the former, after a long continued War, as in the sequel will appear.

Thus sell the Pictish Kingdom, and was Annexed to Record, they had continued under a Succession of Kings 1173 Years. But its setting in Blood happened not without dreadful Omens and Prodigies; at Camelon, their chief City, the Bishops Crosser Staff, he Officiating at the Altar, was reduced to Ashes by Lightning: A dreadful Comet appeared, and two Firey Armies were seen in the Air, running at each other with Burning Spears; a noise of Clashing of Arms, and

Scotland, Anno Dom. 839. After, as some Historians

Upon this destruction of his Neighbours Kingdom, Kenwolf was much perplexed, because till now they stood as a Barricado to hinder the Incursion of the Scots; whereupon he sent Ambassadors to Kenneth, peaceably to suffer those of that Nation that were scattered in his and other Countries, to return and Rebuild their Ruinated Towns; but he would by no means harken

Neighing of Horses, was affirmed to be heard in England and Pilland, without any visibility of either; which then were little minded, but afterward looked on as the Forerunners of the dire calamities that ensued.

harken to it, which constrained him to Fortify the Towns in the Northern Marches, and put strong Garisons into them. And having a great love for the Clergy, of whose number he had been, he freed all Church-Lands from Tribute and Regal Services; and heing desirous to see Rome, of whose Magnificence he had heard many wonderful Relations, settling his Affairs in the best manner he could, with divers of his Clergy and Nobility, he Sailed thither, and was Entertained with such Magnificence, that in recompence of his Reception, he consirmed Peter Pence to that See; and after his Return gave Annually, during his Life, Three Hundred Marks to the Bishop of Rome.

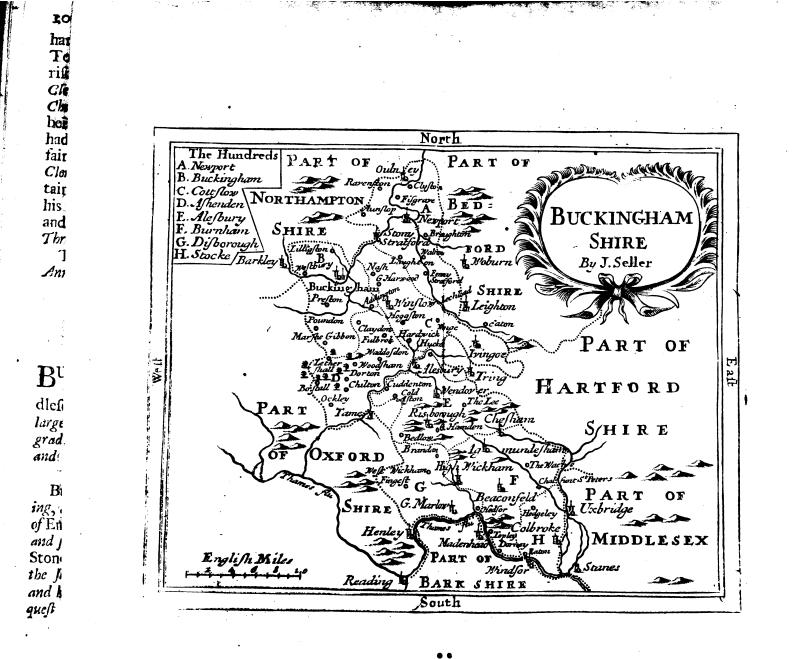

This Ethelwolf, Eldest Son to Egbert, Began his Reign

Buckinghamshire Described, &c.

Anno Dom. 837, and Continued it Twenty Years.

Buckinghamshire is bounded with Northamptonshire, Bedfordshire, Oxfordshire, Hartfordshire, Middlesex, and Barkshire. It abounds in Corn, Postures, large Cattle, and numerous Flocks of Sheep feeding on its gradual rising Hills, and bas in it divers stately Forrests and Chaces.

Buckingham, the Shire-Town, is of very Antient standing, and was Fortified by Edward the Elder, sole Monarch of England, against the Invading Danes, Anno Dom 913, and still shews the Ruins of a stately Castle, Built on a Hill.
Stoneystratford in this County is Memorable for being the station of the Romans, by them called Lactorodum; and here Edward Repulsed the Danes; and since the Conquest a stately Monumentual Cross was raised in Memory of Elenor Queen to Edward the First, who going with him to the Holy War, sucked the Poison from a Wound given bim by a Sarazen with an Impoisoned Knife, and by that means, at the Hazzard of ber own, saved his Life; when all others failed, as will more largely appear when we come to speak of bis Reign. Chilton was the Birth-Place of the Learned Sr. George

Crook, a Famous Lawyer.

Amersham, or Agmondisham, took its Name from the Great Agmond, and gave Birth to John Surnamed

Amersham, and divers other Learned Mon. Windover gave Birth to Roger Surnamed Windover, Historian to King Henry the Third. Houton did the like to Roger Goad, a very Learned Man of great Repute. This Shire is divided into Eight Hundreds, viz. those of Newport, Buckingham, Cotslow, Ashendon, Ailesbury, Burnham, Disborough, and Stocke. It sends Members to Parliament for Alesbury two, Amersham or Agmondisham two, Buckingham two, Chipen-Wiccomb two, Marlo two, Wendover two, and two Knights of the Shire.

It Contains One Hundred Eighty Five Parishes, Eleven Market Towns, and is Watcred with Two considerable Rivers, viz. The Thames on its South side, and the River Ouse, on which the Town of Buckingham is seated, and in a manner is surrounded with it, unless a little on the North side it lies open; and over this River are three fair Stone

Bridges. Ailesbury is likewise very pleasantly situated in the midst of most delightful Meddows, and Pastures, and the Vale bearing its Name, is accounted the most Fertil in Europe.

As for the Churches in the Principal Towns of this County, they give a goodly Prospect to Travellers, and

The Reign of Ethelbald the Third Sole Manarch

of England.

E Thelbaid was Eldest Son to Ethelwolf by Osburga his first Queen, and in his Fathers Lifetime held the Kingdom in a great measure, as if he had been his Co-

Pariner. His Valour the Danes experienced in divers ere not only well Adorn'd and Fair without, but very Beautiful within.

The Noblemens Seats of Note, are Buckingham-House, and Whadon, lately belonging to George Duke of Buckingham; Cheynes one of the Seats of William Duke of Bedford; Latimers, one of the Seats of William Duke of Devonshire; Ashbridge, part in Bucks, and part in Hartfordshire, one of the Seats of John Earl of Bridgwater; Wing and Ethrop, the Seats of the Earl of Carnarvan; Laurendon, one of the Seats of the Earl of Lichfield; Overwinchendon-House, one of the Seats of the Lord Wharton, with divers stately Houses, many Newly Erected, belonging to the Gentry; and that which makes it so well Inhabited is the Wholsomness of the Air, which contributes to, and continues a Healthful Constitution.

Bloody Battels, in many of which he Prevailed, killing numbers with a mighty Faulchion he used in Fight, which few but himself could wield; yet after the toiles of War giving a little respite to his wearyed

Body, Judith his Stepmother came attended with divers Lady's to Congratulate his Success, in a very fplendid Drefs, fo that her Snow-white Breafts appearing half Naked, added to her Beauty, she being then but very Young, the King was so Charmed or Infatuated, that he became Enamoured of her; and though upon his Address she strongly urged, she was his Fathers Widow, and the Daughter of a King, and that it to yield to his desires; her Repulses served but as Air to make the Fire of his Passion blaze to a greater degree. till at last, between willing and unwilling, tempted by Ambitious Inclinations of being a Queen Confort, rather was inconsistent with the Law of God, and her Reputation, than Dowager, she yielded to be his Wife: And though the Match was highly opposed by his Nobles, who layed before him the Scandil it would bring upon his Children, if he had any by her, and perhaps for his Sins a Punishment upon the Nation, he persisting in his Resolution, was Marryed; though with little Ceremony tending to Magnificence, as usual at the Weddings of the former Kings. And indeed this brought much trouble on the King and Nation; for whilst he Dalliarced with his Incatuous Bride, and purfued his wan-Юn

ton Pleasures, the weighty Assaires of Government were layd afide, and as it were altogether neglected. which gave the Dimes great advantage to recruit their Forces, that had been not only weakened by War in the former Reign, but with Famine, attended on by grievous Pestilence; and when he had Reigned Two Years and Three Months, without doing any thing Memorable, he Dyed Suddainly, supposed by an App. plexy, though fome conclude he was Poisoned: After which Queen Judith, fearing some Mischief might be fal her, by reason she had upon this Marriage incurred the hatved of the People, procured leave from Ethelbert Brother and Successor to Ethelbald, to be Transported to France; but a Storm arising, the Ship was driven on the Coast of Flanders, where undertaking to Travel by Land to her Fathers Court, she was surprized on her Journey by Baldwin Forrester of Ardenna, who comrelled her to be his Wife, and by kind usage won to much upon her Affections, That Writing in her own and his behalf many moving and submissive Letters to the King her Father, he not only forgave what had happened, but created her Husband Earl of Flanders to hold that Country as his Tributary; and from this Match Lineally descended Mand Wife to our William stiled the Conquorer, also Baldwin Earl of Flanders, who was King of Jerusalem, and another of that Name who was by the Latins Invested with the Imperial Diaden of Greece, upon their taking the famous City of Constantinople Anno Dom: 1284. This Etherbald was Third Sole Monarch of England, Ending his Reign with his Life, Anno Dom. 860.

Morth Tilbron P A R P A $\boldsymbol{R}$  $\boldsymbol{T}$ OF Shelton Melchhornes L. Stoughton Ryjeley Cayloo NORTHAMP South of Both mead S H I PART Bletneflog . Elmerhan Willon CAMBRIDGE Determine Mylton stand A M B R

Carlton 12 Goldington Blumham

Octon Potton Swinamieghi

Steventon College Blumham

Fotton Swinamieghi

Fotton Swinamieghi

Fotton Bigleswade Potton Noamleghton HIRE Bigleswade Drincott Astwood Kempston Wilfamstend Southill Stratton Myrfton Shefford ARTS 12 Con of idworth O F Cranfeild Littleton Saxford  $\mathbf{H}$   $\mathbf{A}$ Newport Ampehill 19 Henlow 21 Teukfek | Flitton Afpely Guife Flitwick Mills Bow Brackfull Woburne Faldo S H I R E OF U. C. K. Stretley Milton Brian BEDFORD Swiden Battledon Hockley Lygrave Bifcot Leyghton Houghton I SHIRE INGHAN By John Seller Eaton 19 Dunstable Kenfrort h SHIRE hoppinade oMerket English Miles Studham South

Remarks on Bedfozdstire, &c.

Bedfordshire is a very Pleasant In-Land County; it is Bounded with Northamptonshire, Huntingtonshire, Cambridgshire, Hartfordshire, Buckinghamshire, &c. It is plentiful in Cattle, Fowle, Corn, fat Pastures, Forrests, Parks, replenished with store of Timber and Deer; consisting of Plains, pleasant Valleys, and gradual rising Hills, and is said to yeild the best Barley in England, especially in the North parts.

It containes One Hundred and Sixteen Parishes, Nine Hundreds, Ten Market Towns, and One considerable River. It sends Members to Parliament Four, viz. Bedford two, and two Knights for the County.

Bedford, the Shire Town, has been to its cost the Scene of much Action; especially in the Wars between King Stephen and the Empress Mand, Mother to Henry the Second, and in the Wars of the Barons, against King John, and was raz'd to the ground by King Henry the Third, but soon Rebuilt, and ever since flourished in much tranquility and splendor. In a Chappel not far from the Town, Offa the great King of the Mercians was Buryed, which being cemolished by the overstowing of the Ouse, his Spectrum is said often to have appeared on the Water of that River.

There is a little Rivolet at Asply near Wobourn in this County, which is famous for its Petrifying Quality, being said to Turn Wood into Stone; and that a Wooden Ladder happening to fall into it, was some time after taken up again all Stone. And that not only the Pivolet or Brook, but the Earth in the Banks of it has the same Vertue. So that it is justly accounted one of the Wonders of our Isle.

Dean is a pleasant Town, Eminent for the Birth of Francis Dillingham, a very Learned Man; as Layton H 2. Buzzard

Plymouth.

Buzzard for the Birth of William Sclater; Dunstable called by the Romans Magiovinium, the latter Name being taken from a notable Thief called Dun, who with his Accomplices Inhabited it, and for that cause called Dunstable, or Duns Inning Place; it also gave Birth to that Leared Author, John Sirnamed Dunstable.

The River Ouse Waters this County with its pleasant Meanders, passing through Bedford, and bath over it a handsom Stone Bridge, with two Gates upon it. This County is likewise Beautified with some of the Seats of the Nobility, as those of Anthony Grey Earl of Kent, at Wrest-House and Harrold; the Earl of Bullinbrooks at Bletsno and Melchborn; the Earl of Ailesbury's at Ampthil and Clophil; Its Hills produce the best Marl, with abundance of Blue Stone like Slate: And the whole County is plantiful in all sorts of Provision, and divers profitable Monufacturs:

The Reign of Ethelbert, Fourth Sole Monarch of England.

Active Spirit) immediatly Succeeded his Brother Fibelbald, being Crowned ten days after his Death, the imergency of Affairs not allowing longer delay, or much Ceremony in the performance, by reason the Danes were again become powerful, so that as well as the time would permit, having setled the Western parts of his Kingdom, and that he might not leave an Enemy at his Back, made the Wess his Friends; he commanded the Nobles and Gentry to Muster as many as could be spared from Tilling the Ground and Harvest, and were able to bear Arms; and with them so Accoutered for the War, to repaire to his Standard; and being Obeyed in this, he Marched towards the Enemy.

Enemy, whom he found Ravaging with their usual cruelties the Inland Counties, as far as the Western Borders of Bedfordshire, sending Heralds before him to demand the reason, Why they Invaded his Country, and destroyed so many Innecent People, stripping the Towns and Villages of all that was valuable, and laying many of them in Ashes. But they with threats dismissing his Messengers, without any fatisfactory answer, Ethelbert gave them Battel, which continued for a time Bloody and doubtful, as if Victory knew not to which fide to encline; but when the Sun was descending in the West. a Band of Peasants came to the Kings assistance, with Forks, Sythes, and other Harvest Instruments, and falling on the Danes with loud crys, they taking this to be a Reserve, and thinking there might be more sheltered behind the Woods and Hills, hercupon immediatly gave back, and the King taking advantage of their fears, pressed on so furiously in the head of his Army, that from an orderly Retreat, they fell into Rout and Confusion in all parts of their Army, so that a miserable slaughter ensued, which had been much greater, but that Night put an end to the purfuit, and a mighty Storm of Hail falling compelled the English to shelter, as many as could, in the neighbouring Towns and Villages, and the Flyers to betake them to Woods and other places of Refuge; though on either fide, before this could be done, many were grievously hurt by the falling of the Hail Stones. which were of a prodigious bigness, and did much mischief both to Cattle and People in divers other places.

This Defeat (as considerable as it was) discouraged not the Danes; for being recruited, they sent their Ships about to the Southern part of the Island with some orces to amuse the English, by Landing at Southampton,

Plymouth, and other Sea Ports, and with what Plunder they could get, immediatly retired to their Ships, though many came short, as being slain by the Peasants; however this made them more revengful, for gathering strength from new comers of their Nation, who Landed from a Fleet on the Southern Coast, they wasted Hampshire, stormed Winchester, defended by a good Garison, and layed it in Ashes; but the King coming fuddainly with an Army, a great number of them were flain, and the rest compelled to retire to their Ships, feveral of which were Burnt by Wild-Fire thrown amongst them before they could get to Sea, and divers of the Danes perished in the Flames and involving Waves. In his time two Blazing Stars appeared, one in the North East and another in the South West, both within half a Year of each other; the first continued Fourteen Days, and the latter Seven. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 860, and Dyed Anno Dom. 865, having held a troublesom Reign for the space of Five Years. He was Buryed at Sheiburn.

Kemarks on Cambiloghire, &c.

CAmbridgshire is for the most part exempted from Hills and Woods, being much applyed to the breeding of Cattle, though it abounds in Corn-Fields, and is Watered with many pleasant Streams, and has belonging to it the fertil Isle of Ely: It is Bounded with Northfolk, Suffolk, Eslex, Hartfordshire, Bedfordshire, Huntingtonshire, and Lincolnshire: It Contains One Hundred and Sixty Three Parishes, Eight Market Towns, and One River; also the Bishoprick of Ely. It sends Members to Parliament, viz. Six. Cambridge two for the Town, and two for the University; and two Knights of the Shire. As for the Flaces Noted in it, the first in rank is Cambridge, which the tho' no City, is enobled above many others, for its many famous Structures dedicated to I earning, as Caius Colledge, Founded by John Caius Doctor in Physick, Anno 1557. Christs Colledge, Founded by Queen Margaret 1506. Clare Hall, Founded by Elizabeth Daughter to Gilbert Clare Earl of Leicester, Anno 1326; Corpus Christi Colledge, by John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, 1344; Emanuel Colledge, by Sir Walter Mildmay, 1588; lefus Colledge, by Dector John Alcock, Bishop of Ely; St. John's Colledge, by the afore named Queen Margaret. 1506; Catharine Hall, by Dostor Woodlack, Provost of Kings Colledge, 1459; Kings Colledge, by King Henry the fixth, 1441; Magdalen Colledge, by the Lord Audley 1509; Pembrook Hall, by Mary Countes of Pembrook. 1343; Peter House, by Hugh Balsam Bishop of Ely, 1280; Queens Colledge, by Margaret Queen to King Henry the Sixth, Anno Dom. 1448; Trinity Colledge, by Henry the Eighth, Anno Dom. 1546; Trinity Hall, by William Bateman, Anno Dom. 1354. These famous Structures are Renowned for the many Learned Divines and Statesmen that have been brought up in them, to the Honour and Credit of the Kingdom, giving it considerable advantages of that kind over others; there is in this Renowned Town many stately Churches and Antient Monuments of very curious Workmanship.

¥16, Plyn they man North ever stren Cambridge PART ed fr • Walton PART OF SHIRE ·Walloken Ham Garif M'Moich Crowland fudda flain, LINCOLN SH: NOR FOLK fevera mong; Helnry O South ou Whittle ey of the Proft houfe Wave Yaxley 🛓 ELY in the Part of within Midnall Fourte HUNTINGTON Reign having SHIRE Years. Newmarket Huntinyton 1 Somweley of unvel Cambridge . Charleton Boxworth  $\bigcap Am$ Stapleford Abbingtons Wickhum SUFFOLK o Croscton PART 0F anc Lyzton Saw Ston Haverill Cattle, 1 BEDFORD Caftle Camps Potton L with me fertil If PART OF ESSEX Bigleswade 1 SHIRE Effex, English Miles and Lin HARTFORD SH. Three P. also the South ment, viz the Univ the Places

Ely, the Bishops Seat, from whence the Diocess takes its Name, is held to be Built by Audry Wise to Tombart a Prince in those Parts, and afterward Marryed Eghert King of Northumberland, from whom departing, she here betook her self to a Devout Life, Building a Monastery, of which she became the first Abbess; and is famous for the Birth-place of divers Learned and Eminent Persons, as Andrew Millet, Sr. Thomas Ridley, Dostor of Laws; Richard Parker, &c. The next Places of Note are Everton, Triplow, Everden, Caxton, Wishich, Linton, Milton, Milton, Mildred; from which places proceeded many Eminent Men, both in Church and State. At Caxton was Born William, thence sirnamed Caxton, who first set up the Ingenious Art of Printing in England. It is likewife Beautified by divers Seats of the Nobility, viz. Thorney-Abby, the Seate of William Duke of Bedford, Newmarket, belonging to the Earl of Suffolk, Kertling, alias Catildg, belonging to the Lord North and Grey of Rolston, Ely Place and Wisbich Castle, the Seats of the Lord Rishop of the Diocess. It is Watered with many small branching Rivers, but the chief of Note is Cam, on whose Banks Cambridge is advantageously seated, and gives the County its Name.

The Reign of Ethelred, Fifth Sole Monarch of England.

E Thelred, the Third Son of Ethelwolf, upon his coming to the Crown, Anno Dom. 866, found himself engaged in a dangerous War against the Danes, who with their main Strength, almost in all parts, Invaded the Kingdom; fo getting strong footing with feveral Armys in the North, East, and South, he was at a stand into which quarter he should advance, which gave them opportunity to over-run many fertil Counties; and being as yet Pagans, they used unheard-of Cruelties under the Leading of Hungar and Hubba, two of their Dukes, who by fome are Hiled Kings. They took the City of York by Storm, and fet it on Fire, upon which Walketulus, an Earl of the East Angles, gave them Battel, but was Overth: own, and most of those he commanded flain; and flushed with this Victory, they destroyed many famous Churches, also the Monasteries of Croyland, Berdoney, Midlesham side, or Feterborough, and Ely; and the Abbes. of Coldingbain, to prevent Ravishment, cut off her Nose and upper Lip; and by her Example the Nuns did the like, to preserve their Chastity by their Deformity, but were nevertheless Defloured, and afterward in despight Immured in their House, and Fire being put to it, they perished in the Flames. And so terrible they became in those Parts, That Burthred Vice Roy of Mercia, to fave the ruin of the Country, made Peace with them, as likwise did Offride and Ella, stiled Dukes of the Northumbrians, and were thereupon constrained to joyne their Forces with them against Ethelred, which some Authors call a Rebellion, and that with great reason; for it was taking part with Invaders against their Lawful Soveraign.

These things happening whilst the King was busied in other Parts of the Land, he no fooner found a little leafure, but taking courage he Marched Northward, and in a great Battel Overthrew the Dainish Northern Army, in conjunction with many of his Subjects, whom they had compelled, as is faid, to the Field under their East Angle and Mercian Leaders, slaying Agner, accounted one of their Kings, Nine Earls, and a great number of common Souldiers: Yet Fourteen Days after they put the King to Flight at Basing, after a Battel of Twelve Hours, and within Thirty Days did the like at Merton, the King receiving a Mortal Wound as he was in the Pursuit, at Whitingham, of which he Dyed, when he had Reigned Five Years, viz. Anno Dom. 872, and was Buryed in the Monastery of He was the Fifth Sole Monarch of Wimbourn. England.

Remarks on Conwal, &c.

Ornwal, the Antient Cornubij, seemes to take its Name from its pushing into the Sea in the form of a Horn. It abounds with Mines of Tin, which is the best and finest in all Europe; Stone Quarries, Corn, Fruits, Cattle; and, as some bold, there might be much Silver Digged in several places: It is the Extremity of England Westward. On the North, and partly the West, it has the Irish Sea; on the South, the Channel; and on the East, Devonshire: It is divided into Nine Hundreds, and contains 161 Parishes, 22 Market Towns, and seven Rivers. It sends Members to Parliament 44, viz. Bodmin two, Bassiney two, Camelford two, Dunhived two, Eastlow two, Fowey two, Grampound two, Helston two, St. Germins two, St. Ives two, Kellington two, Leskerk two, Lostwithiall two, St. Mawes two, St. Michael two, Newport two, Penryn two, Port-Pigham two, Saltash two, Tregonye two, Truro two, and two Knights of the Shire. Camelford, in this County, is very famous for the Battel where Mordred was Slain, and King Arthur received his Mortal Wound. There has lately been digged up peices of Armour in that place.

Tintagal Castle gave King Arthur (that Miracle of British Valour) Birth. At Castle-Dennis, the Ruins of the Daines Trenches, upon their first Invasion, are to be seen.

St. Germans is a very stately Place, and was Antiently an Episcopal See, but removed to Bodmin, and from thence by King Edward the Confessor to Exeter in Devonshire where it remains.

Cradoc is likewise noted for the Birth of John Travisa, a Learned Writer. This County is famed for its exceeding high Mount overlooking the Sea, with a curious Bay on which stands Pensance, commanding the Harbour.

The

Ís

n; an d, m Ot eir ds ;he

en. ves 205,

all

iess AVC eir

The Seats of the Nobility are Stow, Wolfton, Stanbury, Clifton and Lanow, belonging to the Earl of Bath, Lubydrock and Truro, to the Earl of Radnor, Boconock to the Lord Mohun of Okehampton, Terrife, to the Lord Arundel Barron Trerife.

The Cliffs to the Sea Coast produce Samphire, Sea Holley, and the Inland part abounds with Rosa Solis, wild Hysop, Marjorum, Garlick, growing naturally, as also Chestnuts.

The Reign of Alfrid, Sixth Sole Monarch of England.

A Lfrid, by some called Elfride, Fourth Son of Ethelwolf, being at Rome when his Brother Dyed, was fetched from thence to succour and support his Bleeding Country, at the point to be lost to a Merciless Enemy; he had the Crown placed on his Head Anno Dom. 872, and finding a greater necessity to be in the Field than the Pallace, he caused Forces to be raised in all his Dominions free from the Danish Subjection: for in stead of befriending the Northumbrian and Mercian Dukes, that had joyned with them against Ethelred, they forely oppressed those Countries; making them as it were Slaves to perform all fervile offices, not leaving them any thing they could properly call their owne; Billeting Souldiers in their Houses, as Guards over them, rather than Guests, who constrained the poor Inhabitants to feed them with what should sustain the wants of themselves, and their necessitous Children; as also to supply them with Money, or else their Lives were liable at every distaste taken by their Lord Danes, to pay for the Defect.

Such treatment as this being the usual Rewards of all those who by their own Treachery and persidiousness endeavour to bring in Foreigners to Subdue and Enslave their Native Country: And yet this is the fole Aim of those Brutes among us, that glory in the Name of Incohites, who would bring in the late King James by the Arms of the French, and thereby subject the Nation to the will of that infulting Tyrant Lewis the Fourteenth, and so entail Slavery for ever on themfelves, and their Posterity. And if they only were to feel it, might they have their wishes; But since others must suffer with them, should their Attempts succeed, I hope that God that has fo lately brought to light their cursed Designes, will still continue to deseat all the enterprizes of fuch Profligate Villans, and preserve the Sacred Life of His Majesty from all their Hellish Machinations, and thereby these Nations in that Peace and happiness which through God's goodness they now enjoy under His Majesties Auspicious Reign. hope the Reader will pardon this Digression, which only Zeal to my King and Country, and a just indignation against those Miscreants, who are continually labouring to embroil us in Blood and Confusion, has Extorted from me. — But to proceed.

their

122

By these their Cruel and Arbitrary proceedings, the King sinding no Truce nor Oathes were binding on their part, resolved to gather his Forces into a Body, and give them Battel, causing Publick Prayers to be put up for his success, but before it could be effectually done, upon notice of it, they Marched into Devon-shire, taking Exceter, whilst they were parlying with the King for a Truce; after which he narrowly escaped the Ambush they layed to intrap him and take his Life; whereupon having gotten as many Forces as he could together, he pursued them in their March towards Bristol, which City they intended to Sack; but they facing about and a sierce Fight ensuing, the King was overthrown, his Army scattered, and he forced to fly fly into the Woods for shelter, where siting his Bom and Arrows in a poor Shepherds Cottage, he was sharply reproved by the Houswife (she not knowing him) for letting a Cake burn on the Hearth, for want of turning it, saying, How now, you Lubber, must I give you House-roome for doing nothing? Why did not you turn the Bread? Yet I warant you would be ready to Eate it ere it is balf Baked.

The King, finding he was in great straights, and much grieved at the misery his Subjects groaned under, at last bethought him of a Stratagem to Redress it; viz. He put himself into the Habit of a Bard or Harper, and went into the Danish Camp, playing on his Harp unfuspected, and by that means taking notice of their Luxurious manner of living, and fluggish security, he went thence and collected his scattered Forces, and falling upon them near Abingdon in the Night time, when they little expected the danger so near, he made an incredible flaughter of the un-prepared Danes, fo that nothing but Crys and clashing of Swords were heard throughout the Valleys; and here Hubba, one of their great Captains, was Slain, and their Banner Rafan taken, being the Danes chief Standard, having on it the figure of a Raven done in Nedlework, Imbrodered by the Daughters of Lodbroke, Sisters to Hungar and Hubba, which was in high Estimation, because they had Prophesied Victory should ever attend the Danes wherever it was Displayed in the Field. And soon after the Battel was over, Hubba was Buryed, and a mighty Hill of Stones cast on him as a Monument, which gave Name to the place of his Burial, which is called Hubblestow, or Stone, to this day.

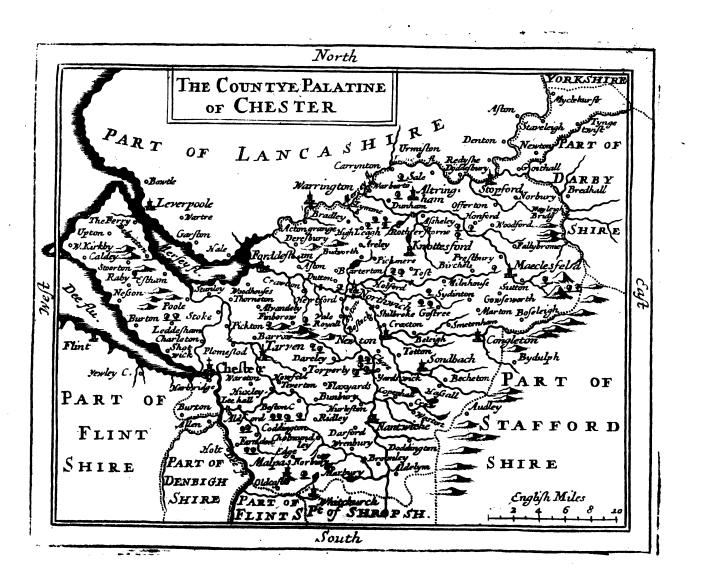

The King pursuing this advantage, and for the Encouragement of his Souldiers having shared the Spoiles taken from the Danes amongst them, followed the Retreating treating Enemy, and within a while gave them two other great Defeats, one at Ethan-Dun, the other at Rhoaf-ceaster, now Rochester, raising the Siege they had layed before it.

After this, they Recruited and brought another Raven Standard, to the Field, in hopes of better success. But near Alesford in Kent, they received another great Overthrow, so that the Waters in the Ditches, Ponds, and Rivers adjacent, were coloured with Blood; and from thence he chaced them into Esex, through the Thames, in passing which River, pursu'd by the Enemy, and their own fears, many (for haste) missing the Fords, were smothered in the Deeps.

This however sufficed not the King, whose main Aime was to drive them out of the Kingdom, and so give Peace and Rest to his tired and distressed Subjects; wherefore he Marched to a place then called Beausteet, where Hastinges a Dane, who newly arrived with Eighty Ships, had fortissed and received his slying Countrymen; and here likewise Fortune was on his side, he giving them the Rout; and lastly they were quite discomsted at Boultington by Severn, and at the Isle of Messy, or Mersey in Essex, at the River Ligea or Ley, which goeth to Ware, and carryed up their Ships, but Alfred Trenching and Drying it, they could not bring them back; whereupon they sled into Northumberland, and then to Denmark.

The King, now at leasure, made many good Laws; one for the Banishing of Theives, insomuch that few Robberies were committed for many Years after. He divided the Kingdom into Shires, Hundreds, and Tythings, and made them Responsible to the party that should be Robbed, if they neglected to Guard or secure the Roads, which was so effectually done, that it is faid by some Historians, That Gold-Bracelets, and other things of value value, were faitned to Posts in Cross Ways, and none were so adventurous as to take them away. This King is reported to divide the Natural Day into three parts, Eight Hours he spent in Prayers and Contemplations, Eight in Publick Affaires, and the remainder in Necesfaries and Recreations; he is esteemed as a great lover of Learning, and Founded the first common School in Oxford, now called University Colledge; he Founded likewise the Monasteries of Ethelingsey, Shaftsbury, and Winchester; he was very Liberal to the Poor; he turned the Laws, and divers other Books into English; and Dying, he left all his Treasure to Pious Uses: He began his Reign Anno Dom. 872, and Reigned Twenty Six Years. He was the Sixth Sole Monarch of England.

Remarks on the County Palatine of Thefter, &c.

His County is an Antient Palatinate, and one of the Pleasantest Counties in that part of England; famous for producing Kine, of whose Milk is made the best Cheese in the Nation, from which the County seemes to take its Name. Its Pastures are exceeding Rich, and Corn-Land produces extraordinary Crops; it abounds with Fish, Fowl, Sheep, and some Goats: It is Bounded with Lancashire, Yorkshire, Shropshire, Staffordshire, Darbyshire, Flintshire, Denbighihire, and the Ocean. It Contains Eighty Six Parishes, One City, Seven Hundreds, Thirteen Market Towns, and Nine Rivers; and gives denomination to a Bishop of its Diocess. It sends Members to Parliament Four, viz. The City of Chester two, and two Knights of the Shire.

The City of Chester is famous in many respects, as for its Minster, Castle, and Stone Bridge; and has particular to it a Chief Justice, for the Entertainment it gave King Edgar, who was Rowed in a Barge on the River Dee, by Eight Kings, whilft himself held the Helm, as their St. preame Souraign.

It was made a Principality upon Hugh Lupus, a Noble Norman, being Invested in it by William the Conqueror; To be holden as Freely by his Sword, as the King kimself holds England by his Crown; which was the Tenure of all Counts Palatines; more like Princes than Subjects, as a modern Author has it.

Its stately Minster was Builded by Leofrick an Earl, to the Honour of St. Werburga; and in it was Buryed the Body of Henry the Fourth Emperour of Germany; and it gave a Title to the Eldest Sons of our Kings who by Birthright are Earls of Chester.

Calvely is a very Pleasant Town, giving Birth to Hugh Calvely a great General against the French, in the Reign of Edward the Third, Sr. Robert Knowles and divers others of Note.

Eccleston is Asemorable for the Birth of Thomas, thence called Eccleston. Banbury is a plesant seated Town, as also Wrenbury. The large Rivers Dee and Mersey, Flow very spaciously on its Western part; Chester being advantageously situate on the former, and Fordestham on a branch of the latter; on the Last side it has many pleasant Hills, with very fertil Valleys: Northwich is likewise pleasantly situate on a stream of Mersey, over which is a curious Bridge, as there is at Dutton, Coxton, &c.

The Seats of the Nobility are Clifton, alias Rock, Savage and Fordsham belonging to the Earl of Rivers; Gawsworth and Alford belonging to the Earle of Maclesfield; Dutton belonging to the Lord Gerard Barron of Gerards Bonley; Dunham Masley the Seat of the Late Lord Delamer, Earl of Warrington. Besides many stately Houses of the Gentry.

The Reign of Edward the Elder, Seventh Sole Monarch of England, &c.

E Dward, Sirnamed the Elder, Eldest Son to Alfred or Elfride, began his Reign Anno Dom. 901. But not long had he been in the Throne, ere his Brother Adelgold, envying his advancement to the Regal Dignity, conspired to supplant him; and in order to it, raised a Rebellion: But finding he was too weak to maintain his Pretensions, he fled with part of his Forces to the Danes, who were by this time returned, and had gotten some strong holds in the North; and they for to colour their delign made him King in Title, tho' not in Effect; and with them joyned the Welsh, Northumbers, and those Scots that bordered on the River Tweed: Against these joynt Forces the King Marched, and at St. Edmund's Ditch, he gave them Battel, but lost the day, tho' the Danes gained a bloody Victory; for in the Fight two of their Kings were flain, viz. Chrochrichus and Ethelwald: However, to put a stop to their further advancing, he built the Castle of Hartford, and many other strong places, and then having recruited his broken Troops with the whole power of the Western and Southern Counties, that remained entirly under his obedience, he again advanced his Standard, and gave the Danes and their Consederates Battel at Wodens-field, near Wolverhampton in Staffordshire; where the chance of War turning on his side, brought him a great Victory: There his Rebellious Brother Adelwold, with two Kings or chief Leaders of the Danes, viz. Covilfus and Healden, were slain. This Battel was Fought Anno 910.

Upon this Edward settled his Northern Territories, as far as Northumberland; and upon the Death of Eliferd, who had Marryed Elsteada his Sister, he Established her in those Counties that were formerly in the possession of the Mercian Kings before spoken of, and Anno Dom. 915, he gave the Danes and their Confederates another great Overthrow, killing Turktilus, a reputed King, with two Earls Virutes and Scurfa, the Dukes of Bedford Buckingham, &c. also Duke Edrick, whom the Danes had made King of the East Angles, being Vanquished. was Slain by his Subjects. And then appointing his Sifter, a true English Heroin, (who having endured the sharp pangs of Child-Birth, had for fook her Husbands Bed, faying The Pleasure was not worth the Pain she suffered, refolving never more to run the like hazzard) as it were in some degree his Partner in the Kingdom. she soon made it known that her delight was more in the rough Fields of Battel, than in the downey Bed of Love; for attired like an Amazonian Queen, she accompanied her Brother in his Wars, and mainly assisted him by her Prowess and Counsells, being a Lady of great Politicks in Martial Affairs. In a Battel against the Welsh, she took their Standard, slew their General, and took his Lady Prisoner, whom she used very courteously: She divers times chased the Danes, and in Perfon Stormed the Town of Derby, (Garrisoned strongly by the Enemy) she also beat them out of Tamworth, Litchfield, Watersbury, Elderbury, and Leicester, which she Repaired and Fortified; also the Town and Castle of Rincorne: She Builded Brimsbury, and lay'd a Bridge over the Severn; and in a fet Battel Overthrew the Yorkshire Forces that were in Rebellion against the King; and so having manifested her self to the World as the Wonder of her Sex for Heroick Vertues, and fet an Illustrious Pattern for their Imitation, She Dyed, when she may be said to have Reigned Eight Years, as Co-Partner with the King her Brother, in the one and Fortieth Year of her Age, and was Buryed at Gloucester, in a Church which she and her Husband had Founded; where a stately Monument was erected to her Memory. And Henry of Huntington in his Works makes the following Encomium upon her.

Victorious Elsted, ever famous Maid,
Whom weaker Men, and Nature's self obey'd:
Nature your softer Limbs for Ease design'd,
But Heav'n inspir'd you with a Manly Mind;
You only, Madam, latest Times shall sing,
A glorious Queen, and a triumphant King:
Farewel, brave Soul! Let Casar now look down,
And yield thy Triumphs greater than his own.

The King upon the Death of his Heroick Sister, reatly lamented her loss, and retired for a time from I Business, but finding his Country yet called for his id, he shook off his Melancholly, and took a Progress those parts of his Kingdom he had not as yet well uieted, appointing Governours, and making such aws as might restrain the Oppression of his People, and settling his Dominions to the borders of Scotland, he Wellh also submitted.

In this Kings Reign John Patrick Erigena, a Britain, Vrote a Book about the Lords Supper, shewing therein me Abuses the Roman Church had put upon that crament, and how it ought to be worthily Received, cording to our Blessed Saviours Institution, and sent to Rome; which so offended the Pope, (whose Leaden word by this time had so got the Ascendant over the eel Ones of Princes) that he wrote to the Clergy to revail with the King that the Author might be deligred into their hands, to be Censured as they should e sit; which with some reluctancy being granted, ough the Author proposed to prove it true by Scripture.

ture, and gave many reasons for what he had done, the Clergy in the Popes Name Condemned both him and his Book; him as a Heretick, and his Book as Erroneous and Heretical; when being degraded and delivered over to the Secular Power, he suffered Death in the Flames, and is worthily accounted amongst the Martyrs.

This Edward was the Seventh Sole Monarch of Eng. land. He Reigned Twenty Four Years, and was Buryed at Winchester amongst his Royal Ancestors.

Remarks on Cumberland, &c.

Umberland extends to the extremity of England North. ward, as being Bounded that way by Scotland; on the East, with Northumberland and Westmoreland; on the West, by the Irish Sea, and part of Scotland; on the South, with Lancashire: It abounds in Hills, but of no extraordinary beight; and produces great store of Cattle, and a good sprinkling of Corn, but not many Fruit Trees. At Newlands are Copper-Mines, at Reswick Black-Lead and Lapis Calaminaris: It Contains one City, viz. Carlille (which gives Title to a Bishop) Fifty Eight Parishes, Nine Market Towns, and two remarkable Rivers: It sends Members to Parliament six, viz. Carliste two, Cockermouth two, and two Knights of the Shire. Carlifle, the Metropolis of the County, is very Antient, keld to be Built by Leil a British King, long before the coming of Cæsar, and is by Ptolomy called Lugovallum, it was a flourishing City under the Romans, and upon their departwe Demolished by the Picts, and utterly ruined by the Danes; but again Rebuilded by King William Rufus, who

Built there a strong Castle to prevent the Scots Incursions, and by King Henry the first it was made a Bishaps See; it has been often taken by the Scots, but wrested from them a gain: It was Besieged in the late Civil War, and made s

(trenuous

NOTEN. PART OF PART OF UMBERTY Scon LAND LAND FUMBER Carok Caft. LAND. THE Chapp of Cregin Charch . Wulfty G hronire ad Melmerby/e Elgal Langan Cannonbil IRIS Hamer Scaton Morof S. Beer head SEA Vamburthavat Havenglau LAN C AS Washur thant Scaton S. Johns · Whidbok Whitha

fremuous Defence. The other Places of Note are Cockermouth, Werkinton, Egremond, Penroth, Keswick, and Bampton, near which is to be seen part of the Ruins of the Picts Wall, which reached from Sea to Sea, at East and West: At Salkeld in this County, upon the River Eden, is a Monumental Trophy of Victory, consisting of 77 Stones, called by the Inhabitants Long Megg and her Daughters, one of which to wit, that called Long Megg, is 15 Foot high from the Ground, and the rest 10; supposed to be placed in Remembrance of some Roman Victory. The Nobilities Seats are Gray-stock Castle, Grumb Castle belonging to the Duke of Norfolk; Naywoth alias Noword Castle belonging to the Earl of Carlisle; Kirkosward and de Acre Castles belonging to the Earl of Sussex. Cockermouth Castle belonging to the Duke of Somerser; Rose Castle the Bishops Seate.

The Reign of EthelRan, Eighth Sole Monarch of England.

E Thelstan, Eldest Son to Edward, and Eighth Sole Monarch of England, began his Reign Anno 925, and was Crowned at Kingston upon Thames, by Adelme Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and is held by some to be the first Anointed King of England; but I suppose they mean the first Saxon King, for it is held by Antient Writers to be used in the Coronation Ceremonies of divers British Kings a great while before. Long he had not been Established in his Throne, ere Elfried a Norman and one he trusted in weighty Affairs, raised a Rebellion against him, causing great commotions in the Kingdom; but in the end he was taken, and his Party dispersed; upon which he utterly deny'd he was the occasion of it, and laboured to lay it on others; whereupon the King, unwilling to fearch deep into the matter, ter, least he should create himself powerful Enemies a. fnong the Nobility, was at that time contented than Elfred should go to Rome and purge himself of the fact. upon Oath before the Pope. But hereupon not freed. from a Jealousie he conceived of Edwin his Brother. whom Elfred had accused as a Person aspiring to the Throne, he was made away privately with the Kings consent; yet, tho' too late, being better informed he was so grieved, that to attone (as he conceived) for guiltless Blood, he caused the Assassines to be put to Death with exquisit Torments, and Founded divers places, dedicating them to Pious uses; as St. Germans in Cornwal, St. Petrocus at Bodmyn, Plympton Priory. Middleton and Michelney, &c. He Fortified Exeter. and quelled the Cornishmen that Rebelled against him: and upon Diforders committed by the Scots in the Northern Borders, he Marched into that Kingdom, gave them a great Overthrow, and made the whole Nation submit their Crown to him, which he placed on the Head of Constantine upon his Submission, saying, It was more Honour to make a King than to be a King. However, he imposed a Tribute on the Kingdom, and to shew the mightiness of his Strength, made a vast dint in a Stone with his Sword at Dunbar, causing it to be Recorded as a Mark of his Title to the Kingdom of Scotland; but soon after, Constantine repenting his Submittion, Leavyed Forces and Invaded England, joyning with Anlase the Dave; but at a place called Broming field he was Overthrown; for the English seeming to retire, (and the others supposing they had really done it) Rallyed on the loose Troops of their Enemies and beat them down in great numbers, obtaining a great Victory, and Killing 20000 of their Enemies, among which Willfert Prince of the Guentes, and Howel Prince of North Wales, and Seven Dukes who came to the assistance of the Scots, Malcolm Heir apparent to Scotland was much Wounded; whereupon King Ethelfron settled the English Borders beyond the Tweed, taking in the three Southern Counties, strongly Garrisoning Edenburg Castle and other Fortresses; so that Confrantine finding that he was unable to make further opposition, betook himself to a Contemplative Life, in the Abby of St. Andrews, where in a short time after, be Dyed: Hereupon Fthelftane caused the Scots Nobles to Swear Fealty to him, and injoyned them to pay him Yearly twenty Pounds in Gold, three Hundred Pounds in Silver, and 2500 Head of Cattle, Hounds, Hawks, &c. So that the Scots mourned many Years for their joyning with the Danes to Invade England: And indeed a little before the fatal Battel, a Fountain of Blood-Coloured Water issued out of the side of a Mountain in Galloway, and Coloured divers Streams into which it run for many Miles; and a Monster was Born with the Members of both Sexes, and a Head like a Swine, the Back of it full of Bristles, and the Nailes like Claws; another in Northumberland of the Male Sex, having one Belly and two Thighs and Legs, but divided upwards into two entire Bodies, with two Heads and four Arms; and when one Head Slept, the other Waked; when one Eat, the other refused sustenance, and always Quarelled the one with the other; till one Dying, its Stench Killed the other.

Anlase, the Danish General, having lost the greater part of his Forces, hoped by a Treacherous Policy to gain his end; whereupon disguising himself, he entered the Kings Tent by Night, with forty of his Followers, in hopes to have found him there, and Slain him; but Providence so ordered it, that he was absent; yet a Bishop newly arived at the Camp had taken up his Quarters there, who starting up and perceivingtheir Murderous intentions, so Manfully lay'd about him with wth a Battel-Ax, that he flew five Petty Princes of the Danes, 12 Dukes, and divers Souldiers; but none coming timely to his Rescue, he was beaten down with a weighty Stone thrown at him, and flain; and though the Danes here missed their main aim, yet they were not so much discouraged, but sending to Denmark. more Forces came to their affiftance, and among the rest a mighty Giant, named Colbron, who with a Bar of Iron he used in Fight, had (as the Danes report) dashed many Hundreds in Pieces; with these Recruits they entered England, ravaging the Country as far as Winchester, to which they lay'd Siege, offering at the same time to raise it and depart, so the King could provide a Champion that should dare to combate Colbron, so as to overcome him; but on the contrary, to have the City delivered to them; whereupon it is faid that the famous Guy Earl of Warwick being returned from Forraign Lands in the Habit of a poor Pilgrim, like another David, offered the King his service; when all his Nobles and Men at Armes declined it, as being scared at the mighty Stature and Bulk of this second Pagan Goliab, which the King at first refused, supposing him to be a Madman; yet in a Vision being admonished to it, he confented; and the combate was Fought between them in Hide Mead, wherein, after a fierce Encounter of two Hours, Guy became Victor; whereupon the Danes raised their Siege and fled, but in the pursuit many of them were destroyed, and soon after chased out of the Country, so that he setled the Realm in Peace, and divers Princes fent to congratulate his Success, with many Rich Presents; Hugh King of France sent him a Sword said to be that of Constantines the Great, and reported to have in the pummel one of the Nails that fastned our Saviour to the Cross, as also his Spear, being that where with Longinus pierced his sides Otho

wt Do coi North a vi the Shefeld . not PART mo reft Iro ma enti CHE chef · Woo dhouf tim NOTTING a C SHIRE ..... Manffeld to e City Alfret on fam н English Miles For anol his 0 E SHIRE Scari Pagi him to it Restource Valler PART twee coun upor purf LEYCESTER SHERE chase in Pé SHIRE cess, fent South Grea Nails Spear

Otho the Emperour fent him a Landskip richly fet with Pretious Stones; and the King of Norway a larg Ship

with rich Guilded Decks and Purple Sails.

This Ethelstane caused the Bible to be Translated into English; which is accounted the first time it ever was in our Language: And when he had Reigned Fifteen Years, he Dyed, and was Buryed with much folemnity at Malmsbury, where his Tomb remained some Hundreds of Years with an Epitaph in his praise, as a good Prince, and a great lover of Justice.

Remarks on Derbyshire, &c.

THE County of Derby, the' somewhat Hilly in divers parts, yet it is a very pleasant County, watered with the River Derwent, and other Rivers abounding with Fish: It has in it a great number of Forrests and Parks stored with Deer: It breeds an excellent fort of Large Cattle and abundance of Sheep: It abounds also with various sorts of Stones. as Free-Stone, or durable Greet-Stone; and in some places Lime-Stone, which is useful both in Building and Husbandry, for the Manuring of the Land. Here is also Alabaster, Crystal, Black and Grey Marble, which is not only very durable, but Polishes well. And for Mill-Stones and Whet-Stones, here are several Quarries of them, in the working whereof many Persons are Employed. But the chiefest Commodity of this County is Lead; which for the Goodness and Plenty thereof, yields to no Place in the World: And famous for this, is the Peak of Derby-shire, commonly called the Devil's Arse; which is indeed the most remarkable thing in this County. This Peak or Cave called the Devil's Arfe, is a great Rock or Castle upon an high Hill, under which there is a Cave in the ground of a vast bigness; the Name seemes to be taken from its having two Buttocks sticking out in form like a Mans, bending to the Ground: The Arch of the Rock is extream high, and through it Drops of Water are continually falling: Those that are minded to enter into it must have good store of Lights, for going between two Rocks near together, they loose the sight of Day; which makes the place look dreadful and affrighting; and perhaps gave rise to all those fabulous stories of Spirits and Phantoms, which are reported of it; the recital whereof, is neither worth my Pains, nor the Readers.

Eldenhole is another remarkabls place, and one of the Wonders of the Peak; It is distant two miles from Castleton, a Town in the High-Peak. The bole of this Cave is about 30 Yards long, and 15 Yards broad on the Top; descending directly down into the Earth, which is much straited when it cometh 40 Yards deep: The Waters which trickle down from the Top thereof do congeal into Stone, and hang like Isicles in the root of it: Some are hollow within, and grow Taper-wise, very white, and not unlike to Crystal.

But the greatest Wonder of the Peak is that of Buxton-Wells, where nine Springs arise out of a Rock, within the compass of eight or nine Yards, eight of which are Warm, and the ninth very Cold: These Springs run from under a Square Building of Free-Stone; and about 60 paces off, receive another hot Spring, from a Well inclosed with four flat Stones, called St. Ann; near unto which another cold Spring bubleth up. These Springs have been found by daily Experience very good for the Stomach and Sinnews; and very pleasant to bathe the Body m. The wonderous Vertues whereof, are thus describ'd, Unto St. Ann the Fountain facred is,

With Waters Hot and Cold its Springs do rife,
And in its Sulphur Veins there's Med'cine lies:
Old Mens numb'd Joynts new Vigor here acquire,
In frozen Nerves this Water kindleth Fire;
Hither the Cripples halt, some help to find,
Run hence, and leave their Crutches here behind,
The

The Barren hither to be Fruitful come; And without help of Spoule go Mothers home.

This County contains 106 Parishes, and is divided into six Hundreds. It has eight Market Towns, and 13 Rivers. It is Rich in Passure, and Memorable for many great Assimons that have happened in it. It sends Members to Parliament sour, viz. Derby two, and two Knights of the Shire. It is Bounded with Yorkshire, Notinghamshire, Cheshire, Staffordshire, and Leicestershire.

Derby, the chief Town, is commodiously situate on the Western Bank of the River Derwent, and in the North-East end of it stands a Bridge of Free-Stone, and upon the Bridge a fair Chappel, called St. Mary's Chappel. But besides Derwent, which empties it self six Miles lower into the Trent, this Town has the conveniency of a Brook rising Westward, and running through it under nine several Bridges. The Town is large and populous, containing sive Parish Churches, of which that of All Saints is the fairest, whose Tower-Steeple, (in which are eight Tuneable Bells) was huilt at the only charge of the Young-Men and Maids, about the Reign of Queen Mary the First; and is equall'd for Height and Beauty, by sew in the Nation. In short, its a Town of good Trade; and very famous for its Ale, which is accounted the best and strongest in the Kingdom.

Ripton (the Antient Ripandunum) is a pleasant place; here Ethelbald, the ninth King of the Mercians, slain at Egelwald, was by his Subjects Interred; and from hence Burdred the last King of Mercia was expelled by the Danes, together with his Queen Ethelwith. At Melburn, John D' Bourbon, taken at the Battel of Agincourt in France by our Henry the 5th, was kept Prisoner: Little Derby was an Antient Collony of the Romans, as appears by their Coins and Medals digged up there at sundry times. The Seats of the Nohlemen are Palsover Castle, the Antient seat of the Duke of Newcastle; Haddon, the seat of the Earl of Rutland; Hadwick and Chatsworth, the seats of the Duke of Devonshire; Berthy, the seat of the Earl of Chesterfield; Sherley, the seat of the Lord Ferrers Sutton, &c.

J

Brothers

The Reign of Edmund, Ninth Sole Monarch of England.

E Donund, Brother to Ethelftan, began his Reign Anno. Dom. 940. He was Crowned at Kingston upon Thames, but scarce settled in the Throne before the Danes, perswading the People of Northumberland and other Northern Counties to joyn with them, advanced against him with a puissant Army; to whom he gave a great Overthrow near Northampton, and had various fuccess against them in divers other Battels. He cansed the Eyes of the two Sons of Dunmail to be put out, for theirs and their Fathers Rebellion against him; and then to quiet his People, made many good Laws to restrain Rapin and other Injuries, that for want of such boundaries between Princes and Subjects they had fuftained in many of the former Reigns; and upon these Laws, Magna Charta, or the Great Charter of England, feems very much to be grounded.

Anlafe the Dane retaining some sooting in the Northern parts of England, and Southern Sheirs of Scotland, Laboured to perswade Indulph King of Scots to break the League he had made with Ethelstan, urging that Edmund who now Reigned, was a supine Person, no ways sit to bear the weight of Government, and therefore they might easily gaine their designes in subduing the Kingdom; but Indulph would by no means be tempted to break his Oath: Whereupon the Dane thinking to do it without his Aid, sent for more Forces, who Landing ling in the Humber, Elgarine, Governor of Norberland, either through fear, or hopes of Advancedeclared he was descended of Danish Blood; and ing the Trust King Edmund had reposed in him. med fuch Forces as he could raise with Anlase: upon the King fent to Indulph for Aid, according Articles of Treaty to affift each other in case of on; and with all expedition he fent him 10000 pointed Soldiers; with which, and his own Forfell upon the Danes, and Routed them at the first making a terrible slaughter in the pursuit. In attle, as the King had commanded, the Treachearl Elgarine was taken alive, though he would kly have dyed on the Swords of those that secured when being adjuged a Traytor to his Country, drawn in peices by the strength of Horses: And his great Victory, he fettled the Northern Counat had been much harrafied and weakened by the , and upon his return granted large Priviledges Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, rebuilding many ruined And now the Irish Invading the Western with many finall Vessels, were beaten off, divers m flaughtered, and most of their Ships Burnt. r things were in projection to be done by this had not an untimely Death prevented him; for y feeing a Gentleman that ferved him ( and for by reason of his Faithfullness, he had a singular ) hard pressed by a Ruffiain in single Combate, the point to be flain, he unadvisedly rushed in Rescue; and receiving the points of their Swords Body, whilst he thought to seize them with his he dyed of the Wounds, when he had Reigned ears, and was Interred at Glastenbury, being the sole Monarch of England, Anno Dom. 946. He fth son to King Edward: At his death he left his of the Duke of Newcastle; Haddon, the seat of the Ed Rutland; Hadwick and Chatsworth, the seats of Duke of Devonshire; Berthy, the seat of the Ed Chesterfield; Sherley, the seat of the Lord Fe Sutton, &c.

The Reign of Edmund, Ninth Sole Monarch of England.

E Dmund, Brother to Ethelftan, began his F Anno. Dom. 940. He was Crowned at Kingsto on Thames, but scarce settled in the Throne before Danes, perswading the People of Northumberlane other Northern Counties to joyn with them, adva against him with a puissant Army; to whom he a great Overthrow near Northampton, and had va finccess against them in divers other Battels. He car the Eyes of the two Sons of Dunmail to be put out. theirs and their Fathers Rebellion against him; then to quiet his People, made many good Laws t strain Rapin and other Injuries, that for want of boundaries between Princes and Subjects they had tained in many of the former Reigns; and upon Laws, Magna Charta, or the Great Charter of Eng feems very much to be grounded.

Anlase the Danc retaining some sooting in the thern parts of England, and Southern Sheirs of Scot Laboured to perswade Indulph King of Scots to the League he had made with Ethelstan, urging Edmund who now Reigned, was a supine Person ways sit to bear the weight of Government, and the fore they might easily gaine their designes in subdithe Kingdom; but Indulph would by no means be teled to break his Oath: Whereupon the Dane thin to do it without his Aid, sent for more Forces, Land

Landing in the Humber, Elgarine, Governor of Northumberland, either through fear, or hopes of Advancement, declared he was descended of Danish Blood; and breaking the Trust King Edmund had reposed in him, he Joyned such Forces as he could raise with Anlase; whereupon the King sent to Indulph for Aid, according to the Articles of Treaty to assist each other in case of Invasion; and with all expedition he sent him 10000 well apointed Soldiers; with which, and his own Forces, he fell upon the Danes, and Routed them at the first onset, making a terrible slaughter in the pursuit. In this Battle, as the King had commanded, the Treacherous Earl Elgarine was taken alive, though he would willingly have dyed on the Swords of those that secured him; when being adjuged a Traytor to his Country, he was drawn in peices by the strength of Horses: And after this great Victory, he fettled the Northern Counties that had been much harrafled and weakened by the Enemy, and upon his return granted large Priviledges to St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, rebuilding many ruined places. And now the Irish Invading the Western Coasts with many small Vessels, were beaten off, divers of them flaughtered, and most of their Ships Burnt. Greater things were in projection to be done by this King, had not an untimely Death prevented him; for one day seeing a Gentleman that served him ( and for whom, by reason of his Faithfullness, he had a singular esteem) hard pressed by a Russian in single Combate, and at the point to be slain, he unadvisedly rushed in to his Rescue; and receiving the points of their Swords in his Body, whilst he thought to seize them with his Hands, he dyed of the Wounds, when he had Reigned Six Years, and was Interred at Glastenbury, being the Ninth sole Monarch of England, Anno Dom. 946. He was sifth son to King Edward: At his death he less this Brothers

Brother Edred or Eldred, Protector of the Realm, committing to his care Edwye and Edgar his two Sons, who were in their Minority.

Remarks on Devonshire, &c.

DEvonshire, by reason of the advantage of the Sea, and its many spacious Havens, is not only of great account in it self, but to its Neighbouring Counties. It produces many rich Manusactories, and contains divers stately Towns: It has in it rich veins of Tin, store of Cattle, Corn, sat Pastures: Containing the City of Exon, a Bishops See, 394 Parishes, 33 Hundreds, 37 Market Towns, and 23 Rivers, small and great. It sends Members to Parliament 26, viz. Exeter, Plymouth, Plimpton, Totness, Oakhampton, Honiton, Barnstaple, Tavistock, Ashburton, Tiverton, Beralston, 2 Each; and 2 more out of these three Towns, Cliston, Dartmouth, and Hardness, and 2 Knights of the Shire; in all 26. It is Rounded with Somersetshire, Cornwal, the Irish Sea, and Channel.

Exeter, the only City of this County, is of great Antiquity, for the Castle called Rugemont was once the Palace of the West Saxon Kings, and afterward of the Earls of Cornwal, and the Walls and Cathedral were Builded by King

Ethelstane, and is situate on the River Ex.

Torbay in this County, some sew Miles from the North East of Dartmouth, is singularly remarkable for the Descent made here on the 5th of November 1688, by the then Prince of Orange, but his now present Majesty King William the Third (whom God long preserve) with his Forces from Holland, to save this Nation from Dopery and Slavery, which had then hid fair for it; but upon his Landing vanish dike Mists before the Morning Sun.

Plymouth, feated on the River Plym, is renowned by being the birth-place of that great Sea Captain, Sr. Francis Drake;

North PART DEVON SHIRE SOMERSET Irish THE Hartland Bornt SHIRE Bampton Sartland 01 Wellington Horton Portugue SEA. Stratto S Giles Launston For Bay N N E L L Cariftok CORNWALL English Miles South

Drake; Tinmouth was the place where the Danes Landed when they first Invaded the Western Parts, and suffered much by the French in the Year 1690; Crediton was a Bishops See till it was removed to Exeter by Edward the Confessor; Hubblestone was the burying-place of Hubba the Dane, Brother to Hungar, slain in Battel not far from thence. In the Parish of Comb-Martin it is Recorded, That William Wimondham Resined out of Oar digged there 270 Pound weight of Silver, afterward Coined for Elinor Dutches of Bar. The Seats of the Nobility are pleasantly situate in this County, viz. Potheridge and Wendury, seats of the Late Duke of Albemarle; Chudleigh the seat of the Lord Clifford Baron of Chudleigh; and the Lord Bishop of the Diocess his Palace at Exeter.

The Reign of Edred, &c. Tenth Sole Monarch of England.

E Dred or Eldred, as is faid, being left Protector of the Realms and Persons of Edwye and Edgar, he continued for a time in that station; but using many Arts to win upon the Affections of the People, finding he should meet with no great opposition in making him self King, contrary to the Trust reposed in him, he got to be Crowned at Kingston upon Thames in Surry: But Wolstan, Arch Bishop of Tark, having laboured to oppose it, and not being able to do it, became his Enemy; practising many underhand Treacheries against him, siding with Anlase the Dane, who lurked with a few Forces in the Northern parts, till Recruits came to

This Rouzed Edred, and made him advance Northward with a great Army, and fundry Battles were fought, in which Edred for the most part was Victorious, him, and then by the Bishops means, the People of Northumberland Received him as their King.

• ,

ous, flaying a great number of his Enemies; so that the Dane opressing the People by grievous Taxes, and Ex. torting Money from them to fend into Denmark, and other parts, for the raising and bringing over more Forces, they grew weary of his Government, and Mutinying in Tumultuous manner, constrained him (for fear of his Life) to quit all Claim and Title of a King over them; however they fet up Ericus in his stead but King Edred seizing their strong holds, and punishing with Death and other penalties fuch of the Ring-Leaders of the Faction as fell into his hands, he very much put astop to his Enemies proceedings, many of them submitting to Mercy, and others fled: Yet being too fecure, Arch Bishop Wolftan took the advantage of it, giving notice to the Danes and their Faction, who gathering their scattered Forces lay'd an Ambush for him in his return, and in a narrow way inclofed by Woods, rushing out on the Rear of his Army, flew a great many of them before the Front could face about, by fetching a compass to succour them; however, after a sharp Fight they were repulsed, and many of them destroyed. For in Revenge of Wolstans Treachery he Burnt the Abby of Rippon, and other places, where the Clergy had sided with his Enemies; but gave sums of Money to be distributed among the Poor who fuffered by the War, which gained him Envy by some, and Praise by others; so that the Northern Nobles endeavoured to gaine Edmye his Eldest Nephew to their Party that they might the more colourably rife in Arms, under a pretence of the Young Princes Right to the Crown; but he, given up wholly to Pleasure, rather confulting his Ease, and what might best gratifie his Appetite, than the Toiles and Hazzards of War, gave little or no heed to the Overtures made him for immediate rifing to a Throne; and indeed his Uncles tender care of him was such, that he may truly be said to live happier under his Tutelage, than when he came to sway the Scepter, as will more plainly appear in the succeeding Reign.

This King made St. Germans in Cornwal a Bishops See, which was afterwards translated to Cridington by Canute King of the Danes, Reigning Sole Monarch in England; and at last it was settled at Exeter by Edward the Confessor, where it now remaines. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 946, and continued it Nine Years, and was Buryed at Winchester, and is accounted the Tenth Sole Monarch of England. In his time a violent Earthquake happened, throwing down many stately Buildings, especially in the Northern parts.

Kemarks on Dozlethire, &c.

Dorsetshire is very spacious and fertil, breeding great numbers of Cattle in its rich Pastures, and is much renowned for its Linnen and Woollen Manufactures: It produces abundance of Corn, and the Isle of Portland joyning (as it were) to it, furnishes us with plenty of Free-Stone, used in building Churches and other stately Fabricks in London, &c. It is Bounded with Wiltshire, Somersetshire, Hampshire, Devonshire, and the Channel. It Containes 248 Parishes, divided into 29 Hundreds, 19 Market Towns, and four Rivers. It sends Members to Parliament 20, viz. Bridport 2, Crost-Castle 2, Dorchester 2, Lyme Regis 2, Melcom Regis 2, Pool 2, Shaston 2, Weymouth 2, Wareham 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire. It has in it a great many Parks stored with Venison.

Dorchester, the chief Town in this Shire, is of great Antiquity, and was called by the Roman's Durnovaria, being of pleasant situation, and its Buildings Rich and Populous. Banbury was Antiently the Court of many West Saxon

King's z

Kings; at Cern, Austin the Monk Preached up Christianity on his first Arrival in this shire; and by the consent of the People destroyed their Idols, and among the rest one called Hell.

The HISTORY

Shaftsbury is famed for the History of the Prophecying Eagle (probably a Man whose Name was Aquila) in this place was Buryed the Body of Edward the Son of Edgar. Murthered at the command of his Step-Mother, in Corfe-Castle. At Winbourn Minster, Builded by Cuthburga Queen of Northumberland, was Intered the Body of Ethelred.

Nor must we forget Lime in this County, which is Memorable for the Landing of James late Duke of Monmouth there, with about fourscore Gentlemen from Holland; in the Year 1685, being the first Year of the late King James's Feign. And tho' he brought so few along with him, yet in a few Days after his Landing, he was several Thousands strong; and gave the Kings Forces a considerable Repulse at Philips-Norton; and had he gain'd the Day at Sedgemore (which in all probability he had done, had he not been betray'd) It is verily believed the greatest part of England bad Declared for bim; so great an Aversion, even at that time, the Nation had against King James and Popery; and I am sure they have no reason to be fonder of him since. But Heaven had decreed our Deliverance to be the Work of another hand: And therefore the unhappy Duke after his Defeat at Sedgmore. was taken at Ringwood in Hampshire, and from thence brought up to London, and two days after Beheaded upon Tower-Hill; whose Death was follow'd by abundance of barbarcus Executions in this County; so that there is hardly a Town in it, but what can shew some Bloody Tokens of King James his Cruelty; The Quarters of the poor Macerated Wretches having been placed upon Poles fet up in the Highways, for many Miles together: As we shall show more at large, when we come to King James's Reign. Sherbus

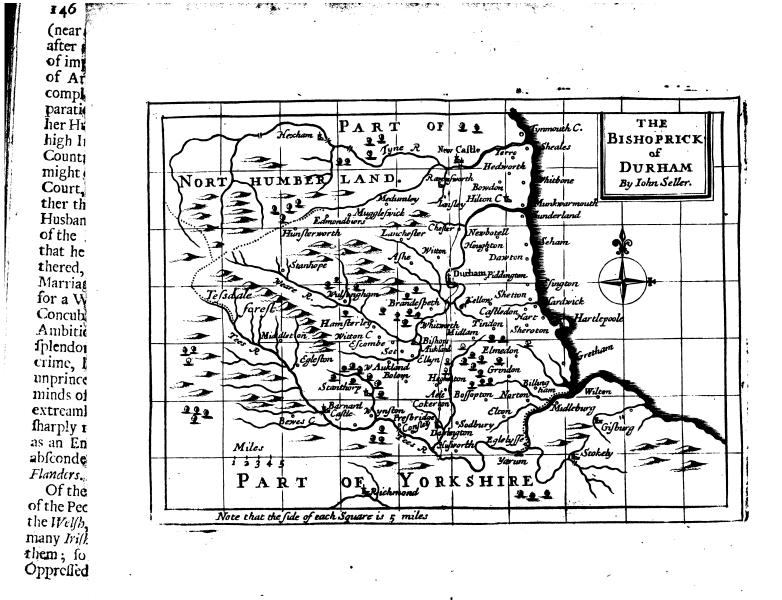

Sherburn was Antiently an Episcopal See, and so continued a long time, in whose Cathedral were Interred the Body of the Kings Ethelbert and Ethelbald. Maiden Castle, about a Mile West of Dorchester and Badbury Castle, appear by Coin, and other Marks digg'd up and found about them, to have been Garifons of the Romans, if not builded by them. The River Stowr in this County abounds with Tench of an extraordinary bigness: In the Isle of Purbeck are veins of Marble, tho' not continued, but scattering here and there, as Cambden observes, yet run a great way under Ground: Great store of the best Hemp growing in England, is found between Bemister and Bridport; and near Sturpain, on the side of the River, there is a plentiful production of Madder. The Hills in Dorsetshire are few, and those for the most part gradually rising, some Crowned with pleasant Woods, and others with Corn in its season, and slocks of Sheep: It is Beautified with several Seats of the Nobility, viz. Hook Castle, the Duke of Boltons; Cranbourn-House, the Earl of Salisburys; Wimbourn St. Giles, the Earle of Shaftsburys. The Houses of the Gentry are likewise very stately, as well in the Towns, as seperate; so that it may be ranked among the most delightful Counties of England.

The Reign of Edwye, the Eleventh Sole Monarch of England.

F Dwye, Eldest Son to Edmund, and Nephew to Edrid, began his Reign Anno Dom. 955, finding Affairs in a forward settlement (the Danes being for the most part expelled the Land, or had turned their Forces on the Scots, as knowing they had been foiled on this tide, and had but little hopes of fixing in the Southern parts of the Island ) He was Crowned at Kingston upon Thames, and there is reported to have drawn a Lady (near (near a kin to him, and Married to a Nobleman) aside, after a Ball or Dancing bout, as if he had some matter of importance to relate to her, and behind the Cloth of Arras forced her to his Luft, which being much complained of by the Nobility, he proposed for the reparation of her Honour to take her to be his Wife, but her Husband opposing it, and willing to pass over the high Injury his Prince had done him, rather than his Country should suffer by any publick Mischief that might enfue thereon from Popular Fury or Factions at Court, the matter seemed hushed for a time; but whether the King feared the private Revenge of an abused Husband, or having an inclination to a free Enjoyment of the Lady, I determine not, but so it was ordered, that he in conclusion caused the Husband to be Murthered, and took his Lady, now free from the bonds of Marriage by the untimely Death of her Husband, not for a Wife, (as he had before proposed) but for his Concubine; which makes fome Authors believe her Ambition, to glitter so near a Throne, tho' in a Tinsel splendor of ignominy, made her consenting to the latter crime, however she enclined to the former; yet this unprincely action created him fuch a hatred in the minds of his Subjects, That all, except his Flatterers, extreamly murmured against him; and Bishop Dunstan sharply reproving him for his Vices, he Proscribed him as an Enemy or Traytor; so that, to fave his Life, he absconded in England a while, and then fled into Flanders.

Of these disorders in Government, and Disassections of the People, the Danes taking advantage, joyned with the Welsh, and Invaded the Northern Borders, having many Irish, and some Scots, as Auxiliaries joyned with them; so that most of those Counties being violently Oppressed, and finding the King slow to relieve them having having united their Forces and expelled the Enemy, renounced their Allegiance to him, and chose his Brother Edgar King, a young Prince of an active Spirit, who had affifted them in the War; to which with little opposition the whole Nation consented, and hereupon Edwye being Deposed, Dyed of Grief, and was Buryed at Winchester. In his time there was a great contention between the Monks and Marryed Priests; the former opposing the latter, as not capable of Officiating in holy Orders, according to the Cannons of the Church of Rome; and they again alledging those Cannons were contradictory to the Holy Scriptures; so the Controversy was put to the King to determine, and in this indeed he gave a right Judgment, declaring for the Married Priests; which is the only commendable thing noted in his Reign. He Reigned four Years, and was the Eleventh Sole Monarch of England.

Remarks on the Bishopzick of Durham, &c.

THE Bishoprick of Durham, tho's small in circumference, abounds in plenty of all things, as Cattel, Corn, Pastures, Fruit-Trees, Woods, Forests and Parks; and is Watered with divers pleastant Streams stored with Fish. It has to the North and West many pleasant Hills, and is Bounded with Northumberland, Westmorland, Yorkshire, and the German Ocean. It has in it the City of Durham, which is a Bishops See, and is a Palatine, having divers Priviledges above many Counties. It Contains 118 Parishes, 6 Market Towns, and 11 Rivers: It sends

It gained the Title and Priviledge by the great Fame and Renown of St. Cuthberd, for the Interment of whom, the K 3 Cathedral

Members to Parliament 4, viz. Durham 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Cathedral was first Bulded by Bishop Aldwin, and much enlarged by Bishop Careleph: His Tomb was with much Devotion Visited by Edward, Ethelstane, and divers other Saxon Kings; and by William the Conqueror this Bishoprick was made a County Palatine: There is a place called Gallile in the West End of the Church, where is to be seen the Tomb of venerable Beda. Binchester (the Benovium of the Romans) was famed for their chief station in the North, and many of their Coins have been found in Earthen Urns, upon Digging up old foundations.

Chefter in the Street (the Condercum of the Romans) is a Place of great Antiquity, pleasantly situate, and well

Inhabited. At Nevil's Cross near Durham, the Scots were defeated, and David their King made Prisoner by one Copeland, and carry'd Prisoner to the Tower; for which service Copeland received of the King five Hundred Pounds per Annum. In this Bishoprick, near Darlington, are three wonderful deep Pits, called Hell Kettles, supposed to be funk by an Earthquake. In this Palatine also stands Bernard Castle, samous for the many Sieges it has held out against the Scots: Over the River Weer, with which the City of Durham is almost encompassed, are two well built Stone Bridges, one from the South, the other from the North Road, leading into the Town.

This Palatine has a Jurisdiction within it self to Try Criminals, and other Matters, from which in many cases there lyes no Appeal, The Seats tho' few, are very Antient, and yet Magnificent Structures, viz. Durham Place and Aukland Castle, the Bishops Seats being the principal.

The Reign of King Edgar, Twelfth Sole Monarch of England.

Dgar, the Second Son of Edmund, began his Reign Anno Dom. 959, at which time the Danes (wearydout with War) began to think of settling a Peace ith the English, upon consideration they might rest at uiet in some Northern Counties, and have other Adantages which (confidering the uncertainty of the hen state of Assairs) was not thought amiss to be llowed them, they owning the King their Superiour, nd to continue as it were his Subjects: And so King dgar having received the Crown at Bath, from the lands of Odo Arch Bishop of Canterbury, applied himelf to the Government of his Kingdom, and recalled Dunstan from Banishment; yet by this means some Divines of Oxford University were Branded in the

Their Vows of Celibacy an encouragement to Sodomy, and ther Uncleaneness. He made very strict Laws against Drunkenness, which was very rife in his time, causing Cups to be made with certain Pins or Marks, and a penalty to fuch as should exceed the allowed Draught: And England being then pestered with Wolves, who destroyed much small Cattle, and some People, he made a Law, That those who held Lands of the Crown should

Cheek, and Banished; for Affirming The Church of Rome

o be the Whore of Babylon, Monkery an Offensive Contagion;

Yearly bring in a cerrain number of Wolves Heads, under a Penalty of forfeiting their Tenures; And Ludwal, the Prince of Wales, was alloted to bring in three Hundred Wolves Heads Yearly in consideration of the Lands he held in subjection to the Crown of England: Whereupon fuch dilligent fearch was every where made, that In a few years there was not one to be found in England, except K 4 except such as were kept tame, nor ever since has there been otherways any of the breed in this Country, tho' Neighbouring Ireland not long since abounded with them.

This Edgar Yearly rid the Circuit, to take notice of the abuses and corruptions of his Judges, and severely Punished their remisness in the Administration of the Laws: But notwithstanding all these good Qualities. he was very much blemish'd with Incontinency, not fparing Wives or Daughters, where his defires lead him to pursue the enjoyment of his unlawful Pleasures: He begat a Daughter, whom he named Edith, on Wolfechild a veiled Nun, who was afterward for a considerable fum of Money Cannonized by the Pope, and attempting to gaine the possession of Odwina, a Western Dukes Daughter, her Mother whom he folicited to give her into his Arms, preferring the preservation of her Chafity to the Kings Anger, and all his Golden Promises, contrived a Stratagem to defeat him, which she effected, by laying her waiting Maid in her Daughters Bed, with whose wanton toying in the Dark he was so pleased, that tho' he discovered the Fraud the next Morning, he not only commended the Dutchess, but gave his Bedfellow the Reward he had promised the Yong Lady, and kept her as his Concubine.

Soon after this, hearing by Fame of the great Beauty of Duke Orgarius's Daughter, that she was even a Fhænix in nature, for incomparable Features, being by this time a Widower, he resolved if what was reported proved true, to take her to Wise; and in order to be better certified, he sent Earl Ethelwold, one of his Courtiers, to view her, who falling in Love with the Lady, wooed her for himself, and Married her, excusing it to the King, by telling him, That she had Beauty enough for a Subject, but not for so great a Prince: Howe

ever

ever this did not so well satisfy him, but he resolved to see her, and so Invited himself to the Earls House.

Ethelwold, mistrusting to what intent he had done it, being conscious his Wives Beauty would enslame him, laboured to excuse his unpreparedness, but in vain; whereupon he acquainted his Wise with it, and intreated her to deforme herself, by appearing in a homely Dress, and by discolouring her Face, if she had any regard to his Life, or her own Chastity; telling her how her prevailing Charms had made him betray his Trust.

But this Ambitious Woman (proud of her Feauty) gathering from his discourse she might have been a Queen, and not now altogether out of hopes to be fo, promised the Earl (for the better hiding her Anger) to obey him; but on the contrary, when the King was fet at Dinner, she came before him Adorned with Jewells, and all her costly Ornaments, having much added by Art to her Natural Beauties, fo that she appeared in his Eyes like a glittering Angel; yet he difsembled his Anger with Ethelwold for the present, till that Afternoon going a Hunting with the Earl in his Forrest, he fingled him out, and after many reproaches, struck him through with his Javelin, as he was about to fall on his Knees and begg Pardon; and in a little time after took the Lady to Wife, by whom he had Ethelred afterward King of England. For this and his other wicked practices, Dunstan whome he had made a Bishop, and his great Favorite, Enjoyned him as a Penance. Not to wear his Crown for feven Years, which Injunction he submitted to, but left not his Lascivious courses.

This Edgar brought the Kingdom to a Flourishing condition, and is accounted the greatest of the Saxon Monarchs, being once at Westchester he had eight Kings and Princes to Row his Barge on the River Dee, as we have already noted, in our Remarks on Cheshire. He is said to compass the Island with almost an incredible Navy of Ships, viz. 3600, settling and strengthening the Sea-Ports, leaving Guard-Ships to defend them against the Landing of Pirates or other Enemies; by which Undertaking he brought such a Terror on Scotland, that their King sued for Peace, and payed an Annual Tribute to have it consirmed.

and

He Restored and Founded 47 Monasteries: And in the presence of his Nobility, on Christmas Day, Anno Dom. 974, he Confirmed the Abby of Ramsey, which his Cousin Alwin had Founded, and made the Abby which Bishop Oswald had Builded, a Cathedral Church; He brought the Welsh under an intire Subjection to England, aloting their Princes Pensions, as his Servants, clearing the Seas of Rovers, and intended to War on France, to composite that King to a reparation of the Damages his Merchants had sustained on the French Coasts, by Embargoes and Seisures of their Goods. But whilst great things were in his mind, his Debaucheries having much wasted his Natural Strength, he Dyed when he had Reigned Sixteen Years, and was

honourably Entombed at Glastenbury; which as yet

boalts some remains of his Monument.

In the fixth Year of his Reign, the Heavens feemed as on Tire, the Stars to appearance darted Beams at each other, as if Creation had been about to dissolve. A Monsterous Fish was taken on the Coast of Sussex, with a Face and Hair like a Man, and a Scaly Circlet like a Coronet on its Head, and upon its being drawn up, sent forth a mighty noise like the roaring of a Lion.

ap North gi lai Ly bon Sudbury Royfton Steple Bunftede nu · Largley Newport Thanted th . Quendon D hi FORD SHI wi. H Er Brunfield Chelmford Sanford . · Navestock Bu cri D ho •Chigwell bo Donton hittaker Beacon 35 ea wi • Gravefend lik EN Isle of Shepey up South

121

Remarks on the County of Effer, &c.

ESSEX is not only confiderably Large, but is every where sprinkled with Towns and Villages of note, and is abundantly stored with Cattle, by reason its advantageous Meadows, Marshes, and other Pastures, which lying low produce store of Grass in the driest seasons; as for Cheese and Butter, it produces very great quantities, as also very good Corn, and store of Saffron, Hops, &c.

It is Bounded on the South with the River Thames, and Kent, the River washing its verdant Banks as far as the Hope; on the West with Hartfordshire, and Middlesex; on the North with Cambridgshire and Suffolk, and on the East with the Ocean; It is divided into 20 Hundreds, which containe 415 Parishes; It has 27 Market Towns, and seven Rivers; It sends Members to Parliament eight, viz. Colchester 2, Harwich 2, Maldon 2, and two Knights of the Shire.

Colchester in this County is of great Antiquity, held to be Built by the Antient British King Coilus, from whom it seems to derive its Name; and in it was Born King Lucius the first known Christian King in the World: Constantine the first Christian Roman Emperour, as also Helena his Mother, Empress to Constantius and Daughter to King Coilus; It is also Memorable for its Long Siege in the late

Civil War. Malden is very Antient, having been the Royal Seat of the Trinobantes, of which Cunobeline was King, when our Saviour was Born. It was taken by the Emperour Claudius and Named Camalodunum, wherein he placed a Roman Garison, but Rased to the Ground by Queen Bonduca or Boadicia, after a mighey Defeat given the Romans in Revenge of their breach of Trust, and the Rape of her Daughters; which we formerly mentioned.

Walden

Walden samous for Saffron growing about it, from whice it takes the Name of Saffron Walden, and for giving Birth to that Learned Statesman Sr. Thomas Smith, Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth: At Tilbury the said Queen rendezvouzed her Forces to oppose the Spanish Invasion 1588; and there is now a strong Fort, commanding the Mouth of the Thames.

Chelmsford, accounted the Shire Town, is of very commodious Building and situation, the Assizes being usually beld there. Braintry, Cogshal, Harwich, and other Towns, adorn this County. There is a Proverb peculiar to this County, which is, He may setch a Flitch of Bacon from Dunmow, This Proverb took its rise from a Custom formerly practised in the Priory of Dunmow, sirst founded by Juga, a Noble Lady, for Black Nuns, Anno IIII. but afterwards converted into a Priory for Friars, who ordained, That if any Person from any part of England would come thither, and humbly kneel on two stones, yet to be seen at the Church Door before the Convent, and solemnly take the following Oath, he might demand a Gammon or Flitch of Bacon, which should be freely given him: You shall Swear by the Custom of our Confession. That you never made any Nuptial Transgression, Since you were married Man and Wife. By Houshold Brawls, or contentious strife: Or otherwise in Bed, or at Board, Offended each other in Deed or Word: Or tince the Parish Clark said Amen, Wished your felves unmarried agen; Or in a Twelve-Month and a Day, Repented not in thought any way: But continued true, and in Defire. As when you joyn'd hands in holy Quire. If to these Conditions without all fear, Or your ownaccord you will freely Swear,

A Gammon of Bacon you shall receive, And carry it hence with love and free leave. For this is our Custom at Dunmow well known; Tho' the sport be ours, the Bacon's your own.

of ENGLAND.

And pursuant hereunto, it appears upon Record, That lichard Wright, of Badsworth in Norfolk, in the 23d. Hen. 6. and Stephen Samuel of Little Easton in Essex, the 7th. of Edward the 4th, and Thomas Lee of Loxhall in Essex, in the 2d. of Hen. 8. Took the aforesaid 19ath, and demanded and received their Bacon.

Amongst the many Noble Seats in this County, That loyal House called Audley-End, (not far from Saffron-Valden) justly claims the first place, Built by Thomas Howard Earl of Suffolk, Treasurer to Kmg James the first hen there is New-Hall, a very Noble Seat of the late buke of Albemarles, and Bently belonging to the Earl of Oxford; Copt-Hall a seat of the Earl of Dorcets; Leez riory, a seat of the Earl of Manchester; St. Osith, a seat of the Earl Rivers; Havering, a seat of the Earl of indseys; Park-Hall, a seat of the Earl of Angleseys; soulsham-Hall, Moulsham Friery, and Bishops-Hall, ats of the Lord Fitz Walter; Gossield-Hall, and Springlace, seats of the Lord Grey of Wark: Easton-Lodg nd Achdon-Place, seats of the Lord Maynard; Tols-

ury, a feat of the Lord Howard of Escrick; Lawsield-

Hall, the Lord Carews Seat: It contains likewise many prious Parks, Chases, Warrens, and is stored with Fish, owl, and all other Necessaries.

The

The Reign of Edward, Thirteenth Sole Monarch of England, and by some Sirnamed the Martyr.

E Dward, Eldest Son to Edgar, began his Reign upon the Death of his Each the Death of his Father, Ann Dom. 975; he was Crowned at Kingston on Thames by Dunstan, who had been promoted to the Bishoprick of Canterbury by his Father. At his Accession to the Throne, a terrible Blazing Star appeared, which rifing East by South. continued visible twenty Nights; ushering in a grievous Famin; fo that the poorer fort were compelled to Eat Grass, Leaves, and Bark of Trees, whereupon many Thousands dyed; yet it continued but a Year. and then another mischief succeeded, which had like to have put the Nation in confusion, viz.

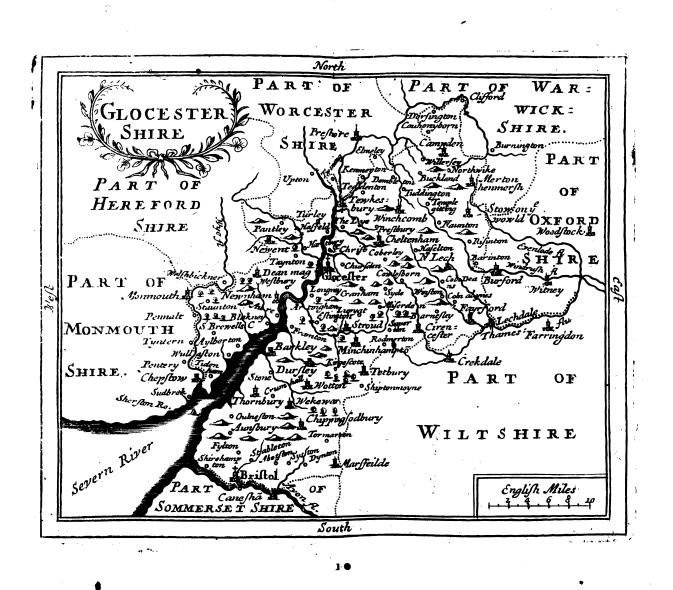

Several Years past, tho' the Popes Cannons prohibited it, the Clergy had priviledg to Marry, without any hinderance to them in performing their Functions, and keeping their Spiritualities: But Arch Bishop Dunstan, who aimed at the Popedom, or at least aspired to a Cardinals-Car, finding it was displeasing to the Roman See, because the charge of Wives and Children must of necessity debar the Clergy from sending to Rome such liberal Contributions as otherways they might have done, and so hinder Grist from coming to the Popes Mill, he to ingratiate himself with that See, stired up the Monks and Unmarried Priests, against those that had taken Wives, and they dealing underhand with divers unthinking People, Tumults arose thereon, and much mischief was done: For Duke Alfarus encouraging the Married Priests and their party, the King with all his Authority had much ado to prevent a General Infurrection. At last it was agreed, That an Assembly of both Parties should meet, and dispute the matter, according according to Scripture and Cannons; and a place for that purpose was prepared in a large upper Room where Dunstan (as chief Orator for the Monks) had cunningly placed his Chair on a Post or Beam strongly fixed; and as fome Authors believe had contrived a Device, by taking out some Pins, to let the Floor fall, upon a fignal given; fo the press being very great, after a hot Debate had been held for a while, and nothing Agreed on, Dunstan stamping, and saying, They shall fall before us, &c. The Floor first trembled, as with the motion of an Earthquake, and then fell down, leaving nothing but Dunstan's Chair that had been surely feated aloft, which being looked upon as, and cryed up for a Miracle, in the behalfe of the Monks, they thereupon carried the day: And the Married Priests were left at liberty to Enjoy their Wives, but outed of their Benefices.

This is that Dustan of whom a story goes, That to prevent Idleness, he was working at the Goldsmiths Trade in a Cell near Glaffenbury, and whilst he was framing a Chalice of Gold, the Devil in the shape of a Beautiful Woman appeared to him, endeavouring to Tempt him to Lewdness; but he by Inspiration knowing it to be a Fiend Transformed, on a suddain, as it was peeping over his Shoulder, he catched it by the Nose with red hot Tongs, and made the Devil rore so loud, that all the People in the Village were Affrighted at the horrid Noise, and thereupon the seeming Lady Vanished.

And now the Danes, hoping for great advantages from these disturbances, prepared a considerable Fleet; but a Storm arising, they were driven on the Coast of Scotland, and many of them broken among the Rocks, about 6000 Men perishing: However, being recruited, they gave some disturbances on the Northern Borders, many of the Scots joyning with them but they made no great Advance, for the Marches were strongly Guarded; yet many Disorders happened at Court, by reason of the Kings Youth, not having experience in the Politick Intreagues of State: His Mother-in-law, who aimed to set her Son Ethelred (whom she had by Edgar, after Ethelwold her Husband was slain) upon the Throne, maintained a fecret Faction to Depose or Murther him; the latter whereof was in a little time effected: For the King being perswaded to go a Hunting in a Forrest near Croft-Cafile, the place where she and her Son Resided, his Train (as 'tis thought purposely) lest him in the Chase of a Stag; whereupon he not caring to stay in an unfrequented place, made to the Caftle to pay his Step-Mother and Brother-in-law a visit, as also to get some Refreshment, the weather being exceeding hot, when knocking at the Gate, she (who had feen him out of the Window) came down and welcomed him in, with all the Blandishments and Flatteries immaginable, Intreating bis Highness to alight and accept of whatever her mean Habitation would afford: But he Reply'd, He came not to pay a set Visit, but came that way after his Game, and had lost his Company, and therefore at. this time would sit on Horseback, and take a glass of Wine till some of them might chance to come up with him. Hereupon she hasting to fetch some Wine, gave the Sign to a desperat Russian, who was her Servant, that when the Glass was at his Mouth he should strike him in with a Dagger, which he performed; at which unexpected Wound, the Young King perceiving the Treachery, set Spurs to his Horse; but through loss of Blood, fell from his Sadle in a little way Riding, and his Foot hanging in the Stirup he was dragged about the Field, till a Shepherd took him up, in whose Arms, giving a groan or two, he Dyed. This was no fooner noised noised abroad, but the common fort were immediatly for Revenging it on the Queen and all her Adherents. that should be found any ways concerned in it; but finding the Nobles, who for the most part were of her Faction, cold in the matter; and she protesting not to be consenting to the Murther, but that her wicked Servant had done it surprisingly and unexpected to her, in revenge of his Kinsman whom the King had caused to be Hanged some time before, for reproaching him in giving his consent to the turning out of the Married Priests, and had upon perpetrating so horrid a wickedness fled beyond the Seas, the business by degrees was hushed up, and she laboured to have her Son Ethelred Crowned: But Arch Bishop Dunstan strongly opposed it, faying, That at his Baptism having befouled the Font; it was Ominous to the Church; that he would be a Contemner, if not an Abolisher of its Religion; and a long while it was contested, till Dunstan found the Queens Faction fo strong that he durst no longer refuse it.

King Edward being thus made away, was in a manner privately Buryed at Waltham, and afterward his Body removed into the Monastery at Shaftsbury. He Reigned 4 Years, and was the 13 th Sole Monarch of England.

Remarks on Gloucestershire, &c.

G Loucestershire is made Fruitful by the River Severn, Branching almost unto all parts of it; it contains much Woodland and Gradual Hills, Feeding great store of Tame Cattle, and Venison. It abounds in Corn, Wool, Cheese, and Butter: On the North it is bounded with Worcestershire, and Warwickshire; on the East, with Oxfordshire, and Wiltshire; on the South, with Somersetshire, and part of the Severn; on the West, with Herefordshire, fordshire, and Monmouthshire. It Contains one City, a Bishops See, viz Gloucester, 30 Hundreds, divided into 280 Parishes, 27 Market Towns and 12 Rivers. It sends members to Parliament 8, viz Cirencester 2, Gloucester 2, Teuksbury 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Gloucester City is the antient Gelenum of the Romans, In it Robert Brother to the Empress Maud, was kept Prisoner, being taken in the War against King Stephen; its Cathedral is of Excellent Architesture and much noted for its Whispering Place, wherin the least sound may be distinstly heard at a considerable distance: It was won from the Britains by Chewlin King of the West Saxons Anno Dom. 570 and in this City a Monastery of Nuns was Founded by Osrick a Saxon, wherin 3 Queens of the Mercians were successively Prioresses.

In Alny-Isle, a place near Gloucester, was fought the Combate between Edmund Ironfide the Saxon King, and Canute the Dane, and the division of the Kingdom therupon made, as in his Reign will further apear. Cirencester or Circester was an antient Station of the Romans; in it was born the Learned Thomas Rutham, some time Bishop of Durham. The next places of note are Dursly, Cani, Todington, Yate, Westbury, Sudly Castle, Tewksbury, in whose field the Fatal Battel was fought which ruined at that time the House of Lancaster-Anno 1471, in which Prince Edward was flain, Queen Margaret taken Prisoner, and the Duke of Somerset Earl of Devonshire &c. Were Beheaded. At Aderly on the top of certain Hills are found Stones in the form of Oyters, Cockles & c. and near Puckle Church is a Vein of blue Stone. At Lessington are Stones that represent Stars, of the circumferance of a fingle Penny, and the thickness of half a Crown, they grow together in Columns about 3 or 4 Inches long, and being singly put into Vinegar, they naturaly move, and tend towards union. The Seats of the Nobility Nobility are Badminton and Wallastons Grange, seats of the Buke of Beaufort; Stowel, a seat of the Earl of Strafford; Berkely-Castle, a seat of the Earl of Berkley's; Campden-House in Campden, a seat of the Earl of Gainsboroughs; Overnorton, a seat of the Lord Viscount Say and Seal's; Corfe-Court and Cockbury, seats of the Lord Coventry; Glocester Pallace, the Bishops seat: It has in it also a great many Parks, Forrests, and all accommodations for Recreation, &c.

The Reign of Ethelred, Fourteenth Sole Monarch of England.

E Theired began his Reign Anno Dom. 979; he was the third Son of Edgar, and came very Young to the Crown, for I find that being informed of the manner of his Brother Edwards Death to make way for him to the Crown, when he was but ten Years old, he not only detested the crime, and refused to be made King, but wept and complained so abundantly for the deceased. that the Queen in a great passion snatched a Wax Taper from the Alter (nothing else being at hand) and beat him so sorely with it, that it gave him an Antipathy against Wax Tapers all his life time, he never enduring any to be in his fight; so that he may be reputed to be between Ten and Eleven Years Old when he came to the Throne; fo that the Danes promiting themselves great advantages by reason of his Minority, Landed in great numbers.

This King Ethelred, by some called Eldred, was Crowned at Kingston upon Thames by Arch Bishop Dunstan, not (as is said) by his good will, but he was compelled to perform that Office; yet instead of a Benediction, he Bann'd him as one that Swam to the Throne in the Stream of his Brothers Blood (as he Phrased it) speaking also as it were Prophetically, of the great losses England would sustain in this Kings Reign; and indeed Queen Alfreda being soon sensible of the Blood-guiltiness that cried against her, and fearing the sury of the People, built two Monasteries of Nuns at Amesbury, where she lived a solitary Life till she Dyed.

L 2 fpeaking

The King being but flow in his preparations, by which means he got himself the nickname of the Unready, Smane, King or chief Leader of the Danes, and Olaf King of Norway, who affifted him, got strong poffession of divers of the most fertil Counties, (being fecretly encouraged by Duke Edrick, a Treacherous Courtier, who discovered to them all the Kings Counsels) and Fortified the Towns and Castles, casting up works to secure what they gained, as they made their Encroachments. However, at length the King gave them Battel, and tho' he cannot be faid to lose it, the parting being somewhat doubtful on either side, yet he lost so many of his People that he could not get together a fufficient Army to oppose them; so that to save the rest of his Country from Spoil, he was constrained to comply with the Enemies exorbitant demands, compounding for his Quiet at 10000 l. Then they raised him to 16, 20, 30, and 40000 Pounds; compelling the People to find them Provisions in their Houses where they were Quartered, and to see in many places their Wives and Daughters Ravished before their Faces, not daring on pain of their Lives to gainfay it; The People calling them Lord Danes, corruptly now Lurdane, a by-word for a Lazy Fellow.

But Elfrick Earl of Mercia, and Algarius his Son, being found contributers and abettors to the Misery of their Country, the King caused their Eyes to be put out, and they confin'd to certain Limits during Life.

And now the King plainly perceiving what a miferable condition the Kingdom was in, between private Traitors and professed Enemies, he resolved to take a violent and fpeedy course (as he thought, to end the War at once) and thereupon sent secret Messages throughout the Kingdom, That upon the Ringing the Allarm-Bell, on St. Erices Day, the 13th of November, Anno Dom. 1002, the People in all Cities and Towns should fall on the Danes as they lay scattered, and had no time to get to their Arms, or in any great Body, and Massacre them; and accordingly it was put in execution; so that many places flowed with Danes Blood, the injured and inraged People not sparing either Sex of that Nation; fo that Guni-Child, King Swane's Sister, was slain at Dorchester. This Honour (if I may rightly term it one) the Women, by I know not what Tradition, totally ascribe to their Sex, tho' no doubt both Sexes were Actors in the Danish Tragedy; which had been more Bloody, had not Duke Edrick given Swane notice, tho' fomewhat too late in the main, of the Defign; by which means he faved himself, and a great many of his followers: and froming at his Loss, Repaired it with all speed, sending for Recruits from Norway and Denmark: It was supposed in this Slaughter about 24000 fell; but to Revenge it, being Recruited, the Danes grievously oppressed the Country, Burning and Destroying in all places where they came; so that although the King to the Impoverishing himself, gave them 30000 Pounds for Peace, they observed it but a few Days; for having wrested a great Sum of Money from Alphegus, who Succeeded Dunstan in the Arch Bishoprick of Canterbury, and slain 900 Monks and Men in Religious Orders, They Stoned the good Bishop to Death at Greenwich in Kent.

The King seeing these proceedings, sent Emma his Queen with his two Sons, to her Brother Richard Duke of Normandy, and shortly after, not able to endure the Destruction the Enemy made, followed them. But at length Swane was Murthered by his own Men, for denying them their share of Plunder, or restraining them from their Insolencies over the English: However they chose Canute his Son King. Of which change, Ethelred thinking to make advantage, at the folicitation of his Friends returned; but perceiving several Treafons hatching against him; That his Councells were betrayed by some he consided in, and that he was too weak to withstand the Enemies fury, he fell into a Melancholly and Dyed, as is supposed of Grief, and he was Bury'd in St. Paul's London. He Reigned 37 Years, unless we exclude the time he was absent in Normandy, which by some is accounted between two and three Years. He was the Fourteenth Sole Monarch of England.

Remarks on Hampshire, or Hantshire.

Ampshire is not only considerable for its Fertility in Corne, Cattle, Fowle, Fish, and its producing store of singular good Honey, but for its commodious Sea-Ports, opening to the South, for the conveniency of Shipping outward or inward bound, especially Southampton, Antiently Hamo's Haven; It is Reunded on the North with Barkshire, on the East with Survy and Sussex, on the South with the Channel, and on the West with Wiltshire and Dorsetshire; It Containes one City, viz. Winchester which is a Bishops See; and is divided into 39 Hundreds, 253 Parishes, 20 Market Towns, and 4 Rivers; It sends Members to Parliament 26, viz. Knights of the Shire two, Winchester, Southampton, Portsmouth, Yarmouth, Peterssield, Newport, Stockbridge, Newton, Christchurch, Whitchurch,

North PART Sale/burye Playne
Arradon hill PART OF W I PART OF DORSET SHIRE English Miles WIGHT ISLE South

church, Limington, and Andover two each: Note, That to this County belongs the lile of Wight.

As for Winchelter, the only City, it was the Antient Venta-Belgarum of the Romans, it is held to have been Founded by Rudhuidibras an Antient British King, and was the Royal Seat and Place of Crowning the West Saxon Kings for many Reigns. The Cathedral was Built by King Kenwolfe, and made the Burying-Place of the Kings. Henry the Third was Born in this City, and many Men of great fame.

Southampton was Built out of the Ruins of the Antient Clausentium, and after many Devastations Re-Edissed in King Richard the Seconds time. It's said to take this latter Name from Hamo a Roman stain there, viz. Hamo's Haven, or Southampton.

At Balingstoke was Born John of Balingstoke, the first English Author of a Greek Grammar; and at Odiam, William Lilly, first Master of St. Paul's School: Other Places in this County are Famous for the Birth of worthy Persons and memorable Transactions; as Andover, Warblington, Hide, Illchester, Wickham, Okely, &c. Besides the strength of Portsmouth and the Citadel to secure the Coast, here are Hurt-Castle and Calshot-Castle standing as it were in the Sea; and many other advantages for the protection of Shipping. The Rocks afford Samphire and the White Cliss abundance of Wild Thyme, Marjorum, and Rosemary.

The Seats of the Nobility are Basing-House, Abbstone and Hackwood, seats of the Duke of Boulton; Farnborough Place, a seat of the Earl of Anglesey; Rockborn, a seat of the Earl of Shaftsburys; Wharlwell, a seat of the Lord La Warrs; Mottessant, a seat of the Lord Sandys; Breamore, a seat of the Lord Brooks; Wolvesey-House, the seat of the Lord Bishop of the Diocess.

The Reign of Edmund, who from his Valour and Hardiness was Sirnamed Ironside, Fifteenth Sole Monarch of England.

Dmund Ironside began his Reign in a very troublefome time, Anno Dom. 1016, when the Danes had possessed the greater part of the Kingdom; taking on him the Crown rather out of pity to his bleeding Country, than defire of Soveraignty; and indeed did more than could be reasonably expected from him, with fuch flender Forces and little Treasure; for immediatly feting up his Standard to recover a great part of the Kingdom at a point to be lost, he gave Canute Battel at Penham near Gillingham, where he Overthrew him with much flaughter on both fides; then he Fought him again with the like fuccess at Sherest ane in Worcestershire; and likewise in a third Battel near that place, notwithstanding Ederick the Traiterous Duke, though feemingly siding with the King, gave out in the midest of the Battel that the King was Slain; upon which Defeat, the Danes fled to London, and were purfued by Edmund who drove them thence. He discomfited them at Oteford in Kent, and had clear'd the Kingdom of them but for Edrick's Treachery, who in a fixth Battel the King Fought at Assendune near Roachfor in Essex, commanding a part of the Kings Army, he purposely fled, upon which the Souldiers fell into Rout and Disorder, so that the King was compelled for his safety to Retreat towards Gloucester, whither his scattered Forces reforted to him; and after a little Refreshment he caused other Troops to be raised, and again displayed his Standard in the Field, often Skirmishing with the Danes, and flaying great numbers of them, fending likewise a Challenge to Canute their King, to end the War by fingle Combate; who accepting it. the two Kings in the light of both Armies prepared on the day appointed, viz. the 15th of July, in a little Island called Olway, made so by the winding of the Severn; and about ten in the Morning the Combate began, both of them having strong and large Swords: They had not long continued it, and given to each other mighty Blows, but the Blood flowed plentifully from their Wounds, and Edmund being a Prince of exceeding strength, pressed so hard upon Canute, that driving him to the Brink of the River, he cryed out (tho almost Breathless and Faint, by effusion of Blood) What need is there for us, Noble King, thus to endanger our Lives? The Kingdom is large enough for us both: If you will then consent to divide it between us, our hands will be strengthened against our Enemies, and we shall Live together in Peace and Unity, as Brothers. King Edmund pauling herenpon a while, confidered

That if he slew Canute, the Danes might not stand to the Award of leaving the Land, as having experienced their breach of Truce, and that being mostly Pagans, they held it but a small matter to break their Word or Oaths with Christians, and that other Commanders might come over with fresh Forces to work new Troubles, the Country being already very much wasted; he at last concluded (upon Canute's dropping his Sword, in token he Submitted) to shake Hands with him, and embrace the offer: Whereupon King Edmund having the first Lot, chose the Southern, Eastern, and Western Counties, as far as the Borders of Yorkshire; and Canute then seemed to be contented with the Northern Counties, as far as the Borders of Scotland; Mutually Swearing to assist each other against all Invaders;

and for a time they lived Peaceably in Co-Partnership.
But Ederick, the Traytorous Duke, perceiving the

Danes

Danes by reason of the swarms that came frequently from Denmark to be the stronger, laboured to ingratiate himself with Canute, (tho' he held fair with Edmund, who would not be perswaded by his faithful Counsellors to take him out of the way, tho' his Treasons were apparent:) And thinking he should merit much of the Dane by destroying King Edmund; at least, That he should have some part of the Kingdom assigned him; he one day, as the King was disburthening Nature at the lower end of his Garden, conveyed himself by a back way under the Vault, and with Impious Hands Thrust a short Spear in at his Fundament and up his Body till it peirced his Heart; so that giving an extraordinary Groan, he instantly Dyed.

The Traytor not satisfied with this, but desirous to carry some Testimonial of the Regicide with him, crept up at the hole, and with his Sword cut off the Kings Head, and fo privately made his Escape to Canute: and at his approaching him, cryed out, Hail, Sole Monarch of England! Behold the Head of thy Go-Partner: Canute inwardly detesting to base a Treachery, yet outwardly dessembling his Resentment, received it as a Grateful Present, promising the Bringer to Advance him above all the Nobles of the English Nation; and indeed in one sence he did it, as he deserved; for whilst he was expecting high Promotion, he caused him to be Arrested, and his Head being stricken off, was placed on the highest part of the Tower; for by this time he was advanced with an Army to London, and the English (upon the consternation they were in at the furprizing News of the Kings Death) not opposing him, in a short time the whole Kingdom submitted to him; fo that being Crowned Sole Monarch, he put a Period to the Saxon Reign, about 566 Years from the Establishment of the Heptarchy.

This

This Edmund was the Fifteenth Sole Monarch of England: He began his Reign Anno Dom. 1016, and continued it about one Year. He was a Prince abounding with Courage, Courtesie, and Strength; a lover of Humanity, and very Merciful to those that Submitted to him; and so Good-natured, That he hardly could be induced to believe any Treachery against him.

Remarks on Partfordhire, &c.

H Artfordshire is a very pleasant Inland County producing large crops of Corn, especially Barly, of which the best Malt is held to be made: It abounds with pleastant Orchards and Gardens, has in it divers Parks stored with Deer; It produces large and small Cattle in great abundance, and is sprinkled with Woods, and adorned with pleasant Hills, Meadows, and Inclosives; and is particularly noted for the great quantities of Black Cherries, that are at the proper season sent from thence to London; many of the Trees that produce them growing in the Hedg-rows, in Fields, and along the Roads, casting a pleasant shade in Summer time, to refresh the weary Traveller.

It is Bounded with Cambridgshire, Essex, Middlesex, Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire; and divided into Eight Hundreds, viz. Odsey, Edwinstree, Hitching, Broadwater, Broughing, Hartford, Dacor, and Caisho Hundreds; and these again into 120 Parishes: It has 18 Market Towns and one River of note, viz. Ware River;

though it is Watered with many small Streams.

It fends Members to Parliament Six, viz. St Albans two, Hartford, the Shire Town, two; and two Knights of the Shire. In this County are divers Places worthy of note, as

St. Albans, raised out of the Ruins of old Verulam, an Antient Roman station: It is Memorable for the Death of Sh Alban, the British Proto Martyr, who suffered there in the Tenth Persecution, raised by Dioclesian the Roman Emperour, who being Buryed here, and a stately Monument raised on his Grave by Offa the great King of the Mercians, seems to have given it its Name. This Place is also samous for two Battels fought here; The first between Richard Duke of York and King Henry the sixth, the 23d of May Anno Don. 1455. In which the King was defeated with the slaughter of the Duke of Summerset, Earl of Northumberland, Lord Clifford, and 5000 of lessen note: The second on the 17th of February Anno Dom. 1450, where King Henry the sixth and his Queen Margaret gained the Victory over the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, and the Earls of Arundel and Warwick.

Barnet is fumed for its Market and Medicinal Waters, and for the great Victory gained by Edw. the 4th on the 14th of April Anno Dom. 1471 against the Earls of Warwick and Oxford, in whose Field that great Earl was stain, since called The Battel of Barnet-Field. Here was Born John Barnet Bishop of Worcester, then of Bath and Wells, lastly of Ely, Lord Treasurer in the Reign of Edward the Third.

Ware, Hatfield, and Hodsdon, are all three seated on the River Lea; and near unto Ware is Amwel-Spring, famous for being the Head of the New-River, which so plentifully furnishes the City of London with Water.

Langly, commonly called Kings Langly, gave Birth to Edmond of Langly, fifth Son to Edward the Third, and the first Buridl-place of Richard the Second, afterward removed to Westminster. Abbots Langly was the Birth-place of Nicholas Break-spear, advanced to Pope of Rome, by the Name of Pope Adrian the Fourth; who made the Emperour Frederick of Germany hold his Stirrop.

Oister supposed by Cambden to have been the Camp of the Roman Lieutenant Ostorius, the next of note are Weathamsted, Baldock, Redburn, Helmsteadsbury, Gatesden, Hemsted, Cottered, Grohambury, which produced many samous Men. The Seats of the Nobility curiously adorn it, and are these: More Park, once the delightful seat of the Late Unfortunate Duke of Monmouth; Caishobury and Hadam-Hall, the seats of the Earl of Essex; Totteridg, the seat of the Earl of Angleseys; Hatsield, Hartford-Castle, Bigrave, Chesunt, and Quickwood, seats of the Earl of Salisburys: With divers seats of the Gentry rendering a pleasant Prospect in all Parts.

CHAP. IX.

The Reigns of the Three Danish Kings, who were Sole Monarches of England, viz. Canute, Harrold, and Hardicanute; with the Memorable Things that happened in their several Reigns.

Some Observations on the Original of the Danes. A Brief Description of the Country from whence they came: Their manner of War, Religion, Customs, &c.

Being come to speak of a Succession of Kings different in Nation from the former, it will not be improper to give an account briefly of the Original of the Nation that gave birth to the first of them, &c.

The Original of the Danes is concluded (by some Authors) to have been from Scythia; That a Famine extreamly raging in that Country, divers Colonies had left it, and ranging to seek Food, sound out an Island called Scandia situate Northward, not far from the Continent continent of Denmark; and in time growing too numerous for that scanty place, they Warred on the Danij, and so long continued it, that they grasped the Kingdom with so hard a hand, as to this day it is not wrested from the Race of them; and from thence they called the Country Danes-Mark, or portion of Land, now corruptly Denmark.

172

This Peninfule, fo called by reason it is almost an Island, as it is now held by the Danish King, that is properly called Denmark, is in Length Eighty Miles. and Twenty in Breadth; having but little firm Land: being divided into many Islands; whereof Jutland, for its bigness, is the chief: It borders upon Germany and is a near Neighbour to the lower Frisa; it is difficult to determine whether it receives greater Benefit than Damage from the Sea; for often by the violent Tempests the Banks and Fences being forced by the Waves. the Water not only covers the Fields for a long time. but by the fuddainness of the Deluge destroys many Cattle and People, and as well Stately Buildings as Lowly Cottages: And the Country is full of Woods containing store of Deer. The Island of Frunen is separated from the main Land by a narrow Arm of the Sea: To the Weltward of it lieth Juta, to the East Slayland, which, for the Beauty and Fertility of it, is to be preferred before all the other Islands belonging to the Danish King. In it is situate Copenhagen the principal relidence of the King, also Roschilt the place of their Burial; near unto which is the Island of Scandia, the first Habitation of the Danes in those parts, as most conclude. But now to the King of Denmark belongs Norway, formerly a distinct Kingdom, and some other Countries, which render his Territories much larger than when the Danes first possessed it.

As for their Religion, when they first Invaded.

England,

England, and long after, it was Paganisin. Their Idols were many, out-numbering those of the Pagan Saxons; to some they Offered Horses, to others Humane Sacrifice, Fruits, Flowers, Water, Bread, Wine, Fish, &c. They were a People very Bloody and Cruel to those they prevailed over, and extreamly Lustful and Treacherous. Their Habit was close girted Coats, their Arms Spears of a moderate length, Battel-Axes, and Faulchions, their Diet many times the Flesh of their slain Enemies, Rost or Sodden; it was about 230 years from their first Invading England, before Canute got

of ENGLAND.

The Reign of Canute, Sixteenth Sole Monarch of England, and first of the Danes, that Reigned here.

the Sole Monarchy, of whose Reign I am next to treat.

C Anute, Son to Swane (who as you have heard was Murthered by his Souldiers) began his Reign as Sole Monarch Anno Dom. 1017. He was Crowned at London by Livingus, Arch Bishop of Canterbury; and at his first coming to the Crown kept the English under with a very krict Hand, every where disarming them. and making it a capital Crime for above a certain number of them to meet together, unless called by his Authority; so that Faires and Marts were in a manner laid aside: He Deposed and Banished the Popular Nobles, conferring their Titles of Honour and Estates on his Danes, and yet not thinking he was fufficiently fecured whilft Edward and Edmund, the Sons of Edmund Ironside, remained in the Kingdom; and yet thought that if he should dip his Hands in their Innocent Blood, he must of necessity incur the perpetual hatred of the English, he concluded to take away their Lives privately, so that he might excuse it, and lay the blame on others; whereupon he fent the Young Princes to his Brother. Brother, King of Sweden, with private Instructions to make them away; but he detesting so base a crime Transferred them to the King of Hungary, where Edmond Dyed; but Edward getting favour at Court and being a Prince endowed with much manly Beauty, and excellent Parts, Agatha Sister to the Empress of Germany fell in Love with him, to whom he was Married. and by her had Edgar Sirnamed Etheling, who Dyed without Issue; Margaret, who Married Malcolm King of Scots; she had Islue Christian a Veiled Nun, Edgar. David, and Alexander, all three Kings of Scotland proceeded from this Line, as also Maud wife to King Henry the first King of England, who had Issue Maud the Empress, Mother to King Henry the Second; fo that the delign of making away these Princes abroad, by a wonderful Providence turned in the end to the Advantage of both Kingdoms, in restoring the Saxon Line after the Norman Conquest to England, in the person of Henry the Second, and producing many worthy Kings in Scotland

Canute, to strengthen his Interest, Marryed Emma Sister to Richard Duke of Normandy, and widow to King Ethelred, and soon got possession of the Kingdom of Norway, which has ever since been annexed to the Crown of Denmark; then Warring on the Scots, he made them Tributaries, so that some reckon him to be the possession of Four Kingdoms; he made a strict League with the Normans, and set out a huge Navy to Sea, bringing thereby a Terror on all the Neighbouring Sea Coasts, laying a Tax of 82000 Pounds on his English Subjects; with which Money, at the perswasion of Queen Emma, he pay'd off and sent away the greater part of the Lazy Danes to their Native Country, which won him much savour with the English; Then he set himself to the contriving and establishing wholsom

Laws for the better settlement of his Kingdom; and for the more firmly founding them, he called a Parliament at Oxford.

He is commended for his aversion to Dissemblers. Traitors, and Flatterers, for one of the latter having told him He was Soveraign King not only of the Land but the Sea, and not only his People but the Winds and Waves were subject to his Command; to disprove and upbraid the Paralite, being at Southampton he caused his Chair to be placed on the Sand, and Commanded the Sea that it should not swell to wet his Royal Robes; but the Waves Rowling towards the Shoar, in their wonted Flowings, Dashed him up to the Thighs, whereupon rising hastily, he faid to his Attendants, Now you fee all the Might and Power of Kings is but Vanity, for none is worthy to have the Name of King, but he that hath all things subject to bis Laws; and from that time, as several Authors affirm, he not only Banished all Flatterers from the Court, but refused to wear his Crown.

In the Third Year of his Reign with a great Navy he Sailed to Denmark, that Country being then Invaded by the Vandalls, who had over-run the larger part of Germany, and overthrowing them in a bloody Battel. Slaying their chief Leaders, he chased the rest out of his Kingdom, and causes Castles and Forts to be Builded on the Frontiers, to secure it against their Incursions. And so returning with Victory, he was received at London in Triumph, and having fettled his Affairs in a flourishing condition, the Kingdom thereby much recovered its Antient Renown, and he having received the Christian Faith, a considerable time before, hearing of the Magnificence of Rome, and desirous to see its Itately Structures, the manner of their Living, &c. went thither, not Royally Attended, but as a Pilgrim; where nevertheless being known, he was received with great great respect, and having given liberally to that See. after he had vilited all the places of note in that Superb City, once Mistriss of the World, he returned highly fatisfied with the Undertaking; causing the Ruined Churches to be Repaired, and Founded divers Religious Houses, giving great Priviledges to the Monastery of St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, which he had re-Edified, and then taking a Progress to restore the Face of Justice in the several Counties, punishing the corrupt Ministers and Oppressors, worn out with the Toiles of War and Indefatigable Study, in fettling his new acquired Kingdom, he fell Sick on the Road some Miles from Shaftsbury, and being conveyed to that Town, in a short time he paid the debt by Nature due from all that are cloathed with Mortality, Dying Anno Dom. 1036, when he had Reigned 18 Years; and tho' the First of the Danish, yet is accounted the 16th Sole Monarch of England.

Remarks on Huntingtonihire, &c.

H Untingtonshire, is as the former, an Inland County, Rounded by Northamptonshire, Bedfordshire, and Cambridgshire; It produces store of Wooll, Cattle, Corn, and many fertil Pastures; it is somewhat Woody, the incumbered with sew Hills of any considerable height, it has many small Streams abounding with Roach, Dace, Chub, Trouts, Carp and Pike, and abundance of Wild Fowle resorts to its Meers and Marshy Places; it contains divers Parks of Deer, and some Warrens, also Quarries of Stone. It is divided into 4 Hundreds, containing 79 Parishes, 6 Market Towns, and 2 Rivers. It sends Members to Parliament 4, viz. Huntington 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Huntington is a very pleasant Town, giving denomination to the Shire, standing on the Ouse, over which Liver

tic

it has a commodious Bridge. It gives a fair Prospect into the Country, and has a great trading Market, and is adorned with Buildings of Antiquity: And of this Place Robin Hood, the famous Outlaw, is said to be Earl, in the Reign of King Richard the First.

St. Ives is situate on the same stream, with many other pleasant Towns, and Villages. Here was Born Roger, thence Sirnamed St. Ives; at Cunington the learned Antiquary Sr. Robert Cotton was Born. And indeed this Shire has produced divers samous Men, as Gregory of Huntington, who Dyed 1610; Henry of Huntington, Renowned for his History of England; William Whittle-seay, Arch Deacon of Huntington; William Ramsey, a samous Poet, and others.

In this County a Lake called Wittlesmeer, in the Fairest Weather grows Tempestuous, and Rages with Surges like the Sea; but in a Storm is much Calmer. The whole County is well Watered, and boasts of many pleasant Vilages.

The Seats of the Nobility are Kimbolton-Castle, a seat of the Earl of Manchester; Hinchingbrook, now a seat of the Earl of Sandwich, but formerly the seat of Sir Oliver Cromwel, Uncle to the late Oliver Cromwel, called Protector of England, who was a Native of this County. Great Gidding, a seat of the Lord Rockingham; Leyghton, a seat of the Earl of Arran. There are likewise to be seen the Ruines of many stately Buildings, as Castles, Monaferies, and the like. It produces a sort of soft Stone, much used in Building in those Parts, and in diging for it, rusty Armour, Arms, and Coin, have been found, denoting some great Battel Fought there in former times.

The Reign of Harrold, Seventeenth Sole Monarch of England, &c.

H Arrold, Sirnamed Harefoot, (from his Swiftness in Runing, Leaping and Vaulting) Succeeded his Father, Crowned Anno Dom. 1036; He was Second Son to Canute, and upon his coming to the Crown was much opposed by Goodwin Earl of Kent a Person very Powerful, and a Politick Intreaguer of those times, to make Factions, &c. But by his liberal Promises, and present Renuntiation of Taxes, he won the Londoners, and Lords on the North fide the Thames to his Party; and having thus far prevailed, he strengthened his Hand by liberally disposing of Gratuities to such as had done him any good offices; he promoted the English to Places of Trust and Honour, sending away more of the Danes; than in doing which, he could lay no greater obligation upon them: For Time, as yet, had not worn out the Mortal Hatred between the two Nations. He took off likewise a good part of the oppressing Tax called Dane-Gelt, which the People not without much discontent had laboured under, especially in the Northern Counties, many Years.

And now Goodwin Earl of Kent, perceiving his Clandestine Practices too weak to enseeble the Kings Interest in his Subjects affections, like a cunning Statesman resolves to struggle no longer against this Tide of Fortune and Success; and thereupon, to make fair with him, entered upon an Inhumane Project, viz. To betray into his Hands Edward and Alfride, Sons to Ithebred and Fmma, Born at Islip by Oxford, but brought up the greater part of their time in Normandy; and so cunningly this Traitor to his Country worked the design, as knowing Harrold by any means was desirous firous to destroy them, as being the rightful Heirs of the Saxon Line, that by specious pretences of Advancement and Honour, and how also herself might much profit by it, and always stand high in the Kings favour, he so dealt with Queen Emma, that won by guilded Flatteries, and not perceiving the Mortal Hook covered with the Tempting Bait, she was easily perswaded to Write to them on this occasion; which being seconded by Goodwin and the King, the Innocent Princes were decoy'd over, and brought as Lambs to the Slaughter; for no fooner had the Dane got them in his power, but contrary to his Promise, he caused Alfride's Eyes to be put out, and yet not so contented, his Belly was opened with a Razor, and one end of his Bowells being fastened to a Post, he was forced about it by the pricking of sharp Ponyards, till he had twisted them out, and fo dyed a miserable death; which is held to have struck Goodwin, the Author of this Mischief, with so great a Remorfe, that he could neither Rest in the Day, nor Sleep in the Night, without hideous and fearful Dreams, till he contributed to the Escape of Edward the other Brother, who luckily got away a finall time before he was to be Murthered by the like, or other as cruel Torments, by which his Brother fell a Sacrifice to Policy of State.

Harrold supposing he had been deseated of the second Game by the contrivance of Queen Emm. (for Goodwin Swore himself unknowing of any thing relating to it) determined to put her to death; but cooling a little on his rash Decree, and considering she was near Allyed to a Powerful Prince, his Neighbour, and had been Wife to two Kings, the last of them being his Father, he changed the Sentence into one somewhat less severe: For first he seized on all her Treasure and Possessions, which were very considerable; and that not being thought a sufficient Punishment, he Banished her in a manner Naked; so that under such a disgrace, and in that poor condition, being ashamed to go into Normandy, her own Country, she got leave to pass the Seas for Flanders, where she was received Honourably by the Earl of that Province, and there she continued, for the most part, till the Danish Succession failed, and her Son Edward, afterward called the Confessor, was Invited over to take upon him the Crown.

M 3

not

Soon after this Harrold fell Sick at Oxford, and there Dyed, when he had Reigned Four Years: He was the Seventeenth Sole Monarch of England, and Second of the Danish Line, and Reigned Four Years, being first Buried at Westminster, and after held to be removed to St. Clements Danes, without Temple-Barr.

Remarks on Herefoldhire, &c.

Herefordshire is famed for abundance of Fruit-Trees, producing great quantities of Cider, and other wholsom Liquors; Its Wooll is held to be the finest in England, especially from those numerous flocks of Sheep that seed on the pleasant Hills about Lempster. It also yields abundance of Cheese, Butter, Swine, and all necessary Provisions for the support of Mars Life; and has some considerable Forrests and Woods. It is Rounded with Shropshire, Worcestershire, Glocestershire, Monmouthshire, Radnorshire and Brecknockshire; It gives denomination to a Hishoprick, the Diocess containing this County and part of Shropshire; It is divided into 11 Hundreds, containing 176 Parishes, Market-Towns, and 13 Rivers; and sends & Members to Parliament, viz. Enights of the Shire 2, Hereford 2, Lempster 2, and Weobley 2.

The City of Heveford is noted for its Cathedral of Antiest but Curious Building: it gade Birth to Adam D' Orleton

North SHROPSHIRE HEREFORD OF SHIRE Ludlow Lantwardone Brompton 2 2 2 Clion PART Lee Orleton PART Prestayne Dockley Sumber & WORCE S= Menbury Mathern Pembrudge 1 More Bishforme Brownood Bearley of Shydey C. Forne RADNOR Wormfly o Withinton Crokell Stanton & Shelmack SHIRE Freston a Mady & Calor Tereford Monynton Sellek . Ross Hope Mancell
Walford GLOCLSTER BREKNOK SHIRE English Miles SHIRE MOUTH SH Monmouth

7772

tle,

Orleton Bishop of Hereford, and Roger of Hereford, a learned Astrologian; Bradwarden-Castle gave Birth to Thomas D' Bradwardine Arch Bishop of Canterbury; also to John Guillim, a famous Herald, whose Systeme of Heraldry is accounted the best on that subject. This County gave Birth to the Renowned Robert Devereux Earl of

Essex, who lost his Head in Queen Elizabeths Reign. The next Towns of note are Stanton, Lempster, Weobly, Ludbury, Rosse, Orleton, Pembridg and Wormbridg.

Marsley-Hill in this County is Celebrated by all Writers for its wonderful Travel, on Saturday the 7th of February, 1571. which was indeed exceeding strange and surprizing, and must not be here omitted: It happened thus, About six of the Clock in the Evening the Earth began to move, with a mighty rooring and bellowing Noise, which was heard several Miles off, and then it listed it self up a great height, and began to Travel; carrying along with it the Trees that grew upon it, the Sheepfolds and Flocks of Sheep continuing still thereon, and from the place whereon it first stood, by seven a Clock the next Morning, had gone about 200 Foot, and so continued its Travel three Days together, and then stood still; in its passage it overthrew Kinnaston-Chappel. and removed an Yew-Tree growing in the Church-Yard from West to East; throwing down also several Houses, Trees and Hedges: But that which adds more to the wonder is, That two High-ways were turned about 300 Foot from their former Pathes, the East part to the West, and the West to the East, Pasturage being left in the place of Tillage, and likewise Tillage in the place of Pasturage.

As for the Seats of the Nobility, tho' not many, they are mostly of curious Antient Building, viz. Goodrick-Castle, Penyard Castle, and Eccleswald-Castle, belonging to the

Penyard-Castle, and Eccleswald-Castle, belonging to the Earl of Kent; Wilton, Aconsbury, and Dewswell, belonging to the Lord Chandois; and Hereford Palace, belonging to the Bishop of the Diocess. There are divers

Quarries

Quarries of Stone found in this County, which stand the People in great stead; also some Minerals; much Fuel is likewise got out of the Ground.

The Reign of Hardicanute, the Third Danish King, and Eightcenth Sole Monarch of England.

Ardicanute, the Third Son of Canute, by a different Mother, viz. Emma, Succeeded Harrold, Anno Dom. 1040: He was Crowned at London by Elnoch Arch Bishop of Canterbury; upon which he laboured to settle his Affairs at home and abroad, kept the Seas free from Pirates, that for some time before had infested the Coast, causing the Danes and Normegians to build divers Ships for his Service; but being of a rough and uneafy temper, he was not very pleating to his Subjects: He bore a Mortal Hatred to Harrold his Brother-in-Law, and not being capable of expressing it to any effect during his Life, he showed it openly after his Death; causing his dead Body to be taken out of the Sepulcher in which it had lain a confiderable time, and the Head to be cut off, and then thrown into the Thames, sunk with a great weight of Lead; but some Fishermen draging it up with their Nets a while after, decently Buried it in St. Clements Church in the Strand; for which reason some will have it to take the additinal word Danes, as it is now called.

This Hardivance is accounted among the Voluptuous Kings, taking great pleasure in Banqueting, and often gloried he could Eat more at a Meal, than any of his Subjects; his Table was four times a Day spread with all manner of Delicates that Sea or Land afforded; by which riotous manner of living he greatly wasted his Treasure, and set an example to his Nobles to do the like; so that the Court being Impoverished, confults were held to raise an exacting Tax on the Commons, which was chiefly counselled by Goodwin Earl of Kent, whereby he fell into the hatred of the People, and went Guarded a long time after, to prevent their sury: The Sum raised was 32147 Pounds, a great Tax in those days, and grievously exasperated the People, because it was exacted with rigor; insomuch that at Worcester they made an Insurrection, and slew two of the Collectors; which so highly offended the King, that he not only caused divers of the Mutineers to be Executed, but laid the City in a heap of Rubbish by Fire, so that the Innocent suffered among the Guilty; which caused other Insurrections, but they were presently quieted, and many slain.

With part of this Money the clamouring Scamen were paid off, and thereupon a great part of the Fleet laid up, and then the King pursued his former pleasures; whereupon the Scots much wasted the Northern Borders; but being overthrown in a great Battel on the bank of the Tweed, near to Barwick, they were compelled to sue for Peace; which they could not obtain, till they had made considerable restitution for the dammage they had done in the English Counties. About the latter end of this Kings Reign a terrible Blazing Star appeared for Three Weeks; The Sun at noon day seemed of the colour of Blood, strange and amazing Voices were heard, supposed to proceed out of the Air, and many other Prodigies are said to have happened.

When he had Reigned about two Years, being Invited to a Noblemans Wedding, held at Lambeth in Surry, situate on the South side the Thames, he there Eat and Drank so unmeasurably, that he immediatly Sickned, and being carried from the Table, sell into a grievous Surseit, and not admiting his Physitians to Bleed him, which they advised as the only Remedy for his Recovery, he soon after Dyed; and leaving no Issue behind him, with him dyed the Danish Monarchy in England; and it devolved again on the Sakons: For Edward, the Seventh Son of Ethelred by Queen Emma, having escaped many dangers, was sent for upon the Death of Hardicanute from Normandy, (whither he had retired to save his Life upon the Death of his Brother Alfride) and Proclaimed King.

Bleed

Remarks on the County of Kent, &c.

K Ent is a very large and spacious County, and advantagiously seated, being almost wholly invironed with the Sea, except its Western parts, which borders upon Surry and Suffex: Besides the Thames, which parts it Northward from Essex, its principal Rivers are Medway, the Rother, and the Stowr. It abounds in Fruits, Corn, fat Pastures, and exceeding profitable Marshes, for the feeding of Cattle, which are bought up Lean from other Counties, and sent thither to be made Fat: It produces particularly the greatest quantity of Cherries of any County in England, &c. It is divided into 67 Hundreds containing 408 Parishes, 2 Cities, viz. Canterbury and Rochester, the former being an Archiepiscopal See, having the Primacy of all England; the latter is likewise a Bishops See: It has likewise 31 Market Towns, and 4 Rivers more than before mentioned,among which Lewisham River is famous for the large store of Fish found in it, its Stream carrying about several Mills. It sends Members to Parliament 10, viz. Canterbury 2, Maidston 2, Queenbourough 2, Rochester 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire. Besides which, 3 of the Cinque Ports being in this County, viz. Dover, Rumney and Sandwich, do each of them send two Barons up to the Parliament, called Barons of the Cinque Ports. Cantlirbury Bleed I for his Issue be in Engle Edward having Death i retired

Alfride

R

KEnt Sea, es Sussex from 1 and tk and es which thithe quanti divide Cities. an Al the L Mark mong of Fil It se Maid

Knig

being do eat Baro

Canterbury is by some Authors said to have been Built 900 Years before the birth of our Saviour; it was given by Ethelbert the Saxon King of Kent to Austin the Monk and his Companions, and in their time the Cathedral was Founded, in which Eight Kings of Kent lie Buryed. It suffered greatly by the Fury of the Danes, especially in the Reign of Ethelred, when 4200 of its Inhabitants were slain. Here King John and his Queen Isabela were Crowned; King Henry the Third and King Edward the First Married: Edward the Black Prince, Henry the Fourth, and Queen Joan, were Interred here; and the Cathedral was long famous in Superstitious times for Pilgrimages made to visit the Shrine of St. Thomas of Becket (a Popish Saint and Martyr) slain at the Altar in the Reign of Henry the Second.

Rochester, formerly called Rosschester, as Builded by one Ross, Lord thereof, is a very pleasant City; it was destroyed by the Danes, and suffered much after Rebuilding by two dreadful Fires in the Reigns of King Henry the First and King Henry the Second; it basin it many fair Churches, and leading to it a curious Arched Bridge of Stone.

Maidstone a flourishing Town, situate on the Medway, for a meer Town, is reputed the handsomest, and best of Trade, in all the County.

Feversham is of great Antiquity, very pleasant and commodious in its situation; in it King Stephen and Queen Mand were Buried.

Dover is renowned for its Castle, said to be Built by Julius Cæsar at his second Landing: Queenborough Castle was Built by Edward the Third. At Wye J. Kemp the learned Arch Bishop of Canterbury was Born. Greenwich is samous for its Park, and stately Palace; and near it is the New Hospital founded for Decayed Merchants: Horstead took its Name from Horsus one of the first Saxon Inveders.

Tunbridge

Tunbridge is famous for its Medicinal Waters, and the great refort to its Wells. The Seats of the Nobility are Knobl, belonging to the Earl of Dorset; Penhurst, to the Earl of Leicester; Bocton-Malberb, to the Earl of Chesterfield; Hoathfield and Sylom, to the Earl of Thanet; Chenvening, to the Earl of Sussex; Lingstead Lodg, to the Lord Tenham; Leeds-Castle and Grenway-Court, to the Lord Culpeper; Alington-Castle and Maidstone Place, to the Lord Astly; Bromly-House, the Bishop of Rochesters seat.

CHAP. X.

The Saxons Re-Entry upon the failure of Succession in the Danes; and what happened during the Reign of those Kings, till the Conquest made of England by William the Norman Conqueror.

The Reign of Edward, called the Confessor, Nineteenth Sole Monarch of England.

E Dward, commonly stiled the Confessor, being arrived in England, was received by the People with great demonstrations of Joy; and that Flattering Earl of Kens possessed him that he was the chief Instrument of his Restauration; tho' indeed, like a stanch Courtier, he Sailed with all Winds, usually adhering to him who was most powerful; for certain it is that Leofrick the Earl of Chester moved the Estates on Edwards behalf, urging his Right to the Crawn, as being the true Heir descended from the Antient Saxon Kings, under whom the

the Nation had enjoyed its Rights and Priviledges, without Infringments or Invalion: He urged his Fathers Merits, and the Battels he had Fought against the Danes, in the defence of the English Nation; and many other things. So that they generally concuring with him, Edward was Accepted and Crowned at Winchestor, by Edsine Arch Bishop of Canterbury; yet Goodwin so far infinuated into his favour, that he took Edith his Daughter to Wise, a very virtuous Lady, much affecting a Religious Life, so that Ingultus Abbot of Crowland, who shourished in her time, makes a large Encomium on her Learning, Wisson, Humility, Modestry, and Behaviour.

In the beginning of this Kings Reign new Troubles arose, the Danes, Irish and Welsh, in a manner all at once, Invading the Kingdom, doing great Mischief, and destroying all before them with Fire and Sword: but being met by Aifred, the Martial Bishop of Worcester, he gave them a great Overthrow. In the fifth Year of his Reign there fell fo great a Snow in January, that covering the Ground, and being of a prodigious deepness, and continuing so till the middle of March, much Cattle and Fool perished for want of Food. And the January following, a terrible Earthquake happened, cauting the Ground to Open in divers places, overthrowing many stately Buildings, destroying much People and Cattle; also at the same time such fearful Lightnings happened, That the new fprung Corn was Burnt up, whereupon a Dearth enfued, and many dyed of Hunger.

Malcolm, the true Heir to the Crown of Scotland, flying into England to avoid the Fury of Mackbeth, (a Bloody Tyrant, who had flain the King, and Usurped the Kingdom) Edward aided him with 10000 Men under the Leading of Syward Earl of Northumberland, who

by

by the Mothers fide was Grandfather to the Young Prince, who Besieging Mackbeth in his Caftle of Dunsinane, and he attempting to Escape, was slain by Mackduff, Sheriff of Fife, whose Wife and Children Mackbeth had cruelly Murthered; and foon after, by the Valour of the English, Malcolme (Sirnamed Conmer) was placed in the Scots Throne, making a strict League with King Edward, and paying him 10000 Marks for the charge of the War.

After this he Banished Goodwin and his five Sons. for being Turbulent in the Government, and endeavoring to raise Commotions; but about two Years after, they were Recalled, and received into Favour; and Goodwin being one day at Dinner with the King, the Cupbearer coming in, got a slip, and had like to have spilt the Wine; but as one Legg failed, he recovered with the other, and faved both the Wine and his Credit; whereupon the Earl of Kent Jestingly said, I se one Brother hath belped the other: This suddainly puting the King in mind how by his Treachery his Brother Alfride was ilain by Harrold the Dane, In a heat replied, And so would my Brother Alfride have helped me, if Good. win had not been: The Earl perceiving the Kings anger, which he little expected at that time, thinking to excuse himself of so notorious a crime, took a piece of Bread, and wished it might Choak him, if he were any ways concerned in Betraying the Prince into the hands of Harrold; and accordingly his Wish was answered, for putting it into his Mouth it stuck in his Throat fo that it could not be got upwards nor downwards, by which means he was Suffocated and Dyed before he could be well removed from the Table; which I the rather remark, That it may stand as a dreadful warning to all the Rash Imprecators or Evil Wishers of our Age, being a Sin too often practifed on trivial occasions, apt to fear frequently as false in many matters the Earl of Kents, which pulled down Gods ate Judgment upon him, and hastily snatched of the World. The King foon after this falling pleasure with Queen Emma his Mother, abridgof her Dowry, and got her accused of Adultery; y the Law then called Ordealium she was Tryed following manner:

Eyes were blinded with a thick Veil, and nine res newly taken out of the Fire, laid a Yard e from each other, in an even row, over which s to pass for her Purgation; and if she did it t touching any of them, she was to be adjudged is; so being led by a Priest, her Feet being e passed over, missing every one of them; which done, and she not knowing it, Cryed out, O ben shall I come to the place of my Purgation? she her Eyes uncovered and perceiving the had pafdanger, she fell on her Knees, and gave thanks for her deliverance. This King is likwife ed to be over severe to his Virtuous Wife who being wrongfully accused of Incontinency. prisoned, and at last confined to a Religious the Monastery of Wilton. In this Kings Reign ng Star appeared, and was feen for feven Nights Europe. The Abby of St. Peter's Westminster. d in a place formerly called the Isle of Thorns. autified and much Enlarged by him; he remov-Bishops See from Credington in Devonshire to in the same County; and was the first of our Kings that is faid to have The Gift conferred upon Curing the Disease called Struma, now the Kings-And the first also that sealed his Patents with tely Seal now called The Kings Great Seal. He ed the remainder of the Tax called Dane Gelt; moved by the Mothers side was Grandfather to the Prince, who Besieging Mackbeth in his Caftle sinane, and he attempting to Escape, was slain by duff, Sheriff of Fife, whose Wife and Children M had cruelly Murthered; and foon after, by the of the English, Malcolme (Sirnamed Conmer) was in the Scots Throne, making a strict League with Edward, and paying him 10000 Marks for the of the War.

After this he Banished Goodwin and his five for being Turbulent in the Government, and end ing to raise Commotions; but about two Years they were Recalled, and received into Favour Goodwin being one day at Dinner with the Kir Cupbearer coming in, got a slip, and had like t spilt the Wine; but as one Legg failed, he rec with the other, and faved both the Wine and h dit; whereupon the Earl of Kent Jestingly said one Brother hath belped the other: This fuddain! ing the King in mind how by his Treachery his B Alfride was flain by Harrold the Dane, In a heat r And so would my Brother Alfride have helped me, if win had not been: The Earl perceiving the Kings which he little expected at that time, thinking cuse himself of so notorious a crime, took a p Bread, and wished it might Choak him, if he we ways concerned in Betraying the Prince into the of Harrold; and accordingly his Wish was ansi for putting it into his Mouth it stuck in his Thi that it could not be got upwards nor downward which means he was Suffocated and Dyed befe could be well removed from the Table; which rather remark, That it may stand as a dreadful w to all the Rash Imprecators or Evil Wishers of our being a Sin too often practifed on trivial occ and I am apt to fear frequently as false in many matters as this of the Earl of Kents, which pulled down Gods immediate Judgment upon him, and hastily snatched him out of the World. The King foon after this falling into displeasure with Queen Emma his Mother, abridged her of her Dowry, and got her accused of Adultery; when by the Law then called Ordealium the was Tryed

in the following manner:

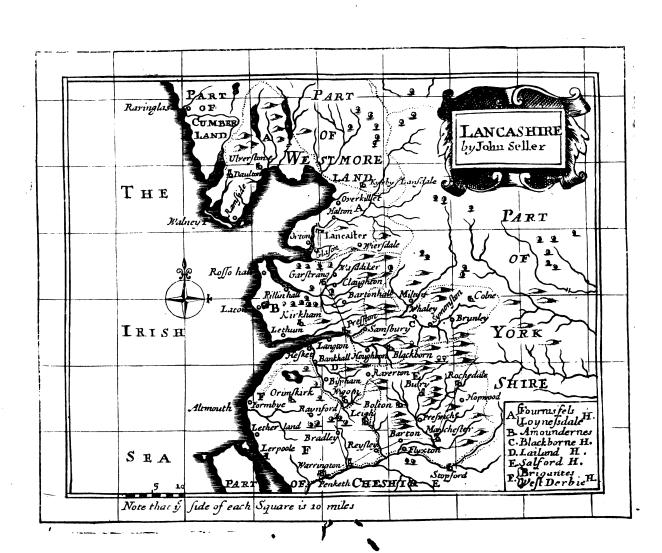

Her Eyes were blinded with a thick Veil, and nine Plonshares newly taken out of the Fire, laid a Yard distance from each other, in an even row, over which she was to pass for her Purgation; and if she did it without touching any of them, she was to be adjudged Guiltless; so being led by a Priest, her Feet being bare, the passed over, missing every one of them; which being done, and she not knowing it, Cryed out, O Lord when shall I come to the place of my Purgation? she having her Eyes uncovered and perceiving the had paffed the danger, she fell on her Knees, and gave thanks to God for her deliverance. This King is likwife accounted to be over fevere to his Virtuous Wife Edith, who being wrongfully accused of Incontinency, was Imprisoned, and at last confined to a Religious Life, in the Monastery of Wilton. In this Kings Reign a Blazing Star appeared, and was feen for feven Nights all over Europe. The Abby of St. Peter's Westminster. founded in a place formerly called the Isle of Thorns. was Beautified and much Enlarged by him; he removed the Bishops See from Credington in Devonshire to Exeter in the same County; and was the first of our English Kings that is said to have The Gift conferred upon bim of Curing the Disease called Struma, now the Kings-Evil: And the first also that sealed his Patents with that stately Seal now called The Kings Great Seal, He remitted the remainder of the Tax called Dane Gelt; moved moved to it, as some say, upon seeing a fearful Apparition dancing about a heap of Money in his Closet, that had been exacted from the People under that denomination; and towards the close of his Reign he collected all the useful Laws made by his Predecessors, into one Body, and out of them compiled a select Body of Law, held at this day to be the Ground of our Common Law.

This Edward, Seventh Son to Etbelred by Emma his Second Wife, was Born at Islip in Oxfordshire, and brought up to a great degree of Learning, which he improved in his Banishment. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 1042, and Reigned Twenty Years, Six Months, and Twenty Seven Days, Dying the Fourth of January of a lingering Fever, and was Buried in Westminster Abby, where in the second Year of the Reign of the Late King James, one of the Choristers searching his Tomb, found a plain Golden Crucisix, Inscribed to be this Kings, and delivered it into the Hands of the said King James; who esteemed it as an extraordinary Relick, by reason this Edward (after his Death) was Canonized a Saint at Rome, tho' for what Extraordinary Vertues I know not.

Remarks on the County Palatine of Lancaster, &c.

Ancashire was settled as a Palatinate or Dutchy upon John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, by King Edward the Third, and continues in many particulars unaltered to this day (tho it is annexed to the Crown) keeping a Dutchy Court, and Trying niest Causes within it self. It abounds in Corn, pleasant Woods, Parks, and Forrests; and produces great store of large Cattle and Wooll. It is Bounded with Westmorland, the Irish Sea, Cheshire, and Yorkshire; having many commodious Ports and Havens: And is divided into Six Hundreds, containing 62 Parishes, 27 Market Townes and 6 Rivers: It sends Members to Parliament 14, viz Clithero 2, Lancaster 2, Liverpool 2, Newton 2, Preston 2, Wigan 2, and two Knights of the Shire.

Lancaster, the Shire Town, is Commodiously Situate on the South Banks of the River Lon, from whence it might probably take the Name of Loncaster, and now by corruption Lancaster: It has a Curious Bridge Leading to it, and in it a samous Church. It gave Title (from John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster) to four Henries, Kings of England, viz. 4th 5th 6th and 7th: It is a place of great Antiquity, Considerable Trade, Pleasant Building, and has a stately Castle.

Manchester, the Antient Mancunium of the Romans, was highly prized by them, where the Ruins of their Forts and Works are found in the digging of Foundacions. Ribchester taks it's Name from Rible a little Brook near Clithero; it is a Town of great Antiquity, and was a station of the Romans, as appears by their Coins and Statues that have been digg'd up there, and Tradition Reports it to have been once the Richest Town in Christendom: Near Onglas, a small Brook, not far from the Town of Wiggan, King Arthur put the Saxons to the Rout with great Slaughter; at Belango the Saxons Fought a mortal Battel with each other.

Near Furness-Fells in this County, is a standing Water, accounted the greatest in England, called Minander-Meer; being 10 Miles in Length, and all along paved at the bottom with slat Stone; and it is said a Fish called a Chare is found here and in no other Waters. Also the the River Lune near Cockersand-Abby, abounds with Trout, Pike, and some Salmon. In this County is the Antiently Famous Castle called Hornby Castle, Induring many Sieges. There are scatered up and down in Lancashire divers Quarries of useful Stone for Building, and some Mineralls; upon its Hills are many pleasant Springs and Rivers, and some places naturally abound with Wall Thime, Marjorum and Cardus, and many other Physical Flerbs.

The Seats of the Nobility give a graiful Prospect to the Travellers, and are Clithero Chile, belonging to the late Duke of Albamaric; Alburn Tower, to the Earl of Derby; Halfal to the Earl of Macclesfield; Hornby Castle, to the Lord Morley and Mount-Eagle; Woodacre Hall, Ashton Hall, and Shorton Hall, to the Lad Gerard of Gerards Bromley, Wigan the Bishop of Chefters Place; bifiles divers Seats of the Gentry, as famous in Prespect, for most part, as those mentioned; and to conclude, it has produced many famous Men, ferviceable in Church and State.

The Rosa of Harvold, Twentieth Sole Monarch of England.

King I drawd Dying Islueles, the Edgar Etheling was the next Hen to the Grown, yet Harrold (Son to Goodwin Land of Kent, by his Wife Sitha, Sifter to Swain the Younger, King of Denmark) having Ingratiated himfelf into the Favour of the leading Nobility, and promised great advantages to the Commons, he fo firm-Iv bound them to him, that he procured himself to be Froclaimed King, beginning his Reign Anno Dom. 1065; and according to his promife he remitted to the People many grievous Taxes, making them every where catie in their flations, and then was Crowned by Aldred Arch Bishop of Tork, confirming the Laws of Edward the Confussion, and adding some of his own, and laboured Territories, which were sufficiently large enough for any Prince. to make his bad Title appear more fair in the Eyes of his Subjects by heaping on them what favours they defired, as fearing a storm from the Norman Coast, which foon after happened, to his destruction; the cause of it being reported by Historians three several ways,

of ENGLAND.

I. That Edward had configned his Grown to William the Seventh Duke of Normandy, to be holden by him after his Death.

2. That Young Edgar, the true Heir, to whom he was great Unkle, had refigned his Right to him, as being too weak to contend for the possession.

3. That Harrold in King Edwards life-time Hawking on the Coast of Sussex, the Hawk when he was cast off flew into the Sea; whereupon getting into a Skiff in hopes to recover him, a Storm arose, and he was driven on the Coast of Normandy; where Landing, and being taken Prisoner, he was known and presented to the Duke, who caused him to be kept with a strict Guard, till fuch time as he Swore, That if King Edward Dyed Issueless, he would do his utmost endeavour to secure the Kingdom to the use and behoof of him the before named Duke; and thereupon he procuring his Liberty. returned to England.

However having got the Crown on his Head, he held it too precious a lewel fo lightly to part withal; fo that when the Duke of Normandy sent to demand it. putting him in mind of his Oaths and Promifes, he Reply'd, That what was extorted from him in his extremity was not Binding; besides, the Nobility and Commonalty of his Realm would not confent to his delivering it up to a Stranger, as having had sad Experience of the great Mischiefs that had and must consequently again ensue; and finally what he demanded of him was not in his power to grant, and therefore prayed him to rest satisfied with his own

This Answer made the Duke storm, and resolve to hazard all, rather than miss of his aim; whereupon

felling  $N_2$

felling his Jewells and Plate, he Levved Men in France, Smitzerland, Germany, &c. And the Pope Strictly forbid him to moleft England, under pain of Excommunication, he took no regard of his Menaces, but encreated his Shipping, and fent to Norway and those parts from whence the Normans originally descended, to flir them up by Landing in the North, in favour of his Invalion on the South parts of England; and so in order to it continued his Levys, making a League with the French King, That he should not Invade his Country in his Absence. However Harrold, having notice of his proceedings, raifes a great Army, which was not long Idle: For Tojo, Brother to Harrold, upon fome displeasure flying to Denmark, forwarded the Norman Dukes Negotiation, fo that with a confiderable Army they Landed at kieball upon Ouje in Yorkshire, and fell to Eurning and Plundering; whereupon the King Marched his Army towards them, who were Advanced to Stamford Bridge, built over the River Derment; upon which Bridge he was flopped with his whole Army by a Single Dane of Monffrous Size, who flew Forty of his Men who adventured to remove him, and had in all likelyhood prevented his palling at that time over the Bridge, had not a Souldier Rowed witha Boat under it, and run up his Spear through a crevise into the Danes Body, whereupon he fell down' Dead, and the King hashed with his Army over the Bodies of the flain and failing upon the Danes and Norwegians made of them an incredible flaughter, flaying Tofo his Brother, and Harfager King of Denmark and Normay, Olave the Son of Harfager, and Paul Earl of Orkney were taken Prisoners, who begging their Lives, were fuffered to depart with the rest of the Prisoners, having only 20 of their 300 Ships left, to carry them (with the world News) into Denmark, the rest being broken broken on the Rocks by a mighty Storm the day before the Battel happened.

These Troubles were no sooner over, and the Northern parts a little settled, but News came posting to the King that Duke William of Normandy was Landed at Pevensey in Sussex, on the Eighth of September, Anno Dom. 1066, who thereupon caused his Ships to be set on fire, that his Souldiers might take Courage to Fight the more desperately, as having no hopes of returning home unless they Conquered; and when he first came on Shoar, his Foot stuck fast in the Sand, so that he fell on his Hands, and being perceived by a Knight to bring up a handfull of Earth when he rise, he taid Now Sir Duke, England sticks fast to you, and is your own, since you have taken Livery and Seizen, doubt not but presently to be King thereof.

By this Time King Harrold was hastily returned to London, whither the Norman Duke sent a Message to him, to demand a peaceable furrender of the Kingdom. for sparing the lives of the People: But this Mellenger was difinisfed with Threats, and both Armies advanced towards each other; and on a fair Plain in Suffex, called (from the enfuing Fight) Battel-Field, the Normans pitched their Tents, to expect the King, who was about feven Miles from them; and some of the Spies he sent, being taken, Duke William caused them to be carried from Tent to Tent, and plentifully Feasted; after which, he dismissed them: So the next Morning both Armies came in light of each other, and drew up in Battel Array, where a fecond time the Duke fent a Monk to the King, to demand a peaceable furrender of the Kingdom, or otherwise (for avoiding the effusion of much Blood) to try it by single Combate; or else to hold the Kingdom as his Tributary. But Harrold would agree to neither of these; returning for

 $N_3$

Answer,

Answer, That more Swords than one should decide the Con. troverse: So that the next day being the 14th of Olloker Anno Dom. 1066, no agreement being in likelyhood to be made between them, it was refolved it should be tried by the Sword, and so both Armies being Marshalled for the Battel, the Trumpet sounded the Bloody Blast, and the Kentish-men (who claimed it as their Right to Lead the Van-Guard) fell on furiously, beating down the Normans, and putting their Advanced Parties to the Rout, keeping close together in thick Ranks, and wedging into the Enemies Squadrons and Battallions, so that a miserable slaughter ensued; tho' on our part, The Normans flew many by shooting their Arrows at random in the Air, which violently falling on the Heads of fuch as were unarmed, entered their Sculk, to that many fe'l Dead, who never struck strock in the Battel; however the Duke (who passed through every part of the Army to give necessary orders) knowing if he loft the day, his Life and Interest went withit, perceiving his Men could not break the thick Phalanxu of the English, he commanded they should feem to faint, and make an orderly Retreat, as if they Fled; which succeeded to his wish, for hereupon the English suppofing it had been a real Flight, diffranked in purfuit of them; whereupon the Normans speedily facing about, broke with great fury into their loofe Array, beating down all before them with their mighty Swords and Bittel-Axes, pouring perpetual showers of Arrows on them; so that akthough the English kept together, and Lought Valliantly about the Kings Standard, yet he being Shot into the Brain with an Arrow, and falling dead, the were so disheartned, that the Standard was taken, the Kings two Brothers, Girth and Leofine, in defence or inflain, with most of the Nobles; and, as credible Authors affirm, 97974 of the Common fort.

196 Anfi trozz North ker 2 to b PART Part 0F trice Henrington No TINGHAM fhall Botte Ford 7 Breden Dunnigto o C. Blaf DARBYRodmell Barfton SHIRE Langer Rigl Kathene Shire Langley . They de la hongration 2 Joueth Whitwick ing. Part Ran Loughboron Prestwold Packington 6 Norman : Charley . Waltham on Batt onc Arr Nelfon Newton on t Cunfton Barlefton 1 Scul Grindon Barkety S ther by Sutton Chern & Kirby Lindley Stapleton Peckleton & A. 1. in th Leice Ster CVO! PART OF ing · Engar Sby Barwell Thurliston So Elfon Everyton B.Bildfdan pen Hinckley on Odeby . of t Strettons Norten Loddington RUTLAND Great Glen Burton overy and WARWICK Hallaton fac( nofi LEICESTER Armesby Clabroke Petlings . Shally langton the SHIRE PART OF NORTHAMPTON Lutter 1 Bietswell bro doy SHIRE Bat the and he l South ing was ind

CICC

The Duke in this Battel had three Horses slain under him, and yet escaped without any hurt; in the place where this Battel was Fought, he afterwards Founded an Abby, which to this day is called Battel-Abby.

After this the small remainder of the Nobles and Clergy consulted what was to be done, but finding their weakness, they concluded to submit to the Conquerer; having Buried the Body of Harrold at Wadbam in Effex, when he had Reigned about Nine Months and Nine Days, and is accounted the Twentieth Sole Monarch of England; whereupon Duke William took possession of the Kingdom.

Remarks on Leicestershire, &c.

Leicestershire is a very fine Inland County, and produces store of large Cattle much Gorn plenty of Fowl, Iruits, Fish, wholsom Passures, &c. It is Bounded by Darbyshire, Notinghamshire, Lincolnshire, Rutlandshire, Northamptonshire, and Warwickshire: It is divided into 6 Hundreds, containing 192 Parishes, 11 Market Towns, and one noted River. It sends Members to Parliament 4, viz. Leicester 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Leicester is pleasantly seated on the River Stower, and well compasted, being the County Town, and a place of considerable Trade; it is of great Antiquity, as held to have been Builded by King Leir, a samous British King, for which cause it was antiently called Leir-Cester.

Lutterworth gave Birth to the famous John Wickliff, who was Parson of it, and the first English Resormer, or Detector of the Errors in the Church of Rome, frequently Writing and Disputing against them, in the Reign of Edward the Third; for which many snares were laid to take his Life, by the Romish Clergy; but he escaped them and Dyed a natural Death, leaving the Candle of Truth Light-N. a. ed.

of ENGLAND.

199

ed, by which John Huss, Jerome of Prague, Luther, and others, took their prospect of a happy Reformation that soon after ensued.

Bosworth is Memorable for the Battel fought near it on Redmore August 22, Anno Dom 1485, wherein Richard the Third was slain by the forces of Henry Earl of Richmond, and his Crown found in a Hawthorn Buft, which was placed on the Farles Head, and he Proclaimed King; which put an End to the fatal Fouds between the Houses of York and Lancaster. In the West of this County once flood Clycester, a famous City in the time of the Romans, called by them Bennone, though now nothing but a few Ruins of it remain. The other Towns of note are Mountforell, Loughborough, Waltham on the Woald, Ashby-de-Ia-Zouch, Bildsdon, Lutterworth, Harborough &c.

At Cole-Overton in the Hundred of West Goscot, and other parts of this County, great flore of Pitcole is digg'd of a Bitumenous Nature, very bard and fast; about Luterworth are Allomey Voins and Wells, whose Waters flyained through them are Medicinal and Petrefying, fo that it is faid they turn Scraw and Sticks into Stone, by reason of their Freeceding Coldness; near Belvoir-Castle on a R et are found Snake Stones, Cockle Stones, and Star Stones.

The Seats of the Nobility are Pleafantly Situate, viz Gererton, one of the feats belonging to the Late Duke of Albemarle; Burbage, to the Earl of Kent; Belvoir-Castle, partly in 1 incolashire, to the Earle of Rutland; Assisting to the Farl of Huntington, Broadgate and Grooby to the Earl of Stamford, Stanton-Boutnell, to the Earle of Cardigan; Ashby-Folville, to the Lord Carriagton. Besides these, there are a great many fine Houses of the Gentry standing fightly to the Fields, and Roads; some Parks, and store of Game, at all proper Seafens.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

An Account of the Norman Original, How they came to be called Normans; With a Description of the Dutchey of Normandy, &c.

B Efore I enter upon the particulars of the Reign of William the First, stilled the Conquerer; I shall take the Method observed upon other Turns and Changes of Government, viz. To give some Account of these New Invaders, who at last laid claim to England by Conquest.

These Normans, so called from the Northern Climes which first produced them, were composed of Normegians, Swedes, and Danes; who finding their Country too fraight for them, betook them to the Seas to feek their Fortunes, and practiced Piracies upon the Coasts of Belgia, Frizia, and England; on the latter of which they Landed under the Leading of Rollo their Duke, and became very troublesom to the English Saxons, between whom there was great Wars: Till at last Rollo Dreaming He sat on the highest Hill in France, and a fleasant Spring Issued out of a Rock on which he laid his Head, running down in many Streams, to which flocked a number of Birds with Red Brests, to Drink the Water, and then flew to fragrant Groves, where they Sung so Melodiously that he was Ravished with their Notes, and beneath this Hill he fancied there lay so pleasant a Country, that the like he had never beheld in his Life. When Waking much pleased with his Dream, he sent for a Monk of Crowland, accounted a great Diviner, telling him his Dream, and demanding the Interpretation of it; who willing (for 200 his Countrys fake) to be rid of fuch troublesom Guests, rold him at an adventure, as is supposed, That the Fates had Decreed bini to fettle his Dominions in one of the most ple fant Countries of France. Which he gave creadit 10, and perceiving England much wasted and impoverished by a tedious War and a Famine that then raged, having exacted fome Aides and Supplies of Money, he Transported his Forces over the Narrow Sea, and Warred five Years with fuch Fury on the French, that fearing to lose all, Charles their King (Sirnamed the Simple) gave him his Daughter Gilla in Marriage; and as her Dowry the Peaceable Possession of what they had already gained by the Sword, which being modeled into a Dutchy, they called Normandy, which Name (through all the changes of that Kingdom) it bears to this day. This Rollo was great Grandfather to Richard the Fifth Duke of Normandy, Elder Brother to Robert, Father to William the Conquerer.

As for a Brief Description of the Dukedom of Normandy, once a Patrimonial Inheritance of the Kings of England, and to which they now have a Right. It is Bounded on the East with the Isles of France, at the River Epta, which passes by the City of Gifors; on the West, with Britany, the Antient Armorica, and a Collony of the Britains, from which it is separated by the River Crenon; Northward by the Sea; on the South, with the Country of Manne; and is divided by the River Seine: Abundantly Rich in Merchandize through the commodiousness of its Havens and Rivers.

The People are the most Subtil, Apt, and Ingenious, of all the French Provinces; yet Affable, Curteous and greatly enclined to Learning: Their Manufacture confifting most in Wooll and Linnen Cloth, the Country producing no Vines capable of making good Wine, unless about Caer, a very pleasant City. The chief City

y is Roan, very famous for many Sieges, as in the lies of History will appear; having an Arch Bishop, ofe Jurisdiction extendeth to the River Oyse; and a liament (till of late, that the French King has affirmassuch a Despotick Power, and much lessened its Au-Prity) was usually held here for the consulting the d of the Province.

The other Cities of note are Auranche, Argences, ncon, Falaise, Fecham, Newbaven, or Haver-de-Grace, Valery, Sileaux, Constance, Manta, St. Michale, and ers Walled Towns, to the number of Eighty. So t when the French (by reason of our Civil Dissens) wrested it from us, they plucked one of the fairlewells out of the English Diadem; which in time may yet hope to regain; especially under the Autious Reign of WILLIAM the Third, our Fent Heroick and Victorious King.

The Reign of WILLIAM the First, Sirnamed the Conquerer.

Fter the Victory obtained at Battel-Field by the Normans over the English, and King Harrold Slain, has been mentioned in the former Chapter, Duke Diam designed for London, yet taking a great coms, waiting as he Marched the Counties of Suffex, it, Surry, Hampshire, and Barkshire; by whose biles he Inriched his Normans. Then croffing the mes at Wallingford, and so in the like manner the unties of Oxford, Buckingham, &c. At Burhamsted made a stop; as being assured by this time, the wish Forces were dispersed, and in no condition to oppose his Countrys fake) to be rid of fuch troublesom Gue rold him at an adventure, as is supposed, That the F. had Decreed bim to fettle his Dominions in one of the n ple: fant Countries of France. Which he gave crea to, and perceiving England much wasted and import ished by a tedious War and a Famine that then ran having exacted fome Aides and Supplies of Money Transported his Forces over the Narrow Sea, Marred five Years with fuch Fury on the French, fearing to lose all, Charles their King (Sirnamed Simple) gave him his Daughter Gilla in Marriage; as her Dowry the Peaceable Possession of what had already gained by the Sword, which being mo ed into a Untchy, they called Normandy, which N (through all the changes of that Kingdom) it bear this day. This Rollo was great Grandfather to Rid the Fifth Dake of Normandy, Elder Brother to Rd Father to William the Conquerer.

As for a Brief Description of the Dukedom of mandy, once a Patrimonial Inheritance of the Kin England, and to which they now have a Right. Bounded on the East with the lifes of France, a River Epta, which passes by the City of Cisors; of West, with Britany, the Antient Armorica, and a Ct of the Britains, from which it is separated by the Riversen; Northward by the Sea; on the South, with Country of Manne; and is divided by the River & Abundantly Rich in Merchandize through the modiousness of its Havens and Rivers.

The People are the most Subtil, Apt, and Ingen of all the French Provinces; yet Assable, Curteous greatly enclined to Learning: Their Manusal consisting most in Wooll and Linnen Cloth, the Ctry producing no Vines capable of making good Wunless about Cher, a very pleasant City. The City is Roan, very famous for many Sieges, as in the Series of History will appear; having an Arch Bishop, whose Jurisdiction extendeth to the River Oyse; and a Parliament (till of late, that the French King has assumed such a Despotick Power, and much lessened its Authority) was usually held here for the consulting the good of the Province.

The other Cities of note are Auranche, Argences, Alancon, Falaife, Fecham, Newhaven, or Haver-de-Grace, St. Valery, Sileaux, Confrance, Manta, St. Michale, and divers Walled Towns, to the number of Eighty. So that when the French (by reason of our Civil Dissentions) wrested it from us, they plucked one of the fairest Jewells out of the English Diadem; which in time we may yet hope to regain; especially under the Auspicious Reign of WILLIAM the Third, our present Heroick and Victorious King.

The Reign of WILLIAM the First, Sirnamed the Conquerer.

A Fter the Victory obtained at Battel-Field by the Normans over the English, and King Harrold Slain, as has been mentioned in the former Chapter, Duke William deligned for London, yet taking a great compass, wasting as he Marched the Counties of Sussex, Kent, Surry, Hampshire, and Barkshire; by whose Spoiles he Inriched his Normans. Then crossing the Thames at Wallingford, and so in the like manner the Counties of Oxford, Buckingham, &c. At Burhamsted he made a stop; as being assured by this time, the English Forces were dispersed, and in no condition to oppose oppose him; and hither repaired Aldred Arch Bishop of York, Wolstan Bishop of Winchester, Walter Bishop of Hereford, The Earls Edwin and Morcar, with Edgar Etheling the True Heir to the Crown, paying Homage and Allegiance to him, and entreating him (seeing it was not in their power to prevent it) That he would take upon him the Administration of the Government, and he Gracious in his Clemency to the People of England. And so passing to London, he was on Christmas-Day, Anno Dom. 1066 Crowned at Westminster by Aldred Arch-Bishop of York.

Being thus fettled in the Throne by the Fortune of a Battel, he studied how to secure the Realm more sirmly to him, as knowing the English submitted not out of any hearty good will; whereupon he Fortissed the Cinque-Ports, laying his claim to the Kingdom by Right of Conquest, as having indeed no other reasonable one to Pretend to. And to secure it, he used the following Policy.

1. He feized the chief Offices both of Honour and Profit, and conferred them on his Normans; and as a Recompense to such others as had Aided him in the War.

2. He made the Natives give Hostages of the best and dearest esteem, to secure their Fidelities, especially fuch as were either Honourable or Potent.

3. To lessen the Authority of the Clergy among the People, he barred them of all Temporal Command or Jurisdiction.

4. He caused the Natives to be Disarmed to prevent Insurrections.

5. He debared them from frequent and common Meetings, especially in the Night, to prevent their confering and Conspiring against him for the Recovery of their common Liberty, causing a Bell to be Rung in every every City, Town, and Village, at Eight in the Evening, whereupon all Englipmen were enjoyed to put out their Fire and Candie, and keep within their Houses, under great Penalties; and this was and is yet called Cover le Feu, the raking up or out of the Fire.

6. To lessen the Nobility, he sent them to his Wars beyond the Seas, not to return without orders; and little or no Praise or Reward was given them, though they Valiantly behaved themselves. The like he did with the Meaner Sort whom he found any ways Active, compelling them from their Wives and Children to Fight Abroad, whilst they Languished at Home for Food, and found little support.

7. As a strong curb, he erected Forts and Castles in sundry places, putting Norm ins as Commanders into them; who grievously Oppressed the People; yet they durst not openly repine against it, because they sound there was no Redress to be had from the King, but their Complaints were charged upon them as Mutinies, and many Punished who privately Murmured at their hard Usage; and finding the Clergy were the Richest, he fell upon them first, taking away the Plate and Ornaments that had been Consecrated to Holy Uses; Alledging That Thieves, Traitors, and Rebels had Lodged them under their Protection, to defraud him of his Forseitures, and secretly to support themselves, to raise a Rebellion when they saw sit opportunity.

8. He caused Laws to be made in the Norman Lenguage, whereupon (though Ignorant of them) many Transgressed, who were for the smallest Offence Imprisoned, and forced to redeem themselves to their undoing; Disallowing the Patents and Grants of former Kings, and publishing them to be meerly void; so that by this he raised great sums for Renewing them; and those that could not raise Money, the Normans and other Strangers had their Honours, Trusts, and Estates, (held in Fee of the Crown) bestowed on them.

and

9. He caused all the Lands to be viewed, Measured, and Taxed at an unusual value; by which means he got great Wealth; but Impoverished the People, as was chiefly intended by it.

10. He Erected many Courts of Judicature for puting in execution his New Laws, and ordered his Judges to follow his Court upon his Removes; by which means he tired out the English Nation with Extraordinary Troubles and Excessive Charges in the profecution of their Suits. And to make an easie way for more French and Normans to come over, if the English should happen to Rebel, he layed the Churches, Towns, and Villages next to the Sea Coast in Hampshire waste, for Sixty Miles in circumferance, under pretence of making a New Forrest for his Pleasure in Hunting, where (as a Judgment for those Dilapidations, and ruining so many Families) William Rufus, his Son and Successor, was flain, as in his Reign will more at large appear. He Seized likwise all the Forrests and Chaces of England into his hands, and made fevere Laws against those that should kill or disturbe his Game. Punishing them with the loss of Eves, Limbs, and the like.

Favorites, who divided them into Farms, for their particular use, and the residue they Leased at Yearly Rents to their Servants, thereby creating Mannors and entituling themselves the Lords of them. He divided the Lands into Hydes, every Hyde containing 20 Acres, Eight of which was a Knights Fee, the Tenures which he reserved were Knights Service in Capite; and those that so held, were enjoyned to do him Service in his Wars; or to his Person, when required, for the personmance of which, he took Oaths of them in Publick Courts;

Courts; and by reason hereof, he disposed of the Bodies of the Heirs in Marriage, as he listed, retained in his Custody and Wardship, and converted to his own use their whole Inheritance, till they accomplished the Agé of 21 Years; and by his Example others of great Possessions did the like; which has in some cases given a bad Example to this day.

Thus have I shewed you (as in a Map) the Model or Description of a rigorous and sharp Government under a Conquering Power; to which low Ebb of Missortunes, it ought to be every Good Mans Wish and Prayer, this shourishing Kingdom may never sink

again. — But to proceed

The Conquerer thinking now he had shackled all secure, undertook a Progress to view Dover, to give orders for Repairing the Castle, and Strengthen more than ever the Sea Coast, to prevent Invasions from the Low Countries, whither many of the English Nobility were fled; and having but a small number with him for his Guard, coming near Canterbury, he was all on a fuddain Surprized by (as he thought) a Walking Wood: For the Kentishmen having notice of his coming, at the perswasion of Stigand Arch Bishop of Canterbury, (2 second Judas Maccabeus for his Countries wellfare) and Eglesine Abbot of St. Austines, had as secretly as they could, made them Weapons, and lay in Ambush for him; which he no fooner entered, but every one cut down a Bough to shelter him from present discovery, burst out of the Woods on either side the straight he was passing, and surrounded his small Train; but whilst the King was in suspence what this unusual thing might fignifie, they all at once threw down their Boughs and stood ready prepared with their Bows, Arrows, and fuch other Weapons as they had for the Encounter; whereupon the Arch Bishop advancing towards hi where they were Joyned by many English, in thereby to regain their Liberties; but the King

ng thither, drove them to their Ships with great hter; and to revenge him on those that had joyn-with them, he wasted the Country from York to wards the Conquerer faid, Behold, most noble King, the Commons of Kent Assembled to demand a Confirmation of their Antient Rights, Laws, and Liberties; the which if you will Grant them, they are willing to Submit, and become your Obedient Subjects; otherwise, in defence of them, they are resolved to venture their dearest Blood, and presently to give vou Battel.

This unexpected Adventure startled the King, that notwithstanding his great Courage, a surprising fear feemed visible in his Countenance; so that pauling a while, he thought it more prudent to yield to Necessity than hazard (after so much expence of Blood and Treasure) his Life and Kingdom on an uncertain Chance and Nicety: Whereupon he signed their demands presented in Writing, and gave them a Solemin Promise to Confirm it to them in a Legal manner; whereupon they threw down their Arms, and Shouted for Joy; so that from his Reign to this day, that County Enjoys the Priviledges they held in Edward the Confessors time, exempted from other Counties, as also those in preceding Reigns.

After this, perceiving the Spirits of the English were not so easily brought under as he supposed, and hearing that Swain King of Denmark was preparing for an Invalion at the Instigation of Goodwin and Ednund, two of King Harrolds Sons, he began to relax in his feverity; and to make fair with the City of London, Granted them this fhort Charter, viz. I William King, Greet William Bishop, and Godfrey Porters and all the Burgesses within London, French and English, and I Grant you that I Will that you Maintain and Enjoy all your Laws as you did in the days of King Edward (meaning the Confessor) and I will that each Child be his Fathers Heir; and further I will that no Man Wrong you, and so

How-

God keep you.

am: fo that for Nine Years the Ground lay waste. h occasioning a Famine, numbers of People Dyed. iter this he Summoned a Convocation of the Clergy, ing them with many faults and failures in their tions, and Duty towards him, for which he Deand Deprived divers Learned and Godly Men eir Dignities, Living and Substance: The two er he bestowed on such as bid most for them, and atter he kept to Maintain his Wars in Normandy, re Troubles were arisen in his Absence; the French uring to recover it, as part of their Antient Terlies. But scarce had he Expelled them ere hasty s recalled him, viz. The Earls Edwin and Morear fet up Edgar Etheling, and raised great Forces were so Formidable to the Conquerer, by reason nglish were generally enclined to favour the Young than he found himself constrained to end the ence by fair means; and to make the common nore ready to embrace it, he Swore to keep Invithe Antient Laws of the Land, particularly of Edward the Confessor; but not long after he from the Abby of St. Albans all the Lands between and London-Stone. d to Strengthen himself he made a League with m King of Scots, who had often publickly, or hand, made Incursions, or raised Commotions in

orthern parts of the Kingdom. And the Bounds

Country were afcertained by rearing a Stone called by the Scots Stain Moor, in Westmarland;

wards the Conquerer said, Behold, most noble King, Commons of Kent Assembled to demand a Consirmation their Antient Rights, Laws, and Liberties; the which if will Grant them, they are willing to Submit, and become y Obedient Subjects; otherwise, in defence of them, they resolved to venture their dearest Blood, and presently to g you Battel.

This unexpected Adventure startled the King, to not with standing his great Courage, a surprising of seemed visible in his Countenance; so that pausing while, he thought it more prudent to yield to Nect ty than hazard (after so much expence of Blood Treasure) his Life and Kingdom on an uncert Chance and Nicety: Whereupon he signed their mands presented in Writing, and gave them a Sole Promise to Consirm it to them in a Legal mannewhereupon they threw down their Arms, and Shou for Joy; so that from his Reign to this day, that Coty Enjoys the Priviledges they held in Edward the Costs fessors time, exempted from other Counties, as those in preceding Reigns.

After this, perceiving the Spirits of the En were not so easily brought under as he supposed, hearing that Swain King of Denmark was prepa for an Invasion at the Instigation of Goodwin and mund, two of King Harrolds Sons, he began to rela his severity; and to make fuir with the City of Lor Granted them this short Charter, viz. I William I Greet William Bishop, and Godfrey Porters and all Burgesses within London, French and English, a Grant you that I Will that you Maintain and Enj your Laws as you did in the days of King Edward (ming the Confessor) and I will that each Child be his Fa Heir; and further I will that no Man Wrong you, a God been you

God keep you.

However the Danes Landed a strong Army in the North; where they were Joyned by many English, in hopes thereby to regain their Liberties; but the King hasting thither, drove them to their Ships with great slaughter; and to revenge him on those that had joyned with them, he wasted the Country from York to Durham; so that for Nine Years the Ground lay waste, which occasioning a Famine, numbers of People Dyed.

After this he Summoned a Convocation of the Clergy, charging them with many faults and failures in their Functions, and Duty towards him, for which he Deposed and Deprived divers Learned and Godly Men of their Dignities, Living and Substance: The two former he bestowed on such as bid most for them, and the latter he kept to Maintain his Wars in Normandy, where Troubles were arisen in his Absence; the French labouring to recover it, as part of their Antient Territories. But scarce had he Expelled them ere hasty News recalled him, viz. The Earls Edwin and Morear had fet up Edgar Etheling, and raised great Forces which were so Formidable to the Conquerer, by reason the English were generally enclined to favour the Young Prince, than he found himself constrained to end the Difference by fair means; and to make the common fort more ready to embrace it, he Swore to keep Inviolable the Antient Laws of the Land, particularly those of Edward the Confessor; but not long after he took from the Abby of St. Albans all the Lands between Barnet and London-Stone.

And to Strengthen himself he made a League with Makedm King of Scots, who had often publickly, or underhand, made Incursions, or raised Commotions in the Northern parts of the Kingdom. And the Bounds of the Country were ascertained by rearing a Stone Cross, talled by the Scots Stain Moon, in Westmorland;

but by the English Roy Cross, or Kings Cross, and soon after the King Sailed again for Normandy; and quelled the Rebellious Normans that were joyned with the French against him, and so returned with Victory (but his Treasure being Exhausted) he to recruit it, Sold to Walcher Bishop of Durham the Earldom of Northumber. land; but he Enjoyed it not long, for Oppressing the People to raife the Money he had disburfed, they rofe in a Tumultuous manner and flew him, Anno 1075: and the enfuing Year a Frost continued without Intermission, from the 12th of November to the 15th of April fo that the Wild Fowl were most destroyed, and many Cattle perished for want of Food: A Blazing Star foon after appeared, whereupon great contentions enfued in Normandy; for Robert the Kings Son, having Ingratiated himself into the Favour of the Feople raised great Forces and in a set Battel Wounded his Father in the Arm, threw him from his Horse, and took it as his Prize, gaining an intire Victory, in which many of the English Nobles lost their Lives: Whereupon the King finding his Army much weakened, was constrained to return for England, and finding the City of London did not much favour him after this Defeat. to lay a curb and awe on them, he rebuilt the Tower of London, drawing a Ditch about it to the largness as it continues to this day, it being before but of inconsiderable Strength, viz. Anno Dom. 1078; and fo a Peace in a short time being concluded between him and his Son Robert, the latter being allowed the nominal Title of Duke of Normandy, and entirely to possess it as a Soveraign Prince after his Fathers Death, he came into England, and was made General against the Scots, who breaking the League wasted the Northern Countries as far as the place then called Moonkchester to whom he gave an entire Defeat, and in memory of the Victory

erected

Name. Not long after this fuch mighty Rains happened. and continued for fo long a time, that divers Hills were so softened into a Quagmire, that they sunk down and overthrew many Cots and some Villages, making as it were a Level. St. Paul's Church was likewise set on Fire in June following; supposed to be done by Lightning, and a great part of it confumed, but soon Rebuilded by the Liberal Contributions of the Clergy and Laity.

from which the Town, so called, on Tine, took its

He held a Synod in London, where some Bishopricks were Translated from one place to another; as Selwy to Chichester, Credington to Exeter, Shirbourn to Salisbury, Dorchester unto Lincoln; and there being a Contention between the two Arch Bishops of Canterbury and York for Primacy, he undertook to determine the difference. appointing Lanfrank Arch Bishop of Canterbury, Primate of all England; and Thomas Arch Bishop of York, only Primate of England; fo that he and his Successors became subordinate to the Archiepiscopal See of Canterbury.

Philip King of France, taking advantage of the Kings Absence from Normandy, encouraged Robert to make himself Absolute Duke, assisting him with Men and Money; whereupon the King was again constrained to pass the Seas with a puissant Army, being over-eager in laying waste the Country; and harassing himself in War, being over-heated, he fell Sick, and hearing that the French King should fay in a Scoffing manner, He lay a long time in Child-Bed; he Replied in a rage, That at his Uprising or Churching, he would Light so many Candles in France, as should Inflame the whole Country: And indeed he made his words good, for upon his recovery, inraged that his Enemies had in his Sickness taken the advantage advantage to waste his Territories, he spoiled all the West parts of France, Firing the City of Nantz, Meux, and a great number of Towns and Villages, Inriching with part of the Spoil the Church of St. Stephen's in Normandy, which was of his own Founding; moreover bequeathing in his last Will his Crown and Regal Ornaments to it, appointing his Body (when he Dyed) to be Buryed therein. And for the Service done in this War, he requited many of his Commanders, who had signalized their Vallour, with possessions in England, to hold them of the Crown; one of which Grants for the Antiquity and plain manner of Conveyance, exempted from the tediousness now in use, I think not amiss to recite, viz.

I William Rive to thee Norman Hunter here. Who art to me both Leef and Dear, The Hop and the Hoptown, And all the Bounds up and down Einder the Earth to Bell, and even Above the Earth to Deaven; From me and mine. To thee and thine, As good and faire. As ever they were. Co Witness that this is Sooth I tite the White War with my Cooth. Before Jug, Maud, and Margery, And imp Poung Son Henry. For a Bow and a broad Arrow, When I come to bunt upon Yarrow.

In the last Year of this Kings Reign, there was found in the Province called Rose in Wales, a Sepulcher of 14 Foot Long, in which was Buried, with much Treasure, Treasure, as the Custom of the Times then were, Gamen one of King Arthurs Knights of his Round Table, and Bones therein of an exceeding bigness.

And now, as all Kings must come at last to the Grave, the Life of this Restless Conquerer grew to a Period; for going over to Quiet new Troubles in Normandy, he had scarcely Accomplished it before he fell Sick of a Malignant Feaver at Caen in Normandy, and after fome Languishings Dyed; and being a corpulent Man, his Belly in a little time Burst, and the Stench being great, none but a few poor Monks would come near him; nor was this all; one Ascalinus Fitz Arthur, a Norman Gentleman, denyed him Burial in St. Stephen's Church, faying, He had Founded it on his Inheritance violently taken away, that it stood upon the Floor of bis Fathers House, and the Body of no Despoiler should be covered in bis Earth; however Henry his Fourth Son, giving a Hundred Pound Weight in Silver as a recompence, he was there Interred, but with little or no Ceremony; fo that he who in his Life time made Nations Tremble. being Dead, was little or nothing regarded.

This William the First, was Son to Robert the Sixth Duke of Normandy, begotten as is said, on a Beautiful Damsel named Arlet, the Daughter of a Tanner, in Honour of whom a Town is called by her Name. He began his Reign over England Anno Dom. 1066, on Saturday the Fourteenth of October, and Reigned Twenty Years, Ten Months and Twenty Six Days, being the 21 Sole Monarch of England.

Remarks on Lincolnshire, &c.

Incolnshire, by reason of its Fens, and other Advantagious Pastures, produces great numbers of small and large Cattle, a good sprinkling of Corn, abundance of Fish and Wild-Fowl, much Wooll and Leather. It is commodicusty on the East Bounded with the German Ocean and part of Norfolk, so that by reason of its Havens it has a great Trade, and very much helped on the North by being Bounded with the River Humber, and part of Yorkshire, on the West with Yorkshire, Notinghamshire, and Leicestershire; on the South, with Northamptonshire and Cambridgshire. It is divided into 30 Hundreds containing one City, a Bishops See, 630 Parishes, 33 Market Towns, and 9 Rivers: It sends Members to Parliament 12, viz. Boston 2, Grantham 2, Grimesby 2, Lincoln City 2, Stamford 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Lincoln was Antiently held to be one of the finest Cities of England, being of great Antiquity, and made by King Edward the Third the chief Mart for Lead, Wooll, and Leather; here was also a great Battel Fought between Randolph Earl of Chester, Robert Earl of Gloucester, and King Stephen; the latter being Overthrown and taken Prisoner. It was Besieged by King Henry the Third, and taken from the Barrons.

Wainfleet was the Birth Place of William Sirnamed thence Wainfleet, who Fleurished in the Reign of Henry the Sixth, being Bishop of Winchester; He Founded here a Free-School, and Magdalen Colledge in Oxford.

Grimsby, an Antient Market Town, is famed as the Birth Place of Doctor Whitgist Arch Bishop of Canterbury, in the Reign of King James the First; Bullingbrook is enabled by the Birth of two Kings, viz. Edward the First and Henry the Fourth. Swinstead, at an Abby there King

John

North Humber INCOLNE SHIRE. York SHIRE GER = THE MAIN PART OF OCEAN Norting The Washe SHIRE PART OF PART OF Singfeild Norfolk LECESTER English Miles SHIRE

Bit in enol Her

John was Poisoned by a Villanous Monk: At Harlestil Dyed that Miracle of Conjugal Love, Elenor Queen to Edward the First; Bourn is a famous Market Town; Grantham is noted for its vast high Steeple, which seems to stand awry as if it were falling, the tradition going, That the Devil as he stew over it struck it into that warped posture with one of his Wings; tho' many believe the height deceiving the Eye, makes it only appear so. Stamford is a very sine Town, on its Bridge a single Dane stopped King Harrold and his Army, slaying 40 Men; nor could be removed till such time as a Souidier, rowing under the Bridge, thrust up a Spear and Cowardly slew him. Crowland was once famous for its Rich and Stately Abby; all its Sea Coast is sprinkled with commodious Towns, as Grimsby, Saltsleet, Boston, &c.

In the Fens are found the Ategen or Godwitt, also a foolish Bird called a Dottrell, which Cambden says being Hunted thrusts its Head into a Bush, and then thinks all is secure, the the whole Body is seen, and so in Moulting time be is easily taken.

The Reign of WILLIAM the Second, Sirnamed Rufus.

WHen William the First Dyed, his Eldest Son Robert was in Germany, Negotiating his Fathers Affairs, to draw in those Princes to assist him in making a Vigorous War on the French, who were now become somewhat Formidable to their Neighbours; so that by the favour of his Absence, the Conquerers Last Will, the furtherance of Lanfrank and Wolstane, two Learned Prelates who had great Influence over the Commons, and divers of the Nobles, William Sirnamed Rusus, from from the Redness of his Hair or Face, was after many hot debates among the Nobles, Crowned King at Westminster, by Lanfrank Arch Bishop of Canterbury, on Sunday the 26th of September Anno Dom. 1087.

This William was Younger Brother to Robert, but being of a milder Temper, and better affected to the English, by reason he had in a manner been bred up amongst them, and approved by them, Robert found himself greatly Agreived that he had been put beside his Right in England, tho' the Dutchy of Normandy was left entirely to him; but the Title of Duke not agreeing with his great Spirit, when he perceived he might have been a King had not loss of opportunity barr'd it, he resolved nevertheless to tempt Fortune in a tryal for the regaining what was overflipt; whereupon he raifed a gallant Army, composed of his own Subjects and Strangers, Landing them in England, with little or no Resistance, not doing any damage to the English; but being Encamped Commillioners were fent by King William to treat with him about an Accommodation for the preventing the effusion of Blood, and the Miseries such a War was likely to bring on both Nations, for being thereby weakened, they might eafily become a Prey to Forreign Enemies, who watched for such an opportunity to work their ends, both on Normandy and England, especially the Danes and French.

To these and other Reasons for an amicable conclusion of the Difference, the Norman Duke harkened with much mildness, so that in a short time it was agreed that Robert after Williams Death should possess the Kingdom; and to the end his Heirs might not diffurb it, he was debarred from Marriage, as I find it in some Historians; however, certaine it is, he left no Legitimate liftic behind him: And in the mean time he was Yearly to pay the fum of 3000 Marks. And the Articles being Signed, the Brothers took a Friendly leave of each other, so that through Providence this threatning Storm which filled England with many doubts and fears at its approach, blew over without doing any harm.

Articles

After the Duke of Normandy had repassed the Seas with his Army, the King fearing he might repent him of what he had Agree'd to, strengthened the Sea Ports, and Built some Castles advantagiously on the Havens to prevent Landing by furprize; but knowing his prime Strength and Affurance was in the Love of his Subjects. he began to cares the Nobles more than he had done. and remitted to the Commons several grievous Taxes; for upon his coming to the Crown, he thought treading in his Fathers steps was the best Measures; but now he found that Mildness rather than Rigor was the sureit Policy, to keep the Natives of this Island firm to his Interest; whereupon he restored much that had been Extorted by his Rigorous Ministers; and the better to curry favour with the People, caused some of them to be punished for the offences he had enjoyned them to commit.

About this time Odo Bishop of Bayon, the Kings Unkle, who had been Banished by the Conquerer, came over and was kindly received by his Nephew, who Created him Earl of Kent, and conferred on him many other Honours and Trufts, which made the old Clergy-Man presume so much on the Kings Favour. That he took upon him more Authority to Rule than came to his share by many degrees; whereupon the Nobles made grievous complaints, That a Stranger should prefume to Domineer over them in their Native Country; to that the King being sensible of his Arogancy, changed his Smiles into Frowns, which caused him to make a party among the English Normans, and to fall into open open Rebellion; Declaring for Duke Robert and his Right, who underhand had promised to Land some Forces, but did not. This Treachery of the Normans. made the King almost totally throw himself on the English for Safeguard and Protection. These Fractions and Disorders in the State, begat new conceits in Malcolm King of Scots, who resolving to take the advantage of them, hastily raised an Army and Invaded the Northern Marches, wasting all in his way with Fire and Sword: whereupon the King Summoning all his Courage, not to leave an Enemy at his Back, first fell upon the Bishop, and gave him and his Rebellious Affociates a terrible Overthrow; and in the Battel the Bishop being taken Prisoner, he was compelled to Abjure the Land. This happening the latterend of the Second Year of the Kings Reign, the Third no fooner began but he refolved to be Revenged on the Scots, who had broke their League with him in order to lay hold on the Advantages Clandestine Commotions feemed to offer them, and finding them Plundering and Spoiling his Subjects, he scarce gave them time to Embattel, ere like a Tempest he broke in amongst them, destroying the greater part of their numerous Army, in which fell Twenty of their Nobles, and their King was constrained to Acknowledg Subjection to England, renew his League upon Oath, and in further confirmation of his Subjection he became a Pentioner to King William; and to make it more apparent he was Tributary to England, payed Twelve Mark Yearly for the Twelve Villages the King restored him (after he had taken them from him in this War) which he had held in the Reign of William the Conquerer; and to Fortifie against the Scots Incursions he Rebuilded and Garisoned the City of Carlisle in Cumberland, it having been demolished by the Danes about 200 Years before;

and Lanfrank Dying at a great Age, the King profits of the Arch Bishoprick in his hands ars, and then made Anselm, a Norman Abbot, shop, which much displeased the English Clergy. long after this, Malcolm King of Scots coming ester where King William held his Court, being Access, and unhandsomly treated by some Courtiers who had been raised from a low de-(without acquainting the King with it, or ing fatisfaction for the Indignity put upon hg away in a great rage; and arriving in Scotembled the Nobles, and incited them to bring orces they could raise to his Standard, which ctually obeyed, and entering England with a my, he wasted all before him as far as Alnewick, e Besieged, and Took it; but the strong Castle against him, which with his numbers he so y begirt, that Famine got in and much dis-Belieged; whereupon an adventurous Knight, lag of Truce in his Hand, and the Keys of the n his Spear, came out at the Gate Mounted on lacer, and making low obeysence, as if he subthem to the King of Scots, being come pretty ting Spurs to his Horse he run at the King with r, and piercing him into the Eye and Brain, he d to the Ground, and the Knight by the swiftis Horse escaped through the Scotish Camp; at he Scots were so dismai'd, That they raised the and departed with the Body of their King fully into Scotland.

his daring piece of Service, which turned fo the advantage of William, The Knight had his by him changed from Mabrey to Piercey, and ated Earl of Northumberland, whose Race as ontinued till of very late days, as will appear in

the

open Rebellion; Declaring for Duke Robert Right, who underhand had promifed to Lan Forces, but did not. This Treachery of the N made the King almost totally throw himself

English for Safeguard and Protection.

These Fractions and Disorders in the State new conceits in Malcolm King of Scots, who re to take the advantage of them, hastily raised as and Invaded the Northern Marches, wasting a way with Fire and Sword: whereupon the Kil moning all his Courage, not to leave an Energ Back, first fell upon the Bishop, and gave him Rebellious Affociates a terrible Overthrow; at Battel the Bishop being taken Prisoner, he w pelled to Abjure the Land. This happening th end of the Second Year of the Kings Reign, th no fooner began but he resolved to be Revenge Scots, who had broke their League with him to lay hold on the Advantages Clandestine tions feemed to offer them, and finding them ing and Spoiling his Subjects, he scarce gave th to Embattel, ere like a Tempest he broke in them, destroying the greater part of their n Army, in which fell Twenty of their Nobles. : King was constrained to Acknowledg Subje England, renew his League upon Oath, and ir confirmation of his Subjection he became a Po to King William; and to make it more app was Tributary to England, payed Twelve Mai ly for the Twelve Villages the King restor (after he had taken them from him in this War he had held in the Reign of William the Ca and to Fortifie against the Scots Incursions he Re and Garisoned the City of Carlisle in Cumber having been demolished by the Danes about 201 before; and Lanfrank Dying at a great Age, the King kept the profits of the Arch Bishoprick in his hands Four Years, and then made Anselm, a Norman Abbot, Arch Bishop, which much displeased the English Clergy.

Not long after this, Malcolm King of Scots coming to Gloucester where King William held his Court, being denied Access, and unhandsomly treated by some Carpet-Courtiers who had been raised from a low degree, he (without acquainting the King with it, or demanding satisfaction for the Indignity put upon him) flung away in a great rage; and arriving in Scotland, Assembled the Nobles, and incited them to bring all the Forces they could raise to his Standard, which they punctually obeyed, and entering England with a huge Army, he wasted all before him as far as Alnemick, which he Besieged, and Took it; but the strong Castle held out against him, which with his numbers he so straightly begirt, that Famine got in and much dismai'd the Besieged; whereupon an adventurous Knight, with a Flag of Truce in his Hand, and the Keys of the Castle on his Spear, came out at the Gate Mounted on a swift Racer, and making low obeysence, as if he submitted them to the King of Scots, being come pretty near, setting Spurs to his Horse he run at the King with his Spear, and piercing him into the Eye and Brain, he fell Dead to the Ground, and the Knight by the swiftness of his Horse escaped through the Scotish Camp; at which the Scots were so dismai'd, That they raised the Siege, and departed with the Body of their King Mournfully into Scotland.

For this daring piece of Service, which turned fo much to the advantage of William, The Knight had his Name by him changed from Mabrey to Piercey, and was created Earl of Northumberland, whose Race as Farls continued till of very late days, as will appear in the the succeeding Reigns. But this Success prevented not a Conspiracy against the King, for Robert Mowbrey and William of Ancho Plotted to take away his Life by Treachery, and Crown Stephen D' Albemarle his Second Sisters Son; but the Design being Discovered a little before it was to be put in practice by one of the Accomplices in the Conspiracy, some were taken and Executed, others Fled.

And now the Welsh Rebelling under the Leading of Rees their Prince, the King with a gallant Army entered Wales, but the Rebells shifting from one steep Mountain to another, as well knowing the ways in those Fastnesses, and climbing the craggy Clifts, like Goats, many of the English were wasted in pursuing them; but at length Starving them out, they were constrained to come to a Battel, wherein Rees was Slain with most of his Army; whereupon Wales entirely submitted to the English Obedience.

These Troubles were scarce over, when another Storm threatned from Normandy: The Duke spurred on by Philip of France, who promised to Aid him, a fecond time prepared for England; but the King having an Army on foot, concluded it better to feat the War in another Country than in his own; and therefore to prevent the Dukes making his Voyage, Sailed to Normandy, whose surprising Landing, brought great fear on the Country; however, the King finding himfelf able with the Army he had to do no great matters, and being destitute of Money to raise Forces Abroad, bethought him of a Stratagem to do it, viz. He sent to England many chief Officers to Levy such for the Wars as were of Ability, and having Listed Citizens of London and others to the number of 30000, when they came to the Sea Shoar, and most of them shewed an unwillingness to Embark, as looking back to their Wives Wives and Children, from which many of them had been forced, upon a pretended preffing urgency, it was Proclaimed, That such as would lay down Ten Shillings should be Discharged from the Service, which most of them did with great Alacrity; so that very few of them went: With this Money King William underhand bought off Philip the French King from the Duke of Normandy's Interest; which he perceiving, agreed with his Brother by Ratifying again the former Conditions; and the Christian Armies being on foot in most parts of Europe to rescue the Christians in the Holy Land from the Tyrany of the Turks and Sarazens. Duke Robert (to raise Forces and accompany them) Pawned his Dutchey of Normandy to King William for 10000 Pounds; and there did many Valiant Exploits, infomuch that at the taking of Jerusalem he was first proffered to be made King of it, and all the Country lying about it, larger than what either David or Solomon possessed; but he refused it, in hopes of the Kingdom of England after his Brothers Death, tho' he was difappointed of it and Dyed a deplorable Death, which fome have accounted as a Judgment for his having refused the prosered Scepter of Jerusalem. However on his refusal, the Princes chose Godfry of Bulloin, Earl of Flanders, with which Choice he Joyfully complied. but would not be Crowned, as he faid, with a Crown of Gold, where our Bleffed Saviour for the Sins of Man, and to procure his Redemption, had some time worn a Crown of Thorns. But nearer to My Purpose.

The King was no fooner returned out of Normandy, but News was brought him the Welsh were again in Rebellion; whereupon he Marched to Subdue them, but returned without effecting it, by reason of the violent Torrents occasioned by the Rain, and their keeping among the Rocks and Fastnesses, till his Army was tired out with Famine and other inconveniencies; yet soon after they grew Quiet of themselves. But scarce had he time to take breath, ere a Rebellion broke out in the North, whither he hasted with his Army, gave the Rebells a great Overthrow, and takeing some of the Ringleaders caused them to be put to Death, but extended his Pardon to the common fort; and Mombray, who encouraged them, was committed to Windsor Castle, where he continued a long while Prisoner.

And the Welfb growing again troublesom, by wasting the English Borders, and carrying away great spoils, the King sent the Earls of Shrewsbury and Chester against them with a strong Power, where after some Search, and as secret Marchings as they could, they sound them making Merry in the lse of Anglesey with the Plunder they had got from the English; and falling upon them when they expected nothing less, their Feasting was turned into Mourning; for the greater part of them was Slain, and those that were taken Prisoners mostly lost Feet, Hands, or Eyes, or were put to worse Torments, as a Terror to the rest, that they should keep Quiet within their appointed limits.

The King thinking all would now be Quiet, resolved to take his Ease; and then forgeting how the English had faithfully stood by him and assisted him in his most dangerous undertakings, he cast many of them out of Favour, Office, and Trust; laying grievous Taxes on the Commonalty, Selling for ready Money the best Promotions in Ecclesiasical and Civil Affairs, Prohibiting Anselm Arch Bishop of Canterbury to Assemble any Convocations or Synods (for the well ordering the Clergy, or for the Correcting such as did Offend) without his Leave or License; by which means he secretly silled his Cossers with Treasure; and the Good Arch Bishop

Bishop laid before him the ill consequences and dangers of such Proceedings, and not being minded, he resolved to go for Rome, and lay before Pope Orban the Third the danger the Church was in, by Misgovernment, and to perswade him to Intercede with the King not to intermedle with Church-Affaires, but leave them to his Clergy. The King hearing of his Intention, sent to command him not to go; but the Old Man and his Retinue were before on their Journey; however, the King fent after him, and Pillaged him near Dover of all his Wealth, in hopes that would stay him, but it did not: For he went to Rome, and made fuch Complaints, that the Pope in a chafe would have Excomunicated the King; But his Chrgy Advised him that having already Excomunicated the Emperour Henry the Fourth, The first Christian Prince that ever was under Excomunication, therefore it would be convenient to see the Issue of that Sentence, ere he proceeded any further; For, says a blunt Abbot, your Holiness must have a care how you beat any more Irons before you see how those you have Heated already will be Quenched, least they prove too-Hot for your handling. However many Letters and Verbal Messages were fent to the King, Admonishing him not to meddle any more with the Investing of Bishops, by giving them the Cross, Ring, and Pastoral Staff, nor Prohibit the Assembling of the Convocations or Synods, touching the Affairs of the Church, nor the Execution of any Canons tho' they were by Regal Authority Confirmed.

To this the King Answered That he would still do as be Pleased, and not lose so fair a Flower belonging to his Crown. And being Reproved in the absence of Anselm, by Ralph Bishop of Chichester, he cast him into disgrace, and Suspended many Churches in his Diocess, causing the Revenues to be brought into his Exchequer; so that the Clergy finding no Redress, greatly Murmured, but in vain, till his humour was over; and then he not only received the Bishop into his extraordinary Grace and Favour, but Granted many Honourable Priviledges to his See, yet he stood not long on these terms, ere the Kings humour changing again, he Banished him.

that

By these ways the King had Amassed great Sums. part of which he laid out in Building, viz. He made outward Walls and Bullwarks about the Tower of London, on this fide the Ditch, which Ruined by Time and other Accidents are now Demolished tho' some of the Ruins yet remain; also Westminster-Hall being 90 Yards Long and 24 Yards and 2 Foot Broad; yet when he faw it, he faid, It was too Little by half, and therefore he would referve it for a Bed-Chamber; though indeed it is accounted the Largest in Europe; and one thing is remarkable, tho' there are many Cobwebs in the Windows, and in the Glass Lanthorn above the Roof, yet on the large and curious Wooden Frame, tho' never Swept, not any appear; which has given occasion to conclude it is made of Irish Oak, and that the virtue of the Wood is such, no Spider will come near it.

The King being thus at Ease, the French were not wanting to take the Advantage of it, especially since Duke Robert was absent, Warring in the Holy Land, and had left his Dukedom in charge with the King of England, whereupon they laid Siege to the City of Constantia in Normandy, and pressed it very sorely; of which King William having news as he was in the height of Sport, Hunting in New Forrest, he left all his Company on a suddain, and Posted towards the Sea Side, where sinding a small Bark, he leaped into it, and commanded the Master to set Sail for any part in Normandy;

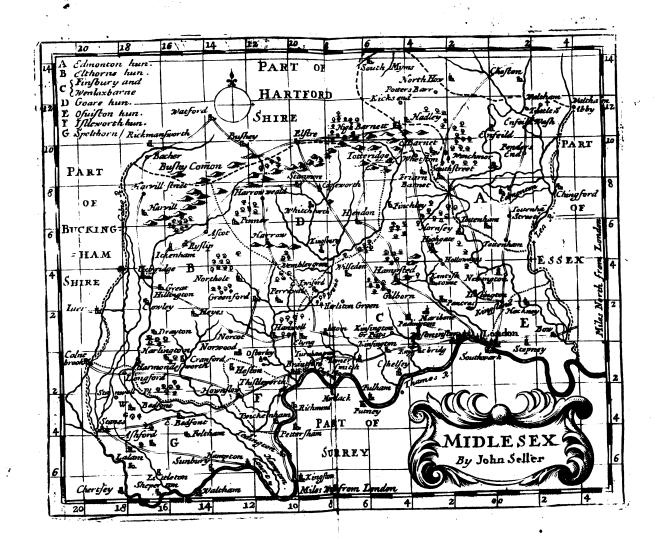

mandy; but the Sea running high by reason of a Storm, he refused to weigh Anchor, laying before the King that the passing at that time was full of danger, and therefore intreated him to wait for more favourable Weather; whereupon much enraged, he commanded him to make no delay for any fear or danger of Tempests, For when (said he) have you ever heard a King was Drowned by a Storm? So that the Marriners plying the best of their skill to bear in the Wind, they got safely over.

The French no fooner heard the King was Landed, but concluding he had a great Army with him, or foon to arrive, were so chill'd with fear, that Courage failing them; in much disorder they raised the Siege, and the Besieged in Sallying cut off a great many in the Rear, took most of their Tents and Baggage, left behind for haste; and so the King with a small Train coming thither, was joyfully received, and having better Fortified and Stored it with Provisions, conferring some Honours and Gifts on those that behaved themselves well, he returned to England, met divers of the Nobility who had raised Forces and were coming to his Aid, who scarcely believed he could be there in so short a time, or what he related of the raising the Siege could be true, till they had it confirmed from many hands.

In the second Year of this Kings Reign, a terrible Earthquake happened; and in the sourth, such prodigious Lightening and Thunder as did great mischief in divers places, and particularly it Burnt the Steeple of the Abby at Winchester, rent the Beams of the Roof, and cast down the Image of the Virgin Many, breaking one of its Leggs as also the Crucifix; and not long after, so great a Storm happened at London, that it blew down so (some say 606) Houses, and took off the Roof of Bom-Church, bearing it a great height in the P

Air, and fix of the Beams, being 27 Foot Long, with the fall run a prodigious depth into the Ground, the Streets being then un-paved, fo that with much labour they were digg'd out. In his fixth Year was so great a Scarcity of Provisions, and a Pestilence, that in Popudous Places the Living were hardly sufficient to Bury the Dead. In his ninth Year two Blazing Stars with long Firey Trains appeared, one in the East, the other in the West, for twenty Nights, seeming to dart Fire one at the other. And in the last Year of his Reign the Sea overflowed its Banks in Kent, and lay'd under Water all the Lands that had been Earl Goodwin's, being about 4000 Acres, Drowning much People and Cattel, and Demolishing many Villages. And to this day has not been Regained. That Overflowing is called Goodwins Sands, very fatal to Marriners. There also rose up a Spring of Water of the Golour of Blood, gushing out for 15 days in great abundance at Finchamstead near Abingdon in Barkshire, which was held to Presage the Kings untimely Death: For he Hunting in the New Forrest, where his Father had made such desolation of Churches, Religious Houses, and Villages, upon pretence of Pleasure, as the Dogs were at Bay with a Stag, and he having spoiled many of them, Sr. Walter Terrill, one of the Squires of the Kings Body, let fly an Arrow, which glancing on the side of an Oak, flaunted on the King who was pressing on to the Quarry, and entered so deep into his Breast, that he dyed of the Wound; and almost on that spot, not long before, his Nephew Richard Son to Robert of Normandy, was flain by a violent fall from his Horse, beaten off by a Bow, all which Accidents were looked on as Judgments for the Sacriledge and Waste committed on fo trivial an occasion.

This William was Third Son to the Conquerer, by

Maud his Wife, Daughter to Baldwin the Fifth Earl of Flanders. He began his Reign Anno Dom. 1087, and Reigned 12 Years, 10 Months, and 23 Days; being flain in the 44th Year of his Age, and Buried in the Quire of St. Swithin, in the Cathedral Church of Winchefter. He was of a comely Stature, firmly compacted in his Limbs, very Strong and Active, of a high Courage, and noble Valour; constant in his Resolutions, yet withal Covetous, and exceeding Leacherous; so that the he left no Lawful Issue behind him, he is faid to have by his Concubins feven Sons and five Daughters.

Remarks on the County of Middlesex, and the famous Cities of London and Westminster.

M Iddlesex gains the Prehemmence of other Counties by reason in it stands the famous City of London, The Courts of Judicature, and Palaces of our Kings, and by reason of the great numbers of Handicrasts; for few Manufactures used by the English Nation, are here unpractised; being in all too many to inumerate. This County produces a good sprinkling of Cattle, Corn, Pastures, Parks, Chases, and store of Deer: It is Bounded on the North with Hartfordshire, on the West with Buckinghamshire, on the South with the River Thames and Surry, on the East with Esex: It is divided into seven Hundreds (viz. Edmonton Hundred, Elthorn Hundred, Finsbury and Wenslaxbarn one Hundred, Goare Hundred, Oswelston Hundred, Isleworth Hundred, Spelthorn Hundred) containing 73 Parishes, (besides those Parishes contained in the Cities of London and Westminster, which are 126, viz. 97 within the Walls of London, 16 without the Walls, but within the Isberties thereof; and 7 in the City of Westminster) 2 Cities, London and Westminster, the former being a the Thames, which washes its South side: It sends Members to Parliament &, viz. London City 4, Westminster

The HISTORY

City 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

London, a City of the greatest Trade in Europe, is pleafantly seated on the Banks of the Thames, lifting up her lofty Head on gradually rifing Hills, full of Riches, and Beautified with many stately Buildings; King Lud, who Reigned here a little before the arrival of Julius Cæsar. much Beautified and Enlarged it, if he were not the first Founder, calling it after his Name, Caer Lud; and one of its Western Gates retaines his Name to this day. It has a stately Stone Bridge, with 19 Arches, passing over to Southwark; upon which are vast piles of Houses. The Tower, said to be Built by Julius Casar, and much Enlarged by William the Conquerer, is for Strength and Profpell very Famous, having a Moat and conveniency to let the Thames Water in and out again. It is famous for being the Prison of many Nubles as David King of Scots, John King of France, &c. In it were Murthered Henry the Sixth, the two Princes Edward the Fifth and his Brother Richard Duke of York, by Crookback Richard's Command; within its Walls on the Green divers Nobles have been Bebeaded, as Robert Earl of Essex, the Lady Jane Grey a little before Proclaimed Queen, and the Lord Dudly ber Husband, and many others, too numerous to mention. Here Sr. Tho. Overbury mas Poisoned, and Arthur Capell the Noble Earl of Essex in King Charles the Seconds Reign, was found Dead, his Throat being Cut from Ear to Ear. In London one Gallus a Roman Leiutenant being Slain at a Brook, it was called thence Galbrook now corruptly Wallbrook. The famous Cathedral of St. Pauls was Founded by Sigebert King of the East-Angles, and Ethelbert King of Kent, where before a Temple was erected to Diana. In the Reign of Edmund Ironside this City was closely Besieged by the Danes, but the Siege foon raised by that Valiant King; Anno Anno 1133, the greater part of it was confumed by Fire. In King Richard the Second's time, was the great Rencounter in Smithfield, with the Rebell's Wat Tyler and Jack Straw, where the former was killed by Sr. William Walworth, the Valiant Lord Mayor, For which the Dagger is added to the City Armes. This City has had the Honour to Entertain several Kings and Princes; King Stephen kept his Court where Crosby Square stands in Bishopsgate-street; King Edward the Third in Cornhill, where the Popes-Head-Tavern stands; King John had his Chappel where the Stone-House on London-Bridge stands, and kept his Court in Holy-Well-Lane by Shoreditch. King Henry the Eighth held his Palace in Blackfriers, and some times in Bridwell, where he Lodged the Emperor Charles the Fifth. Its Monument on Fishstreet-Hill is very famous, Erected in Memory of the dreadful Fire, Anno Dom. 1666, Sept. the 2. which consumed 13000 Dwelling-Houses, besides the Cathedral of St. Pauls, and almost all the Churches, Chappels, Halls, and other Publick Buildings. To Islington near this City, comes a pleasant Stream from a small Spring in Hartfordshire called Amwell, and supplies it by Wooden Pipes with Water in abundance. Bow Church in this City has a Steeple accounted the finest in Europe. Its Exchange in Cornhill is Beautified with the Statues of the Kings and Queens, and is a very stately Structure. Its Conduits are curious Ornaments to the City, as also are the Halls of the Companies; and likewise St. Paul's Cathedral, the East End and about a Third Part of it being Finished, containing the most excellent Workmanship that ever was wrought in Stone. Christ's Hospital, St. Bartholomew's, the Charter-House, Bethlehem, and Bridwell, are very famous for Charity: In Christ Church three Queens were Buryed. viz. Margaret second Wife to Edward the First, Isabell Wife to Edward the Second, and Joan her Daughter, Married to David King of Scots. WestWestminster, the second City, standing in this County, bas the River of Thames pleasantly on the South side of it, and has been the most constant Residence of the Kings and Queens of England, till White-Hall was Builded by Cardinal Wolsey in the Reign of Henry the Eighth, and yet claimes the Coronation and Burials of them, in its stately Abby, Built in a place once called The Isle of Thorns, in Henry the Sevenths Chappel; and has also given Birth to many great Princes. This City is very Antient, viz. about 1060 Years.

The Palaces of White-Hall and St. James are very Stately, but the more to be noted for being the ordinary Refidence of our Kings and Queens. His Majesties Palace at Kensington is accounted one of the Pleasantest Seats in the County, and extraordinary much delighted in by the late Queen.

Isleworth or Thistleworth is a Village pleasantly situate on the River Thames, where Richard King of the Romans and Earl of Cornwal, had a stately Palace, which was Burnt to the Ground by a Tumultuous Sally made by the London Mob. Chealsea is pleasantly seated on the River, and above all Beautified with its stately Colledge, dedicated to the Use and Relief of decay'd or disabled Souldiers and Officers. Cambray-House beyond Islington is of very Antient Building, first Founded by a Grocer, and takes a fair Prospect of London. Flighgate, and Hampstead are situate on pleasant Hills, giving a large Prospect. The next of note are Edger, Acton, Wilsdon, Edmonton, Tatnam Higheross, Harow, Drayton, Hackney, Newington, Hampton, sameus for its stately Court, which is one of the finest in England, Built by the great Cardinal Wolfey.

The Seats of the Nobility in this City and County, are many, viz. Noviolk-House in Arundel Buildings, belonging to the Duke of Norfolk; Wallingford-House, one of the feats of the late Duke of Buckinghams; Albemarle-House, one of the seats of the late Duke of Albemarle; Soho-Square, a feat of the late Duke of Monmouths; Clarkenwell-House, belonging to the late Duke of Newcastle; Cleveland-House, to the Dutchess of Cleveland; Worcester-House, to the Duke of Beaufort; Highgate-House, to the Duke of Northumberland; Winchester-House, to the Duke of Bolton; Halifax-House, to the Marquess of Halifax; Kent-House, to the Earl of Kent; Bedford-House, to the Duke of Bedford; Thannet-House, to the Earl of Thannet; Leicester-House, to the Earl of Leicester; Cambray-House, to the Farl of Northampton; Warwick and Holland Houses, to the Earl of Warwick and Holland; Clare-House, to the Earl of Clare; Mulgrave-House, to the Earl of Mulgrave: Chealfey-House, to the Earl of Lindsey: St. Albans-House, to the Earl of St. Albans; Essex-House, to the Earl of Essex; Cardigan-House, to the Earl of Cardigan; Anglesev-House, to the Earl of Anglesev; Cravan-House, to the Lord Cravan; Ailesbury-House, to the Earl of Ailesbury; Burlington-House, to the Earl of Burlington; Powis-House, to the Marquis of Powis; Macclesfield-House, to the Earl of Macclesfield; Conway-House, to the Earl of Conway; Campden-House, to the Earl of Gainsborough; Faulconberg-House, to the Lord Viscount Faulconberg; Mordant-House, to the Lord Viscount Mordant of Avelon; Sion-House, to the Duke of Sommerset, also Northumberland-House in the Strand; Drayton, to the Lord Pager; Hackney-House, to the Lord Brook; Charterhouse-Close, to the Lord Grey of Wark; a House at Whitton to the Lord Culpeper; Lord Berkley Barron of Stratton his feat Stratton-House, alias Berkley-House in Pickadilly; and at Twickenham a feat of the Lord Bennets, Barron of Ossulton; The Bishop of London's feats London-house, and Fullham-house.

As for Medicinal Wells in this County, there have been lately found out divers at Islington, Hoxdon, and other Places, by many highly approved for the Cure of divers Diftempers.

The Reign of HENRY the First, Sirnamed, for his great Learning, Beau-Clark, or Fine Schollar.

When King William the Second was unfortunately Slain, Robert his Eldest Brother, Fortunate in all his proceedings, save only in his Succession to the Crown of England, was Victoriously Warring in the Holy Land against the Turks and Sarazens; but hearing of his Brothers Death, he declined the Kingdom of Jerusalem, to which the Christian Princes had Elected him, and hasted home; yet lest most of his Troops behind him.

But by means of his Absence, Henry, his Youngest Brother, so cunningly dealt with the English and Normans, that he got much into their Favour; and the more, because he was Born in England after his Father was Crowned King, and for as much as he was of a mild disposition, many Princely Virtues making it apparent that his Government would be accompanied with many Honourable Atchievements, Gratful, Safe and Profitable to the Church and Commonweal; so that all things working to his Advancement,

He was Crowned at Westminster by Maurice Bishop of London (Anselm Arch Bishop of Canterbury being Absent) on Sunday the 5th of August, Anno Dom. 1100; but before his Coronation, the Nobles constrained him to Swear he would Ease the People of the oppressing Taxes and other Grievances, and Restore to the English the use of Lights and Fire in their Houses, which they had been denied, for the most part, after the Ringing the Evening Bell, for the space of 33 Years.

After his Coronation, to make him more Easie in the Throne, he caused the Great Seal to pass on several wholsom Laws, Subscribing them with his Name, and commanded divers of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal to do the like; and caused Copies of them to be sent into every County, to be kept in the County Courts. The Heads of the Laws were in these Branches.

1. That the Church should be free from Oppressions, and Reservation of their Possessions upon vacancy.

2. That the Heirs of the Nobility should Posses the Lands of their Fathers without Redemption from the King; which Favour likewise should be Granted by the Nobles to their Tennants.

3. That the Gentry might give in Marriage their Daughters and Kinswomen, without the Kings License, so it were not to the Kings Enemies.

4. That the Widow should have the Jointure, and not against her Consent be compelled to a second Marriage.

5. That the Mother, or the next of Kin, should be

Guardian of the Lands of their Children.

6. That Coiners of False and Counterfeit Money should be Capitally Punished, and a Measure, to the Length of the Kings Arm, should be a Standard of Commerce among the People. And

7. That all Debts to the Crown, before his coming to it, should be forgiven, and all Murthers before the day of his Coronation to be Pardoned.

With other such like Indulgences: He also at this time Confirmed King Edward the Confessor's Laws.

Now,

Now, tho' this went a great way with the People, who found themselves easie in these Concessions, he yet used other Policies, as expecting a storm from the Norman Coast, as soon as Duke Robert should Arrive, whom he had notice by his Espialls, was on his way; for having Seized on the plentiful heaps of the last Kings Treasure, he Liberally disposed of it among such of his Subjects as he knew would fland him in the greatest stead, if things should come to Extremity. Then he placed the more Popular Nobles in the chief Offices of State, and satisfied the Leading Gentry with Titles of Honeur, and Places of a lower station, absolutely acquitting the People forever from the Tax of Dane Gell (it having been much lessened in the former Reign) and from all other Demands and unjust Payments Imposed on them by the two former Kings, giving leave to the Nobles and Gentlemen, for their Recreation, to Inclose Parks for their Deer, and free Warrens for their Conies, Hares, and fuch like Game. And, as Traytors to his Virtues, State, and Kingly Government, he Exiled from his Presence and Court Sycophants, Parasites, Flatterers, Niceness in Behaviour, Lascivicus Conversation, Sumptuousness in Apparel, Superfluity in Diet, &c. He made it Death for any to Robb on the Highways, and with Indefatigable Endeavours he Corrected and Reformed the Monstrous Pride, Intollerable Covetousness, Secure Negligence and Sloath of the Clergy. Yet the better to please them, he Recalled Answirom Banishment, and Restored him to his Arch Bishoprick of Canterbury, giving him full Power to Assemble Convocations and Synods at his pleasure; and for the amendment of fuch Irregularities as were insufferable in the Church, he left it wholly to the Pope, as also to Invest Bishops, by giving them the Ring, Cross, and Pastoral Staff. All fuch Ecclesestical Promotions and

Dignities

Dignities as by the Lewd Advice and Councel of Reynulph Bishop of Durham, his Predecessor had Seized in his hands, and converted to his use, he voluntarily restored and conferred on honest and grave learned Men. and Committed the Bishop of Dytham a Prisoner to the Tower of London, from whence he Escaped; and going for Normandy, earnestly Incited Duke Robert by many moving Orations to Invade England; who prone enough of himself, so harkened to him, and relying on the Aids he had promised him here on his Landing. raised a great Army; of which Henry having timely notice, thought fit yet to strengthen himself more by Marriage, and in order to it he took to Wife Mand, Sister to Edgar King of Scots, who was Daughter to Malcolm by Margaret Sister to Edgar Etheling, and Daughter to King Edward the Son of Edmund Ironside, the Victorious Saxon King.

These Nuptials were no sooner consummated, and a firm League made with Scotland, but Duke Robert Landed his Army at Portsmouth, which put the English into apprehensions of being involved in a doubtful War; but this threatening storm was soon blown over, by the discreet mediation and counsel of Friends on both fides; fo that a friendly Peace enfued between the two Brothers, upon such like Conditions as had been Agreed on in William Rufus's Days; whereat the Norman Lords were much displeased, and returned discontented with the Duke; so that the King fearing he would not long rest contented with the Agreement, resolved to be beforehand with him; and therefore raising a gallant Army he Sailed to Normandy, and was joyned by many of the discontented Nobles, giving the Duke two great Overthrows: After which, he being in a manner for saken, shifted from place to place; when in the mean while the King pressing his good Fortune, Fortune, won the strong Cities of Roan, Caen, Valois, and others; and putting them in trusty hands, returned for England; where he was received in Triumph.

The Duke perceiving his Fortune grew worse and worse, those that he most Trusted growing Treacherous, and betraying his Councils to the King, as being Bribed so to do, by which means he was almost stripped of his Dutchy of Normandy, he Resolved to make an adventurous Experiment, and in order to it came privately into England, and humbly submitted himself to his Brother, leaving it in his discretion to dispose of him and his Dutchy as he pleased; but the King desirous to Annex Normandy to his own Dominions, turned from him in a flighting manner, and commanded him out of his presence; which great Indignity roused the Dukes Courage, so that in a great Rage he flung out of the Court, and returned to Normandy; resolving rather to dye by the Sword, valiantly fighting in the Field, than again to be guilty of fuch Meanness.

The King, who was not unacquainted with his humour, rightly guessed at what was intended, and therefore followed him with an Army, and much Treasure; and after many Battels overpowering his small number, he was taken, brought Prisoner to England, and closely confined; when endeavouring to make his Escape, the King (to whome in William Rusus his Reign he had done many good offices) ungratfully caused his Eyes to be put out with Burning Glasses; yet in this Captivity he lived about the space of 20 Years; and then, as is said, the King sending him a Suit of his Old Cloaths, he took the Indignity so impatiently, that resolving to live no longer in that Misery and Disgrace, some Historians have it that he voluntarily Starved bimself; others, that he Beat out his Braines against the Stones of the Prison-Wall; however, certain it is that in his confinement Dyed the Valliant, well Accomplished, and much Lamented Robert, Eighth Duke of Normandy, a Prince in whom all Heroick Virtues shined.

The King seeming now to be rid of all his Fears, began to consider, the Clergy by his concessions were grown exceeding Rich, and Ingrossed many Temporalities; so that resolving to come in with them for a share of what they had Accumulated by his Bounty, he laid Taxes on some, and reassumed his power of Creating Bishops; which so highly disgusted Arch Bishop Anselm, That he not only bitterly inveighed against his Proceedings, contrary to his former Promises, but absolutely refused to Consecrate such Bishops as the King Appointed. However, to curry favour with the King, Gerald Arch Bishop of York, performed that Ceremony; and Anselm, soon after being Banished, fled to Rome, and made grievous complaints to Pope Paschal the Second, of the wrongs, as he pretended, that had been done him; and upon the Popes Intercession, about two Years after he had License to return; and at a Synod of the Clergy holden in London by the Popes Authority, it was Enacted, That from thence forth no Temperal Person should give Investiture to any Bishop by the Cross and Ring; yet three Years after, Arch Bishop Anselm Dying, The Temporalities of the See of Canterbury were Seized into the Kings hands, who converted them to his use for the space of five Years, the See being so long kept vacant; he aledging to the Bishops that sued to him, to Nominate an Arch Bishop; That he only kept it for a worthy Person that might justly deserve it.

Anno Dom. 1108 The King erected the Bishoprick of Ely, appointing the Diocess to extend through the County of Cambridge and Isle of Ely, and Endowed it with

tricve.

with some of his own Lands in those parts; by which means he made fair weather with the Popa, because by this addition he had strengthened his Interest the more in England, and the Clergy seemed fatisfied in part for their Damages sustained.

But now a Storm characteristic of the part of

But now a Storm threatned in Normandy, for the King having gotten quiet Possession after his Brothers Death, Lewis Le Gross, King of France, fearing a further Incroachment on his Territories, if the King of England (wanting Interuption) had liberty to grow Powerful, he procured Foulk Earl of Anjou, on a weak pretence, to feiz on the Country of Mayne, and then animated Baldwin Earl of Flanders, to Proclaim War for the King of England's with-houlding a Yearly Pension of 300 Marks, which the Conquerer had settled on Baldwin fifth Earl of Flanders, and had been pay'd by William Rufus to his Son and Nephew, because the Earl had affished the Conquerer with considerable Forces upon his Invading Elngand: All these made strong preparations to Invade Normandy; But the News foon roused the King from his Bed of Ease, and filled him with Princely Resolutions; whereupon he passed the Seas with an Army of Nobles, Gentry and common Souldiers; when losing no time, he set upon the Earl of Anjou and his Associates, giving him an entire Overthrow, fo that he was enforced to fave himself by shameful Flight, leaving the Prime Nobility and Gentry of his Army dead on the Plaines, or Prisoners of War, with 4000 of lesser note: And near unto the Town of Nice, which was Surprized and holden by the King of France, he Encountered the other Confederates, fo that a very cruel Fight beginning between them, it continued Nine Hours, and was on both fides fought with fach Eagerness and Heroick Resolution, that tho' the King won the Victory, and kept the Field, whilst ties sent after them had a long chace of the flymy; he truly confessed, He Fought not then for but for his Life.

long after these Victories, Overtures of Peace ade, and the King fearing some practices against England might raise a Rebellion, if he should entangled in War Abroad, he the more readily ed to them, and a Peace was concluded, upon a ge between William the Kings Eldest Son, and nghter of the Duke of Anjou; but in their rer England staying somewhat behind the King, make Merry, and take leave of their Friends, Riotous Treatments, the Marriners got fuch of Wine, that being for the most part made coming with full Sail, in hopes to overtake ng, they run upon the Shallows, where the Ship galong by the violence of the Wind and Waves red; yet the Prince with his fair Bride, and thers, got into the Long-Boat, and put off; ary Countess of Perch, his Sister, crying from king Deck pitiously to him To take her in, and per Perish in the Waters, he Rowed back again, g to do it; but then many Lives being at the be lost, and in that great Extremity every one his own Life equal with his Princes, neither nor Swords could keep so many from leapas funk the Boat, so that they, together with the Kings Younger Son, Lucia his Neice, and sband the Earle of Chester, were swallowed up merciless Waves; only three or four Sailors g on Planks to Shoar, as fad Relators of the al News, which filled the Court with Mourning, e whole Nation with an Universal heaviness. er, the King bore it with Prudence, and much y Fortitude, knowing his Grief could not Re-

tricve.

with some of his own Lands in those parts; by means he made fair weather with the Pope, becauthis addition he had strengthened his Interest the in England, and the Clergy seemed fatisfied in patheir Damages sustained.

But now a Storin threatned in Normandy, for King having gotten quiet Possession after his Bro Death, Lewis Le Gross, King of France, fearing ! ther Incroachment on his Territories, if the Ki England (wanting Interuption) had liberty to Powerful, he procured Foulk Earl of Anjou, on a pretence, to feiz on the Country of Mayne, and animated Baldwin Earl of Flanders, to Proclaim for the King of England's with-houlding a Y Pension of 300 Marks, which the Conquerer had se on Baldwin fifth Earl of Flanders, and had been pay William Rufus to his Son and Nephew, because Earl had affifted the Conquerer with confiderable F upon his Invading Elngand: All these made st preparations to Invade Normandy; But the News roused the King from his Bed of Ease, and filled with Princely Resolutions; whereupon he passed Seas with an Army of Nobles, Gentry and con Souldiers; when losing no time, he fet upon the of Anjou and his Allociates, giving him an entire G throw, so that he was enforced to fave himsel shameful Flight, leaving the Prime Nobility and try of his Army dead on the Plaines, or Prisonel War, with 4000 of leller note: And near until Town of Nice, which was Surprized and holden by King of France, he Encountered the other Confeder fo that a very cruel Fight beginning between the continued Nine Hours, and was on both fides for with fuch Eagerness and Heroick Resolution, that the King won the Victory, and kept the Field, w his Parties sent after them had a long chace of the flying Enemy; he truly confessed, He Fought not then for Victory, but for his Life.

Not long after these Victories, Overtures of Peace were made, and the King fearing some practices against him in England might raise a Rebellion, if he should be long entangled in War Abroad, he the more readily harkened to them, and a Peace was concluded, upon a Marriage between William the Kings Eldest Son, and the Daughter of the Duke of Anjou; but in their return for England staying somewhat behind the King, and to make Merry, and take leave of their Friends, in their Riotous Treatments, the Marriners got fuch plenty of Wine, that being for the most part made Drunk, coming with full Sail, in hopes to overtake the King, they run upon the Shallows, where the Ship beating along by the violence of the Wind and Waves Foundered; yet the Prince with his fair Bride, and many others, got into the Long-Boat, and put off; but Mary Countess of Perch, his Sister, crying from the Sinking Deck pitiously to him To take her in, and not let her Perish in the Waters, he Rowed back again, thinking to do it; but then many Lives being at the point to be lost, and in that great Extremity every one valuing his own Life equal with his Princes, neither Words nor Swords could keep fo many from leaping in, as funk the Boat, so that they, together with Richard the Kings Younger Son, Lucia his Neice, and her Husband the Earle of Chester, were swallowed up by the merciles Waves; only three or four Sailors escaping on Planks to Shoar, as sad Relators of the Tragical News, which filled the Court with Mourning, and the whole Nation with an Universal heaviness. However, the King bore it with Prudence, and much Princely Fortitude, knowing his Grief could not Retrieve his great loss; nor had he any long time after his Landing to weigh the mishap, ere Wars loud Alarms summoned him to the Field; for in his absence. the Welsh, impatient of the English Yoak, had strengthen. ed themselves in Confedracy with some Irish Adven. turers, and now broke into open Rebellion; not as formerly abiding in the Mountains and Fastnesses, but relying on a foolish Prophecy, That in that Year they should recover their Antient Territories, and have a King of their Nation Reign over the whole Island, they holdly ad. vanced, and unadvisedly gave him Battel in the Plains. where they were Overthrown, and most of them Slain or taken Prisoners; the King inciting the Sword to rage in their destruction, and consumed with Fire all the places in his March, making fuch a desolation as had not been known in that Country for many hundred Years; and by fo mighty a Terror having Quieted these People, he returned with great Spoil, and was joyfully received at London: Where Assembling the Nobles, he defired a Supply to enable him to Marry his Daughter Maud, to the Emperour Henry, who had demanded her in Marriage; which they granted, and it was Leavied in the nature of a Tax on Lands, being called And pur file Marrier; and the same custom for the Marriage of the Eldest Daughters of the Kings of this Realm, was a long time continued, and may yet be practifed on the like Emergency.

At the same time he devised and ordered the manner and fashion of a High Court of Parliament, appointing it to consist of the Three Estates, of which himself was the Head; so that the Laws being made by the consent of all, were highly pleasing to the People. This happy beginning of a Good Constitution of Government, was First Established at Salisbury, in April Anno Dom. 1114; some Authors have it 1116. However it has proved, by the continuance and great Improvement of Parliaments, happy for England to this day; seeing to those August Assemblies we owe the well founding of the best constituted Government it the World.

soon after this, the King hoping in some measure to repair the loss of his Children Drowned, as has been recited, Married Adilicia Daughter to Godfrey, first Duke of Lovain: And Pope Calixtus the Second came to him in Normandy, in hopes to perswade him not to meddle in matters belonging to Ecclesiastical Affairs, but neither Flattery, Threats, or Perswasion, could work the King to a compliance with his desires; and at this meeting two Youths, Sons to the Earl of Mellent, and Servants to the King, Disputing with two of the Popes Cardinals, with Logical Sylogisms, so Nonplus'd them, that they were compelled to own their Ignorance.

About Three Years after, Pope Honorius the Second fent Cardinal Cremensis to certifie the abuses of the Married Clergy, and to that purpose he made a long Oration in a large Assembly of Priests and others; in praise of Chastity, and dispraise of Unlawful Lust; (for so he termed that of the Married Priests with their Wives) but being narrowly watched by some of them. he was by a Publick Officer taken in Bed the same Night with a common Strumpet; and so loaden with Shame, compelled to return to his Master without Success. Yet the King preferring Thurston, one of his Chaplains, to the Arch Bishoprick of York, the Proud Priest refused to Swear Obedience to the See of Canterbury, which his Predecessors had both Sworn and performed; and Appealing to Rome, the King permited the Pope to dispense with his Obedience to that See but he proceeding further, to give him the Investure of Arch Bishop, by delivering him the Pall, Ring, and Cross, the King was so much displeased that he prohibited hibited his return; but in the end the Popes Threatnings. Menacing nothing but Curses, Excomunications, and Suspensions, he had leave to Enjoy the Dignity of the Archiepiscopal See; least evil affected Persons, taking advantage of the Difference, might raife Commotions to disturb the Quiet of the Kingdom. And soon after one Arnold, in a Divinity Lecture at Oxford. for Preaching against the Pride of the Prelates, and Diffolute and Wicked Lives of the Priests, was Asiassinated, and found Dead, with near a Hundred Wounds in his Head, Face, and other Parts. In the 27th Year of this Kings Reign, Dyed the Emperour Henry the Fifth of Germany, not leaving any Issue by Maud his Empress; whereupon the King, to strengthen his Interest against France, Married her to Geoffrey Plantagenet, Son and Heir Apparent to Foulk then Earl of Anjou, by whom she had Issue Henry, afterward King of England, Geoffery and William. This fair Ofspring enriched the King with the truest endowment of Content, for that as he conceived he saw in them the long continuance of his Line, in possessing the Crown of this Realm; and to make it the more certain and fure to them, he took three follemn Oaths in the space of five Years of all the Nobility and chief Men of the Kingdom, That with their best Advice, and with the hazzard of their Goods, Lands, Lives and Fortunes, they should Support and Maintain the Succession of his Daughter and her Heirs. And so growing in Years, he went over to Normandy to do the like there, and fettle his Affaires; but Eating Lamprys at the Town of St. Dennis he Surfeited on them, and after a short Sickness Dyed.

This King was accounted Wise, Learned, Mild and Just, beyond most of his Predecessors; more enclined to Peace than War; extending his Bounty to fuch as merited merited it by Publick Service, confining his Gifts within the limits of Thrift and Measure: He was a gentle Friend, but a stuborn Enemy. He had several Children by his Concubins, which he promoted to Honours and Places of Trust. He Erected the two Bishopricks Elyeand Carlisse, and Founded the Monastries of Shirbourn, Circester, the Priory at Dunstable, and the Abby of Reading in Barkshire, where he was Intered in a stately Tomb. He began his Reign Wednesday the First of August, Anno Dom. 1100, and Reigned 35 Years, 4 Months, and 1 Day; and was the 33d Sole Monarch of England. In the 16th Year of his Reign great Thunders, Lightenings, and Hail happened in December, doing much harm; and the Moon for two Nights appeared of the Colour of Blood; in October, the same Year, the Thames was so Dry, that the People passed at the Tower, and almost as far as the Bridge, to the other side on Foot. In the 33d Year of his Reign happened so great an Eclips of the Sun, that at Noon-day the Stars plainly appeared, and about two days after there was a terrible Earthquake; and the same Year happened a dreadful Fire in London, which confumed it from the West End of Cheapside to Aldgate; and the nex Year Worcester and Rochester were Accidentally Burnt; and a little before his Death, a Blazing Star with a Bushy Tail of the colour of Blood, appeared at South West Twelve

Nights fuccessively.

Remarks on Morthamptonshire, &c.

NOrthamptonshire is a pleasant Inland County, held to be Situate in the Middle of the Kingdom, being mostly Inclosure, affording store of Corn, Pease, Fruits, good Pasturs, and larg Cattle, Sheep and Foul in abundance; divers Parks stored with Deer, and much Fish.

It contains in it one City, viz. Peterborough; which is a Bishops See, the Northampton is the Shire Town: It is divided into 20 Hundreds, and in them, 326 Parishes, 13 Market Towns and 5 Rivers. It is Bounded with Cambridgshire, Huntingtonshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Warwickshire, Leicestershire, and Lincolnshire; sends Members to Parliament 9, viz. 2 Knights of the Shire, Peterborough 2, Northampton 2, Brackley 2, Higham Ferries 1.

Northampton is a Town pleafantly seated on the Banks of the River Nen, where it meets with two Rivers, one North and the other South. This Town is memorable in past Years for its Sufferings; Anno 1106, in the contest of the Conquerers three Sons, viz. Robert, William, and Henry; and being held by the Barrons against King Henry the Third, Anno 1263, it was taken by Surprize, and the Walls Demolished; Anno 1459 King Henry the Sixth was here taken Prisoner after a Rloody Fight, in which was Slain Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, John Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury, the Lords Egremont and Beaumont: It suffered much when it was Stormed in the late Civil Wars: The greatest Misery that befel it was Anno 1675, when by an Accidental Fire it was almost all laid in Ruins; but is since Rebuilt, and appears in greater Splendour than ever, being so Uniform and Beautiful, that at this day it yields to few Cities in England. Here the Earl Rivers, Father-in-Law to Edward the Fourth, and the Lord John bis Son, were Bebeaded by Robin of Risdale and his Rout of Clowns.

North RTHAMPTON SHIRE. OF LECESTER Nun Eaton SHIRE Herbort PART Thrapston Coventrey TON Thynd on Hargrave Warwick Tlekwo 3 Northampton. Stretford Oulney SHIRE SHIRE Stony Streetford Movell 22 English Miles PART OF BUCKINGHAM 0XFORD Buckingham SHIRE South

Oundle, or Houndhill, is famous for a Well, wherein at certain times the beating of a Drum is heard, and People say it is usually the Alarm or Forerunner of Wars, or Changes of Government, and indeed before the late Revolution it was for many days together heard very plain; It bas a very fine Church Free-Sobool, and an Almes-House.

Peterbourough is famed for its Building, and the curious Work of its Cathedral; It is seated, as Northampton and Oundle are, on the River Nen.

At Higham Ferries was Born Henry Chichely, Cardinal and Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, in the Reign of Henry the Sixth, who Founded All Souls Colledge in Oxford.

Edgcot on Danes Moor, near this place a Bloody Battle was Fought Anno 1469, between Robin of Risdale, and Sr. John Coniers, against William Herbert Earl of Pembrook, the Lord Rivers and others.

At Fotheringay Castle Mary Queen of Scots was kept a long time Prisoner, and at last Beheaded in it. The other Towns of Note are Towcester, Daventree, Wellingborough, Kettering, Brabrook, situate mostly on pleasant Streams that branch in all parts of this County: At Wel-· lingborough are Medicinal Waters, upon the account of which Queen Mary the First Lay there for several Weeks. In the midest of the River Nen South of Peterborough, is a deep Gulf, so Cold in the Summer, no Swimmer is able to endure it, yet never Frozen in the Winter. The whole County is pleasantly sprinkled with Woods, and Tusted Groves, wherein great store of Hares shelter.

The Seats of the Nobility are Grafton Regis, a feat of the late Duke of Grafton; Burghly, Worthorp and Wakerly, belonging to the Earl of Exeter; Apethorp and Sewlhay Lodg, to the Earl of Westmerland; Brayton, Luswick, alias Lowick, Thrapston and Sudborow, to the Earl of Peterborough; Althorp to the Earl of Sunderland; Dean, to the Earl of Cardigan; Winwick, to the Earl of Craven; Holdenby, to the Earl of Fever-fham; Kerby, to the Lord Viscount Hatton, Baron of Kerby, &c. Astwell, to the Lord Ferrers; Easton Mauit, to the Lord Grey; Boughton and Barnwell Castle, to the Lord Montague; Rockingham Castle, Warmington and Stoke Albony, to the Lord Watson; Stean, to the Lord Crew; Peterborough-Pallace and Castle to the Lord Bishop of the Diocess: Besides these, there are many stately Houses of the Gentry that give a curious Prospect to most Roads in the County.

The Reign of King STEPHEN.

Though King Henry thought he made the Crown of England and Dateby of Normandy fure to his Daughter Maud and her Islue, yet for a whole Reign it was debarred from them; for Stephen, Third Son to Stephen Earl of Bloyce, by his Wife Adilicia, or Alice, Third Daughter to William the Conquerer, having infinuated himself into the Favour of the leading Nobles, Sailed for England, and Landed at Whit-Sand Bay, with whom came a wonderful Tempest, attended with Thunder and Lightening.

He was Crowned at Westminster on the 26th of December, Anno Dom. 1135, by William Corbell Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and so well was he Instructed in the former Examples, That by Wisdom and Policy he laboured to lay a sure foundation for his Advancement; and because Riches are the Sinews and Strength of the Strongest Kings, he therefore, to Enrich himself; seized on the Treasure of the Deceased King, and Bountifully disposed of it to such as either by Arms or Council were most likely to stand him in stead; he also created fundry Noblemen, and Dignified many others with the Honour of Knighthood; which made him find many fast Friends; and because benefits received are more frequently pleasing to the Vulgar, than Right or Reason to ingratiate with the Common Sort, he remitted feveral Taxes, of vhose Grievance they had complained in the latter end of the last Reign, but could have no Redress; causing, the better to confirm this Concession, a Charter to be made to the People under the Great Seal, for an Assurance of his not Revoking what he had confented to; he also made a Mitigation of the Severeties and Penalties of divers Laws; and by Solemn Oath Bound himself to Observe and Keep the same; he likewise Renounced the suture Seisures of all Ecclesiastical Dignities and Promotions, when they should become Vacant, the better to Endear the Clergy to him; giving to the Church and Churchmen such Graceful and Profitable Priviledges and Immunities as they would demand, exempting them (among other things) from the Authority of the Temporal Magistrate, for all Offence whatsoever, unless the Ordinary consent to give them up to the Secular Power. And to prevent fuddain Disturbances that might arise. he Builded many Forts, Fortresses, Bullwarks and Castles, Licensing the Nobles, Gentry and Clergy to do the like, for their Security: And to keep fair with David King of Scots, who was Unkle to Maud the Empress, he gave him the County of Cumberland, to hold it in Fee of the Crown of England, and do Homage for it when he should be so required, and Created his

Eldest Son Henry Earl of Huntingdon; yet this sufficed

not that restless King for soon after he entered England

in the Empresses Quarrel, and laid many Towns and Villages Waste, but being Encountered by Thurston Arch Bishop of York, he was Overthrown; and flying into Scotland, left about 10000 of his Men Dead behind him. Nor were the Welsh less troublesome, tho' he had Banished Baldwin D' Redvers for Rebelling against him, but greatly infested the Western Parts; whereupon an Army was sent, and gave them Battel; but by the Negligence of the Commanders, for want of due order, the English were put to the Rout, and many Slain, tho' more taken Prisoners; many of which were lead away by the Welsh-women, and so great a number were Drowned by the fall of a Bridge over Tweed, That a Passage was made over the Water with their Dead Bodies.

In the Sixth Year of this Kings Reign, the Empress Maud, being accompanied by her Brother-in-Law, Robert Duke of Glocester, Landed in England with an Army, which as it Marched was much encreased by the comming in of many English; and soon after joyned by Randulth Earl of Cheffer, with a Body of Wellh; hereupon the King, repoling no confidence in delay. but Experience advising him that time would be the chief enabler of his Adversaries Success, he Levied a ftrong Army, and Marched against them, so that a cruel Fight, with equal hopes, was Fought for many hours between them; but at length the common Souldiers on the Kings part, striving faintly, rather en deavouring to fave themselves, than to defend their Prince, they at last betook them to Flight, and lest him with a few Nobles and Gentry; yet with his Battel-Ax in his Hand, like an enraged Lion, he floutly maintained the Combate, Slaying many of the Enemy; till at last, being surrounded, and in vain demanded to yeild, he made a War himself against whole Troops, till being beaten down with a weighty Stone cast on him at a distance, he was taken Prisoner, and carried to Brifiol Caftle; where remaining about three Months. he was exchanged for the Duke of Glocester, who in the mean while was made a Prisoner to King Stephen's Oneen. However after this Battel, Maud received the Allegiance of all the Counties of England, except Kent; and Marching to Winchester, received there the Crown and other Regalia's, and so passing to London, she was received in Triumph; and now the reports of King Stephen's Defeat and Imprisonment, flying into Normandy, caused his Subjects there to flight him, and incline to Geoffery, Husband to the Empress; but changed their Minds, when they heard the King was at Liberty, and had strongly Besieged the Empress in Oxford, whither she was Fled, upon notice the Londoners confulted to feiz her, and deliver her Prisoner to the King, because she had refused to confirm to them King Edward's Laws, with all-their Charters and Priveledges. And withdrawing privately from London, for fear of a Surprize, she posted to Oxford, where she had not been scarce five Days, ere the King Beleagured the City, and pressed it with continual Assaults, tho' in the depth of Winter; fo that the Empress fearing to be Taken, dressed herself in White, and passing the Thames on the Ice, went through the Snow, which lay then thick on the Ground, to Abingdon, where taking Horse, she passed to Wallingford-Castle, kept with a strong Garison by her Friends; and by this time her Brother and Son Henry were Landed at Warram Haven, and from thence came to her with some Forces; but she wearied with the various turns and chances of War, foon after left England, and returned to her Husband who was in Normandy, having fent Prince Henry before; and so Oxford being Surrendered to the King, he went to Lincoln, and Summoned the Barons, who there Swore Allegiance to Eustace his Son, whom he Created Duke of Normandy; and Theobald Arch Bishop of Canterbury, refusing to Consecrate him, was obliged, for his contempt of the Kings commands, to leave the Land, and sly to Normandy; whereupon the Kings set on his Temporalities, but did not dispose of the Arch Bishoprick. It is Remarkable that the Kings of England, before Stephen, refrained going into Lincoln, upon the account of a fatal Prophecy pronounced by Merlin, viz.

When a King enters within Lincoln's Walls, His Reign proves Stormy, and he Childless falls.

The Kings Treasure being much wasted in the Wars he Fought, he demanded a Subsidy of the Clergy; but they resulting it, he was extream angry with the Prelates, demanding of the Bishops of Salisbury, Lincoln, and Ely the Keys of their Castles, and exacted great Sums of Money from them, pretending they were Indebted to the Crown for the Tenures of their Temporalities.

And now Prince Henry, being grown up gathered an Army, and Invaded England; nor was the King flow to Oppose him, but was somewhat retarded by the Indisposition of his Son, who fell into a Frenzy, of which he shortly Dyed, greatly lamented of the King, who had no more Children; but Sorrow giving place to Anger, he caused the Trumpets to sound a Charge against the Enemy; but as the two Armies were about to joyn, such a Storm of Rain and Hail fell, and continued so long that they were forced out of the Field to seek shelter; which gave a time for Parly; and the King weary of the War, and pittying the Sufferings of his People, being Childless, and not expecting any more Children; after many Messages from one to the other, a meeting was appointed; in which it was firmly agreed, That the King should Adopt Prince Henry his Heir, to Succeed him in the Kingdom and other his Dominions; and in lieu thereof, he should quietly enjoy the Crown during the Term of his Natural Life: which being Signed and Sworn to, all Hostilities ceased, and Henry was fent to suppress the Rebellion in Normandy, and oppose the intruding French, where in his Young Years he shewed himself an expert General and Souldier, in driving the Frenchmen out of the Garrisons. and Castles they had taken; but whilst he was busied in the Wars Abroad, King Stephen fell Sick of the Iliack Passion, and Dyed in the Monastery of Monks at Dover.

his

This Stephen was King of England and Duke of Normandy, the third Son of Stephen Earl of Bloyce by Addicia, or Alice. He began his Reign on Monday the Second of December, Anno Dom. 1135, and Reigned 18 Years, 10 Months, and 20 Days; being the 24th Sole Monarch of England. He was Buried at Feversham in Kent, in an Abby of his own Founding.

In his Reign, Anno 1136, a Fire began at London-Stone, and confumed all before it thence Eastward, as far as Aldgate, and Westward to St. Paul's Church; and the next Year Rochester was destroyed by Fire: And in the Third Year of his Reign St. Martin's Church without the Walls, and the Hospital, with Thirty Nine Houses, and much Riches, were Burnt. In the Last Year of his Reign, a little before his Death, appeared a plain sign of a Cross in the Moon.

Remarks on the County of Mozfolk, &c.

This County is pleasantly Situated, and receives many Advantages by lying so commodiously open to Sea, which Bounds it on the North-East, and part of the West; on the South, it is Bounded-by Susfolk; and the remaining part of the West, by Cambridgshire. It produces plenty of Butter, Cheese, large Cattle, Corn, Wooll, Deer, Coneys; Sheep, and store of Woollen Manufacture. It has in it one City, viz, Norwich, a Bishops See, it is divided into 31 Hundreds, containing 660 Parishes, 33 Market Towns, and 3 Rivers of note, the River Yar (from which Yarmouth takes its Name) being the Principal. It sends Members to Parliament 12; Norwich 2, Thetford 2, Yarmouth 2, Lynn-Regis 2, Castle-Rising 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Yarmouth lies advantagiously on the North side the River Yar, and has great Trade by Shipping; it was Founded by the Danes, the better to savour their Landing, when they Invaded this Island, and has been often Graced with the Presence of many Kings and Princes, as William the Conquerer, who Fortested it, Henry the Second, and Queen Elizabeth.

Norwich, the Antient Venta of the Romans, is a City of great Antiquity, often Sacked and Burnt by the Danes, especially it was levelled to the Ground by them Anno 1004. It suffered much in the Conquerers time, for siding with Earl Randdulph. The Cathedral was Founded by one Herbert, who Translated the Bishoprick from Thetford to Norwich, and was the first Bishop of Norwich. This City Imploys Thousands of People in the Woollen Manusasure, in making Stuffs, Bays, Says, Serges, Stockings, &c.

Thetford, the Antient Stigomagus of the Romans, was the principal seat of the Saxon East-Angle Kings, where King Edmund the Martyr was Overthrown by the Danes.

Lynn

T

Boun South the V Chee

Store Norv contai

Nam ment

Regis Yai River

ded by they A

the Pr Conqui Elizal

No

of gre especial It suff Rande who Ti and wa Thousas king Sti

was the King E

North GERMAIN OCEAN. Sneetham & Crake Walfinghan . Dafingham Dunton Wolcerton Taterford Skulthy I Burfan Fakenham Custon Www feed Vr feed Bystre Repeham Walton. yifbich Popon A Windham Hinghan Newton 4 Sething Attleburg Moulton Bediery o Fordham New Buckna Alboro Tofles Southery Northald A(RT OF Harle ton Craxton Banham Herlinge Bulla Thetford A·M Brandon SUF O BRIDGE PART Cby OF English Miles SHIRE. South

This

Lynn is a pleasant Sea-Port Town, bonoured with the Gift of a Rich Cup by King John; and their Charter was enlarged by Henry the Third, for their good service against the Outlaw'd Barons, and other Priviledges were added in

Henry the Eighth's time, the Name being changed from Lynn-Episcopi, to Lynn-Regis.

Elmham was Antiently the Bishops See, but it was Translated thence to Thetford, and thence to Norwich, where it now remains.

The Seats of the Nobility are Dukes-Place, belonging to the Duke of Norfolk; Oxnead-Hall and Paston-Hall, to the Earl of Yarmouth; Reynam-Hall and Stif-key-Hall, to the Lord Viscount Townsend; Castle-Rising, to the Duke of Norfolk; Norwich-Palace and Ludham-Hall, to the Bishop of the Diocess. Besides divers sightly Houses of the Gentry.

The Reign of King HENRY the Second, commonly called Henry Fitz-Empress.

A T the time when King Stephen Dyed, Henry was in Normandy, Besseging a strong Castle the French had a little before taken by Surprize; and being advised by some Nobles about him, to pass over for England, and leave the Siege, least another in his Absence might step into the Throne, as before had happened; he made a Reply sull of Discretion and true Valour, to this effect: The Kingdom of England shall henceforth be at my Command, in despight of those that dare to cross me most; and so shall these Intruding Frenchmen, ere I raise the Siege.

This resolution redoubled his honour among his Friends, and brought fear on the Enemy; for when they knew it, they surrendered the Castle, and submitted themselves to his Mercy; and so having settled Affairs in that Dukedom, with a Noble Train of Lords and Gentlemen he came for England, where he was Crowned three times, viz. By Theobald, Arch Bishop of Canterbury, at Westminster; Then at Lincoln, and lastly at Worcester: He chose his Council of the Gravest, Wifest, and most Learned Peers, and made Thomas of Becket Chancelour, and appointed fuch Judges and Learned Men in the Laws, by Industry and Labour, to Refine them; That the Common Laws were greatly Mended and Improved, being rendred more tolerable and profitable to the People; and after this, he divided the Kingdom into fix Circuits; and for the better administration of Justice, and Tiying of Causes between Subject and Subject, he appointed his Judges to go those Circuits twice a Year; which Order yet continues. He Banished the greatest part of Strangers, who in those days by multitudes flocked hither; and by their extraordinary Sparing, and painful Industry, procured much Wealth, and Begger'd the Natives.

He Exiled many of the Nobles, who contrary to their Duties had adhered to King Stephen; and differing much from the Opinion of his Predecessor, he affirmed that strong Castles and Forts, maintained in the heart of the Kingdom, did rather Animate Great Men, upon any displeasure to Revolt, than Fear them into Obedience; whereupon he caused most of them to be Razed to the Ground, and Seized such Mannors, Lordships, Possessions, as his Predecessors had either Sold or Given from the Crown, holding it to be the Duty of every Subject to resust the Gift or Purchace of such things as do immediately concern the Honour and

Main-

Mainteinance of a King. And the like he did in the Northern Parts, where many Great Men Commanding as they lift, had wrought themselves and their Posterity into many Honours, Castles, Mannors, which properly appertained to the Crown. He likewise took into his hands the Provinces of Cumberland, Northumberland, and the Earldom of Huntingdon, which David King of Scots, and Henry his Son, had received as a Gift from King Stephen, to favour his Wars against the Empress. However the King entered into Amity with Maicolm King of Scots, upon the same Conditions as were Agreed on in Henry the Firsts time; and in Token of his Subjection, the Scot Offered his Bonnet and Saddle upon St. Peter's Altar at York: And about this time, Theobald Dying, Becket was made Arch Bishop of Canterbury.

This King, even in time of Peace, had generally an Army on foot, and rarely kept them Idle; but would often Transport them to Normandy, and there having Exercised them, would bring them back again, so that on all occasions they were found ready and expert Souldiers. And now an advantage opened a way to the English for the Conquest of Ireland: For the Eastern part along the Sea being possessed by Dormat-Mac-Mabur King of Leinster, his Cruelties had highly incenfed his Subjects against him, especially upon taking away the Queen of Morice, King of Meath; fo that the Injured King Confederating with Roderick O Conor King of Connought, they beat him out of his Country; fo that he fled for England, and craved Aid of King Henry to Restore him; which upon taking an Oath of Fidelity and Subjection, was harkened to; when the better to encourage the design, the King for a Sum of Money obtained leave of Pope Adrian, an Englishman, then advanced to St. Peter's Chair, that throughly to Establish the Christian Religion therein and bring it to an acknowledgment of the See of Rome, but whilst he was preparing for this Expedition; new Troubles arose in Normandy which required his Presence to pacifie; but he granted his Letters Patents, by which he gave leave, with Encouragement, to his Nobles and such others as were willing, to go for Ireland.

Dormat, impatient of Exile, laid hold of this first Advantage, and Solicited the Nobles, but above all, he promised Richard the Kings Son, a Young Prince of a Warlike Spirit, his Daughter, a very Beautiful Young Lady, and all his Countries after his Decease to be made over to them; he likewise incited one Fitz Stephens. who with a Band of Valiant Welshmen was the first that Landed, and maintained his Ground with much Courage, till the Prince and divers Nobles came over; and with little trouble they seized the Town of Wexford, which was given to Fitz Stephens, for his part of the Charge of the War; and soon after many of the petty Irish Kings being Overthrown, Dormat was Restored, and Dublin the chief City, Submitting to him, he putto Death, by many Cruelties, such of his Capital Enemis as he found there.

However the Prince went Conquering on, and Subdued all before him; of which King Henry had no fooner Notice, but fearing this might flush Ambition, and make him practice with his own Subjects for the Crown, he speedily returned to England, and sent Mandates Commanding all the English under great Penalties to return; rallying the Nobility, for suffering the Prince in his Absence to go over; he was in this so far Obeyed, that the Prince was left in Dublin with a small Train; the Irish was not slow in taking the advantage

vantage of this Retreat, and therefore Besieged him is that prime City with an Army of 30000 Men; upon which he Sally'd with about 1500, and utterly Routed them, taking great Spoils; and so in obedience to the Kings commands, returned for England, where he surrendered into his Fathers hands all the Forts and Cities he had taken.

Anno 1172 the King Landed in Ireland with a Royal Army, and found Dermar to be Dead; however he brought such a Terror on the Country, That Roderick, and most of the other Princes submitted to him, intreating him to take the Government on him, as their Supream Lord; which he Accepted, with their Oaths of Fealty, and at Christmas he made a Royal Feast in the City of Dublin to the Petty Kings, and most of the Nobility of the Kingdom; and having settled the Civil and Ecclesiastical matters, reforming Barbarities and Abuses, he brought those that held out in Osser, under Subjection; and so returned in Tri-umph to London.

Thus was Ireland made subject to the Crown of England, and has fo continued ever fince, being a very spacious Country, viz. in Length 303 Miles, in Breadth 112, in Circumference 948. And fuch was the overfondness of this King to his Eldest Son, Henry, that he caused him and his Wife Margaret, Daughter to Lewis the French King, to be twice follemnly Crowned in the presence of his People, himself (the second time, for that day) leaving the Title of King, and serving as a Servitor at his Son's Table; whereat the Bishop of Winchester whispering the Young Henry in the Ear, faid, Never any King of England had such a Sewer at his Table: Nay, replied the Upstart, my Father need not think it any dishonour to him, as being but Royal Born on one side, when I had both a King to my Father, and a Queen Queen to my Mother; upon this the old King shook his Head, and whispered the Bishop, I find, my Lord, I have raised the Young Man too soon, and too late repent of it: And from that time he laboured to suppress the Pride of his Sons, which made them often Rebel and Conspire with his Enemies, drawing away the Hearts of many of his Subjects: And altho' at one time Lewis the French King, Henry, Geosfry and John, three of his Sons, joyned with Robert Earl of Leicester, Hugh Earl of Chester, and William King of Scots, against him; yet by plain Valour he Routed them, and made his Sons, and others that were his Subjects, submit to his Pardon; and soon after his Son Henry Dyed, in the slower of this Age.

But these were not all the Kings Troubles, for he was grievously pestered with the stubbornness of Becket, Arch Bishop of Canterbury: For upon his first admittance to that See, he refused to take the Oath for obfervation of the Articles administred to the Clergy, which the rest of the Bishops had done, because it was clearly against the Popes Authority; and perceiving the King much displeased at his refusal, he resolved to set the Pope on his Back; and therefore privately withdrawing himself, went to Rome, where he made grievous complaints against the King and Clergy of England, to Innocent the Second; upon which the Pope gave him the Pall, and appointed him Legate; fo upon his return, he delivered up his Chancelorship and Great Seal, not giving the King, or any other, an account why he did fo.

These Jars between the King and the Arch Bishop, imboldened the Inseriour Clergy to commit many Irregularities, for which they received but small punishment; for if they committed Murthers, Manslaughters, Fellonies or Robberie, being Censured by Men of their

their own Profession, they came off as they could wish; so that the Common Wealth being forely oppressed, to Redress these Grievances, the King found himself constrained to call a Parliament: In which that Law made in King Stephens Reign, which exempted the Authority of Temporal Judges from meddling with Ecclesiastical Affaires, was Repealed; and the Laws held in the Reign of Henry the First, and other the Kings Predecessors, Established and Inforced, being commonly, called Avita Legis; but he was stoutly opposed in his Proceedings by Becket and some other Bishops, who unadvisedly made themselves partakers of his Faction; but after many Conferences, Disputes and Consultations, all (except Becket) Ratified and Subscribed those newly revived Laws; but he by no means would do it. unless he might enter this Clause, [ Salvo Ordine suo ] which words clearly Annihilated the Life and Substance of those Laws; but the Bishops fearing the Kings Anger might turn to their great disadvantage, at last prevailed with Becket to Swear to the faid Laws; but upon another Pet taken, he recanted his Oath, and was Absolved by the Pope: Yet it nothing daunted the King, but rather Irritated him to Seiz into his own hands all fuch Temporalities as he had formerly given to the Arch Bishop, requiring him to render an Account of 30000 Marks he had Imbezilled during his being Chancellor. But the Prelate in Answer to this, boldly affirmed the King had freely given it to him as a free Gift, and ought not in Honour or Conscience to demand it back. Whereupon all the Moveables that appertained to him, were Seized by the Kings express command. At which Becket being disgusted, he went to Rome, without the Kings License; and the King perceiving his drift was to incense the Pope against him, tent his Ambassadors to represent his perversness, and evil evil carriage, and how reasonable things were, he had imposed on him; entreating the Pope to divest him of his Dignity, and he would provide for him and his in another station. But Becket had made such interest in the Court of Rome, That the Po'e not only refused it but with many Threatnings fent two Legates To Curfe the King and all his People, unless on their demands Becket were immediatly restored to his Dignity, also to his Lands and Moveables that were Confifcated; and in the mean while he commended him to the Abbot of Pont, nack, where he was kindly received, and for a time entertained. But upon the Kings Threats, that unless he was Expelled the House, that he would leave no Monk of that Order in France, he was dismissed; the King Commanding, That without his License no Cardinal nor Legate should presume to set Footing in England, and hereupon he Banished all Beckers Relations, which much grieved him, yet under chand he was encouraged, by Lewis the Brench King, resolutely to perfift in his Obstinacy; Whereupon King Henry, to put an end to this difference that much disturbed the Kingdom, Sailed to France, and in the French Kings presence. Conferred with the Arch Bishop, making him an Offer, That if he would take the Oath again, and fubscribe the Instrument Triparte, as himself and the Arch Bishop of York had done, he should be restored to his Favour, and enjoy all that was formerly appertaining to him, and his Friends recalled from Banishment; but then he started another obstacle, confenting to do it, if it might be with an exception of [ falvo bonore Dei.] This more angered the King than the former, for by it he feemed to Object the Laws made tended to the dishonour of God; and if so, confequently were void in themselves, bringing a scandal upon those that first Instituted them, and also upon hime himself and the Parliament that had Revived them. Whereupon Becket plainly told him, That he feared none but God; and since his Laws were derogatory to the Antient Customs and Priviledges of the Church, and Robbed God of his Honour, the King, in seeking to Establish them, should not have his will whilft he lived. And upon this Disagreement, the Pope sent two Legates to Interdict the Kingdom, till Becket should be restored to his Dignity. This fo far transported the King with Anger, (being then in Normandy) That he let some words fall in his Passion, which being taken hold on by some of his Courtiers, who mif-construed the Kings meaning, it proved the destruction of Becket: For soon after having leave to return, and beginning new Troubles in Church Matters, four of them Slew him at the High Altar in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, and with him two or three Monks that endeavoured his Rescue. Thus fell this troublesom Prelate, who rising from a low degree, his Father being a Londoner, and his Mother a Sarazen, in his Pride contended many Years with a Potent King, and brought many miseries on the Kingdom. Afterward he was Sainted, and many Superstitious People went on Pilgrimage to his Tomb. The Pope no fooner knew his Champion was fallen, but he Threatned, Curfed and Fulminated, yet with little Terrour. However, to make himself Easie, the King admitted two Cardinals to take his Purgation, who allotted his Penance, when he had denied his confenting to the Murther upon Oath, to War three Years in the Holy Land; (which he Redeemed, by Erecting three Religious Houses) That he should go from London to Canterbury bare Footed to visit Beckets Shrine, which he performed, and suffered himself to be Scourged by the Monks with Rods on his Naked Back; after which, upon his sending Presents to the Pope, he was Absolved.

R 3

Dure

During the Kings being thus Abroad his Queen had caused Rosamond his fair Concubine to be Poisoned; which so inraged him, that he cast her into Prison, and would be prevailed on by no Intreaty nor Submission to release her during his Life, tho' she endured many Miseries and Hardships in her confinement; till at length she was set at Liberty by her Son Richard's comming to the Crown, as will more at large appear in his Reign.

Doctor Gilbert Folliott of Oxford, however hardly the Pope had used the King, nevertheless perswaded him to regulate abuses in the Clergy, and curb their Pride; shewing him a warrant for it from the Word of God, and the Writings of Eminent Fathers of the Church, and other Good and Learned Men, That for as much as Kings are stilled The Nursing Fathers of the Church: It is their Duty to God to fee it well Ordered and Governed, and like a careful Husbandman suppress and keep under those rank Weeds of Error that would over-top and choak the Corn of Truth: He used many other Reasons and Arguments, so that the King began to assume his Power and look more narrowly into their Covetousness, Pride, and the Oppressions they laid on such as their Jurisdiction extended over in Temporalities; wherein he abridged and cut them short, which made them greivously complain that the King hearkened to Persons evilly affected to the Church; and the Pope having notice, who had advised the King, sent many Threats and Menaces of what Mischief he would do in England, if he did not put him out of his Protection; which he had no fooner done, but the Clergy, like so many Harpies, grievously Persecuted him, till they made him Abjure the Land; but this being contrary to the Kings pleasure, he was afterward recalled, and had leave to live a private Life.

Life. However the King neglected to pay the Tribute called Peter-Pence to Rome, and Garrifoned his Towns in Normandy very strongly, beating out the encroaching French, and Enlarging his Borders, tho' his Sons proved still troublesom to him, in under-hand siding with the French, and some discontented Normans and English; However he surmounted all Difficulties, till in Normandy he fell Sick, of a Feaver and Dyed at Chinon, on the Sixth of July, Anno Dom. 1189, when he had Reigned 34 Years, 8 Months, and 11 Days. He was Eldest Son to Geoffery Plantagenet, Earl of Anjou, Son to Foulk King of Jerusalem, by Maud the Empress, Eldest Daughter to Henry the First. He began his Reign October 25, Anno 1154; and Dying (as is said) was Buried at Font-Everard in Normandy.

He is accounted a Wise, Just, Learned and Valliant Prince; and tho' he little burthened his Subjects with Taxes, considering the Wars he had, yet he lest in his Treasury 900000 Pounds in Coin and Plate, besides Jewels and other things of great value, which surnished out his Son Richard for the Holy War. As for his fair Concubine, whom he entirely doted on, he caused her to be Buried at Godstow, near Oxford, and on her stately Monument placed this Epitaph.

Hic Jacet in Tumba Rosamundi non Rosa Munda, Non Redolet, sed olet, que Redolere Solet.

And may be Englished thus

Within this Tomb lies the World's chiefest Rose; She who was Sweet will now offend your Nose.

In the Fifth Year of this Kings Reign, 30 Persecuted Waldenses flying their Country came into England, and R 4 found found here no better Entertainment, for being Pronounced Heriticks by a Convocation of Bishops at Oxford, the King strictly Prohibited his Subjects to relieve them, so that wandering up and down, they Dyed with Hunger. And near this time, certain Jews Crucified a Child at Glocester, for which 20 of them were Hanged, and many Banished.

Anno 1163, one Peter, Priest of Cole-Church, was at the Charge of Building London-Bridge a New, with Timber. In the 20th Year of this Kings Reign Leice-fler was Burnt by his command, the Walls and Castle Razed, and the Inhabitants dispersed, for adhering to his Enemies. The same Year Christ-Church in Canterbury was burned, and six Years after the City of York was Burned; and 1185, the Abby of Glasenbury was consumed by Lightening; and the next Year a terrible Earthquake happening threw down many Buildings, and rent in pieces the Cathederal Church of Lincoln, Chichester was also Burne.

Near Orford in Suffolk, a Monstrous Fish was taken, having the shape of a Man upwards, and was kept a long time by the Governour in the Castle, Eating Raw Flesh and Fish greedily; but at last it got away by the breaking of a Sluce, and was carried to the 6ea again; and People were perswaded if it could have been made to Speak, it might have told many wonderful things.

Remarks on Motinghamshire, &c.

Otinghamshire is advantagiously Situate, and stored with plenty of Cattle, Corn, Wooll, Fruits, Plants,&c. It is partly Hilly, and partly Champaine, and pleasant Inclosures: It produces Cheese, Butter, Leather and Tallow good store; and Good Fellows praise it much for the Excellent cellent strong Ale Brewed in it. It is Bounded on the South with Leicestershire, on the Wost with Derbyshire and part of Yorkshire, on the North with part of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, and on the East with another part of Lincolnshire.

It contains 8 Hundreds, divided into 168 Parishes, as also 8 Market Towns; and is Watered with 21 great and small Rivers. It sends Members to Parliament 8, viz. East Retford 2, Newark 2, Notingham 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Newark, in this County, is pleafantly scated on the River Trent, thence called Newark upon Trent, to distinguish it: At Swinstead Abby in this place, King John was Poisoned by a Monk, and over the River there is a very sine Bridge.

Notingham is pleasantly seated on a branch of the same River, incompassed with pleasant Fields and Groves. Its Castle was kept by the Danes against Burthred King of Mercia, also against Ethelred and Alfred, two other Saxon Kings.

At Stoke near Newark, Lambert Symnel in the Reign of Henry the Seventh was utterly Defeated, and his up-holders, John-D' La Pool Earl of Lincoln, Thomas Garadine Chancelour of Ireland, Francis Lord Lovel, and others, were Slain, with 4000 Common Soldiers, and Symnel taken Prisoner, June 16, Anno Dom. 1487.

At Mansfield was Born the first Earl Mansfield in Germany, now a famous Family in the Empire, said to be one of King Arthurs Round Table Knights: Blythe is a pleasant Town situate on the River Idle. Besides these of Note and Antiquity are Hoverham, Retford, Worksop, and Southwell. In this County is the much noted Forrest of Shirwood, where Robin Hood held his chief Residence, and in it are bred a great many of those Hares called the Laner. In this County they digg a soft Stone, which Burnt makes makes a Plaister for Flooring their upper-Rooms, which dry is barder than Plaister of Paris. About Worksop grown store of Liquorice. The County contains many Parks full of Deer; The Rivers, Meers, and Ponds are stored with Fish and at the Season there is plenty of Wild-Fowl. The Seats of the Nobility are Worksop, belonging to the Duke of Norfolk; Welbeck Abby and Notingham Castle, to the late Earl of Newcastle; Holm Pierepont, to the Duke of Northumberland; Rufford, to the Mar. ques of Hallifax; Houghton and Chare-House, to the Earl of Clare; Shelford, to the Earl of Chefterfield; Bestwood, to the Earl of Burford; Newsted Abby, Bulvel Park, and Linby, to the Lord Rochdale; Averham and Killham, to the Lord Lexington, besides divers pleasant Seats of the Gentry, &c.

The Reign of King RICHARD the First.

RICHARD, the Eldest Son living of Henry the Second, was in Normanay at the time his Father Dyed there, and could not come over so soon as was expected, by reason that Country remained unsettled by Intestine Wars, and some Factions the French had made at a great Expence, to keep it so; which required necessarily his presence. However he sent over speedy orders for the Releasment of Queen Elianor his Mother, who had endured a long and hard Imprisonment by the strict command of King Henry, who would not forgive her at his Death, because she had Poisoned Rosamond, his fair and much beloved Concubine; and after her Releasment she was by King Richard appointed Regent of England till his Return. And then, by reason her own Experience had informed her what hardflardships those endured who Languished under Confinement, she caused to be set at Liberty all such as were in Prison for ordinary Offences, or small Debts. The latter she Paid, that the Subjects should be no Loosers by her commiseration, and Administred the Government Prudently, with much Moderation, Integrity and Iustice. The King at length coming over with a splendid Train of Nobility, was received with great Joy of the People, and puting an end to the Queen Dowager's Regency, was Crowned by Baldwin Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and Swore to keep feveral Articles administered to him by the Nobles, to the Ease and great Advantage of his Subjects, freeing all that were in Prison for Offences against the Crown, and such others as (without injustice done to his Subjects) he could acquit; and in the whole course of his Government so provided, that Mercy with Justice might extend to all; and finding his Brother John of a Turbulent Spirit, he heaped many Honours and Promotions on him, thereby to satisfie him, and alay his thirst of aspiring; viz. He Created him Earl of Lancaster, and gave him the Counties of Notingham, Devon, and Cornwal, Married him to the fole Daughter and Heiress of the Earl of Glecester, by which means he obtained the Lordship of that County. But these great Favours and Donations answered not the Kings expectations, for when he had showered on him fuch Bounties, he found him by his practices reaching at the Crown, as much relying on a Faction at home, and the promises of the French to assist him. when need required it: It being a Policy of theirs to divert King Richard, (whom all Historians allow to be a Valiant and Warlike Prince) from Warring on France, in Reparation of the many Injuries his Subjects in Normandy had Sustained by the Inroads they had frequently made. However, the King mildly reproving his Brother, and shewing him his Ingratitude, to nurture such Designs, also the Guilt and Danger he would incur, he made many Excuses and Protestations he had no such Designs as had been suggested of him, and they were both his and the Kings Enemies who had spread those reports to set them at variance.

These and his renewed Protestations of Loyalty and Obedience, refolving to live quiet, and contribute all he could to the Advantage of the Commonweal, prevailed with the King to accept of his Submission, and have a good opinion of his Fidelity; and the King, as an Expiation for the Offences himself had committed against Henry his Father, making a Vow to accompany the other Christian Princes for the Recovery of the Holy Land from the Turks, and other Infidels, who grievously Oppressed the Asian Christians, he the more easily winked at what he had plainly seen; so that a Reconcilement being made, the Kings thoughts were wholly taken up with his intended Expedition; but having Lavished away the vast Treasure his Father left in large Donations, he found Money was wanting to furnish him out with such an Army and Equipage as might stand with his Honour. He had been Solicited, befides his own Inclinations, by the Pope, to this Undertaking, with many promised Blessings, (as others had been) if by their Arms they Regained the Holy City Jerusalem from the Infidels; yet to raise Money he refused to Levy any Taxes on his Subjects, but Sold his Castles of Barwick and Roxborough to the King of Scots, for 10000 Pounds; the Lordship and Earldom of Durham to Hugh, then Bishop of the See, for 16000 Pounds, as also Honours, Lordships, Mannors, Priviledges, Royalties and Crown-Lands upon other Grants and Tenures, to divers of his Subjects for much Money; fo that having, as he supposed, a sufficient Treasure, he prepared things in a readiness; but contrary to his expectation, it falling short, he borrowed Sums of such as he had formerly Liberally bestowed his Bounties on, protesting that for the performing so great and Honourable a service, he was not unwilling to Sell his City of London, if he could find any body of Ability to Purchase it, rather than by Taxes he would Oppress his Subjects.

and

In this Undertaking, at the Instance and earnest Incitement of the Pope, were also Engaged Frederick the Emperer, Philip the Second, Sirnamed Augustus, King of France, Leopold Arch Duke of Austria, and many other Princes; fo that a gallant Army was prepared, and great store of Treasure. With these King Richard entered into an Agreement that their General Rendezvous should be in the Island of Sicily the following Spring, and That such Wealth and Booty as God and good Fortune should put into their Possession should be equally divided between them and their Forces; and thus every thing being in a readiness, King Richard appointed William Langehamp Bishop of Ely, Regent, in his Absence; and soon after, the better to Establish the Bifhops Authority among the Nobles, who little approved him, the Pope appointed him his Legate in England; and so early in the Spring, the King with about 30000 Men at Arms, with divers Nobles and Gentlemen, set Sail and fafely arrived in the Port of Messina in Sicily. whither the King of France, and some other Princes whose Territories lay near, were got before him; and there they renewed their Resolves not to Return till they had won Jerusalem; but this fair Sunshine held not long on the French Kings part, for his Army being exceeded by the Gallantry of the English, he feared they they would win from him the Glory of the Undertaking, which his Flatterers had told him would redound totally to his Honour, and the lasting Fame of the French Nation; fo that clouds of discontent appeared on his Brows, and in a little time he gave free Reins to the former Displeasure, that had been hushed; for that King Richard had rejected his Sifter, and Married the Daughter of the King of Navar; yet as well as he could he dissembled his displeasure, seeing the Eyes of all Christendom were fixed on this Undertaking; and without the apparent loss of his Honour, he could not presently draw back when he was so far Engaged; and so weighing Anchor, they set forward with a fair Gale; but at length a Storm arising, the English Fleet was separated from the rest, and driven on the Coast of the pleasant Island of Cyprus, where fome of his Ships putting in to Repair the Dammage they had received at Sea, divers of their Marriners upon Landing were Slain by the King of the Island's command, who professed himself a Christian and wellwisher to this Undertaking; this so much transported King Richard with a desire of chastizing such Inhospitality and Outrage, that he Tack'd with his whole Fleet, Landed his Army on the Island, and easily Overthrew the King and took him Prisoner, carrying him along with him Manacled in Silver Chaines to Syria; and having secured the Island to his Interest, by leaving a Governour and Garifons in the strong Forts, he Sailed to Ptolomais, which place he had News the Christians had Besieged, and there was Joyfully received by many of the Princes in Leagre; and having a day or two refreshed and comforted his Forces, it was agreed that a general Assault should be given at the places where the Battering Rams and other forcible Engins had made Breaches in the Walls; which was fo hotly carried on, that all their Out-works were won in a few Hours; whereupon the Garison, not expecting present Relief, and searing to be put to the Sword, if the Town was taken by Storm, Surrendered upon Condition they might safely depart thence: This was agreed to upon their leaving 5000 Hostages till a great Sum of Money should be Paid, and that Saladine the Turkish Sultan, should deliver up such Prisoners as he had taken being Christians; and so about 50000 Marched out, many of them almost Starved, the Famine having been extream among them.

ried

No fooner they had vacated the City, but the Duke of Austria's Standardbearer hasted to plant his Masters Colours on the Battelment, as if by the fole Valour of the Austrian Arms the Place had been Taken; which indeed had the least share in the Danger: This so highly displeased King Richard, that not staying to Command any other to do it, he stept on the Wall, and plucking down those Proud Colours, trampled them under his Feet: This put the Duke into a great chafe. which made him afterward Confederate with Lewis the Second, to hinder the progress of Affairs in the Holy Land, that King Richard might not carry from them the Glory: Yet he little regarded their Anger, but pursuing this success, gave Saladine Battel not far from this City, and Overthrew him with incredible Slaughter, having the execution of the Enemy for many Miles, fo that the Fields and Lanes were covered with their dead Bodies; and thereupon he Marched his Army towards Jerusalem, being chosen General by the Knights Templars and most of the Princes. But in the midest of these great Designs, Mallice thrust in to hinder the progress of the Christian Arms, as to what was intended to be done, for the Discontents of Lewis and the Duke of Austria more and more growing on them, them, they at length shewed it so openly as to with draw a great part of their Forces from the Army; and the former pretending want of Health, and the Climates not agreeing with him, Sailed back to France, carrying with him the best of his Forces; and tho' before he went he gave his Oath, at the earnest Request of the Popes Legate, that he would not injure King. Richards Territories neither in Normandy nor England, yet foon after recalling the rest of his Forces, with them went the Duke of Austria, whom he had constituted his Lientenant General in Syria: He did make War against Normandy, and strove to raise distractions in England; but in the former Attempt he was mostly worsted, yet at last swept away some small Towns and Castles; and in the latter, the Threatnings of the Popes Curse against all that should Rebel in England prevented his Intrigues in a great measure, though some Commotions happened, as you will hear in the fequel.

Notwithstanding thse Disappointments, King Richard Wintered his Army in those Towns the Sultan had Ruinated in his Retreat, to prevent their falling into the hands of the Christians; Rebuilding and Fortifying those that were most commodious, resolving in the Spring to lay Siege to Jerusalem; but when his Forces were drawn into the Field, he found by Sickness, and many that had Deferted, his Army was fo wasted that he was not able to undertake it. The Sultan fearing fome fuch defign had strongly Garifoned it with 30000 Men: However the King Marched forward, and took by the way divers Castles and Fortresses, and 5000 Camels Laden with Riches from Egypt and Arabia, which much Encouraged his Soldiers, as being mostly distributed amongst them: When one day Marching, a Knight climbing up a high Hill, came hastily to the

King

King, and told him from thence he might have a Profnect of Jerusalem; which instead of Joy, drew Tears from his Eyes, when lifting up his Hands he passionately faid. O Lord, I beseech thee let me not See thy Holy City. since by the Disappointments I have met with, I am not able to Deliver it out of the hands of the Enemies of thy Name 2 and so turning aside, he returned to Ptolomais, where he found some new Adventurers Arrived, when Marching cross the Country, and Subduing all before him, he brought sucha Terrour upon the People, that his very Name was frightful to them; and as fome Historians have it, a long while after used to Bugbare their Children with it, when they cry'd and were untoward, viz. If you bold not your peace, King Richard. is coming, and will have you; which had such effects on them, that they became still as Lambs. However finding no more Forces were in Europe preparing to enable him to take Jerusalem, the main design of his Preparations, having private notice that his Brother John was practicing against him; and fearing whilst he was warring abroad, he might lofe his Kingdom at home. he resolved to make such Conditions with the Turkish Sultan, as might be best for the Settlement and Peace of the Christians in Syria. But the crafty Infidel being very sensible of the weak condition the Christian Army was in, would not hearken to any other Terms than to have all the Towns that were taken, Ptolomais Excepted, furrendered; and upon that condition they should be fuffered to have a quiet Enjoyment of their Effects, and to Trade in the Country; and so having made this Agreement, and Sold the Island of Cyprus for a Sum of Money to Hugh of Lusingham, the last Christian King of Jerusalem, though at that time but in Name, which Title he confered on King Richard, (and it lasted to many of our Kings afterward, who were Riled Kings of Jerusalem) he Embarked in divers Vessels with his Queen, who had accompanied him in that dangerous Voyage, and Sailed for England; but the Ship he was in, being separated from the rest of the Fleet in a Storm, was driven on the Coast of Histria, lying between Aquileia and Venice, where he was Ship-Wrack'd, and saving his Life by Swimming, was made Prisoner, and presented to the Duke of Austria, in whose Territories he Landed; but the Queen, who was in another Ship, and the rest of the Fleet, came safe to England.

The King by misfortune thus made a Prisoner to his Enemy, whom he had difgusted by throwing down his Standard, as is faid, was Sold by him for 40000 Pounds to the Emperer Frederick, who set his Ransom at 100000 Pounds, Fourscore Thousand of which was raised in England, but Duke Leopold was constrained to Pay the other Twenty Thousand Pounds, before he could be released from the Popes Curse, pronounced against him for making a Prince his Prisoner, who for the honour of the Christian Name, had Warred Victoriously in the Holy Land: So that after almost a Years Imprisonment, the King was set at Liberty; of which Lewis the French King had no sooner notice, but be sent John the Kings Brother word, The Devil was got loofe again. However he did not immediately return to England, but went to Normandy, and with the Terror of his coming frighted the French out of many frong holds they had taken in his absence; then raising a puissant Army, he entered France, wasting all before him with Fire and Sword, reducing to his Subjection all fuch places as had been taken, and made the Rebellious Norman Peers, who had engaged in the French Fattion, proftrate themselves before him, whose humble Submission he accepted, and accordingly Pardoned them, on promises of future Obedience and Fidelity.

Let me now speak of something that happened Remarkable in England during the Kings absonce: I told you he had left the Bishop of Ely Regent; This Man being of mean Parentage, his Grandfather a Plowman, and himself the Son of a Cowheard, soon forgot his Original, (as fuch mostly do who are raised from a low Estate to high Promotion) and grew so Insolently Proud, that he would not Ride abroad without a Guard of 500 Men to attend him, his Table was exceeding Expensive on the Publick Cost, and his Infolencies over all forts (as well the Clergy as Laiety) was so great, that he soon procured himself a Universal Hatred, yet a while he Proudly spread his Peacocks Train, being Served at his Table, and every where Waited on by the Sons of Noblemen, to whom he gave in Marriage (with iome Portion and Preferment) divers of his Rustick Kindred, thinking thereby to strengthen his Interest: but this proved to him a broken Reed, for finding he was generally hated by the Nobles and Commons, to shun the storm that threatened him with some violent End, he fewed up many Jewels and fome Gold in the Garments of a Pedlar Woman, and Disguised in that Habit resolved to leave the Land, carrying under his Arm a piece of Country Cloath, which he offering to fale at Dover, was Discovered, and Seized, suffering much outrage from the Common People; and being fent to London, the Lords Committed him to the Tower, where he remained till the Kings return; who not only released him, but restored him to his Bishoprick; yet having seen the folly of his Pride, he grew more Humble, and shortly after Travelling to Rome Dyed by the way, unlamented by all that had known his former carriage.

The Queen-Mother, in the Kings absence, perceiving her Son John's aspiring, who had a hand in bringing the S 2 Bishop

Bishop of Ely into Disgrace, and Outing him, made, strong Party of her Friends, as soon as she heard King Richard was a Prisoner, compelling the Nobles, and fuch others as were in Offices and Trufts, to Swear to be True to him, and Conferve the Realm to his use and behoof; and John hearing he was Released, and in Normandy, hasted to excuse himself, submitting to his Grace and Mercy, voluntarily furrendering all the Forts and Castles he had Seized into his hands, saying, What be had done he was provoked to do by the Extraordinary Pride and Insolent Behaviour of the Bishop of Ely, who unworthily had disordered the Government of the Realm, and particularly for the Outrages he had committed on the Person of leffery Arch Bishop of York, the Kings Brother: Yet by the Peers he was Condemned in the Forfeiture of his Goods, Estate and Honours, but not long after received them again, and was restored to the Kings Favour, and came with him to England, where the King at his Landing was Joyfully received by, Hubert, Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and most of the Nobles; causing himself a second time to be Crowned, and the Coronation Solemnity was performed at Winchester. Then he made a new Broad-Seal, by which device he got much Money out of his Subjects, who were obliged to have their Patents, Royal Grants for Offices, and other Evidences, new Sealed; the former being declared null and void. And yet this not fufficing to put the Kingdom in a good Settlement, pay his Soldiers Arrears, and repay the Money that had been taken upon trust for his Ransom, the Treasuries of Religious Huses were ransacked; and a Parliament being called, he was allowed to reassume into his hands such Mannors, Lordships, Lands and Offices as had been disposed of at his fetting out to the Holy War, for Ready Money; fo that the Purchasers were enforced to content themselves with the Profits they had Received, in lieve of the Money they had Paid.

felves

After this, as the King was at Dinner, in his Palace of Westminster, News came to him that the French had Besieged Nerville in Normandy, upon which, in a great Passion he Swore He would never turn his back till be bad got thither with his Army; and to fave his Oath, a place by order was immediatly broken in the Wall through which he passed, the breach heing left open above a hundred Years afterward, in Remembrance of it; and his Arrival so terrified the French, That they no sooner heard of his Landing, but they raised the Slege: Yet pursuing this Advantage, he gave a mighty Army of them Battel near Gysors, flaying great numbers, and putting the rest to Flight, he not having half their number: Whereupon faid he, Not we, but Dieu Et Mondroit, that is, God and our Right, hath obtained this Victory. After which, the Kings of England made it their Motto under their Arms; and so he prosecuting this Victory, took many Towns. But in the midest of his Success. Pope Innocent the Third Interceding, a Peace was concluded between the two Crowns; but it held not long, for the French giving new provocations, he passed the Seas again with a powerful Army, when closely Besieging the Castle of Challons near to Lymois, as he took a private view, he was descried and known by a common Soldier, who Shooting at him with a square impoisoned Arrow out of a Steel Bow, grievously Wounded him in the Arm; yet he took the Castle by Storm, and caused all he found therein to be Slain, except the Person who wounded him, who being brought before him, and demanded bow be durst shoot a Poisoned Arrow at the King? The Fellow (who expected he was referved for Death by Cruel Torments) feemed not at all daunted, but boldly reply'd, That in the War he had lest his Father and his Brother, and was exceeding glad Fortune had so well assisted him, in Revenging their Deaths. Upon this resolute Answer, the King (much contrary to the expectation not only of the Prisoner, but all the rest) freely Pardoned him, and caused him to be led out of the Army, to avoid the violence of the Soldiers towards a Person who had Slain their King; for indeed he Dyed within three days after, viz. the 6th of April Anno Done. 1199.

This King Richard began his Reign Anno Dom. 1189, and Reigned 9 Years and 9 Months, Dying in the 42 Year of his Age, and was Buried at Font-Everard in Normandy, at his Fathers Feet, as himself had directed. He was, for his surpassing Valour, called Ceur de Leon, or Lions-Heart, searing no danger, where the attempt was Honourable.

In his Reign the Jews were Banished out of Norwich, St. Edmunds-Rury, Stamford, Lyn and York; in which last place about 500 of them, besides Women and Children, entered a Tower of the Castle and when they found themselves hard pressed by a Siege, they cut the Throats of their Wives and Children, and cast them on the Heads of the Besiegers; then in a desperate mood, Fired the Tower, and Burnt themselves in it, the Quarter was offered if they would have Surrendered.

Alfo in this Reign flourished the famous Outlaws Robin Hood, or Robin of the Wood, and Little John, who Robbed and Spoiled (for they had a large Retinue) divers places, Inhabiting mostly the Woods; yet took nothing from the Poor, but on the contrary Relieved them with what they took from the Rich, and were bountiful Benefactors to such as stood in need of it; but this Gang was broke by the Death of Robin Hood, their Ring-Leader; who being let Blood for a Diftemper stemper by a Fryer, the Treacherous Monastick let him Bleed to Death, and got by it the promised Reward of 500 Marks; tho' foon after being taken by the rest, he was tied to a Tree and Shot to Death with Arrows.

Remarks on the County of Mothumberland.

T His Northern County, the Extremity of England, is Bounded on the North and part of the West with Scotland, another part of the West with Cumberland, on the South with part of Cumberland and the Bishoprick of Durham, and on the East with the German Ocean.

In many Parts there is Plenty of good Corn, it produces a profitable Breed of Cattle, has in it many pleasant Gardens, Orchards, Parks, Hare, and Coney Warrens; on the Western side it is somewhat incommoded with Hills, but otherwise produces Plains, Inclosures, Meadows, Woods, tho' not many. It contains 46 Parishes, 5 Market Towns, and is branched with 21 Rivers. It sends Members to Parliament 8, viz. Berwick upon Tweed 2, Morpeth 2, New-Castle on Tine 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

This County was the Antient Northumbrian Kingdom of the Saxons, and suffered much by lying so near the borders of Scotland; especially when the Scots utterly destroy'd the Pictish Kingdom, that had for some time screened them from the Incroachment of that Northern Nation. At a Place called Otterburn, a great Battle was Fought between the English and Scots.

Alnwick is of note for the mighty Victories the English gained over the Scots, and being the usual Seat of the Northumbrian Kings; and lately of many of the Noble Earls of Northumberland.

At Emildon, Duns, Sirnamed Scotus, was Born; & Person of great Wit and Subtilty in School Philosophy. Berwick Berwick is pleasantly situate on the Tweed, looking a great way from its losty Turrets into both Kingdoms, and is sam us for the many Sieges it has held out against the Scots in divers Kings Reigns. Newcastle is pleasantly seated on the River Tine, that branches all the Southern part of this County, and produces store of Salmon, as dos also the River Bywel. Newcastle is also samous for furnishing the City of London with Coals brought thence by Sea, and therefore commonly called Sea-Goals; which Trade is also a great Nursery for Seamen. Upon the Hills near North-Tine, tho' Boggy and full of Water, there are great heaps of Stones, which some take as a Monument of a Roman, British, or Saxon Victory.

The Seats of the Nobility are Ogle Castle, Bothat Castle, Heple Tower, belonging to the Noble Family of the Duke of Newcastle; Prudhoe Castle, to the Duke of Summerset; Wark Castle, Chillingham Castle, Dunstaburg Castle, and Horton Castle, to the Lord Grey of Wark; Widerington Castle, to the Lord Widerington; and some Houses there are of the Gentry very Beautiful, and pleasantly Situate; especially on the East side, with a curious Prospect to the Sea; by means of whose Washing its Shoars, this County receives great Benefit.

The Reign of King JOH N.

R ICHARD the First Dying in Normandy, and Buried at Font-Everard, his Brother John Earl of Lancaster by his own Right, and of Glocester in Right of his Wise, having long aspired to the Crown, thought this was his time to push hard for it, although Arthur Plantaginet, Son to Geessery his Elder Brother, was Living; and so with what store of Treasure he had heapt

ed up, making many of the Nobles, and some Leading Commoners of his Party, he openly laid claim to the Soveraignty of England, as his Undoubted Right, and Arthur not being able to stand in competition with him this way, as being little Interested in the English, by reason he had for the most part been brought up beyond the Seas, and consequently a Stranger to the greatest part of the Nation, his Right was carried away in the current of the Peoples Inclinations, and John was Crowned at Westminster by Hubert Arch Bishop of Canterbury; at what time the Bishop (to flatter the an Oration, That the Grown of England was meerly Arbitrary and Elective; yet the more fober part of the Nobility, knowing this Princes Haughty Temper, Swore him to feveral Articles upon his admission to the Crown, for Observing and Maintaining their Rights and Priviledges, Antient Laws and Customs, Or.

Scarcely was King John Settled in his Throne, but

People, and curry-favour with the King) declared in

Philip the French King, underhand affifted by others, fent for Arthur to his Court, protesting a great deal of Love and tender Affection to him; Informed him of his Title to the Crown of England, Dutchy of Normandy, and Britany, animating him to raise his Spirits, and use his Courage, for the recovery of what was so unjustly taken from him; and that if he were destitute of Friends that might Advise and Council him, he and his Nobles would willingly supply that desect; if he wanted Gold or Silver, the Sinews of War, his Coffers should be open at his Service; or if Valiant Men to Fight for him and his Right, many Thousand Frenchmen would venture their Lives in his Quarrel.

These large and Friendly prossers, which rather proceeded from the sear King Philip had of Englands Strength and Prosperity, which might (as indeed it after-

The HISTORY afterwards fell out) get the Afcendant over France than for any cordial Love he bore to the Young Prince keeping him only as a Trump Card in his hand, to play his Game as he faw occasion: However these great Proffers bore up his Spirits, and he wholly cast him. felf on the French King for Protection; submitting to be Governed and Ruled by him in all things it Where. upon Forces were Levied in France and Normandy, and hereupon some Strong Holds in the latter, Revolted from King John, and declared for Ptince Arthur, and others they won; however the Kings Lieutenant raised Forces to oppose them; so that between both Armies there happened divers Encounters, with various fuccess, King John hearing of these stirs in Normandy, thought there remained nottime for delay, but gather. ing a strong Power passed the Seas, and joyning with his Lieutenant retook several Towns, and Overthrew the Young Prince in a fet Battel, with great Slaughter of the French Nobles and others, that were Engaged with him. This made the French King begin to confider he had laid hold on the wrong end of the staff, and from that time procured divers Prelates, and some Princes, as Mediators, to bring on Foota Freaty for a Peace, which Treaty gave both fides a short breathing. But the King of England's Proposals being no less than the restoring all the Towns taken, a defraying of the charges of the War, and that King Philip should put for ever Prince Arthur out of his Protection, it came in the end to nothing; fo that the War renewed more furious than before, by which means the poor Inhabitants of Normandy were grievously Oppressed, by Burning, Plundering, and many other Miseries attendant on Hostilities. However, to repress these Outrages of the Invading French, the King raised a yet greater Almy, but then his) Treasure was much too scanty to defray the s of that Expedition;, of which the Nobles and ons were no sooner made sensible, but of their cord they largely contributed, rather than the r of the King and Kingdom should be Eclipsed Bravadoes of a dastardly Nation, and then ng with a gallant Army in Normandy, the numhis Forces were daily angmented; and not long he two Armies met, and fought a dreadful Battel, ch the French were Overthrown, and Prince with divers of the French Nobility, taken Priand fent to the Castle of Roan; where, as it was he leaving from the Walls to make his Escape? d fhortifell into the Moat, and there was distriction Historians who have made Remarks few Steps there are between the Prisons and Graves s, tho' they do not charge the King with the lg of it, are apt to conjecture that this Prince be Drowned by other means than his own And indeed the King had all his Life aftervery troublesome and turbulent Reign. For Prince was Dead, the French King began to his Vizor, laying claim to Normandy in his ght, and poured in fuch a number of Forces: ng John's Treasure being spent, he could not any reasonable time Soldiers sufficient to oppose krent, fo that wining many Towns and Castles, ble Dutchy (to prevent the Ruin and Desolareatened it) Subjected it self to the French King, had been disbranched from France about 319 And that the King should not be at leasure to oit, the French King underhand found him work b, by making Pope Innocent the Third his Enemy.

found

ut this time. ert-Arch Bishop of Canterbury, Dying, the Monks afterwards fell out) get the Afcendant over I than for any cordial Love he bore to the Young P keeping him only as a Trump Card in his ha play his Game as he faw occasion. However these Proffers bore up his Spirits, and he wholly cast self on the French King for Protection; submitt be Governed and Ruled by him in all things: W upon Forces were Levied in France and Normand hereupon some Strong Holds in the latter, Rev from King John, and declared for Prince Arthuothers they won; however the Kings Lieutenant Forces to oppose them; so that between both there happened divers Encounters, with various

King John hearing of these stirs in Not thought there remained no time for delay, but ing a strong Power passed the Seas, and joyni his Lieutenant retook several Towns, and Ove the Young Prince in a set Battel, with great St of the French Nobles and others, that were I with him.

This made the French King begin to confider laid hold on the wrong end of the staff, and fritime procured divers Prelates, and some Prin Mediators, to bring on Foota Freaty for a Peace Treaty gave both sides a short breathing. But i of England's Proposals being no less than the reall the Towns taken, a defraying of the charge War, and that King Philip should put for ever Arthur out of his Protection, it came in the end thing; so that the War renewed more surfous a fore, by which means the poor Inhabitants of No were grievously Oppressed, by Burning, Plum and many other Miseries attendant on Hossistic However, to repress these Outrages of the In French, the King raised a yet greater Abmy, it found his Treasure was much too scanty to defray the charges of that Expedition; of which the Nobles and Commons were no fooner made fensible, but of their own accord they largely contributed, rather than the Honour of the King and Kingdom should be Eclipsed by the Bravadoes of a dastardly Nation; and then Landing with a gallant Army in Normandy, the number of his Forces were daily angmented; and not long after the two Armies met, and fought a dreadful Battel, in which the French were Overthrown, and Prince Arthur, with divers of the Evench Nobility, taken Prifoners, and fent to the Castle of Roan; where, as it was given out leaping from the Walls to make his Escaper he leaped short fell into the Moat, and there was Drowned :: Tho Historians who have made Remarks What a few Steps there are between the Prisons and Graves of Princes, tho' they do not charge the King with the knowledg of it, are apt to conjecture that this Prince came to be Drowned by other means than his own attempt. And indeed the King had all his Life afterward a very troublesome and turbulent Reign. For now the Prince was Dead, the French King began to pull off his Vizor, laying claim to Normandy in his own Right, and poured in fuch a number of Forces: that King John's Treasure being spent, he could not Levy in any reasonable time. Soldiers sufficient to oppose their torrent, so that wining many Towns and Castles, the whole Dutchy (to prevent the Ruin and Desolation threatened it) Subjected it felf to the French King, after it had been disbranched from France about 319 Years. And that the King should not be at leasure to Regain oit, the French King underhand found him work at home, by making Pope Innocent the Third his Enemy. For about this time, of the Order of St. Augustin met in the Cathedral Church about Midnight without the Kings knowledge or License, and chose one Reynold, a Brother of their own, to Succeed in the Archiepiscopal See, taking of him an Oath to travel to Rome, and procure his Inveltiture and receive the Pall from the Pope.

Hubert Arch Bishop of Canterbury, Dying, the Monks

01

The King hearing of these unwarantable Proceedings, was much displeased; which so affrighted the Monks, that to regain his Favour they proceeded to a fecond Election, and chofe John Grey, a Person whom the King had nominated to them, who was then Bishop of Norwich; and so the Kings Anger being appealed, he fent Ambassadors with his Letters to the Pope, to Entreat him to Ratify the fecond Choice & But in the mean time a new Schism or Faction appeared; for the Suffragan (because he was not made acquainted, nor an Actor in either of the said two Elections) made suit to the Pope to displace them both.) But he, imitating the proud Example of many of his Predecessors, who coveted to swim against the stream, and seldom or never granted any Kings request, least in some fort they should be thought to be yeilding, neglected both their fuits. and confirmed Raynold who was first chosen: But the King growing angry hereat, the Monks to please him, rather out of fear than complacency, refused to receive into their Quire, or own the Arch Bishop the Pepe had Confirmed, tho' he was of their own chusing; giving this Reason for it, viz. That it was done Clandestinly, and at an unseasonable Time, for as much as the choice was made in the Night, when as it should have been done in the open Day; and fo they concluded it void, and in it self a Nulity, yet remained good, till by Judicial Proceedings, and a Sentence, it were pronounced void; for that this matter was Controverted at Rome, where the Pope made specious shews and pretences of acromodating the matter to heal the Schifme. to that it should be to the latisfaction of the King and Monks; but his aim was otherwise, for he designed to prefer a creature of his own, viz. Stephen Langton. a Man that would always move by his dictates, having before been made Cardinal of Chrisogone, and privatly he Wrote to the Monks to Choose him; yet not so cunningly but the King had Notice of it, and strictly charged them not to proceed to any other Election: but the Popes Threats and Promises of Rewards, difpensed with their Obedience to the Kings Commands.

tences

fo that they did Elect him their Arch Bishop.

This fo exasperated the King, that he commanded, on severe Penalties, no Appeals should be made to Rome, and that from thence forth he would take a Brick account of fuch of his Subjects that for any matter of Right or Justice should go to Rome to require it, seeing he had Prelates, Noblemen, and Judges fufficient to determine any Controversies within his Kingdom, that should arise, either in Church or Common-Weal; and added. That he would rather expose himself to Ten Thousand Deaths, than basely (as he was required) make himself and his Kingdom Servil to the Popes Infolency and Peremptory Commands. But on the other fide, the Pope threatened what he would do if he was not Obey'd in the Election of Langton, and the calling home such Monks as had Fled through fear of the Kings displeasure, on this last Election; and because this was not speedily done, he sent his Apostolical Command to the Prelates of London, Ely, Worcester, &c. to Interdict the Kingdom, if the King continued in his obstinacy (as he termed it.) This Commission was put in Execution, and the Church-Doors were shut up for several Years: Some Authors fay Six; there being neither Prayers, Sermons, Christenings, nor Service at the Funerals of the Dead, said or performed publickly during that time; so that the People distinguished not the Sabbath from other days, but followed their Work and Sports on it, living More like Infidels than Christians, such power over the Minds of beforted Men, had the Popes Usurpation in those dark and ignorant Times.

For this Affront the King Banished divers Bishops and others of the Clergy, whom he found most forward in complying with the Popes Interest, seizing on their Temporalities, resolving to take the like course with all such as consented to receive Promotions, Investitures, or Ecclesiastical Degrees from the Pope or new Arch Bishop; or that went to Rome upon any occasion without his License, or did attempt to put in Execution any Command from the Pope within his Kingdom.

The Pope no sooner heard of this, but resolving not to cool on it, he sent into England two Legates, viz. Pandulph and Durant, to perswade the King to be Reconciled to Langton, and the other Bishops and Clergy that were under his Displeasure in England, or in Banishment, to restore them to their Lands, Places, and Goods; that a good understanding might be renewed between the Pope and him.

This did but little please the King; yet however, fearing to be Accursed, and Embroyl himself in new Troubles (for in those days the Popes Leaden Sword did more mischief in Kingdoms than many of Steel, People being for the most part infatuated to believe what he did he did by the immediate Will and Command of God, whose Vicegerent he assumed to himself to be) He promised to perform all, but allowing the Election of Cardinal Langton, protesting that if another might be chosen he would yet prefer him to some other Bishoprick; but the Imperious Legates, instead of gratifying the Kings Request, pronounced the Popes Carse not only against the King, but all Persons who should do him Service, or give him Attendance, or supply him with things Necessary, Absolving his subjects from their Allegiance, Duties, and Oaths, requising all Christian Princes to make War upon him, as upon the Arch and Grand Enemy of the Church of God.

The Pope also published and pronounced against him Sentence of Deprivation, and gave his Crown and his Kingdom to Philip the French King, if by any secret plot of open Violence and Hostility he could Expel or out of his Country.

Morther him.

These were the Fruits of this (pretended Holy) un-Holy Father, The Popes Religion and Government; and this Usurping Arrogance was a badg of his unsufferable Pride, in that he presumed to do what no Earthly Creature can do, nor what a Christian ought to attempt to do against a Prince, who is Gods Anointed, and against such a one as the Almighty has placed in his Kingdom to Govern and Rule his People.

Yet this Fulmination did not much startle King John; and being determined to know the minds of his People, how they stood affected to him after this matter, he took a sollenn Oath of them for the desence of his Person, and the personnance of saithful Service to him; and then raising an Army, he went to Scotland, because that King (encouraged by the Pope) was practicing against him, sheltering such as had taken part with the Pope and sled out of England: But King Alexander the Second perceiving that Fire and Sword began to devour apace in his Country, he with much Humility sent to King John to desire him to spare his People and their Substance, and what in reason he required he would accord to, and a Peace was made shortly between them, he consenting to Banish all the Kings Enemies

This much disappointed Philip of France, who was preparing to Invade England, and had to that end provided a gallant Army; but by the Wildom, Valour and Circumspection of King John, and the Providence of God, 300 of his Ships Laden with Corn and other Provisions and Necessaries for the Invasion, were Surprized by our Ships, which great disapointment, put an end at that time to the Delign, and frustrated his vain hope. But after all this, the King finding so many Efforts and Treacheries against him, that disparing to weather every one of them, and pittying the sufferings of his People under these distractions, he suddainly without the Advice of his Nobles, or of his Privy Council, degenerating from his former during and boldness of Spirit, fell on his Knees before the Legate. acknowledging his Disobedience, craving of him the Popes Pardon, religning (with his Crown) the possession of his Kingdom to the See of Rome; which Crown the proud Prelate took, and to put him into some pain in considering whether he should ever have it restored again, kept it Four Days, and then returned it to the use of him and his Heirs, reserving 1000 Marks Yearly. by way of Tribute to the See of Rome; which was the main thing the Pope had aimed at, and for which he had all the while made fuch a prodigious noise and bustle.

But this low and Un-Prince-like Submission to a paltry Priest, threw him into another mischief, which was the contempt and dislike of his Nobles; so that for the most part they Revolted from him, and entered upon a cruel and unnatural War, which went very near to have enslaved this flourishing Island once more to Strangers; for the Barons finding they were too weak to oppose the King, they leaned on Philip of Frence, proposing, if he would affist them with sufficient Forces forces and Money, they would foon Depose King John, and place the Crown upon the Head of Lewis, Son to Philip: This News fired the Young Ambitious French Prince, who had also something of a Martial Spirit, that he never left urging his Father, till he had furnished him out with an Army. But the Pope having now closed with King John, on his complaining of this to him, he fent his strict command under many Threats. to the French King not to fuffer his Son to pass the Seas. or in the least to molest a Kingdom under the Protection of the Holy See; tho' as you have heard, a little before himself had given it to them. But Popes usually blow hot or cold, as their Interest Ebbs or Flows; and therefore it was no wonder he should so soon change his side. But Philip refused to Obey his Mandate, returning Answer, That no King without the consent of his Nobles, Prelates, and Common People, can Subject his Kingdom to the See of Rome, or put it under its Protection: it being Committed to them by God, and consequently this Kingdom was not holden of the See of Rome, nor ought to be Defended or Protected by her.

This Answer somewhat startled the Pope, yet using his old way, he sent Guallo his Legate, Cardinal of St. Martins, to Curse Philip and Lewis his Son, and such of the English Nobility as took part with them, as also all their other Adherents and Accomplices; and tho the wiser sort little minded this, yet the ordinary degrees of Soldiers, whose Devotion more directly depended on Fear, than Knowledge, or Judgment, to apprehend any danger that could ensue from such threats, were so amazed and daunted, that they lest their Leaders in the Field, and returned home to their Wives and Children, &c. And the Rascally sort in England, hearing divers Noblemen were under this Curse, entered into their Houses, Fields and Parks,

1

Robbing,

Robbing, Spoiling, and bearing away whatever the could find of value, being to far from doubting or dif puting with their own Consciences whether they did well in it or not, that (fuch was the blindness of those Times) they supposed their so doing tended to the Glory of God Almighty, and that their Rapin and Violence was well pleasing in his Sight; yet this hastened many of the Lords, who had little left to subfift on, to submit to the King, and prostrate at his Feet confess their undutiful Revolt, and crave his Pardon Upon this they were received into Favour, with gentle reproofs for their former failures, and were reftored to their Estates and Honours; so that the Disor. ders that had happened were by this means fettled and a Peace for a time enfued, to the great refreshing of a Nation wearied out with Intestine Broyls.

The Pope intending to make his Proceedings with King John a President to other Princes, Assembleda General Council at Lateran, where he caused to be published, at large, the Assignment of the Kingdom of England to the See of Rome; and there Othor the Emperour, Peter King of Arragon, Raymond Earl of Tholouse, were Excomunicated, for no other material reason, than not submitting themselves and Principalities to the Popes Pride and Infolency, to be disposed of at his pleasure: Also the Empire, Kingdom, and Principality appertaining to them, were Interdicted, on pretended Heresie. In this Council Auricular Confession and Transubstantiation were Decreed, the Cup taken from the Laity in the Communion, &c. And it was made no less than Eternal Damnation to such as should speak evil of the Pope; and that they who were guilty of it, should immediatly when they Dyed descend into Hell, without being admitted by the way to call in at Purgatory, to take leave of any of their Acquaintance: And that no Man should presume to take on him the Imperial Diadem, till he was Sworn the Popes Vassal, paid him Homage, and received that Crown at his Hands. But these Princes despised him and his idle Menaces vet he fecretly wrought them many Troubles, and put their Subjects into Rebellion; but in time the Storm blew over, with the end of his restless Life.

During these stirs, the Irish fell into Rebellion, but were foon Quieted on the Kings going over; for at Dublin he was met by Twenty of their petty Kings. who submitted, and promised him their suture Obedience. And one Gualter Maxes Arch Deacon of Oxford, Preached against the Pride of the Pope, and wrote a Book, Entituled, The Revelation of the Romish Goliah; for which the Bishops greatly Persecuted him. And the Clergy not being heartily reconciled to the King, because he had controuled them in many things, as he was in his Progress to settle the Kingdom, so long disquieted and out of order, Dining at Swinstead-Abby, not far from Lincoln, one Simon, a Villanous Monk, who ferved at the Table, being of the Order of St. Bernard, Poisoned him, by delivering into his hand a Bowl of Intoxicated Wine, and Poisoned himself also for company; the King compelling him, (upon fuspecting (by a suddain pain in his Stomach) some Treachery) to Drink part of it: Too easy a Death for such a Monster in wickedness; who considered not that Kings are God's Anointed, and that the Affront is put upon Heaven when they are Injured.

Thus fell King John, after a troublesom Reign for the most part, when he had Reigned 17 Years, 6 Months, and 13 Days. He Dyed on the 19th of October Anno Dom. 1216. and was Buried at Winchester.

To palliate this execrable Murther, it was given out that he should say, holding a Halfpeny Loaf in his hand,

That if he lived a Twelve-month, he would make it at the Rate of Twelve Pence; and that he should have Ridiculed the Mass, when the Pope had Accursed him, upon cuming to the Quarry of a Buck that was Slain in Hunting, viz. See how fair and fat this Buck is, that never heard Mass in all its Life: That when he was vexed with the Rebellious Barons, he should send to Mina Mula, a prevaling King in Africa, for Assistance; promising him to turn Mahometan, and hold his Kingdom Tributary of him, if by his help he prevailed over his Enemies. But these seem to be Monkish Stories, raised to poison his Fame as well as Body, and are Rejected by Authentic Historians.

In the Ninth Year of his Reign, by a New Charter, he enabled the Citizens of London, for their good Service done him, to make their Annual Choice of a Mayor and two Sherifs, for the better Government of the City.

In his Reign London-Bridge was Built with Stone Arches, as still it remains, being before only of Timber; and a dreadful Fire happening on it, taking both Ends, by the vehemency of the Wind carrying the Flame in sheets from the one to the other, the People that came to Quench it were caught in the middle of the danger, and Boats coming to receive them by Water, they thronged in a hurry so fast into them, that divers Sunk; so that in the Thames and Flames 300 are computed to perish.

In his time two terrible Blazing Stars appeared, at South and East, three Weeks; many Firey Metors in prodigious forms were feen; The Thames was Frozen over, that Loaded Carts passed it Thirty Days, and a mighty Serpent in Northumberland, creeping out of a Rockey Cliff, for a considerable time much terrised the People; till being slain by Arrows, it was weighed at Two Hundred weight, the Skin being a long time kept as a Memorial.

He left behind him Four Sons, viz. Henry who Succeeded him; Richard, Elected King of the Romans; William of Valentia, and Guidio Disany; and Three Daughters, viz. Isabella, Married to Frederick the Emperer; a Second to William Marshal Earl of Worsester, and a Third to the Earl of Leicester.

Remarks on Orfozdshire, &c.

Oxfordshire abounds in rich Pastures, store of Cattle, Corn, Fruits, Fish, Fowle, Coneys, Hares, Deer, and other things, to render it Pleasant and Acceptable; being a pleasant Inland County, bounded with Glocestershire, Warwickshire, Northamptonshire, Buckinghamshire and Barkshire; It contains one City, which is a Bishops See, and in its 14 Hundreds has 280 Parishes, 12 Market Towns, and 5 Rivers: Isis, which gives an additional name to the Thames, into which it falls, is very much Celibrated in Antient Story. It sends Members to Parliament 9, viz. Oxford City 2, the University 2, Banbury 1, New Woodstock 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

The Antient City of Oxford, is renowned for many remarkable things, as being the Place of Meeting of divers Pariiaments, and holding out many Sieges. Here Maud the Empress was Besieged by King Stephen, and all in White got by Night over the Thames on the Ice. This Place King Charles the First made his chief Head-Quarters, during the Civil War, till it was taken by Sr. Thomas Farsaix. King Richard the First was Bornhere. Its Churches are 13, besides the Cathedral, most of them very Stately. It is Watered almost round, and is supplyed within the City by many Conduits, on one of which is the Figure of a Queen, Riding on an Ox, in Brass. But the greatest Ornament of Oxford is its being a University, and for the stateliness of its Colledges, their Liberal Endowments, and the Number of Scholars contained in them, it is not (except by its Sister Cambridge) to be parallelled in the whole Christian World. Of the Number of its Colledges, the time of their Foundation, and their Founders, take the following Account.

An Account of the Colledges in Oxfond.

1. University Colledge, was founded by King Alfred, Anno 872, for 12. Fellows, besides other Students.

2. Baliol Colledge was founded Anno 1262. by John Baliol and Devorgilla his Wife, Parents of John Baliol King of Scots, for 12. Fellows, &c.

3. Merton Colledge was founded Anno 1274. by Walter de Merton Lord High Chancellour of England and Bishop of Rochester. This has 19 Fellows, 14 Scholars, &c.

4. Exeter Colledge was founded Anno 1216. by Walter Stapleton, Bishop of Exeter, for 23. Fellows, &c.

5. Oriel Colledge was founded Anno 1337. by King

Edward II, for 18. Fellows, 12 Schollars, &c.

6. Queens Colledge was founded Anno 1340. by Robert Eaglesfield B. D. for 15 Fellows, besides other Students of the Foundation.

7. New Colledge was founded Anno 1375. by William of Wickham, Bishop of Winchester and Lord High Chancellour of England; for 70 Fellows, 10 Chaplains, 3 Clerks, 16 Choiristers, &c.

8. Lincoln Colledge was founded Anno 1420. by Richard Fleming, Bishop of Lincoln, for 15 Fellows, &c.

9. All-Souls Colledge was founded Anno 1437. by Henry Chicheley Arch Bishop of Canterbury; for 40 Fellows, hesides Chaplains, Clerks, and other Servants of the Foundation.

10. Magdalen Colledge was founded Anno 1459. by William of Wainfleet Bishop of Winchester and Lord High Chancellour of England; for 40 Fellows, and 30 Scholars, besides Chaplains, Clerks, Cheisters, &c. 11. Brazen-Nose Colledge was founded Anno 1515, by William Smith Bishop of Lincoln, and Richard Sutton Esq; for 20 Fellows; besides Scholars, and Students of the Foundation.

12. Corpus Christi Colledge was founded Anno 1516. by Richard Fox, Bishop of Winchester and Lord Propy Seal; for 20 Follows, 20 Scholars, besides Chaplains, and Clerks, &c.

13. Christ-Church Colledge was founded Anno 1546. by King Henry VIII. for 8 Canons, and 100 Students, besides Chaplains, &c.

14. Trinity Colledge was founded Anno 1555. by Sir Tho. Pope, for 12 Fellows, 12 Scholars, and other Students.

15. St. Johns Colledge was founded Anno 1557. by Sir Thomas White, Merchant Taylor of London, for 50 Fellows, &c.

16. Jesus Colledge was founded Anno 1572. by Queen Elizabeth: for 16 Fellows, 16 Scholars, and other Students.

17. Wadham Colledge was founded Anno 1613. by Nicholas Wadham and Dorothy his Wife, for 15 Fellows and 15 Scholars, &c.

18. Pembroke Colledge was founded Anno 1620. by Thomas Teifdale Esq., and Richard Wightwick B. D.

for 15 Fellows, and 11 Scholars, &c.
The Seven Halls are

Glocester, Edmund, St. Alban, Magdalen, Hart, and S. Mary Hall, besides New-Inn.

In all which Colledges and Halls there are fair Chappels, and Libraries. But, amongst these, is the most famous Bodlean Library, which for choice Books, and rare Manuscripts, falls little short of the Vatican.

Here is also that curious Piece of Architecture called the New Theater, built for Scholastick Exercises, with a fair Printing House, by Dr. Sheldon, a late Arch Bishop of Canterbury.

30

terbury. The Museum, built at the Charge of the University fity, for the Improvement of Experimental Knowledge. especially in Physick; with a Laboratory furnished with all forts of Furnaces, and other Materials, for Chymical Practice. a Store-Room, for Preparations; and another Room, fitted up for a Chymical Library. In the Museum is also to be Jeen a curious Repository.

The publick Physick Garden deserves also to be mentioned bere for its Stateliness, and infinite Variety of choice Plants.

The Number of Students in Oxford is rickoned to be 3000, whereof 1000 live upon the Revenues of the Colledges.

In this City was formerly a famous Castle, but now of no great Strength, being mostly used for a Prison. It has several Bridges about it, but one morespecially, of Stone. curiously Arched; and is a Place of considerable Trade.

Woodstock was a long time the Country Retirement of our Kings; here it was that Henry II built a sumptuous Bower for fair Rosamond his Paramour; here Edward the Black Prince was Born, and Sr. Geoffry Chaucer Educated. At Islip King Edward the Confessor was Born; the other Towns of Note are Banbury, Chipingnorton, Charlbury, Bampton, Henly on Thames, &c.

Near Evisham, in the South of this County, are erected Stones called Rol Richstone, in the nature of those on Salifbury Plain, but not fo big, which Fabulous Stories have rendered to have been Men Transformed into Stone; but most certain they are a Monument of a great Battel fought there by Rollo the Dane; near Oxford is the Well Dripa, whose Waters distil from a Rock that hangs over it, very Medicinal. There is store of Oaker, Fullers-Earth, and Gipsum, at Shot-over, Garlington and Whitney; and Tobacco-Pipe-Clay and Umber is found near Blanden, Cerulam, or Native Blue, near Blonds-Court, the Tera Lapidosa the Colour of Turkish Rusina, is found in the Quarries about Tame; the Gold-gritty Clay at Hampton Gay.

The Seats of the Nobility are Cornbury, belonging to the Earl of Clarendon; Blechington, to the Earl of Anglesey; Caversham, to the Earl of Craven; Dichley and Les Rest, to the Earl of Litchfield; Ricot and Chesterton, to the Earl of Abingdon; Broughton, Shutford and North Newton, to the Lord Viscount Say and Seal; Water-Eton, to the late Lord Lovelace. Cuddeiden, the Bishops Palace.

There are fine Parks in this County, stored with Deer, and many large Woods, wherein abundance of Hares shelter: The Seats of the Gentry are not a few; so that put together, it is a very fine Inland County, Watered in some parts by the Thames, &c.

The Reign of King HENRY the Third.

A Fter the untimely Death of King John, Henry his Eldest Son being but Nine Years of Age, was Crowned at Gloucester in the presence of Wallo the Popes Legate, and divers Nobles; and by reason of his Nonage, was put under the Gaurdianship of Pembrook, who was by the consent of the Peers made Protector of the Realm during his Minority; who prudently mannaged Affairs, administring the Laws and Justice uprightly to the People: Yet long he had not been Crowned, before Philip the French King, thinking to take advantage of this change, dealt underhand with some difcontented Noblemen, and supposing by this means he had made a strong Party in England, Invaded the Kingdom; yet the Protector was not idle in his Charge, but Leavied a considerable Army; and though the Welsh, under Liewellin their Prince, Rebelled, to favour the proceedings proceedings of the French, he made head against them and stopt their Ravages, before a sufficient Force could come to his Camp from other parts, and flew many of them in feveral Skirmishes, tho' as yet they came to no confiderable Battel.

And now Pope Innocent being Dead, and Honorius feated in the Pontifical Chair taking part with King Henry, not only confirmed the power of his Predecessors Apostolical Legate in England, but by him Cursed Prince Lewis who came over with the French Forces to take possession of this Realm, and all his Adherents, Excommunicating and Depriving them of all the Priviledges of Christians; which put a stop to their carreer: So that Lewis made shew as if he only waited for a fit opportunity to depart, yet in the mean time King Philip his Father, with great care and cost, prepared Reinforcements, and Shiped them for England: But Hugh d' Burg, Master of the Cinque Ports, Manned out a Fleet, upon notice they were putting to Sea; and after a sharp Engagement, Sunk, Burnt, and Took the greatest part of the Enemys Ships, which consisted of 150 Sail. This Exploit got him a good esteem among the People, which he after lost by his Covetousness, as will appear, and much daunted the French that were already in England, making Prince Lewis intreat the Popes Legate to Absolve him; and for so much Money as would defray the charges of his Return, he promised to deliver up all the Castles and Places he had in his possession; which being done and agreed to, he Sailed for France, and left his Friends in England to shift for themselves; many of which were forced into Banishment, and some of the more forward taken and Executed, but the greater Number Pardoned.

Upon this, a Parliament was called, and in it the Antient Saxon Laws of Edward the Confessor, and divers other good Laws, made by succeeding Kings, were reduced into a smaller compass, what seemed superfluous, according to the Constitution of the then present Government, being left out. And this has continued a happiness to the Kingdom, being that Magna Charta, or Great Charter of England, that fet a Barrier between the Succeeding Kings and the People; That the one should not encroach on the Subjects Rights, but live as free born Subjects; nor the other upon the Prerogative of the Crown, but that the Scale should be in a due Ballance between Soveraign and Subject. This was Ratified and Confirmed under the Great Seal, to the high fatisfaction of the Kingdom; fo that the Parliament Granting the King a confiderable Tax, the People paid it with all the alacrity immaginable, with which Money he not only discharged his Debts, but Levied a formidable Army, who under the Leading of Richard the Kings Brother, and divers Nobles, won much back again that the French had taken during the Troubles in his Fathers Reign, entirely reducing the Provinces of Poiltiers, and Gascoyne; and returning with little loss of Men from this Glorious Enterprize, were received with great Joy: However the absence of the Army gave the French King leafure to practice his usual method of stiring up Differences and Dissentions in those places, by which means he surprized some Towns; but King Henry grown up, and being a Prince of Courage and Valour, resolved to go in Perfon; whose Arrival so terrified the French, that they Deferted divers Places without contending; and those that yielded not on Summons, were taken by Force.

The French King perceiving the Cowardize of his own Men, and the Courage of the English, after many losses began to study how he might come to a Peace; and upon furrendering what he had possessed himself of, it was concluded, advantagiously enough to the Honour of King Henry and the English Nation. But foon after this, some discontented Nobles at home, la. boured to Alienate the minds of his Subjects from him. upon a Jealoufie that he reposed his greatest considence in Strangers, and made little account of their Fidelity: but to prevent any Eruption that might give his Enemies abroad the advantage of Regaining what they had Lost, and what cost him much Treasure in Recovering. he Laboured to reconcile himself to them, and sent away many Strangers from his Court; with whomindeed it was much pestered, and the English Nobles had fome reason to complain of it; by which means, and fome other Concessions, a Reconcilement was made. And now the Earl of Chefter Dying without Issue Male, leaving only Four Daughters, the King Seized his Possessions, and Annexed them to the Crown, augmenting them with large additions of Yearly Revenues, Regal Priviledges and Honours, giving the Ladies in lieu of it divers Castles, Lordships, and Mannors, which exceeded their own in true value; and having Married Prince Edward his Son, to Elianor Sifter to the King of Spain, he gave him the Province of Guyan, and the Lordship of all Ireland, and created him Earl of Chester and Prince of Wales, which two latter Dignities he then annexed as inseparable Titles to the Eldest Sons of the Kings of England; and so they at this day continue; soon after this, the King narrowly escaped being Murthered by an Oxford Scholar, who about Midnight crept in at the Window of that Chamber where he usually Reposed, but that Night he was absent at a Merri-making; however the Student being found there with unufual Weapons about him, upon Examination Confessed he came with the beforementioned Design, but would not acknowledg what induced need him to it, or any that we supposed to have him on work; whereupon his Arms and Legs befaltened to Four Horses, he was by them Drawn bieces.

The French King (as you have heard) intering into ace with England, nothing it ire at length appeared t but that he did it to gaine time, so that he might ome Stronger; for Philip Being Dead, Lewis the th, his Son, broke out into open Hostilities without ng any warning, his Father before his death having le preparations to enable him to do it, wasting in an all the places where he came. This roused King ry, and made him Levy great Forces with a purpose rive him out, not only of that, but all Normandy, and other places as he had a right claim to, and were ined from him by the French: So that palling over France, many fierce Encounters passed between n with various fuccess, tho' in them the French were erally worsted; but Fortune no further favouring endeavours, but only to stop the French Torrent, their further Encroachments, he returned for land. On his departure, the French King Married bonsus his Brother, to the Daughter of the Earl of touse, and gave him the Earldom of Poittiers, and so ningly contrived it, that he would have procured Earl of March to do him Homage for such Lands e pretended he held in that Province, but he refused nd could not by Entreaties or Threats be wrought o comply; which so enraged the French King, that ntered with an Army into the Earldom of March, laid all waste before him; but was Fought with by English Army, newly Transported, near Burdeaux; the English being much inferiour in Number, after ong, Bloody and Doubtful Fight, were constrained quit the Field; and King Henry, who did wonders of, it was concluded, advantagiously enough to th Honour of King Henry and the English Nation. Bu soon after this, some discontented Nobles at home. la boured to Alienate the minds of his Subjects from him upon a Jealoufie that he reposed his greatest considence in Strangers, and made little account of their Fidelity but to prevent any Eruption that might give his Ene mies abroad the advantage of Regaining what they had Lost, and what cost him much Treasure in Recovering he Laboured to reconcile himself to them, and sent a way many Strangers from his Court; with whom in deed it was much pestered, and the English Nobles had fome reason to complain of it; by which means, and fome other Concessions, a Reconcilement was made And now the Earl of Chefter Dying without Issue Male leaving only Four Daughters, the King Seized hi Possessions, and Annexed them to the Crown, aug menting them with large additions of Yearly Reve nues, Regal Priviledges and Honours, giving the Ladies in lieu of it divers Castles, Lordships, and Man nors, which exceeded their own in true value; an having Married Prince Edward his Son, to Elian Sifter to the King of Spain, he gave him the Provin of Guyan, and the Lordship of all Ireland, and creat him Earl of Chester and Prince of Wales, which ty latter Dignities he then annexed as inseparable Tit to the Eldest Sons of the Kings of England; and so the at this day continue; foon after this, the King na rowly escaped being Murthered by an Oxford Schol who about Midnight crept in at the Window of th Chamber where he usually Reposed, but that Night was absent at a Merri-making; however the Stude being found there with unufual Weapons about his upon Examination Confessed he came with the before mentioned Design, but would not acknowledg wh induc duced him to it, or any that we supposed to have thim on work; whereupon his Arths and Legs beg fastened to Four Horses, he was by them Drawn pieces.

The French King (as you have heard) intering into Peace with England, nothing more at length appeared it but that he did it to gaine sime, so that he might come Stronger; for Philip Being Dead, Lewis the inth, his Son, broke out into open Hostilities without ving any warning, his Father before his death having ade preparations to enable him to do it, wasting in uyan all the places where he came. This roused King enry, and made him Levy great Forces with a purpole drive him out, not only of that, but all Normandy, and ich other places as he had a right claim to, and were ctained from him by the French: So that passing over nto France, many fierce Encounters passed between nem with various fuccess, tho' in them the French were enerally worsted; but Fortune no further favouring his endeavours, but only to stop the French Torrent, ind their further Encroachments, he returned for England. On his departure, the French King Married Alphonsus his Brother, to the Daughter of the Earl of Tholouse, and gave him the Earldom of Poittiers, and so cunningly contrived it, that he would have procured the Earl of March to do him Homage for such Lands as he pretended he held in that Province, but he refused it, and could not by Entreaties or Threats be wrought on to comply; which fo enraged the French King, that he entered with an Army into the Earldom of March, and laid all waste before him; but was Fought with by the English Army, newly Transported, near Burdeaux; yet the English being much inferiour in Number, after a Long, Bloody and Doubtful Fight, were constrained to quit the Field; and King Henry, who did wonders in the Battel that day, hardly escaped being taken in foner; whereupon the Earl of March found he was a necessity to ubmit to the Terms offered him by the French King after thich King Henry settling his faires as will as he could, returned to England, and made a firm Alliance with the King of Seots, to streng then his Interest agairst France.

This continued harpy to him for a time; but his Court not being purged of Parasites, and Whisperen who with their stories set him against the English Nobility, a fath! Discord befel, which at times lasted till his Death; for the Nobles grudging he bestowed Favours on those that deserved them not, and was scanty in his Liberalities towards them that had Merited of him at the expence of their Blood and Treasure, from Murmuring they fell to open Reproaches, charging him with the violation of those Liberties and Priviledge that he had so solemnly Confirmed and Granted: This Angered the King, and made him inwardly Fret, but finding they spoke the sense of the greatest part of the Nation, to bring things to a quieter temper, and alay or fatisfie the discontents of his Subjects, he called a Parliament at Oxford, tho' in it what he aimed at was, for the most part, if not altogether, frustrated; so that it was afterward, through the Distractions that happened upon it, called Infanum Parliamentum, or The Mad Parliament: For when multitudes of fuch as were Grieved came for Redress of their Grievances, the Lords and Commons endeavouring to Redress what was amiss. Established many things Profitable, as they intended, for the Common-Weal, but highly derogatory to the Kings Prerogative; and to the end thole things that they had so contrived, should be lasting, and inviolably observed, they made choice of Twelve Noblemen, by the Title of Les douze Piers, or The Twelve Peers, giving them absolute Power and Authority to Maintain and Support those Laws; of whom the Earls of Leicester and Gloucester were chief; and for this they had their Pattent, and took a solemn Oath. which was Sealed and Ratified by the King, although he did it unwillingly; so that the Parliament being ended, the Commissioners began by strict Execution to give Life unto those Laws and Ordinances, thrusting out of their Places and Offices many of the Kings Menial Servants, and Attendants, placing others in their stead, which very much troubled him; for by these proceedings he perceived those that waited on his Person. were rather to be Trusted by others than by himself; and that he should be furthest from chusing those that were to be nearest to him; this made him grow Melancholy, and vex himself exceedingly; yet thinking to mend what he supposed amiss, he called another Parliament, which contrary to his expectation Ratified and Confirmed more strongly all that the former had done, tho' he at the opening of the Sessions had complained of the hard Usage he had received from the Twelve Peers; and by the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and Nine other Bishops of the Kingdom, a solemn Curse was denounced against all such as either by Direction, Council, Arms, or otherwise, withstood or hindered the Execution of those Laws, or the Authority of the Twelve Peers. This made the King more Melancholy than before; when, to divert himself he Sailed to France, and had an Enterview with King Lewis, who highly welcomed him, Lodged him in his own Palace, Feasted him, and used him with all Gentleness, Curtesie, and Honour; protesting in his Parliament of Estates, That he was much dissatisfied in his Conscience for detaining from King Henry his Dutchy of Normandy and fuch other Territories in France as in Right he ought to Enjoy; and on the otherhand King Henry intending to conclude an inviolable Pean freely furrendered to him Normandy, Anjou, Poiling and Mayn, and in the same Parliament with great Solemnity and Honour, he received them again to him. self and his Heirs.

Whilst things thus proceeded in France, a Quarrel happened between Prince Edward the Kings Son, and the Duke of Glocester, about the Laws being put to feverely in Execution; which made the King haften home, to prevent the Danger or Mischief that might happen thereby, and with some difficulty he reconciled them; and hoping to remove the curb the Peers had laid on him, with much Expence, he procured Bulls of Pope Alexander the Third, by virtue of which himself and all others who had Sworn to maintain those new Laws and Ordinances, and to support the proceedings of the Peers and their Authority, were freely Absolved from their Oaths; yet they took no notice of it, but proceeded to displace such Judges, Justices, and Sheriffs, as the King had appointed, for not following their Orders, and put such in their Places and Offices & they thought fit: So that the King being no longer able to endure these Indignities, caused the Popes Bulk to be Read and Proclaimed in the chief Towns and Cities of England and Wales, straightly Commanding all Persons, of what Estate, Condition or Degree soever, That from thence forth did by Word or Deed Support or Maintain the faid Laws and Ordinances, or the Authority of the Twelve Peers, that they should be committed to Prison, and not delivered thence without the Kings confent: And hereupon he Swore the Londoners from twelve Years Old, and upwards, to be True and Faithful to him, and to be Aiding to him and his Heirs against all Opposers. In the mean while the Barons met, and entered into a Resolution among themselves, rather to lose their Lives than decline the upholding the Laws; and fancying the King had fome desperate design upon them, their Jealousie so encreased, that retiring to the Marches of Wales, they raised a strong Army, and furnished it with all things necessary for the War they intended; yet pretended to abstain from any Hostility or Violence, unless the King compelled them to it. Then they fent their Letters in a most submissive and humble manner to the King, protesting their Duty, Service, and true Allegiance to him; entreating his Highness for the Honour of Almighty God, for the health of his own Soul, and for the welfare and happiness of his People and Kingdom, utterly to defie (except his Queen and Children) all fuch as Councelled him, or did themselves intend to suppress the Laws and Ordinances established in the Parliament at Oxford, or the Authority and Power, which for the advantage of the common good, was Granted to the Twelve Peers. But the King displeased at these Letters, returned not any Answer; which made them difplay their Banners, and march towards London; and as they passed by the Houses of such as favoured the Kings proceedings, on the account of the Popes Bulls, they Plundered and Spoiled them, and laid many in Ruins by Fire, Proclaiming such Persons Enemies to the King and Government.

of ENGLAND.

Approaching London, they sent their Letters to the Mayor and Citizens, to know whether they were refolved to support the Laws and Ordinances or not, and the Authority of the Twelve Peers; protesting before God, that themselves meant not, nor intended any other thing; and if they were found desective in any point, a speedy Reformation should be made.

These Letters were no sooner received and read,

retired

but they were fent to the King, who demanded of the Mayor and Citizens whether they would support those Laws and the Twelve Peers, or renounce them; but fearing their Plunder when fuch an Army was at their Gates, they Assembled in Common-Hall, and agreed to fend the King Answer, That they would stand by the Laws and Peers, tho' a little before they had Sworn to the King to stand by him against all opposers. This greatly displeased the King; but they setting light by his Anger, received the Barons with their Army into the City, with many expressions of Joy; and from hence they Marched to Windfor Castle, and displaced all Strangers, rifling them of what they had gotten by their Places and Offices, especially such as the Prince had put into Trust; this yet more offended the King: But his Privy Council laboured to pacify him, by fending to the Barons to restore the Goods taken from the Aliens, and telling him that from thenceforth none but himself should place Persons in Trust; but to neither of these the Barons would accord; but at last concluded to put the descision of the Controversie to Lewis the French King, and inviolably stand to his Award; and King Henry agreeing to it, Peace for a time enfued; and the Swords on both fides were Sheathed; and the matter Stated on either part being controverted before the French King, it was by him Decreed, That all the said Ordinances and Laws should be Annihilated, and from thenceforth no Authority or Power should be left in the Twelve Peers. But this Sentence was fo distasteful to the Barons, that they publickly accused him of Partiality to curry-favour with King Henry, absolutely refusing to stand by his Award; and so strongly were they bent to maintain whatsoever had been in Parliament Established, That they repaired again to the Marches of Wales, and Levied new Forces; and in their passage to London, Spoiled and Burnt the Goods, Lordships and Houses of Sr. Roger Mortimer, who had Counseled the King against them: To oppose their Proceedings, Prince Edward Marched with the Kings Army against them; and a cruel Battel was fought for the space of a whole Day, in which the Prince Acted Wonders beyond what could be expected from his Young Years: But most of his Commanders being Slain, he was at length compelled to leave the Field, and March hastily back again with his broken Army, leaving the Barons Masters of the Field.

After this Victory, the Barons Marched their Army to London, where they were received with great demonstrations of Joy; and soon after the Rifrass of the City, contrary to the minds of the fober Citizens, appointed to themselves two Captains, whom they stiled Constables of London; and made Proclamation, That all who were affected to their Party should take Arms, upon Ringing the great Bell at St. Pauls; and fo Assembling in a Tumultuous manner, they committed many Outrages upon the Houses of those that did not approve their Proceedings; and then in a great troop went to the Palace of Richard, King Henry's Brother, who by the German Princes had been Elected King of the Romans, and entering it by force, seized and carried away all his Plate, Treasure and Rich Furniture, pulling down and defacing, for the most part, that stately Building.

This made him, of a Friend, ever after an Enemy to the City and Barons: For whereas before he had laboured a Reconcilement between the King and them, he utterly gave over that good office, and exasperated him to continue the War against them; so that the King having notice that Sr. Peter Montfort had gathered considerable Forces near Northampton, declaring for the Barons, he Marched thither, whereupon Mountsort retired into the Town with his Forces, and was Araightly Besieged; so that in a little time it being taken by Assault, he with Simon the Earl of Leicesters Son, and many others, were taken Prisoners, and disposed of in several Goals, till a further course could be taken with them. But the Barons being strong in the Field, little regarded this blow, but advancing their Banners near Lewis in Suffex, gave the Kings Army Battel, which continued with such obstinate cruelty on both fides, that Fathers and Sons, Brothers and other near Relations Killed one another without Remorfe; and fuch a havock was made, that the Army on either fide being much wasted, the King taken Prisoner with his Brother, &c. after Fourteen Hours desperate Fighting, and the flaughter of 20000 Men on both fides, the Royal Party by these Accidents was so weakened, that a Treaty enfued; and it was Agreed, That the King should by new Articles, and the renewing his Oath, Confirm the Authority granted to the Twelve Peers, and all the Ordinances and Laws; with this Caution notwithstanding, That Two Lords Spiritual, and Two Temporal, should take a View of, and Examine the said Laws and Ordinances, and if they saw any reason to Amend or Alter them, they might do it, and if they agreed not in their Opinions, Then the Duke of Britany as Umpire, should be invested with full Power to Arbitrate and End the Difference: And the King and his Brother for standing to this, had their Liberty, and gave their two Eldest Sons as Hostages, who upon that account were detained in the Castle of Dover about nine Months.

Upon this the King called a Parliament, which again crossed his expectation, by Confirming and Ratifying the Laws of the Oxford Parliament, and Authority of the Twelve Peers, which constrained the King to take a new Oath to maintain them, and the Peers Authority;

till according to Agreement, if any thing was found amis, it should be Reformed, &c. and all such as in those Wars, or otherwise, had Maintained them, were Pardoned by the King: Whereupon the Young Princes were set at Liberty. But soon after, fell a Difference between the Earls of Leicester and Gloucester. the two heads of the Barons Faction, which made them divide into parties to decide their Quarrel by the Sword; yet the King, fearing this might Involve many of his Subjects in Ruin, and shake the Quiet of the whole Kingdom, interposed his Authority and Mediation to make them Friends: But whilst this was doing, Prince Edward, the Kings Son, taking advantage of their difference, departed fecretly from Court, and conforting with the Earls of Glocester and Warren, Sr. Roger Mortimer, and others, they raised an Army on the Marches of Wales, and fell on the Earl of Leicesters Forces with fuch fury, near Eversham in Worcestershire, that they totally Routed them; and in this Battel the Earl of Leicester, Simon his Eldest Son, Sr. Hugh Spencer, and many others of note, were Slain; and so enraged were the Soldiers, that they dispitefully used the Earls dead Body, by cuting off the Head, Hands, Feet, and Privy Members, fending them into divers Shires, as Trophies of their Victory.

This turn of fortunate Success, so ellevated the drooping King, that he resolved utterly to throw off his Fetters, and assume his Kingly Authority uncontrouled; whereupon, whilst his Enemies were full of fear and mistrust, and their strength in a manner utterly broken, he summoned a Parliament, which conforming to his will, more through dread of his Anger, than voluntarily, Repealed the Laws and Ordinances made in the Oxford Parliament, disannuling the Authority of the Twelve Peers; and all Patents, Commissions, and Instruments what soever, that tended to the Establishing and Ratifying those things, were by the Kings express Commandment brought forth, publickly Cancelled and made void; by which means he regained his former Power and Liberty, to say and do as he pleased.

Цз

ments

This Parliament was no fooner ended, but the King expressed his anger towards the City of London, because (as is alledged) the Rulers and Inhabitants had always despised him, and taken part with the Barons against him; vowing to consume it with Fire, and leave it in a heap of Rubbish, as a lasting Monument of their Rebellion to succeeding Ages; and so firmly had he determined it, That all his Friends and Favorits had much ado to avert him from this purpose, nor could it be done, till the Citizens caused an Instrument in Writing to be drawn, and Ratified it with their common Seal, by which they Confessed their Rebellion, humbly craving Pardon, and without any restraint or exception submitted their Lands, Goods, Lives, and the whole City, to the Kings Grace and Mercy: Whereupon paying 1000 Marks Fine, they were Restored to their Liberties and Customs, which had been seized into the Kings hands, during which space they had suffered much dammage; yet for what Wrongs soever they received, they could find no Redrefs: And many Robberies and Piracies during the Wars being committed by the Inhabitants of the Cinque-Ports, to hinder his Courts of Justice being pestered with many Complaints, he ordered they should be heard in the Courts within the Jurisdiction of those Ports; where the Persons agrieved expecting little redress, because the Inhabitants were parties, few Complaints after that were made.

Gilbert Clare Earl of Glocester, by his revolt from the Barons, and joyning his Interest with the Prince, expecting high preferment for the success that had given.

ing all these Advantages, and not meeting with reeable to his mind, grew angry, and Meditating nge, retired from Court into the City; where the ens forgeting how lately they had been Pardoned, he danger they were in, flocked to him in great bers, and then Sallying through Temple Bar, went e Kings Palace at Westminster, which they Risled the Houses of many Court Favourites in and out e City. This Outrage made the King pronounce is than utter Destruction to them. But the Prince Kings Counsellours, fearing such severity might v the Civil War as dangerous as ever, with much acified him so far, that he Granted a Pardon to arl of Glocester, and all that had Acted in the lateult. Yet the Earl finding but cold Entertainment ourt, fearing some mischief might befal him at Made it his request to the King that he would him with an Army to make War in the Holy Land. motion, tho' it tended to much charge and expleased the King well; for he considered if he hued at home he would still be Plotting, but d he could little injure the quiet of the Govern-; fo that an Army being raifed, the Earl repenm of his Undertaking, and feigned so many causes lay, that the King took the Command out of his and gave it to Prince Edward, who Transported rmy into Palestine, and by his valorous Acts ht fuch a Terror on the Turks and Sarazens, they feldom, if they could avoid it, adventured elves against the Christians in that Quarter where rince drew up; and the Terror of his coming them raise the Siege of the City of Acon, which had pressed hardly for a long time, with 100000 which made them secretly contrive his Death: Sarazen, under pretence of delivering him a Letter, ments whatsoever, that tended to the Establishing and fying those things, were by the Kings express Commment brought forth, publickly Cancelled and made void which means he regained his former Power and berty, to say and do as he pleased.

This Parliament was no fooner ended, but the expressed his anger towards the City of London. cause (as is alledged) the Rulers and Inhabitants always despised him, and taken part with the Bar against him; vowing to consume it with Fire, leave it in a heap of Rubbish, as a lasting Monume their Rebellion to succeeding Ages; and so firmly he determined it, That all his Friends and Favorits much ado to avert him from this purpose, nor co it be done, till the Citizens caused an Instrumen Writing to be drawn, and Ratified it with their c mon Seal, by which they Confessed their Rebellion, but craving Pardon, and without any restraint or exception mitted their Lands, Goods, Lives, and the whole City the Kings Grace and Mercy: Whereupon paying 1 Marks Fine, they were Restored to their Liberties Customs, which had been seized into the Kings har during which space they had suffered much damma yet for what Wrongs foever they received, they co find no Redrefs: And many Robberies and Pira during the Wars being committed by the Inhabita of the Cinque-Ports, to hinder his Courts of Justice ing pestered with many Complaints, he ordered t should be heard in the Courts within the Jurisdict of those Ports; where the Persons agricved expect little redress, because the Inhabitants were part few Complaints after that were made.

Gilbert Clare Earl of Glocester, by his revolt from Barons, and joyning his Interest with the Prince, pecting high preferment for the success that had gi the King all these Advantages, and not meeting with it agreeable to his mind, grew angry, and Meditating Revenge, retired from Court into the City; where the Citizens forgeting how lately they had been Pardoned. and the danger they were in, flocked to him in great Numbers, and then Sallying through Temple Bar, went to the Kings Palace at Westminster, which they Risled. with the Houses of many Court Favourites in and out of the City. This Outrage made the King pronounce no less than utter Destruction to them. But the Prince and Kings Counsellours, fearing such severity might renew the Civil War as dangerous as ever, with much ado pacified him so far, that he Granted a Pardon to the Earl of Glocester, and all that had Acted in the late-Tumult. Yet the Earl finding but cold Entertainment at Court, fearing some mischief might befal him at home, Made it his request to the King that he would fend him with an Army to make War in the Holy Land. This motion, tho' it tended to much charge and expence, pleased the King well; for he considered if he continued at home he would still be Plotting, but abroad he could little injure the quiet of the Government; fo that an Army being raised, the Earl repented him of his Undertaking, and feigned fo many causes for delay, that the King took the Command out of his hand, and gave it to Prince Edward, who Transported the Army into Palestine, and by his valorous Acts brought such a Terror on the Turks and Sarazens, That they feldom, if they could avoid it, adventured themselves against the Christians in that Quarter where the Prince drew up; and the Terror of his coming made them raise the Siege of the City of Acon, which they had pressed hardly for a long time, with 100000 Men; which made them secretly contrive his Death: for a Sarazen, under pretence of delivering him a Letter, 310 Letter, Stabbed him in the Arm with an Impoisoned Knife; whereupon the Prince struck him down with his Foot, and upon the noise, his Guards coming in, cut the Villan in pieces; yet so desperate was the Wound. by reason of the venom, that the Surgeons declared That unless any at the hazard of their Lives would daily fuck the Wound, to draw away the Poison, his Life could not be faved; this, when all his Courtiers strained Courtesie to do, or utterly refused, was undertaken by Elianor his virtuous and loving Wife, Sifter to the King of Spain, who had accompanied him in that tedious Journey; and yet she was not at all injured by it.

And now the King having had some Peace, was a little disturbed by a Tumult in Norwich, who Burnt the Monastery of the Trinity; but he hasting thither, they dispersed, yet escaped not so, for a strict enquiry being made into the matter, 50 of the chief Actors Were Drawn, Hanged and Quartered, and their Quarters Burned. Soon after this, the King fell Sick, and Dyed at the Abby of St. Edmund's in Suffolk, on the Sixteenth of November, Anno Dom. 1275, in the 57th Year of his Reign, and 65th of his Age. He was Buried with great Magnificence at Westminster.

In this Kings Reign, an Imposture at the Provincial Synod at Oxford, fuffered himself to be Wounded in the Hands, Feet and Sides, faying he was Christ; anda Woman that went about with him called herself the Virgin Mary; but being taken and closed up between two Walls, they there miserably perished.

On St. Paul's Day in the 15th Year of his Reign, such an unufual Thunder and Lightening happened, That whilst Roger Niger Bishop of London was at Mass, in St. Paul's, the Cathedral was so shaken, that the People verily supposed it would have falln, and that they should have been burned with the slashes of Lightening; whereupon all, except the Bishop and Arch-Deacon, ran out; but it being more terrible abroad. they fell on their Faces, and lay as aftonished near an Hour. There also appeared as it were four Suns, besides the Natural one, which had a great Circle of a Chrystal colour; and after St. Martins Day, it began to Thunder very horribly, which lasted 15 Days.

The Jews at Norwich Stole a Boy and Circumcifed him, intending to have Crucified him at Easter; for which divers were Convicted, and put to fundry Punishments. In the 20th Year of the King, the Thames over-flowed its Banks, fo that Boats were Rowed in the great Palace-Yard at Westminster, and also in the midst of the Hall. Pope Gregory the Ninth wrote to the King. That he might have fafe conduct to come and fee England; but was denied, in confideration it was thought he did it with an intent to Embroyl the Kingdom. In the 23d of the King a great Plague happened, consuming 500000 People of all Degrees; and Newcastle upon Tyne with the Bridge, was consumed by Fire; and two Years after, the Sea Flowed without any confiderable Ebb, and in the Night by the fighting of the Waves feemed all on Fire; making a terrible Noise, which was heard many Miles. On the 43d of the Kings Reign a Jew at Tewksbury fell into a Privy on a Saturday, and refused to be helped out, because it was on their Sabbath; whereupon the Duke of Glocester, Lord Lieutenant of the County, made him keep our Sunday there; when on Monday Morning he was found Dead.

And about this time Dr. Sternham wrote, That the Sufficiency of Holy Scripture, without Tradition or Innovation, were only necessary to Salvation; and Roger Bacon, a famous Divine of Oxford, was Imprisoned and feverely feverely Persecuted by the Pope, for Preaching against the Absurdities of the Church of Rome. And John De Warren Earl of Surry Killed Alen de La Zouch in Westminster-Hall, on an Affront given by a Josse. Seven Hundred Jews were Slain in London upon an Insurrection, because one of them had extorted more than two Pence per Week for 20 s. Interest. Anno Dom. 1269, the Thames was so hard Frozen, that Men, Cattle and Wains, passed over on the Ice, a considerable time. Anno Dom. 1271 the Steeple of Bow-Church in Cheapside, London, sell; and in the fall oppressed many People which were slain in its Ruines.

Remarks on the County of Rutland.

Rutlandshire, or the County of Rutland, is commodiously Situate among divers fertil Shires or Counties; being Bounded with Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire, and Leicestershire, being very neatly compacted, producing some considerable sprinkling of Corn, but more Passure; being for the most part Plain without Hills, and sew Woods in it that are considerable; also Cattle, Wooll, Fish, Fowl, and many other things, worthy to Rank it with the rest. It is divided into 5 Hundreds, containing 48 Parishes, 1
Market Towns, and is a third part bordered by the Riva Weland, branching into many pleasant Streams, over which is laid a very advantageous Bridge, leading to Barrowden.
It sends Members to Parliament, Two Knights of the Shire.

Oxenham in this Shire is famed, as having been an Antient Station of the Romans, and for a great Overthrowth Danes received by Catmose. There is Ketton, memorable for a great Battel fought between King Arthur and the Saxons, wherein he became Victoricus, forcing them into Lincolnshire, where in their rage they destroyed the most Antient University of the Britains, Founded at Stamsord, faid to be fo hy King Bladud who found out the Virtue of the Mineral Waters at Bath.

PART Staple \ ford . PART OF. Thiftleton Screwon Stockking Pt of Cluffham Stretton LINCOLN Pickworth . 0 F Efenden Twe male cross Codsmore \_ Alhwell HUNDRED() Alesthorp EAST SHIRE. Horne Ryall Belmesthorp Langham Hardwack Wood head LEICES : Enton · Tole thorig Tikencoce Empingha Lille Ca Rerton Sta mford Ingthorp Platerus OKEHAM SOKE Hambleton Normantin TER HUNDRED. Manton MARTINS Kettonn Gunthorp weland A. Brooke Martin thorp N. Luffenham Kelcho P'ART Lee Lodge The Old SHIRE Forest of Preston Pilton S. Luffenham  $\mathbf{OF}$ HUNDRED. 1 Glaiston Helton Wardley Uppingham Bisbrook WRANGDIKE Barowdents NORTHAMPTON Liefeild Beaumont HUN: Stokedry Lyddinaton Ha ingworth DRED. SHIRE. Note that the side of each Square is two miles

31.3

Whitwell is memorable for another Overthrow given the Danes. Scyten is noted for a Speaking Eagle in the Reign of King Harrold the Last, which Prophesied the coming in of the Normans, and the Subjection of the Kingdom by them. The other chief Places are Whissenden, Ashwell, Barrow, Market-Overton, &c.

The Seats of the Nobility are Exton, Brook, and North Luffingham, belonging to the Earl of Ganesborough. The Gentry have some Seats here, but not very many of any note. In this County were formerly many Castles, but Demolished in the several Civil Wars and other Commotions that have happened in this Kingdom, the Ruinous Foundations of many yet being upon digging broke up. I find but Four Parks in this County, and some of them but stenderly stored with Deer; yet there are many Hares, some Coneys, and pleasant Fishing and Fowling at the proper Seasons.

The Reign of King EDWARD the First (since the Norman Conquest.)

ING Edward had News of his Fathers Death when he was Warring in the Holy Land, which made im fettle the Affairs of the Eastern Christians on such ferms as could be so suddainly obtained, very advanagious for them; and so returned home to take care shis more near concerns, his Queen in this Voyage eing brought to bed of a Daughter.

Upon his Arrival, he was Received by the Nobles and Commons with many demonstrations of Joy, and ha few Days he and his Queen were Crowned by

Robert

Robert Killwarby Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and having disposed of divers Trusts and places of Honour giving some Largesses to ingratiate himself with the Higher and Lower Degrees, he called a Parliamenta Westminster, and thither Llewellin Prince of Wales was Summoned to do Homage for the Principality he held. But he taking difgust, because Elianor Daughter to the deceased Earl of Leicester was taken by the English on the Seas, as she was coming from France in order to Marry him, not only refused to come, but because the Lady was detained from him, raised a considerable Army of Welshmen, and Borderers, and fell into Rebellion, entering England and doing great Mischief, But the King resolving to make his first Expedition Terrible to that Languishing Nation, raised such a Power as Llewellin found himself in no capacity to op. pose; wherefore leaving his Men, he came privately to the King, and prostrating himself begged Pardon; protesting that his Love was so exceeding great to the Captive Lady, that nothing but the hopes of Redeem ing her, and entering on those Nuptials that had been Agreed on at the Court of France, could have made him draw his Sword; so that if she might be givenn his Arms, he would from thenceforth live in Peaceand Obedience, be always ready to use his Sword at the Service of King Edward against the French King, of any other, when he should Command it.

King Edward upon this, considering his Government not to be very well settled, and that the French King much relied on the Disturbances the Welsh could give when he designed any thing against England, freely consented to what he demanded; and upon Liewelling Swearing Fealty, the Lady was put into his possession with many Rich Presents bestowed on her at herder parture by the Queen and Court-Ladies; and the Nur tials were Solemnized to their mutual Satisfaction. Soon after this King Edward, in Monumental Honour to his Queen, for the great Love she had shewed in Sucking his Envenomed Wound, and accompanying him in the Holy Land, where she endured many hardships, raised Crosses in the most Remarkable Crossways in England, with the Arms of Spain Quartered with those of England, and the Queens Statue in Marble on the most Remarkable of them; and remembering the Treacherous Practices of the Jews against him Abroad, and their always taking part with the Infidels against the Christians, he Banished them out of England, to the Number of 15009 Persons, Confiscating their Goods; by which means, and Fining corrupt Judges and Officers, he replenished his Treasury with 236000 Marks. And about this time Dr. Scotus, called Subtilis. Preached against the Popes laying claim to St. Peter's Keys, his abusing the Episcopal Authority, as also that Transubstantiation (which wild Notion had been Introduced not long before) was contradictory to Scripture and common Reason; but the Popish Clergy soon Persecuted him into silence.

Long had not the Peace continued between England and Wales, ere Llewelling by the rash Perswasions and Incitement of his Brother David (a Man more contentious than Provident, and less Valiant than Mutinous, and yet one whom the King did extraordinarily love and favour) fell into Rebellion again, forgetting his Oath, which made him little prosper in his Enterprize to enlarge his Borders; for after many sharp Encounters with Sr. Roger Mortimer, the Kings Lieutenant on the Western Marches, he and his Brother were taken, their Heads struck off, and placed on the Tower of London: Yet their followers gave not over, but kept in Parties, Ravaging and Spoiling by Incurfions within the English Pale, and then with their Bout retired again to their Woods and Fastnesses, where they had Builded Huts, as if they conceived this Trans would be of a long continuance, without shifting: But the King, not longer able to bear the Cries and Complaints of his fuffering Subjects, Marched a fufficient Army thither, but not finding the Enemy in the Field, to Ferret them out he caused the Woods to he cut down and confumed with Fire; whereupon fome fubmitted, others dyed of Cold and Hunger in their Retreatments, and many of the Ringleaders were put to Death by fundry manner of Executions; by which means they were reduced to a more fociable kind of life, and began to practice divers commendable Occupations, Arts and Sciences, and took fome pleafure from thenceforth to live like Honest Men.

fions

316

After this, Alexander King of Scots, by a fall from his Horse off a Cliff by the Seaside (whither, upon some fuddain Fright, he carried him furiously) breaking his Neck, and leaving no Male or Female Issue, his three Sisters, (the Eldest of which was Married to John Balia) Earl of Galloway, the Second to Robert Le Bruce, Lord of Valley Androw, and the Third to John Hastings, Lord of Abergavennie, an English Peer) laid claim to the Crown by their most powerful Friends; many Difputes passed, and Reasonings about it; but these little availing, it came at last to the Sword, which for many Years made miserable Havock in that Kingdom, each of the Competitors laying claim to the Crown in Right of their Wives, referring the Decision of their Causeto King Edward, under whose Ward they agreed to put the Government till matters could be determined; whereupon he passed into Scotland, attended with a confiderable Army, there as Soveraign Lord to determine the Strife, and put the state of Affairs in good order.

order. But such was their mutual desires to Reign. that no perswasions prevailed to make any one of them recede from his coveted Soveraignty; yet they all agreed by a publick Writing under their Hands and Seals to refer themselves and their Titles to the Cenfure and Judgment of King Edward; and by the fame Instrument surrendered the Crown and Administration of Affaires to him. To the end that thereby he might enable himself absolutely to possess such a one of them of the Kingdom, as in his Judgment ought to have the Regal Dignity conferred on him; and with the Writing he received their feveral Demands and Claims fairly drawn up, with the Proofs and Arguments to maintain them: Whereupon he Summoned a Council of Twenty English, and as many Scotch Noblemen, Prelates, and Lawyers, to confider and advise what was most proper to be done in this great Affair: and when he had duly informed himself of the matter, and was well fatisfied in his Conscience about it, he gave the Definitive Sentence in favour of John Bailiol who had Married the Eldest of the Three Sisters, and he (upon doing Homage to King Edward) received from him the Crown and Government of Scotland.

Whilst these things were doing, the French supposing the King over-busied in so weighty a matter, and not altogether at leasure to mind his own concerns, entered into Guyan, Gascoyne, and other his Territories beyond the Seas, taking some Towns, and committing many Outrages on his Subjects, and their cossessions. The King roused upon notice of this inury done him, summoned his wonted Courage, and save speedy orders for Levying a potent Army; but ipon computing the Charge, Money was sound in a great measure wanting; so that by the Advice of Villiam Marchyan his Treasurer he exacted it of the Clergy, who for the most part having been exempted from the charge of former Wars, were grown very Rich; he demanded of them half the profit of their EcclesiasticalRevenues, seizing into his hands the useless or superfluous Plate, Jewels, and Treasure of the Chur. ches, Abbies, Monasteries, and other Religious Houses and Places. This made them exceedingly murmur a. gainst him, and labour to Alienate the Hearts of his Subjects from him; tho' in some fort he was not wan. ting to give them fatisfaction, by promising restitution when his Treasure should by encreased; and tho' the little relied on fuch a Promise, as thinking the King would at no time empty his own Coffers to replening theirs, finding they should be stript of their Treasure without remedy, they found out another way, as they supposed, to make themselves amends in time, though no great matter presently could be expected from it."

Clergy,

There had been a Statute Enacted in the Fourth Year of his Reign, strictly Prohibiting the giving and conveying Lands or Tenements to any Corporation whatfoever, called, The Statute against Mortmain, unless with the Kings consent; and this stood in the way especially to hinder Persons in their Wills, to bequeat any thing of that kind to the Church or Religion Houses: This they prayed might be Revoked, In he Replyed, As of himself be could make no Laws, so with out the Consent of Parliament much less could be Annibilat them; (for he was honester than to pretend to a Dif pensing Power) and tho' this vexed them inwardly be frustrated of all that could be expected to their all vantage, yet such was the power he had gained over them, that they durst not express any outward distin of his Proceedings.

After this he imposed a Subsidy upon every Sack of Wooll, also upon all Flesh, and Hides that were to be Transported.

Transported out of the Kingdom; and further to maintain his Wars, required the tenth part of every Mans Substance, or moveable Goods, compelling the Clergy over and above to bring into his Treasury all such Sums of Money as they had promifed to remit to Rome for the Popes use, towards the maintenance of the War against the Turks and other Infidels in the Holy Land. and so having sufficient, he Transported his Armies. fending with them, besides other Necessaries, 100000 Ouarters of Wheat for their Sublistance; where many Battels were Fought between the English and French in, Guyan, Gascoyne, and other Provinces; the former being mostly Victorious, recovering many places, and driving the Enemy for the most part out of his Territories there. But whilst the King was intent to go over and finish what had been so well begun and carried on; the French King, as much as in him lay, to cross his proceedings, had made a Faction in Scotland against the new King, who compelled him to renounce his Allegiance to King Edward, and fend Defiance to him; nor was this all, but with an Army hastily gathered, he entered and wasted the Northern parts of England, Slaying, Burning and Plundering without Pity or Remorfe: Whereupon King Edward, recounting his manifold Favours, and the great love he had to the Revolted King of Scots; this base Ingratitude fo stirred his Anger. That he resolved a bloody chastifement should be the punishment of his unthankfullness: Whereupou recalling some of his Forces, and raising more, he Marched to the succour of his Subjects; and fuch was his good Fortune, that in a little time he met with and fought the Scotch Army, flaying 25000 of them, winning the strong Castles of Berwick and Dunbar, and foon after the City of Edenburough, with many other places of note; which made King John too late fee his Errors, and to what diffress his rashness had driven him: However, thinking to find Favour by an humble submission, or at least prevent the further Ruin and Desolation of his Country, he came and cast himfelf at King Edwards Fcet, wholle submitting, with himfelf the Crown and Kingdom of Scotland, to be at his dispose, in expectation to have been Restored; but King Edward, refenting very heinously his ungrateful proceedings, fent him under a strong Guard to the Tower of London; yet ordered him allowance of Liberty, Diet, and Attendance, as became his state; when Marching from Sea to Sea, without any farther resistance, he settled the Affaires of Scotland, committing the Government of the Kingdom to John Warren Earl of Surry, as his Lieutenant; Constituting Hugh Cressing. bam Lord Treasurer, and William Barnsley his Chief Justice; confining some of the Rebellious Scots within the Marches of England, that they might be disabled from giving any Disturbance in his Absence; and so returned in Triumph, with great Honours, and high applause of his Subjects.

The King being now at leasure to remember the Injuries the French had done him, and resolving to Revenge them, Leagued with Guy Earl of Flanders, and Transported an Army thither, and Fought with Robert Earl of Arthois, whome he Routed, taking many Towns and Fortresses on the Frontiers; which made the French King play over the game again of stirring up the Scots to Rebellion, hoping by that means to constrain him to return; but on the contrary, he appointed Hemy Piercy Earl of Northumberland, his General for that War; who mannaged it with that Prudence, that after some Marching, Training them into the open Field, he gave them Battel with incredible Slaughter, so that many Miles of Ground were in a manner covered with their their dead Bodies, by which great Overthrow they found themselves constrained to return to their former Obedience; fo that the French King perceiving his Project took not on that side, seemed very desirous to try his Strength with King Edward in the Field; but his Courage failing, he reposing more considence in his Policy than Valour, he proceeded to tamper about pronosals of Love and Amity, that might settle a lasting Peace; and King Edward being now a Widower, her earnestly solicited him to take his Sister to Wife, to make the Alliance stronger; which by the cunning subtilty of some Courtiers, Bribed by the French King, was brought about; and Peace enfued after a tedious War that had caused much Bloodshead. So the King with his Queen returned home, and soon after he made Prince Edward his Son, who had been Born at Carnarvan in Wales, the better to ingratiate himself with those People. Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, and to gain the Hearts of the Londoners, he restored them those Liberties his Father had deprived them of, and without which they had continued the space of Twelve Years: during which time a Governour was fet over them by the King, and their Magistrates chosen by his order. But whilst things were well ordering at home. the Scots again fell into Rebellion: Whereupon the King fent to demand their Ring-leaders, who had drawn them into this danger, (which principally was one Wallis, a Gentleman of an inveterate Spirit against the English Nation) with a promise of Pardon to all the rest, upon their laying down their Arms; or else threatned to waste the Country with Fire and Sword from Sea to Sea, and spare none of that Nation he should find in his way. But driven on by their hard Fate, they were Deaf to these Proposals, making yet greater preparations to weather (as they thought) the Storm they 322 they could not but expect; and fo upon the Kings entering the Marches of Scotland, they bid him Battel; where, before the Armies joyned, he made then the same Offers, which they seemed to reject with scorn; fo the Bloody Blast being founded by the order of the Incenfed King, who refolved now to Scourge them in earnest, the English fell on with such fury and violence, that they broke, like a Tempest, into the Scott Battel, carrying all before them, so that a miserable flaughter enfued, and the King pressing too furious upon those that Fled, in the eagerness of the Pursuit fell from his Horse, and broke two of his Ribs; yethe lightly remounting, and not regarding his Hurt, drove them out of the Field with the flaughter of 32000 of them; he not now (as at other times) restraining the Swords of his Soldiers, but gave scope and encourage. ment to their thirst of Revenge, and in this Battel fell the flower of the Scots Nobility and Gentry; but on our fide very few were flain; some Historians make mention but of 28 of all Degrees, tho' that seemes to Partial. But in comparison of the Scots, they were certainly very inconsiderable.

The Prisoners that were taken were not many, by reason few were spared in the Fight, or in the pursuit that were overtaken; so that the small remainder of the Nobles came and Humbled themselves before the King, charging the fault on fuch as they faid had jultly received their Deferts by being slain in the Batte and this Submission, upon their taking a new Oath Fealty and Homage, was accepted; and returning home upon the earnest request of Pope Boniface the Eighth he Released John the Deposed King of Scots out of the Tower, who went to Normandy to live quietly there on Lands alotted him, called Bayliolls Lordship of Lands; where falling Blind, and being much in Years he Dyed, leaving his Estate to his Son Edward. However his Death put not an end to the Scots Troubles; for they had not long enjoyed Peace, but forgetting their Oaths, or at least despiting all conditions with the English, they again Revolted, and again felt the same Scourge of War, the King taking by force and furrender all the strong Castles and Fortrelles into his hands, and Oath of the Justices, Mayors, and Officers of the several Towns and Forts; and having disposed all things to the best advantage, and settled the Government in trufty hands, he brought away the Crown, Robes of State, and Marble Chair from Scone, in which the Scots Kings had always been Crowned; and placed the latter in the Kings Chappel at Westminster; and on it there is faid to be a Prophetick Latin Distick; in English to this Effect:

Where e'er this Stone is Plac'd, the Scot shall find; And there shall Rule, for there his Reign's Affign'd:

This may indeed feem to be verified in the Union of the two Kingdoms under King James the First, of the Scotish Line. But to proceed.

As foon as King Edward was returned from his Journey, he caused an Enquiry (which was termed Troli Baston) to be made in all his Dominions of the Misdemeanors and Oppressions of his Officers and others; so that the Number of the Transgressors were fo many, that heavy Fines being laid on them, and they like so many full Spunges Squeezed of their Unjust Gains into the Kings Coffers, they were plentifully replenished thereby; not only to Pay off old Debts. but to Recompence such as had at their own Expence faithfully Served him in his Wars; and among other Complaints, Dr. Langton Bishop of Chester, Exhibited one to the King against Prince Edward, whom he said at the Instigation of Pierce Gaveston, his Loose and Evil Counsellor, had forcibly broken into his Parks, wounded his Servants, and destroyed his Game: Whereupon the Prince was committed to Prison during the Kings pleasure, and Gaveston Banished upon pain of Death, never to return into the Land; and Edward Earl of Cornwal, Son to Richard King of the Romans Dying without Issue, he gave that Earldom to Prince Edward; which Title, with that of Chester, have been since inseparable from the Princes of Wales.

A Peace being now had in Scotland, things remained quiet for a time; during which space, Robert Bruce, one of the Competitors, came with divers Nobles to the English Court, and was highly Entertained; which they did only for a shew, whilst they were dealing underhand with the Pope to favour their Cause; nor was he flow in it, but fent an Instrument in Writing by which he pretended to lay claim to the Kingdom of Scotland, as holden of the See of Rome; wherein King Edward was peremptorily required to furcease from all Demands of Tenure and Soveraignty over it. Buthe stoutly Answered by his Ambassadors, That it did belong to the Kings of England, and not unto the See of Rome, or to any other; requiring him to revoke his unjust Claim, for that both he and his Nobles were refolved to maintain his Right therein at the hazardof their Lives and Estates; and the Ambassador shewing the Hands and Seals of the Nobles, and most of the Prelates of England, that had Sworn to this Resolutions the old Blade with the Leaden Sword drew in his Horns; whereupon Bruce fecretly withdrew and raised Tumults in Scotland: Yet the King forced him to fy into Norway, where he remained; till in Edward the Seconds Reign he returned to broach new Troubles. But the King, upon his Marching through Scotland, Dyed : commanding in his Last Will, That his Son should carry his Bones with him, till he had utterly Subdued the Rebells; and that Gaveston should not be Recalled from Banishment; also that his Heart should be carried to the Holy Land, and there Buried: He began his Reign November 16, Anno Dom. 1272, and Reigned 34 Years, 7 Months and 21 Days; being the 29th Sole Monarch of England. He Dyed of a Dyssentery at Burg upon Sands, July 7, Anno Dom. 1307, in the 69th Year of his Age, and was Buried at Westminster.

Bangor D E N: PART SHROP-SHIRE By John Seller BIGH SHIRE Breewood STAFFORD Blodwall: 0 Wolverhampton Walfall PART OF SHIRE MONT: 4) Sturbridge • Rayesley PART OF GOMERY Montgomery f Keddermifter Sounderen Dwine - WORCESTER SHIRE The New Caftle C Kington SHI)RE English Miles of Radnor Prof Hereford South

in

In the Third Year of this Kings Reign, on St. Nicholas Day, very terrible Thunders, Earthquakes and Lightenings happened; also a great Fiery Dragon in the Air and a Blazing Star, which much amazed the People. In the Year 1288 the Summer was fo Scorching, that many Dyed of extream Heat; yet Wheat was Sold at 2s. 8d. the Quarter, and all Corn at a proportionable rate; but the Year following, by reason of the great Rains that fell, Wheat was raifed to 20s. a Quarter, and fo continued near Forty Years, which was in those times accounted a great Dearth. Anno Dom. 1299 the Kings Palace at Westminster with the Buildings of the Monastery, were consumed with Fire; and a great Whale coming up the River, was struck and taken over-against Erif, being 40 Foot Long, and proportionable in Bulk, &c.

Remarks on Shaophire, &c.

SHropshire is commodiously situated, intermixed with Hills, Plains, Woods, Forrests, Chaces, &c. and produces Corn, Rich Pastures, Cattle, and many other things, to the advantage of the Inhabitants. It is Bounded with Cheshire, Staffordshire, Worcestershire, Herefordshire, Radnorshire, Mongomeryshire, and Denbyshire: contains 15 Hundreds, divided into 170 Parishes, and bas in it 14 Market Towns, and 18 great and small River, branching mostly from the Severn; which plentifully Waters this Shire and others. It sends Members to Parliament 12, viz. Bishops-Castle 2, Bridgnorth 2, Ludlow 2, Shrewsbury 2, Wenlock 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

In Shropshire, besides Shrewsbury, the County Town, a noted Mart for Cloath and Frizes brought from Wales, and thence dispersed into divers parts of England, There are Remarkable Ruins of some Antient Places, which were certainly Towns or Cities of great splendor; as Workcester, Uriconium the antient Usoconia, of which Okenyatis a small remainder; Oswalstree retaines its Name from Oswald the 11th King of Northumberland, who was here Slain in Battel by Penda King of the Mercians; The other Towns of Note are Wellynton, Newport, Braynton, &c. At Shrewsbury, and other places on the Severn, is taken a Fish called a Mort, in Taste like a Salmon; a Pitchford is a Well whose Water casts up a Scum of Liquid Bitumen, and near Oswaldstree is a Vestigia of a Roman Camp.

The Seats of the Nobility are Pepperhill, belonging to the Earl of Shrewsbury; Highercal and Eyton, to the Lord Viscount Newport; Cherbury, to the Lord Herben Baron of Cherbury; It has also in it 13 Bridges, 13 Castles, 7 Forrests, and 27 Parks. The Seats of the Gentry at likewise very pleasant, and there is almost every where great store of Game, and abundance of Fish.

The Reign of EDWARD the Second (usually called Edward of Carnarvan.)

E DWARD the Second Succeeded his Father in the Throne; but having been brought up tenderly, and given too much to Flatterers and loofe Company, he very early gave the Nobles cause to distast his Government; for tho' his Father in his Last Will had firicity Prohibited his Recalling Peirce Gaveston from Banishment, a Person who by his evil Example and pernicious Counsels had been the great Debaucher of his Younger Years, yet he did it, tho' contrary to the Mind of his People in general; and to despite them the more, took him into his particular Favour, Vowing if it lay in his power he would willingly share the Kingdom with him, heaping Honours on him, and Liberally opening his Coffers to him; fo that he no sooner asked, but his desires were granted. This much perplexed the Nobles, and made them Remonstrate to the King the ill consequences that were likely to follow on such his Proceedings, putting him in mind of his dving Fathers charge to him, and urging many other things; but he little regarded them; fo that perceiving the King entirely to doat on this upstart Favourite. who thereupon grew very Proud and Infolent, advancing him to the Barony of Wallingford, and Earldom of Cornwal, making him Master of his Jewels and Treafure, a great part of which he sent beyond the Seas, to provide for himself against such a Storm as he might reasonably expect. They for a time held their peace; tho' they inwardly grieved at the Miscarriage of things.

The King was now Married to Isabel Daughter to Philip the French King, a Lady of admirable Beauty, but of a haughty Mind, impatient of Injuries; yet this Loose Favourite, to cross her, because he stood not high in her esteem, laboured by introducing fresh Beauties to the King, to Alienate him from her Society and Bed, carried him often to Revellings, and made him Drink to Excess, that his Conscience might not find any deliberate time to Check him for his Lawless Enterprises.

The Queen at this was both Grieved and Angry, labouring however, by all mild ways and endearing perswasions to Reclaim the King, laying before him his Unkindness to one that so tenderly Loved and Honoured him, and the Scandal and Contempt he would cause of himself among his People, if he who was placed in fo eminent a Station, to give good Ex. amples to others, as Patterns for them to follow, shewed in himself such an evil one; Intreating him to follow the Prudence and Heroick Virtues of his Father. and not despising the sober Advice of his Grave Coun. fellors, harken to and be lead away by base Parasites and Flatterers. But the King, not regarding what he faid, tho' the People at the same time greatly Mur. mured and spoke evil of him for his Loose and Un-Princely manner of Living, as also of Gaveston to whom they bore an irreconcileable hatred: The No. bles found themselves constrained (for redressing the Mischiefs) and preventing greater, that threatened the Kingdom, To Petition the King for Gaveston's Banish ment; wherein they set forth his evil Practices and Faults, with the Sorrow of his Majesties best affected Subjects, for that he (more than was fit or comely) was Guided and Governed by that unworthy Favourite; earnestly entreating his Highness he would be pleased (for preventing fuch Mischiefs as were otherwise like ly to ensue) To Banish that Lewd Person from his Court and Kingdom.

The King upon this, fearing some danger threatned if he refused to comply with his Nobles, whom he found resolutely bent no longer to suffer such Indignities a Gaveston had put upon them; tho' much against his will, agreed he should be sent into Ireland; which accordingly was done; yet the King sent after him many comfortable Messages, and at length constituted him.

ntenant of that Kingdom, fending him store of lewels, and Corn to maintain his State and Granby which he might conclude his Banishment but nourable Embassy, and an occasion presented by to the King to make him more Rich and Poides all this, the Kings discontents and passions s Absence, appeared to be so many and great. the Nobles were grieved for the perplexities of ind; which made them (in hopes of his Favourites e amendment of all things that had been found in him, after this Humbling) of their own accord on the King that he might be Recalled: But he Leopards Spots, his Vices were so natural to nd so inherent in him, that he was nothing chanbut upon his return grew more Infolent than which occasioned him but a short time; for at the int Importunities of the Nobles, he was again ed into Flanders; yet remained not long, ere the (impatient of his Absence) Recalled him without nsent of his Nobles; and to Agrandize him the Married him to his Kinswoman the Earl of ers Daughter, a Virtuous and Honourable Lady: bearing himself much on this Alliance, he grew ha height, that he scorned the greatest Peers in pd; and in his State, Attendance, and Table, outren the King; Glorying and openly boasting Ruled the King; and by what ways he had him. This however did him no kindness, for Ig finding he could no longer Protect him against tent Nobles and the clamours of the Common which i hreatned ruin in his stay, he was cond to part with him a Third time. But the nd disconten, s by his Absence was no sooner and alay'd, but the King sent to him privately

The Queen at this was both Grieved and A labouring however, by all mild ways and ende perswasions to Reclaim the King, laying before his Unkindness to one that so tenderly Loved Honoured him, and the Scandal and Contemi would cause of himself among his People, if he was placed in fo eminent a Station, to give good amples to others, as Patterns for them to fo shewed in himself such an evil one; Intreating hi follow the Prudence and Heroick Virtues of his Fat and not despising the sober Advice of his Grave C sellors, harken to and be lead away by base Para and Flatterers. But the King, not regarding wha faid, tho' the People at the same time greatly mured and spoke evil of him for his Loose and Princely manner of Living, as also of Gavest whom they bore an irreconcileable hatred: The bles found themselves constrained (for redressing Mischiefs) and preventing greater, that threaten Kingdom, To Petition the King for Gaveston's B ment; wherein they set forth his evil Practic Faults, with the Sorrow of his Majesties best af Subjects, for that he (more than was fit or comel Guided and Governed by that unworthy Favo earnestly entreating his Highness he would be p (for preventing fuch Mischiefs as were otherwis ly to ensue) To Banish that Lewd Person fr Court and Kingdom.

The King upon this, fearing some danger the if he refused to comply with his Nobles, whom he resolutely bent no longer to suffer such Indignates are suffered had put upon them; the much again will, agreed he should be sent into Ireland; who cordingly was done; yet the King sent after him comfortable Messages, and at length constitution.

is Lieutenant of that Kingdom, sending him store of late, lewels, and Corn to maintain his State and Granure; by which he might conclude his Banishment but n Honourable Embassy, and an occasion presented hereby to the King to make him more Rich and Poent.

Besides all this, the Kings discontents and passions br his Absence, appeared to be so many and great, that the Nobles were grieved for the perplexities of is Mind; which made them (in hopes of his Favourites sture amendment of all things that had been found mis in him, after this Humbling) of their own accord Petition the King that he might be Recalled: But ike the Leopards Spots, his Vices were so natural to him, and so inherent in him, that he was nothing chanked; but upon his return grew more Insolent than ever, which occasioned him but a short time; for at the incessant Importunities of the Nobles, he was again Banished into Flanders; yet remained not long, ere the King (impatient of his Absence) Recalled him without the consent of his Nobles; and to Agrandize him the more, Married him to his Kinswoman the Earl of Glocesters Daughter, a Virtuous and Honourable Lady: when bearing himself much on this Alliance, he grew to fuch a height, that he scorned the greatest Peers in England; and in his State, Attendance, and Table, outvied even the King; Glorying and openly boafting how he Ruled the King; and by what ways he had missed him. This however did him no kindness, for the King fading he could no longer Protect him against the potent Nobles and the clamours of the Common People, which threatned ruin in his stay, he was contrained to part with him a Third time. But the noise and disconten 's by his Absence was no sooner pacified and alay'd, by t the King sent to him privately to Return, tho' very fatal to him; for upon hislanding, entering into the Castle of Scarborough, he was there Besieged and taken by the Earl of Warwick and with the consent of the Earls of Lancaster and Hereford carried to Warwick-Castle, and Beheaded.

The King had no fooner notice of the untimelyend of his Favourite, but in a vehement passion he Cursu those Noblemen, and expressed his Anger and Vone of Revenge in many threatning terms: But Timeron dering him cooler, and the Reasons that were given for their hasty Proceedings, he Pardoned them, in on. fideration that all which belonged to Gaveston, should be put into his hands. However his inclinations were fuch that he could not be long without a Favouritan whom he might impart his Secrets on all occasions wherefore he made Sr. Hugh Spencer, and Hugh his Su of his Cabinet Council; raising them from a men Estate, to Lord it over the Nobles; and whatever did of any importance, was by their Advice and in rection; he made the Elder of them Earl of Winchelle, and gave to both of them many Honourable Places and Offices, which caused them to become more Infolm than Gaveston, and altogether as much hated in a little time.

Robert Bruce, mentioned in the foregoing Reign, won notice of these Disorders in England, thought was now a fit time for him to possess himself of the Crown of Scotland; and therefore returning from Norway, he was Joyfully received by the Scots, as well Nobles as Commons; and was by them a second time Crowned King; whereupon he Levied a great Am, and entered into the English Marches, miserably was ing the Country as he passed, with Fire and Sword; which made King Edward shake off his soft repose, and hasten to the Field; whose coming put a stop to the

torent, and made the Scots retire beyond the Tweed. Whereupon King Edward having strengthened his Army, entered Scotland, doing great Damage; but was at Bannocks Bourn Encountered by King Robert, who Surprisingly fell upon the English, by reason of their remissiness, and the unwillingness of some of the Nobles to Engage, because King Edward had given the great Commands into the hands of mean Persons by the Advice of the Spencers; and after a bloody and long Fight, totally Routed them. And here King Edward, through bad conduct, having been a Spectator of the flaughter of many Valiant Men, (among which were Gilbert D' Clare Earl of Glocester, and 42 other Lords, with more than 60 Knights and Baronets, besides 22 of Note, who were taken Prisoners) he was compelled for his own fafety to haften back for England (leaving all his Treasure, Amunition and Baggage behind him, and 22000 common Soldiers Slain and made Prisoners) exceedingly disconsolated and perplexed; where he foon found new Troubles: For one John Poldras, a Tanners Son of Exeter in Devonshire, boldly affirming himself to be the truly begotten Son of Edward the First, aledging that he was changed by his Nurse in his Cradle for a Carters Child, raised by this Chimera strange Commotions, many People believing by King Edwards proceedings, so disagreeable to those of the preceding King, that there was some ground of truth in it. He also offered divers colourable Proofs for what he faid, and among others he strongly infisted on the unworthy and fordid conditions of the King, forting to none so fitly as to one of obscure and common Birth; so that a great many of the Commons in those parts unadvisedly flocked to him, and owned him for their True King, looking on Edward as a Changling; but they in a hot Skirmish being Defeated, the - the Impostor was taken Prisoner, and confessed his Treason and Folly, but not any one that set him on work, and encouraged him to it; so that being convicted by his Confession, he was Condemned and Executed, and the rest Pardoned; which at this time put an end to the Western Troubles.

But in the North, the Scots pursuing theis Success, taking many Places Garisoned with English, by force, and had the strong Castle of Bernick betrayed into their hands by the Deputy-Governor, who let them in, in the dusk of the Evening, at a Sally-Port he had purposely less open; yet in the dark scusse he had his Reward, for going with the appointed Signal of safety, and in the dark, it not being discerned by the Scots, they Slew him.

Nor was this all the misery at this time the Northern County suffered, their Cattle Dyed of a grievous Murrain, and Famine was exceeding amongst them. Moreover divers notorious Thieves and Robbers (to the number of 200) taking the advantage of these stirs, put themselves into Friars Weeds, and Robbed, Ravished, Burned, and laid Waste where they came, Murthering divers who Resisted them; but in a few Months most of them were taken and put to Death by sundry Torments. The Famine was likewise succeeded by a Plague; so that the Living were scarce able to Bury the Dead.

These Calamities and daily cries of his People made the King advance Northward with an Army; yet bad success attended him, for giving the Scots Battel, he was Overthrown, and a great part of his Army Slain; and so in much vexation returned home. This made the Nobles grievously complain of the Spencers, and others, the Kings Favourites, by whose bad Mannagement of Affaires the Realm was at a point to be overwhelmed whelmed in Misery, laying before the Kingtheir Misdemeanours and ill treatment of his Subjects; how many Thousands suffered by the Male-Administration of Government, and the great Callamities approaching, if speedy Redress was not had, even to the subversion of the State; and then became Importunate Suitors to him, that he would be pleased to put those from him that had caused so many Grievances, and made him careless of those Duties which by Almighty God were required at his hands. They told him likewise. As Subjection belonged to the People, so the King was bound to Protect them; and that most dishonourably he had left his Commons in the North a Prey to the iScots, and grievously oppressed with Wants and Extremities; and that if he pleased not (upon their humble Entreaty and Request) to dismiss the Spencers from their Places and Service. They must and would prefume to do it, tho' with the hazard and perril of their own Lives.

At this, the, the King in Conscience could not but hearken to it, being an apparent Truth, yet it so highly displeased him (who preserved his Favourites before the Good of all his People) That he bit his Lip, and with an austere Countenance turned at first from them, without speaking; but considering the ill consequences that might attend his slighting them in a business wherein all his good Subjects were concerned, he turned again, and gave them a pleasing Answer, viz. That since things were come to such extremity, there could be no suitable Redress but in a Parliament, which he speedily intended to call, and would submit to what that Assembly should determine most Necessary for the good and wellfare of the Kingdom.

However, the Nobles afterward seemed distaissied, as fancying the King (when they were so Assembled) designed designed to Seiz them, and forcibly make them comply with his Terms; yet finding fuch a meeting was necessary, they came strongly Guarded with a numerous Train, all in one Livery; this much startled the King, but most of all it grieved him he now saw he must part with the Spencers, whom in the Extalle of his Expressions he had declared to Love dearer than his Queen or Children; and accordingly they were Banished during their Lives, the King being bound not to Recal them upon any pretence whatever. But this caused a hatred in him against the Barons, so that he expressed it in Threats, and that he ought not to be forced to do any thing against his Mind. So that although the Younger Spencer, geting a Squadron of Ships turned Pirate, Robbing the English Merchants and Strangers. The King would not confent to their Intreaties that a Fleet might be sent out to surpress those apparent Injuries and Disgraces, but Laughed at them when they proposed it, as inwardly pleased at the News they had brought him; and foon after, contrary to the expectation of all Men. Recalled them from Banishment, restoring them to their Honours and Offices, wherein they became more Insolent than ever.

334

The Barons grieved at these Proceedings, and Expecting no Redress from the King, immediatly took up Arms, and the King did the like; so that after many sharp Bickerings and Encounters, both Armies joyned in Battel, and Fought cruelly; Kindred against Kindred, making no distinction of Relations, in the bloody Field: But when many of the Barons and other Leaders were Slain, their Party gave way, and the King Pursued very suriously, so that a miserable Slaughter happened, and at Burrow-Bridge, near where this Battel was Fought, The Earl of Lancaster (the Kings Unkle) and 90 other Nobles were taken Prifoners foners, and fent to Pontfrast-Caftle, where the Noble Earl staid on a Scaffold Seven Hours before they could procure an Executioner to Behead him, fo greatly was he Beloved by all forts of People; but at length a vile Wretch was procur'd out of a Goal, for a fum of Money, to perform that Office. Five others were put to Death there, and at York the next day the Lords Clifford, Mobray and Derwell were Hanged in Iron-Chaines. The Earl of Hereford likewise lost his Head; in all (at several places) Twenty Noblemen; so that in no Reign fo much Noble Blood, by Executions, wet the English Earth.

These terrible Executions astonished the rest, and broke their Strength, which greatly puffed up the Spencers, by whose Instigation, more than any cruel inclination in the King, it was thought to be done, to fecure their own State, which after this they imagined could not be shaken: For soon after, some Courtiers Intreating the King for the Life of a Person of mean Rank, who had committed a Murther, he broke out into a violent Passion in these words, viz. A Plague overtake you all, for Flatering Knaves; you make much Suit for the Life of an errand Caitiff, but which of you spoke a word for the good Knight Lord Thomas my Unkle? By the Bread of God this Varlet shall Dye the Death he deserves; and so in a Rage he turned from them, and soon after he called a Parliament at York, in which Prince Edward his Son was Created Prince of Wales and Duke of Aquitain; and Sir Andrew Harkly, whose extraordinary Service was a principal means of the Barons Overthrow, Earl of Carlifle; and demanded the Sixth Penny of all Temporalities in England, Wales and Ireland, to defray the Charges of his intended War against the Scots, which he obtained; yet the People grievously Murmured at Paying it, affirming they were altogether Impoverished by the late Wars and Famine And now the Scots geting fecret Inteligence of what the King intended against them, resolved to begin first, and well knowing they had Impoverished the Northern parts, and that no further Booty was there to be had, they crossed over the Narrow Straights, and fell very furiously on Ireland; but by the Courage and prudent Conduct of the Bishop of Armagh and the Lord Brinningham, they were Overthrown, their King Slain. and most of them Cut in Pieces; upon this advantage King Edward Marched into Scotland, which he found full of Terror and Confusion, the People every where flying before him into the Woods, Mountains, and other Faitnesses; thinking by that means to weary out the English; and indeed their Project failed not, for Snows, Rains, and bitter Frosts ensuing the English were unable to keep the Field, especially their Provisions being near spent, and a great Mortality (by reafon of the raw Damps and Golds) grievously affliced the Camp; so that, contrary to the mind of the King they were forced to return; which the Soots perceiving, crept from their lurking Holes, and carried Fire a cross, which is the usual Signal for the Alarum, or raising the Country, and soon gathered into such Multitudes, that following and wasting his Rear, at last they boldly set on his main Battel and discomsited it; fo that he was constrained to fly, and leave them Masters of his Treasure, and Baggage. This Defeat is faid to be occasioned by the Treachery of Sr. Andrew Harkley, who had been lately Created Earl of Carlifle; who being Bribed by the Scots, betraied his trust in the Eattel. But however it happened, it was charged up on him, and for it he lost his Head.

Upon the Kings return, there happened a Quare between the Queen and the Spencers; the charging them to have Alienated the Kings affections from her and to cause him to place it on Harlots, and the King feeming to excuse or take part with them, she so highly resented the Affront, that under pretence of visiting her native Country, the obtained leave to go over with the Prince her Son, where she was received by King Charles her Brother (Philip her Father being Dead) with many expressions of kindness, and shewing her diflike to return unless matters might be Reformed at home, fome of the Barons in England fent fecretly by Letters to Advise her. That if she could procure one Thousand Valliant Strangers, they would joyn her on her Landing with a confiderable Force, and endeavour once more to Redress the Disorders of the State: This she made known to her Brother, who comforted her by earnest Promises and Oaths. That by his Affistance, and at his Cost, her Wrongs and the Kingdoms Injuries, should be Repaired; but kept not his Word for being Bribed by the Spencers, who by their Spies had notice of her tampering in the French Court when the demanded his Performance, he grew cold upon it, and chid her for such Intentions; saying She was foolishly afraid of her Shaddow, since she had Undutifully for saken the company of her Lord and Husband.

The Pope also, and chiefest Cardinals, being Engaged by great Rewards, strictly required the French King, upon pain of the Apostolick Curse, to send home the Queen and Prince, so that she perceiving he intended to deliver her into the hands of such as would have forcibly brought her over, she secretly retired with her Son into the Empire; however during her stay at the French Court, she had done England a kindness, in causing by her Mediation the Troubles in Gascoyne to cease; and making an Agreement in other matters relating to the King her Husband: In consideration of which, he was to confer the Dutchy of Aquitain and Earldom of Poictou on the Prince his Son, which he did, under his Seal; and he did Homage for it to his Unkle the French King; but upon his fending for her home, she refused to come, unless hers and others Grievances were Redreffed by Parliament; which occasioned his trying by other means to make her return: but as is faid, she retiring into the Empire, upon suspicion of what was Intended, went to Hainalt, where she was kindly received; and to make her Interest strong at that Court, she without the consent of her Husband, or the Peers of England, Married the Prince to Phillipa, the Earl of Hainalts Daughter; upon which account, and the means of what Treasure she had brought, she raised 2700 Soldiers, Commanded by Sr. John of Hainalt, and the Lord Beamont, to whom Joyned the Young Lord Mortimer, who had escaped out of the Tower of London, and got beyond the Seas, with some other Exiled English Noblemen and Strangers, fo that having all things in a readiness, she Sayled for England, and Landed at Orwell in Suffex, whither a great Number of English resorted to her; and the further she went, her Army greatly encreased.

King Edward having notice of this, left his Count, and retired hastily into the West to raise Forces; promising 1000l. to any that should bring him the Lord Mortimer's Head; The King was no sooner retired, but the Londoners taking the Advantage of his Absence, seized upon the Bishop of Exeter, who was appointed to Govern the City, and without any Legal Proceedings or Judicial Sentence, caused his Head to be stricken off at the Standard in Cheapside; and then with great violence broke down the Tower Gates, killing all they found in it, and secured that and the City to the use of the Queen, and of the Prince her Son.

The

The King being Informed of these Proceedings, his Heart failed him; so that defisting from his intent of raining Forces, he Posted to Bristol and Fortified it, committing the Defence thereof to the Earl of Arundale, and the Spencer's, Father and Son, entered with him into the Caltle, which they determined as a last Refuge to defend with all their Strength; but within a few days after, the City was Besieged, Assaulted and Taken by the Queen and Barons, who took and Committed the Earl and divers others of Note to fafe custody; the King and his two Favourites dispairing of Safety there, got out to Sea in a small Fisher Boat, intending for Ireland; but so Providence ordered it. that it was thrice (when put out) driven by the shifting of the Wind near the Castle; so that the last time the Lord Beamont Manning out a Vessel seized it, and found there the King and the Elder Spencer, the other having got on Shore, and shifted away for a time: These the Queen presented before the Caltle, which the Garison no sooner perceived, but they Surrendered; and here the Lord Arundel was Beheaded, and the King fent Prisoner to Kenelworth Castle; and by the way they contrived to Shave him, to Disguise him, least being known he should be Rescued; when the Impudent Fellow of a Shaver fet him on a Molehill, and told him That Cold Water must now serve his turn, pointing to the Ditch; at which Indignity, the King burst out in Tears, saying, There, should be Warm Water whether be would or no. The Queen having thus far proceeded, determined the Death of her Capital Enemy, dooming him to be Quartered Alive; which was done, and his Head and Quarters set up in divers places; she gave a considerable Reward to the Person who brought her the Head. Young Spencer, soon after was taken with the Lords Baldock and Reading, carried to Hereford, and Hanged

Hanged on a Gallows 50 Foot high: And thus fell these Favourites, who put too much trust in their own Strength and Pollicy, little expecting such suddain turns of Fortune to alter their conditions, by throwing them from the Pinacle of Honour into the Gulf of Misery and Disgrace, which ought to be a Warning to all who undeservedly aspire, cautiously to behave themselves.

Upon this, a Parliament was called to fettle the difordered Affaires of the Kingdom, who Resolved to transfer the Crown from Edward to his Son; whereupon three Bishops, three Earls, two Barons, two Abbots, and two Justices, were appointed to demand (in the Name of the Parliament) a furrender of it; which if he refused, they would perhaps take other measures and give it from his Family, to one more worthy. This he took fo grievously, that after many complainings of his hard Usage, and a confession of his Failures in Government, he fell in a Swoon, which moved the Lords to pitty him; but being brought to himself, after some time bemoaning his hard Fate, feeing there was no other Remedy, he Signed and Sealed the Instrument tendered him, by which he passed over his Crown, and Right and Title to all his Dominions, to Prince Edward his Son; whereupon Sr. William Truffel, one of the Judges or Justices, in the name of the whole Realm, renounced Homage to the King in these words, viz.

I William Truffel in the name of all Men of the Land of England, and of all the Parliament, Procurator, do refign to thee Edward, the Homage that was made to thee some times; and from this time forward I defie thee, and derive thee of all Royal Power and Authority; I shall never be tendant to thee, as for King, after this time.

Edward being thus Unkinged, the Strangers were difinished with large Pay, and many things were Reformed.

North EPART of GLOCESTER SOMERSET Тне +Bristoll SHIRE. SHIRE Elatholme I. IRISH Shephalme I. SEA. Banniton Sherborne PART 0 F Margress Harne Burland I Ilmift HIRE. Crokethorne / English Miles SHIRE. DORSET South formed. But as it is a true saying, There are but a sew steps between the Prisons and Graves of Princes, so here it sell out; for the King being taken from Kenelworth by Sr. John Matravers and Thomas Gourney, and carried to Bracklay Castle, he was in a most Inhumane manner Murthered, by running a Red-hot Spit through a hollow Horn they had placed in his Fundament, up into his Body; for which they afterwards fled, and dyed miserably in Banishment. Thus sell the Deposed King, whose Reign is accounted but 19 Years, 6 Months, and 18 Days, tho he Lived some time longer; being 40 Years of Age, and was Buried at Gloucester.

In this Kings Reign, Anno Dom. 1311, The Order of the Knights Templers that Fought so long in the Holy Land, was Abolished in all Nations. Anno 1318, happened such a grievous Famine, That the Poorer fort Eat Dogs, Cats, Rats, and other Unclean things. The Prisoners in Goals Murthered divers fresh commers, and Eat them, and yet many Thousands Dyed for want of this Nauseous Food. This was succeeded by a Pestilence, and Rot of Cattle, Breaking in of the Sea, Huge Land-Floods, Fiery Armies Fighting in the Air, and a Terrible Blazing Star.

Remarks on Somerletshire, &c.

Somersetshire abounds in Corn, Cattle, Wooll, Woollen-Cloath, Serges and many other valuable Commodities: On the North-West it opens to the Irish Sea, and for the rest it is Bounded by Devonshire, Dorsetshire, Wiltshire, and Gloucestershire; it containes 42 Hundreds, 2 Bishopricks, viz. Bristol, Bath and Wests, which are accounted Cities, 385 Parishes, 35 Market Towns, 9 Rivers, 45 Bridges, 2 Forrests, and 18 Parks: It sends Members to Parliament 18, viz. Bath 2, Bridgwater 2, Bristol 2, Ilchester, 2

Milborn Port 2, Minhead 2, Taunton 2, Wells 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Bath, in this Shire, is very Antient, famed for its Mineral Waters, Curing Diseases in many People; said to be First found out by Bladud an Antient British King; Bath and Wells joyntly together make one Bishoprick, tho' Wells is principally esteemed for its curious Cathedral, held to be Built by Inas King of the West Saxons. At Pen the Britains were Overthrown by Kenwald, King of the West Saxons, and afterward the Danes by Edmund Ironside; Bridgwater is noted for a great deseat given the Danes Anon Dom. 845: And for the Battel of Sedgmore near it, becween the late King James's Forces and the Duke of Monmouth, Anno 1685; wherein the latter was totally Routed.

Glassenbury, the Avalonia of the Romans, is famed for the Burying Place of Joseph of Arimathea, the first Preacher of the Gospel in this Island, and here it is thought King Arthur was brought and Buried; Cadburn is remarkable for a greak Descat King Arthur there gave the Englisher Saxons; Banesdown (Mons Bandonicus) was doubtlest some Encampment of the Romans, as appears by the Coinstound there; and on the Top there remains the Ruins of some Noble Castle, said to be one of the Palaces of King Arthur, tho' some Writers have placed this Town in Cornwal; Ilchester is of good repute; Taunton for its Memorable Siege in the Civil Wars, and Bristol for the great Tradeit drives, and the many Sieges it has endured.

On Mendip Hills, and several Places on the Shoar of the River Froom, is store of Pit-Coal: In the Quarrey at Kingh in are found Spiral Stones in the form of Snails; at Ochyhale near Wells is a deep Cave, in which are many Rivulets and hollow Recesses, The Monument of Stones near Stanton Drew near Pensford is very remarkable, being great Trasts of some vast Foundations; St. Vincent's Rock is famous for the Stones found there, nearly resembling Diamonds, being equal to those of India in lustre but not hardness. The Seats of the Nobility are Clevedon Court, belonging to the Earl of Bristol; Hinton St. George, Court of Ewick, Lenn Court and Walton, to the Lord Paulet; Connington, to the Lord Clifford: Wells Palace and Banwell, to the Bishop of Bath and Wells; Bristol Palace, to the Bishop of Bristol: With divers Houses of the Gentry pleasantly Sighted, &cc.

The Reign of EDWARD the Third (commonly called Edward of Windsor.)

FDWARD, upon the offer of the Crown to him in his Fathers Life time, not being Fifteen Years of Age, refused it with Tears and Detestation; till Mortimer and the Queen his Mother, by Threats and Perswasions wrought him to some compliance; nor then would he yeild to be Crowned, till his Father had Refigned; nor then, till he was made fensible by fome faithful Counsellors it was the only way to secure the Life of the Deposed King, and the Crown in the Right Line: For many feared that Mortimer being great with the Queen, and high in her favour, would find some means to rid her of her Husband, and by Marrying her place the Diadem on his own Head; for which reason he ever after hated that aspiring Lord, and laboured to Revenge the Indignity and Death of King Edward the Second; which in time he in some measure did, in the Execution of Mortimer, as will hereafter appear.

In the beginning of this Kings Reign, the Scots denounced War against England, thinking to make their Advantage in the Kings Minority; but he, tho' Young being of a Martial Spirit, scorned to be outbraved whereupon he raised an Army of 50000 valiant Men, and Marched into Scotland, chasing the Scots from place to place, who nowhere durft appear in the Field, in any Number; and having leized feveral Towns and Castles, and finding his Soldiers tired out in following through Woods, Marshes, and over Craggy Hills, he resolved to return, which he did, and affembled his Parliament at Northampton, in which the two Executed Spincers, and Walter Stapleton Bishop of Exeter, who had been put to Death by the Londoners, were Attainted of High Treason, and all their Goods, Lands, &c. Seized into the Kings hands, and then the King by the direction of his Mother and Mortimer, concluded a dishonourable Peace with the Scots, releasing them of their Homage, Fealty, and Service due from that Kingdom to the Crown of England, and delivered up the Grand Instrument or Charter, called Ragman, which under the Hands and Seals of their Late King and of the Nobility of Scotland, testified their Tenure and Subjection to the Kings of this Realm. After that, he Married his Sifter to David Son to Robert Bruce, and created Mortimer Earl of March, at which the Generality of the Nobility were exceedingly difgusted.

Mortimer upon his new Advancement to Honour, and relyance on the Queens favour, tho' he found the Nobles were not in his Interest, bore it with a higher hand than formerly; and perceiving Edmund of Woodfock Earl of Kent, the Kings Unkle, stood most in his way and crossed his aspiring, he and the Queen so laboured with the Young King, That insecting him with a Jealousie, that the Earl had Designs upon his Life and Crown, which being backed by false Witnesses, he isedly gave way to Articles that were suggested rought in against him, so that by Mortimers Creahe was found Guilty and Beheaded, to the great of all True Englishmen, being a Person of singular r, a great Statesiman, Prudent and Virtuous: but ood (so Treacherously spilt) was not slow in g for, and procuring Vengance; for the King made sensible of a familiarity between Mortimer s Mother, more than was decent, and much to shonour, by being got abroad among the Vulgar, many scandalous Reports, he would not howghely believe it; yet one time being affured she Mortimer's Castle, he with a resolute Band of lowers, privately in the Evening entered a back nd feizing such Servants as he met, to prevent ery, went by the direction of one of them, to hamber where the Queen Lodged, and there her in Bed, and Mortimer undressing in order to vith her: This fo exasperated the Young King, illing him Trator and Villain, he seized him with n hands, and delivered him to the Guards, he fering to relift or call for help, tho' he had a far r number of Attendants in the Castle than the brought with him; and being Committed to free liberty was given for any that would to t their Complaints against him, which were d up in the following Articles,

That he had wickedly contrived and procured the er of the Kings Father.

That by his false Accusations and sinister Counsels, caused the King to take away the Life of his Unkle, as truly Noble, Religious, Devout, Honest, and a Pillar of the Commonwealth.

That too familiarly he conversed with Queen Isabel ags Mother, to her just Reproach, and the dishonour of 344 nounced War against England, thinking to make the Advantage in the Kings Minority; but he, tho' Youn being of a Martial Spirit, scorned to be outbraved whereupon he raised an Army of 50000 valiant Me and Marched into Scotland, chasing the Scots from pla to place, who nowhere durst appear in the Field, in a Number; and having seized several Towns and Castl and finding his Soldiers tired out in following throu Woods, Marshes, and over Craggy Hills, he resolv to return, which he did, and affembled his Parliam at Northampton, in which the two Executed Spens and Walter Stapleton Bishop of Exeter, who had h put to Death by the Londoners, were Attainted High Treason, and all their Goods, Lands, &c. Se into the Kings hands, and then the King by the di ion of his Mother and Mortimer, concluded a d nourable Peace with the Scots, releasing them of Homage, Fealty, and Service due from that King to the Crown of England, and delivered up the G Instrument or Charter, called Ragman, which u the Hands and Seals of their Late King and of the bility of Scotland, testified their Tenure and Subje to the Kings of this Realm. After that, he Man his Sister to David Son to Robert Bruce, and cre Mortimer Earl of March, at which the Generali the Nobility were exceedingly difgusted.

Mortimer upon his new Advancement to Hor and relyance on the Queens favour, tho' he found Nobles were not in his Interest, bore it with a hi hand than formerly; and perceiving Edmund of V flock Earl of Kent, the Kings Unkle, stood most i way and crossed his aspiring, he and the Queen s boured with the Young King, That infecting him a Jealousie, that the Earl had Designs upon his and Crown, which being backed by false Witness dvisedly gave way to Articles that were suggested brought in against him, so that by Mortimers Creaes he was found Guilty and Beheaded, to the great ef of all True Englishmen, being a Person of singular lour, a great Statesinan, Prudent and Virtuous: but Blood (so Treacherously spilt) was not slow in ing for, and procuring Vengance; for the King ing made sensible of a familiarity between Mortimer d his Mother, more than was decent, and much to r dishonour, by being got abroad among the Vulgar, uling many scandalous Reports, he would not howver lightly believe it; yet one time being affured she as at Mortimer's Castle, he with a resolute Band of is Followers, privately in the Evening entered a back vay, and feizing such Servants as he met, to prevent liscovery, went by the direction of one of them, to he Chamber where the Queen Lodged, and there ound her in Bed, and Mortimer undressing in order to leep with her: This fo exasperated the Young King, hat calling him Trator and Villain, he seized him with his own hands, and delivered him to the Guards, he hot offering to relift or call for help, tho' he had a far greater number of Attendants in the Castle than the King brought with him; and being Committed to Prison, free liberty was given for any that would to Exhibit their Complaints against him, which were summed up in the following Articles,

1. That he had wickedly contrived and procured the Murther of the Kings Father.

2. That by his false Accusations and sinister Counsels, be had caused the King to take away the Life of his Unkle, who was truly Noble, Religious, Devout, Honest, and a strong Pillar of the Commonwealth.

3. That too familiarly he conversed with Queen Isabel the Kings Mother, to her just Reproach, and the dishonour of 4. That the King.

4. That he received of the Scots a Bribe of 20000l for which he procured the Kings Retreat out of Scotland, and the Releasment of his Signory and Homage due for the Kingdom.

5. That he had deceitfully couzened and beguiled the King of his Wards and Treasury, converting the Monie and Profits to his own use and behoof.

For these Wicked and Treasonable Practices he was Tryed and Condemned, and afterward Hanged at Tyburn, where he remained Hanging unpittied for two Days. And in a little time after the King abridged the Queen his Mother in her Dowry, allowing her but 1000l. per Annum, restraining her within a certain Limit.

In the Fifth Year of the Kings Reign Philip D' Valou, who Succeeded Charles in the French Throne, required him to come over and pay Homage and Fealty for his Dutchey of Guyan, and accordingly he went, and was kindly entertained till he refused to do it by any more Ceremony than Words; but that not being Accepted, he returned to England, and upon a Second Summons fent it in Writing under the Great Seal, which was not looked on as sufficient; yet this submission displeas ed the English Nobility, who told him he ought notto pay any Homage, for as much as the Crown of France in Right of his Mother properly belonged to him, and thus stated his Title, viz. Isabel was Daughter to Philip the Fair, Son to Philip the Hardy, That Philip the Hardy, the Queens Grandfather, had two Sons, viz. her Father, who was King, and Charles D' Valois who was also King after him; Philip the Fair had three Sons, all which Dyed without Issue Male, he had also a Daughter which was this Isabel, Married to King Edward the Second, and that Charles D' Valois the Second Son of Philip the Hardy was Father to Philip D' Valois who then Reigned in France; and although by the Salique Law of France Women are barred to Rule, yet King Edward being a Male of the Elder branch, ought to take place before a Male of the Younger, though coming by a Female; and that there was no force in that Law to debar him of such a Right.

This the King considered prudently, and deliberated with Grave Counsel about it, who all concluded it was his undoubted Right; and the Earl of Arthois (who fled out of France for faying (upon the French Kings Sentencing his Earldom to Maud Countess of Burgundy) By me was be made a King, and by me shall be be Deposed) vehemently solicited the King to claim and profecute his Right, promising him his Interest to make him many Friends even in the Heart of France: But this was laid aside a while, by reason of a difference arising between England and Scotland: For King Edward fending to David the Scots King, who had Married his Sister, to restore the Castle of Berwick, and do him Homage for his Kingdom, he Answered, That by the Sword be bad won the Castle, and would keep it; and as for the Homage demanded, his Father never acknowledged any fuch Service; and if be had, King Edward had released it, if any such was due; and therefore he would not confess any Tenure of the Crown of England.

This slighting Answer highly exasperated King Edward, so that he raised a powerful Army, and Marching into Scotland soon subdued the better part of it; Fortifying and Garisoning to his own use the Towns and Castles he took, and in his return posessed himself of Berwick, and caused Edward Bayliol Son to John Bayliol who had been King of Scotland but was deceased, there to be Crowned King of Scotland, to hold it in Tenure of him, and committing to his charge the Government of the Town of Berwick: Yet he had not long withdrawn his Army, ere the Scots had outed the new King, and compelled him to fly into France; where upon King Edward Marched against David, who had procured a great many French Forces, and Overthrew him with a great Slaughter of his followers; and 60 again having secured that Kingdom more strongly than before, he returned in Triumph.

long

And now he had leasure to consider how to posses himself of the French Diadem; and the sirmer to him the Earl of Arthois to his Interest, he created him Duke of Richmond; and to carry on the thing secretly till it should be ripe for execution, The King by private Messages craved the Advice of the Earl of Hamash his Wives Father, the Lord Beaumont, and others, who had great Interest in Germany and the Netherlands, who all approved it, promising their best assistance; and that he might have power to command the Nobles and Common People of those Countries when occasion required it, They procured him to be created Vicar General of the Empire.

All this while the French King was Ignorant of their Proceedings, being extreamly bufy in providing Necessaries for an Army of 60000 Men, with which he intended to pass into the Holy Land, making his Brother John Duke of Normandy and Regent of all his Dominions till his return; but at length having fecet Notice of King Edwards Pretensions from some Tres cherous Counsellors in England, who under-hand were his Pentioners, he laid atide his intended Eastern Expedition, to defend his own Country; yet this Discovery sooner than was wished, did not at all amate King Edward, nor flacken him in what he Designed; but knowing Money is the Sinnew and main support of War, by many Politick Devices he got vast Sums from his Subjects, and Treasured it in his Coffers, till his Affaires should should require it, so that for a time Money became so scarce among the Trading People, That a fat Ox was sold for a Noble, a fat Sheep for Twelve Pence, a Quarter of Wheat for Two Shillings, and other Provisions proportionable.

Matters being thus Resolved on and Forwarded, he Sailed to Flanders with his Queen, where he met and Conferred with a great many Princes of Germany, who agreed to assist him; and returning, raised an Army of 27000 Men, with which he Landed in France; and to oppose him, the French King took the Field with an Army of double the Number; but when they were ready to joyn in Battel, Jone Countess of Hainalt, Sister to King Philip, and Mother to the Queen of England, by her unwearied Mediation staid their forward Swords, by procuring a Twelvemonths Truce; whereupon the French King dissolved his Army, and King Edward with his returned to England: Yet he gave not over his Design, for going to Brussells after the expiration of the Truce, the German Princes firmly Engaged themselves to his Interest, and solicited the Flemings to Confederate in the League; but they excused it, unless the King would stile himself King of France, and quarter the Arms of that Kingdom with his own, That so he might be impowered to release unto them a Bond of Two Millions of Florins wherein they flood obliged not to wage War against the King of France. These things he actually did; and then they conforted with the German Princes who Signed and Sealed an Instrument to be True to King Edwards Interest; and thereupon he returned to England, to make speedy preparations for the War; and found that in his Absence the French Squadrons had Burnt Southampton, and Ravaged Hampshire and part of Sussex, carrying away much Booty; but not doubting they should one day pay dear for for it, he called a Parliament, who Granted him a Fifth part of Moveable Goods, and a Third Part of Corn, also a great Tax on Wooll, which lay heavy on the Meaner Sort. He Borrowed morover of his Rich Subjects, and the City of London, furnished him with 20000 Marks: he Coined much Gold and Silver with the French Arms Quartered with the Lions; and fo early in the Spring Sayled to the Sluce, which he found Blocked up by a Fleet of French, Genois, Picards, and other Nations, a bout 250 Sail, and on Board them an Army of 40000 Men, these he Encountered and utterly Defeated: Destroying all that he seized not to his use, sending a Multitude of Prisoners into England; which Victory obtained by much an inferiour Number of Ships and Men, gained him a large Reputation among the Princes his Confederates, and greatly dismayed the French; and Marching into Flanders, he joyned the Forces of Jacob Dartwell, General of the Flemings; with those of the Duke of Guelders, the Marquess of Muse, Earls of Mons, Surians and Hainalt, the Lord Tralquement, and many Thousand Germans, &c. and laid Siege to the City of Tournay, which the French King prepared to Relieve, but as before, by the incessant Mediation of the Countess of Hainalt when the Place was at point of Yielding, another Truce was made, and the Armic Dissolved to the great perplexity of most that had Engaged.

Whilst King Edward was imployed abroad, the Scots by the Encouragement of the French King Deposed Edward Bayliol, and Renounced their Homage to the Crown of England; but upon his Marching thither with 6000 Horse and 40000 Foot, he Regained what had been Lost, and made them Submit: Yet he was no sooner retired, but David coming out of France with some Forces, raised an Army and Invaded England, wasting all before him, till he came to Newcastle on Tyne, which he closely Besieged; when 40 resolute Men of the Garison, resolving to surprise him in his Tent, ventured in the Night time into the midst of the Scots Camp, and though they missed of him, because he had that Evening removed his Tent, yet they feized the Earl of Murray, and brought him Prisoner to the Town; which so Terrified the Scots, that they soon raised their Siege, and Marched farther into the Countrey, taking the City of Durham, putting all to the Sword they found in it; but as they passed by the Castle of Roxbourough, that was kept by Sr. William Montague Brother to the Lord Montague Earl of Salisbury, then Prisoner in France, wherein was the Earls admirable Beautious and Virtuous Lady, he Sallied with Forty Horsemen, fell in the Rear of the Scots Army, kill'd about 200, and took 20 Horses Laden with the richest Spoiles they had taken at Durbam: Whereupon the Army faced about, and Besieged the Castle, which was manfully Defended for a long time, when fearing it would be taken, the Governour, when all others refused it, broke through the Scots Camp fingly on a swift Courser, and carried notice to the King of the Distress it was in, who hasted to its Relief: The terror of whose approach, made the Scots raise their Siege a day before he could arrive there; yet was he entertained by the Countess of Salisbury in the Castle with great Thankfulness, Duty, and Respect; and was so taken with her exceeding Beauty, That he earnestly sued for Enjoyment, but the Virtuous Lady first with mild and kind Entreaties, and afterward with quick and nipping Reprehensions, strove to make him see his own Error; but such was his delire, & her denials so peremptory and resolute, That discontentedly he left her, and cashiered his Army; so returning to London he proclaimed great Feasting and Sports to Recreate his weary Warriers, to which resorted divers out of Foreign Nations; and in the Justings Sr. John Beaumont was unluckily Slain. And after this was finished, a Parliament was called, wherein he created his Eldest Son Edward Prince of Wales, and had four Fifteenths of the Laity, and three of the Clergy given him, towards the support of the War, certain Lords and others being appointed by Parliament to fee it was employed to no other use; and the Year following (to encrease desire of Martial Glory in his Nobles and Others, according to the Custom of other Countries) he ordered an Order of Knighthood, which he called The Order of the Garter: Some say from the Countessor Salisbury's droping her Garter in a Dance, which the King taking up, and seeing some of his Nobles smile he faid, HONISOIT QUI MALY PENSE, that is, Evil be to him that Evil thinks; vowing ere long fuch honour should be done to that Silken Tye, that the best of them should be proud of it; and this has everfince been the Motto on the Garter incircling the Arms of England; he confined the number to 26, of which himself and his Successors were to be Soveraigns, stiling them, Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garta. The Rights and Ceremonies of this Order were Yearly to be Solemnized with Princely Magnificence at the Castle of Windsor, where their Atchievements are tob feen in St. George's Chappel, many Officers belonging to and attending on these Knights on the Ceremonic of their Installment. Soon after this he Levied an Army, and fent it under the Leading of the Earl of Derby into Gascoin, where he won many Towns, Castles, and Forts: And about this time one Jaques Dartwell, a Fleming, who from a low condition had raised himself to the highest

walting

Command and Power among the People that ever any Man had before him, by whom he was esteemed as the only Patron of their Country, labouring with the Flemish Lords to gain their consent for the Deposing Loys their Earl, as a Fool, and unfit to Govern, and to place Edward the Black Prince, Son to Edward King of England in his stead, the Popular Tide suddainly turned upon him, from Love to mortal Hatred; and though he was warned to shun the danger, yet going to his House at Gaunt, not doubting but the Storm would blow over, and that their former Love to him could not be altogether so soon extinguished, but might in time revive; yet no fooner had he entered into the House but it was Besieged by the common fort, railing at him, and reviling him in bitter terms; so that thinking by his Authority to appeale their Rage, he spake to them from a Window, but their clamour drowned his Voice, and Sticks and Stones flew about his Ears in Numbers; foon after they broke in, and in a barbarous manner Murthered him. This one displeasing fact outballancing all the good deeds he had done for that Country through the greater part of his Life, in Fighting their Battels, and often faving them from apparent Ruin; so little stress is there to be laid on popular Greatness and Applause. And by this tampering, King Edward lost many of his Friends, the Flemings altogether enclining to the French Interest, who before were at his devotion; and several of the German Princes fell off and withdrew their Forces. Yet these his Missortunes fo little availed to discourage him, that he resolved to pursue his Right with his own Strength; and hearing foon after, that John, Eldest Son to the French King, had Belieged the Cattle of Aquillon in Gascoyn with 10000 Men, which was Nobly Defended by the Earl of Pembrook and Sr. Walter Manney, he with 14000 Men.

Men, laid Siege to Harflew, which he Took, and gave the spoiles to his Soldiers, which were very great: He likewise Sacked Cheirburg, Mountborough, Quarentine. and the Castle belonging to it, and over-run all Nor. mandy, greatly enriching his Army; and then pitched his Tents before the City of Caen, in which were the Earls of Tankervile, Eme, and Guyens, and with little loss of Men took and ransacked that great City, and the Earls were made Prisoners; and so Marched to Lovers, which he Took; then Entered the Province of Eureux which he Wasted, laying in Ashes many Towns, Cities, and Castles, and palling on pitched his Tents within two Leagues of Paris, from whence the French King (after he had Encouraged the Citizens to stand out manfully if they were Beneged) fled to St. Dennis. where his Army lay. But King Edward finding his Army not sufficient to Beliege so great a City, wherein were fix times the number of his Men, having by the way Overthrown divers Parties of French sent out to obferve his Motion, and got more Spoiles than his Army knew well how to carry, he passed the Soam, beating off 12000 French that Guarded the Foard of the River, and coming within some Leagues of Cressey, he had notice by his Scouts, That the French King had drawn out his Army to oppose him, consisting of divers Forreign Princes, the chief Nobility of France, and 1 50000 common Soldiers; yet with an undaunted Courage he Marched on; and coming within fight of the Enemy, Marshalled his finall Army, resolving to abide the Battel, viz. He divided it into three Battels, all which he Impaled in the Rear with Carriages, and gave the conduct of the First to Prince Edward his Son, who was (by reason of his Young Years) assisted by the Earls of Warwick and Crawford, the Lords Harcourt, Stafford, Manney, De La Warr, Chandons, Clifford and Bourchier, having

of ENGLAND.

ng 800 Men at Arms, 2000 Archers, and 1000 rs: The Second Battel was Commanded by the s of Northampton and Arundel, accompanied with ers Nobles and Gentlemen, confifting of 800 Men Arms and 1200 Archers: The Third, and main tel, the King Commanded; and having Prayed for tels, and Refreshed themselves, they prepared for Fight, but that day the French declined the Battel; the next it was begun on their fide by 15000 Gewith Crosbows Shooting Bearded Arrows, but V Charging on the Princes Battel were foon overn by the English Archers, and in their Retreat put French Kings Battel into disorder, whereupon y of them were Slain by their Friends; and then French main Battel Charged on the Prince and put fo hard to it, that he was obliged to fend to the g to fuccour him; who asked the Messenger. ther be was Alive or not? And being Answered, He he faid, Report to him from me, That he must expect no for this shall be the day wherein he shall win his Spurs he his Life; whereupon the English, as Men in dif-Fought so desperately that they put the French hy in all parts to the Rout, the Kings Battel stanentire and not Engaging, flaying more than 30000 hem; and the next day they Overthrew another hy, that, not knowing of the Defeat, was coming he Camp under the Leading of the Arch Bishop of and Grand Prior of France; and among the Slain 11 Princes, 80 Barons, 1200 Knights, and many ote made Prisoners: The Plunder of the Field King bestowed upon his Nobles, Gentry, and com-Soldiers, which greatly Inriched them; carrying blain of Note to Mountrell, and there Honourably rred them.

fter this great Victory, with inconsiderable Loss

Men, laid Siege to Harflew, which he Took, and gav the spoiles to his Soldiers, which were very great: H likewise Sacked Cheirburg, Mountborough, Quarentine and the Castle belonging to it, and over-run all Nor. mandy, greatly enriching his Army; and then pitched his Tents before the City of Caen, in which were the Earls of Tankervile, Eme, and Guyens, and with little loss of Men took and ransacked that great City, and the Earls were made Prisoners; and so Marched to Lovers, which he Took; then Entered the Province of Eureux which he Wasted, laying in Ashes many Towns Cities, and Castles, and passing on pitched his Tent within two Leagues of Paris, from whence the French King (after he had Encouraged the Citizens to stand out manfully if they were Besieged) fled to St. Dennis where his Army lay. But King Edward finding hi Army not sufficient to Besiege so great a City, wherei were fix times the number of his Men, having by thewa Overthrown divers Parties of French sent out to of ferve his Motion, and got more Spoiles than his Arr knew well how to carry, he passed the Soam, beati off 12000 French that Guarded the Foard of the Rive and coming within some Leagues of Cressey, he h notice by his Scouts, That the French King had dra out his Army to oppose him, consisting of divers Fo reign Princes, the chief Nobility of France, and 1500 common Soldiers; yet with an undaunted Courage Marched on; and coming within fight of the Ene Marshalled his small Army, resolving to abide the tel, viz. He divided it into three Battels, all which Impaled in the Rear with Carriages, and gave the o duct of the First to Prince Edward his Son, who (by reason of his Young Years) assisted by the Earl Warwick and Crawford, the Lords Harcourt, Staffe Manney, De La Warr, Chandors, Clifford and Bourch hav ving 800 Men at Arms, 2000 Archers, and 1000 hers: The Second Battel was Commanded by the rls of Northampton and Arundel, accompanied with vers Nobles and Gentlemen, confifting of 800 Men Arms and 1200 Archers: The Third, and main ttel, the King Commanded; and having Prayed for ccels, and Refreshed themselves, they prepared for e Fight, but that day the French declined the Battel: at the next it was begun on their side by 15000 Gewith Crosbows Shooting Bearded Arrows, but ev Charging on the Princes Battel were foon overbrn by the English Archers, and in their Retreat put e French Kings Battel into disorder, whereupon any of them were Slain by their Friends; and then e French main Battel Charged on the Prince and put im so hard to it, that he was obliged to send to the ing to fuccour him; who asked the Messenger, Vhether be was Alive or not? And being Answered, He as he faid, Report to him from me, That he must expect no Aid, for this shall be the day wherein he shall win his Spurs r lose his Life; whereupon the English, as Men in difpair, Fought so desperately that they put the French Army in all parts to the Rout, the Kings Battel stanlingentire and not Engaging, flaying more than 30000 of them; and the next day they Overthrew another Army, that, not knowing of the Defeat, was coming to the Camp under the Leading of the Arch Bishop of Roan and Grand Prior of France; and among the Slain were 11 Princes, 80 Barons, 1200 Knights, and many of Note made Prisoners: The Plunder of the Field the King bestowed upon his Nobles, Gentry, and common Soldiers, which greatly Inriched them; carrying the Slain of Note to Mountrell, and there Honourably Interred them.

After this great Victory, with inconsiderable Loss to the English, the King laid Siege to Callis; and the French King, tho' he made fome shews with a great Army to Relieve it defending the Passes, stopt their retiring; the Besieged were Summoned and threatned if they Surrendered not immediately to expect m Mercy; they Capitulated, but their Terms offered was not accepted, they obstinately resisted so long that being brought to extremity the King would not accept of their Submission then tendered, unless six of their chief Inhabitants would present themselves before him in their Shirts, with Halters about their Necks, and deliver up the Keys, which was done, when forthwith he commanded them to be Hanged, but at the entreaty of the Queen and Nobles they were spared.

 $\mathbf{Z}_{3}$

Whilst this Siege lasted, David King of Scots with an Army of 50000 Men entered England, and did great mischief; but the Queen being then at home, gave him Battel with an Army of 12000, and gave the Scots a fatal Overthrow: King David was there taken Prisoner by one John Copeland, who refused to deliver him to the Queen, as claiming him his Prisoner by the Right of War, till going over to the King he desired him to do it, and for his good Service settled on him 5001. per Annum in Lancashire, and made him a Squire of his Body; whereupon King David was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London.

The King having appointed Sr. Andrew D' Pavie 1 Lombard, Governour of Callis, and turned out the French Inhabitants, returned to England; but upon private notice the Governour (for a great Sum) designed to betray it to the Lord Cherney Captain of Arrays, he went over and was received in the dusk of the Evening; he prevented it by furprifing that Lord and his Soldiers when they had partly entered, and the rest waited for admittance. Yet in this Fight the King Encountering hand to hand with Eustace of Ribomount, was by him twice stooped on his Knees, but scorning to yield, he advanced with such sury and redoubled strength, that he beat him down and took him Prisoner; but having experienced him to be a Valiant Knight, he soon released him without Ransom. About this time King Philip Dyed, and John his Son was Crowned, and the Calicians took the strong Castle of Guyens, and the King, upon the obstinacy of the Flemings in refusing to Aid him, removed the Marts to Callie, fettling there the Woollen Manufacture; fo that by the Priviledges and Imunities granted to Artificers, happy was he that in a few Years could obtain the Kings leave to go over.

Soon after Prince Edward, Sirnamed for his valourous deeds the Black Prince, Landed an Army in Gascoine, 100n fubduing the greater part of that Province, which made the French King hasten thither with a very numerous Army; and tho' he was fix to one against the Prince, the Battel was Fought near Poidiers, where the English Archers put the French Horse into such confusion at the first onser, that they fell into Rout, and difordered all the Squadrons that were to support them; however the Battel where the French King fought valiantly, stood manfully to it a considerable time, but fuch was the prevailing valour of the English, That King John, and Philip his Younger Son were taken Prisoners, many Thousands Slain, and the rest put to Flight. The Fight being over, Prince Edward treated his Royal Prisoners with all Gentleness and Humility, cheering up their drooping Spirits, attending at the Kings Table, Lodged him in his own Bed, and provided for him Honourable Attendance, infomuch that he confessed, He rather fancied bimself at his own Court, than 358 than a Prisoner, by having met with so Courteous an Enem. From hence he was conducted to Burdeaux, and so into England, where he was Entertained with the like civi. lities and respect by the King and Queen; and besides these, and what Nobles were Slain, there were taken 17 Earls, 51 Barons, and a great Number of Knights and Gentlemen; the English Soldiers throughout the Army that had fewest, being possessed of two Prisoners. and moreover the rich Spoiles of exceeding value were divided amongst them; and a Truce was concluded for two Years. In the mean while the King of Scots, who had been Ten Years a Prisoner, was Released at the Ransom of 1000001, to be Paid in Five Years, and upon taking his Oath not to bear Arms against England, nor be Aiding to any other in doing it; and further, he acknowledged Homage and Fealty for his Kingdom of Scotland to King Edward. And proposing to the French King his Ranfom, with Articles to be figned on his Enlargement, he fent them to Charles his Eldest Son, who was Regent in his absence, and to the Nobility of France, who utterly disliking the Conditions, prepared to Invade King Edwards Terretories, to compel him to more easie Terms; but not to be behind hand with them, he passed to Callis with an Army, taking the Black Prince along with him, and so wasted the Countries with Fire and Sword, taking many strong Towns and Castles, that they became humble Suitors to him for a Peace, and submitted to his Terms; so that after a short Treaty, Articles were Agreed on, viz.

That the French King, for bis Ransom, should Pay King Edward 500000l. and not Aid any King of Scots in any War or Rebellion against England; and That King Edward should not take part with the Flemings against France, That the Kings of Fingland should be ever quit of their Homage for Territories holden in France; and That in Confideration these were performed, King Edward, in the behalf of himself and Successors, Kings of England, should renounce and leave the Name and Title to the Kingdom of France; and fo Hostages being delivered, the French King (after he had remained more than Four Years a Prisoner) was set at Liberty; and soon after he came with the Kings of Cyprus and Scots to visit King Edward, and pay his respects for the Royal Treatment he had during his Imprisonment, but falling Sick at the Savoy, he Dyed, and his Body was conveyed to St. Dennis in France.

And now Fortune seemed to turn against King Edward, that had hitherto ever been Favourable to him. for Peter the King of Castile, being driven out of his Kingdom by Henry his Bastard Brother, came to the Prince of Wales (who then lived at Burdeaux) with his Family, Imploring his Affiftance to Restore him, which he did, Overthrowing a Spanish and French Army that had joyned the Revolted Castilians with great Slaughter; yet he was no sooner retired, ere King Peter was again driven out, and being taken in his Flight, was by the Usurper put to Death; but leaving two Daughters, the Eldest Married John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, and the Younger Thomas of Woodstock, King Edwards Sons, who laid Claim to the Kingdom of Castile in their Right, yet an unlucky Accident crossed all. for the Black Prince (to Pay his Souldiers) Leavying a Tax on the English Subjects beyond the Seas, they not only refused to pay it, but looking on it to be an Innovation and Oppression, they perswaded Charles the new French King to break the League his Father had made, and generally Revolting delivered up most of the Cities. Towns and Castles into his hands; and he growing Proud of his Success, sent a huge Navy into the Narrow Seas, which was defeated and beaten home by the English; and hereupon the King sent the Duke of Lancaster with an Army to Callais, from whence he Marched to joyn the Prince at Burdeaux, beating the French Kings Army by the way, and forced his Passage; and foon after another Army was fent to St. Omers under the Leading of Sr. Robert Knowls, which took the strong Towns of Vanes and Ruily, but there growa difference between him and the Lord Fitz-Walter, The French King took the advantage of it, and fell on the English Army near Paris, slaying 1000, and putting the relt to flight; and immediatly fent an Army into Cuy.11, where the Prince being weakly affifted, most of the Towns were Loft. To Remedy this evil, the King called a Parliament, wherein the Temporality granted him a large Subfidy, but the Clergy complaining of Poverty, gave him only fair words and promites of future Aid, which made him (in his Anger) turn them out of all Offices and Places of Trust in Temporal matters. And the English Navy going to Relieve Rochel under the Conduct of the Earl of Pembrook, was worsted by Henry the Usurping King of Castile, who kept the Narrow Seas for the French King, the Earl was Taken and divers others; whereupon Rochel and many strong Towns Yielded. This made John Duke of Britanie, fear the French Greatness, and offer King Edward his Affiftance; fo that another Army was fent under the Leading of the Duke of Lancaster, which greatly Endamaged the French, but coming to Burdeaux, he found the Prince his Brother exceeding Sick, who refigning the Government of King Edward Territories to his Conduct, came for England; and tho' Treaties were fet on foot by the Mediation of Pope Gregory the Eleventh, yet fuch were the infolm demands of the French, that they came to nothing Whereupon the King called a Parliament, who refuled to Grant him any Aid, unless the Lord Latimer, and other evil Counsellors were Removed; which being done, they Liberally supplied his wants. But the Black Prince Dying the 8th of June, Anno 1376, in the 40th Year of his Age, and Buried at Canterbury, the King in his Old Age being over perswaded, Restored those Officers that had been turned out, to the high discontent of his People; and having Created Richard (Son to the Black Prince) Prince of Wales, Earl of Chester and Duke of Cornwal, and committed the Regency of the Kingdom in his Minority to the Duke of Lancaster: He Dyed on the 12th of June, Anno 1377, in the 51st Year of his Reign, and about the 65th of his Age, and lies Buried at Westminster; being the One and Thirtieth Sole Monarch of England.

In this Kings Reign John Wicklif, the First English Reformer of Popish Errors and Superstitions, Preached openly, and soon after Nicholas Lyryan and Doctor Ockham, so that People began to Search the Scriptures, and protest against the Abominations of Rome.

Anno 1330 an Inundation of Water broke down part of the Wall of Newcastle, and Drowned 120 People; a Serpent, at Chiping-Norton in Oxfordshire, was found with two Heads and Faces like a Woman, the one dressed in the New Attire, and the other in the Old, by a resemblance of Scales and Pleats, having Wings like a Batt; and Fiends and Devils and strange Apparitions were seen by Men, and spake to them as they Travelled in solitary places; and such a Plague happened, that 50000 Persons Dyed in London.

Anno 1366, Peter Pence was ordered no more to be paid to the See of Rome; and Dr. Orum Preaching before Pope Urban at Rome, condemned the Papacy, and writ an Epistle from Lucifer to the Clergy, thanking them for fending so many Souls to Hell, &c.

Remarks

Remarks on Staffozoshire, &c.

STaffordshire is commodiously Situate, pleasantly accomedated with Meadows, Enclosures, Hills, Valleys, Woods, and Champian Grounds; abounds in Cattle, Corn, Butter, Cheese, Wooll, and some Minerals: It is incompassed with Cheshire, Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Warwickshire, and Shropshire: It contains 5 Hundreds, and in these are 1 City, 130 Parishes, 12 Market Towns, 5 Castles, 13 Rivers, 19 Bridges, 1 Chase, 1 Forrest, and 38 Parks.

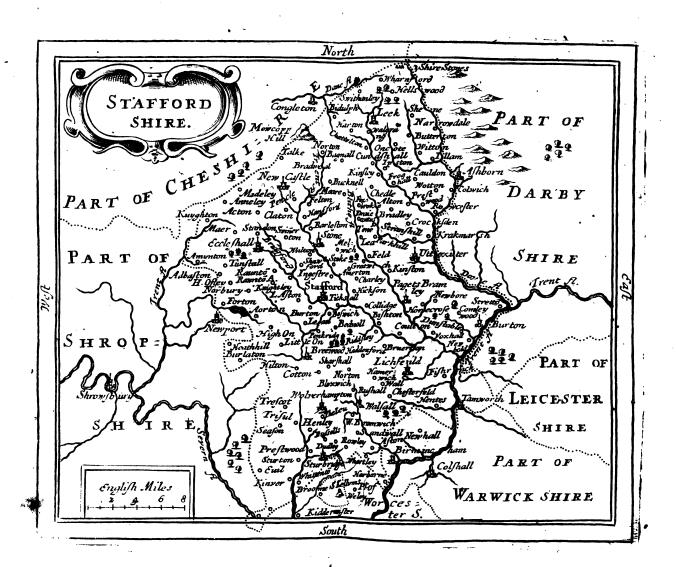

It sends Members to Parliamenn 10, viz. Litchfield City 2, Newcastle Underline 2, Stafford 2, Tam-worth 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Stafford, the County Town, Antiently Bitheny, from Berteline a Holy Hermit: It was Founded by King Edward the Elder, and made a Corporation by King John; Tamworth is Memorable for the Mercian Kings keeping their Courts there.

Litchfield is an Episcopal See joyntly with Coventry, the Cathedral was Builded by Oswin King of Northumberland, upon a Conquest gained over the Mercians; and here Wulferre and Celred, two Saxon Kings, were Buried: It was for some time an Arch Bishoprick, by the means of King Offa. At Blore Heath in this County, a Battel was Fought between the two Houses of York and Lancaster, and 2400 of the Yorkists slain.

In Mendip-Hills are very profitable Lead Mines; At Pensineth Chare, store of Pit-Coal; and in some parts Alabaster, Potters Earth, Marle, Lime, Slate, Tobacco-Pipe Clay, &c. There are two Lakes, one by its Roaring is faid to Forebode some strange alteration; the other, called Mahel, if a tired Horse Drinks of it, he becomes fresh again; the Castles of Note are Sturton, Dudly, Tamworth, Chartly, to which I might add an old Castle at Stafford,

tho' now Demolished; There are several famous Bridges over the River Trent and Dove, &c.

The Seats of the Nobility are Blore Hall, belonging to the Noble Family of Newcastle; Newborough, to the Earl of Bridgwater; Cherley Castle, to the Lord Ferrers; Throwley, to the Lord Cromwell; Beudesert and Seaney Park, to the Lord Paget; Rolleston, to the Lord North and Grey; Gerards Brumley, Sandon and Willow, to the Lord Gerard of Brumley; Hamstal Ridware, to the Lord Leigh; Dudley Castle and Hinley, to the Lord Ward; Litchfield Close and Eccleshal Castle, to the Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry: The Houses of the Gentry are likewise many and spacious.

The Reign of RICHARD the Second, (commonly called Richard of Bourdeaux.)

R 1C HARD the Second, Son and Heir to Edward the Black Prince, was Crowned Anno 1377, not much exceeding 11 Years in Age, so that Charles the French King taking advantage of his Minority, set out a great Fleet, Sack't and Burnt the Towns of Dartmouth, Plimouth, Portsmouth, Hastings, Rie, and others on the Sea-Coast of England, but after they had roamed up and down doing great Mischief for three Weeks, they were beaten off with considerable Loss, by Edmund Earl of Cambridge the Kings Unkle, and others; nor were the Scots (Incited by the French King) less troublesom, Burning Roxborough, and taking by surprize the Castle of Berwick, but the People breaking down the Draw-Bridge shut them out of the Town; and being straightly Besieged, all the Scots in the Castle were put to the Sword, except. Alexander Ramsey who was referved for a large Ransom; yet the French though they had been beaten off, not giving over their designs, Landed again and did much mischief at Win chelsea, Dover, Gravesend, and other places on or new the Sca-coast: So that the King (to Enable him to fer out a Fleet, and Transport an Army that might put check to these Insolencies) fummoned a Parliament at Westminster, in which a Subsidy was Granted him of Four Pence a Head on all Perfons above the Age of Fourteen Years, which was looked on in those days, as a very grievous Tax; and the Gathering it was attended with bad consequences. However the Money set out an indifferent good Fleet; and an Army were fent into France under Lord Thomas, one of the Kings Unkles, who wasting all in his way, joyned with the Duke of Britanie, and much anoyed the French, Recovering many Towns and Castles; but whilst this was doing abroad, a dangerous Mischief befell at home,

John Wall, a Factious Priest, by his going from place to place and Preaching to the inferiour fort of People That they were Free by the Law of Nature; and that Law were made by Crafty People to keep them Poor and Low, fo to Enslave them; and that by their Pedigree, derived from Adam, the good things of the Earth should be equally divided amongst them; and not some grow Fat and Rich, while others Pine and Starve: And moreover, no Taxes were due on any pretence, but People Free Born in their Liberalty ought to be left Free.

This and fuch like Cant being futable to their he mor and wishes, mainly wrought with them to become Levellers, fo that these pernicious Infinuations spread foon into most parts of England, before the Magistrates were aware to suppress it; and to bring about what was wished by some cunning Knaves, to Inrich themfelves

Gives in the Spoil of others, they raised Tumults, and nosses'd the Country People with a belief, That the City of London was at their devotion, and only waited till they came to take possession of it; whereupon they flowed thither like an outragious Torrent, from Kent. Effex, Suffex, Bedfordshire, and other places, stiling themselves The Kings Men, and the Servants of the Weale Publick; chosing as their chief Captain one Wat Tyler, by profession a Taylor; and as his subordinate Officers, Jack Straw, Jack Shepherd, and some others: and to this Rout, the Incendary of a lewd Priest. John Wall, Chaplain; and being Encamped in Kent and Essex, they sent to the King to come and Treat with them; but he was dissiwaded by his Nobles: Whereupon those in Essex crossed the Thames, and joyning the Kentish Rebels, came to Southwark, which they Plundered, and finding London-Bridge Fortified against them, intended to have Burnt the Suburbs on the South fide, and have Murthered fuch as they had notice were not pleased with their Proceedings: But the Citizens, to prevent fo great a Mischief, let down the Draw-Bridge, and admitted them into the City, Feasting and Carrelling them, rather out of fear than good-will; however they Burnt the Duke of Lancaster's House at the Savoy, and Murthered all his Servants they found in it. They ransacked the Inns of Court and Law Offices, Burning all the Law Books and Records that came to their hands, Plundering the Churches and Religious Houses; and Wat Tyler having seized Richard Lyon his Master, with whom he had been Apprentice, caused his Head to be Cut off, and carry'd before him on a Lance, because in his Service he had sometimes Beat him for his Rogueries: They Plundered likewise the Houses of all Strangers: They likewise forced into the Tower, where the King Lay, Plundered his Mothers Lodgings,

of ENGLAND.

Lodgings, and broke her Head, because she reproved them for their Infolency. They Murthered Simon Tybald Arch Bishop of Canterbury, because he had some time before Imprisoned Wall for his Seditious Da ctrine; and after feveral meetings, the King finding he could do no good with them, their Behaviour being fo Audacious, and their Demands fo Infolent and Un. reasonable, he laboured to make the Citizens his Frinds, and resolved to repel them by force.

366

Whereupon a Conference being appointed in Smith. field, the King beforehand thinking to bring them to better Terms without Extremity, if possible, sent them feveral of his Enfigns and their Pardons, as a token that he owned them for his good Subjects, and freely forgave them for what had happened; and then meeting them as appointed he perswaded them to desilt from all Violence, assuring them that upon tryal they should find him to be their Good Lord and Gracious King. But Tyler with a frowning countenance, infolent behaviour, and rough speech, refused to accept the Kings Grace and Favour, proudly telling him, That all those Troops, and many more Thousands, were at his dispose, to Execute whatsoever he would command: Then he commanded Sr. John Newton one of the Kings Attendants, who bore the Sword, to deliver his Dagger; which by the Kings command he did: Then he Infolently proceeded to demand the Sword; but he stoutly Answered, It was the Kings Swork and should not be given to a Knave; which so incensed Tyler, That he Swore he should lose his Head before the Third, Heir apparent to the Crown; but he was himself would Eat or Drink, commanding the King w Slain by the Rebells in Ireland, before the Kings Death. deliver him up to Execution; which Infolent Behaviour, Sr. William Wallworth, Lord Mayor, not able to by hearkening to evil Counsellours, especially one Miendure, Stabbed him with his Dagger, so that he fell that De La Pool, whom he had made Chancellour, and down Dead; and then hasting to raise the City Mi-reated Duke of Suffolk, and Robert Vere whome he cre-

of ENGLAND. litia, the Rebells after some time were so amazed, that they scattered, and every one fled for his safety; and it was not many days before most of the Ringleaders were, by their Companions (a thing that feldom fails in fuch tumultuous Rebellions) delivered into the hands of Justice, the better to obtain their own Pardons, which in the height of their Pride, they had scornfully thrown up, and the King at this last Conference before their Faces had Cancelled them; fo that about 1500 or more of the principal Agents were Convicted, and Executed in divers Places, which put an end to these Popular Disorders; and for this Exploit of the Lord Mayor, the Dagger was added to the City Arms.

Things thus Quieted, and the Peoples Fears over, The King sued for the Lady Ann (Daughter to Charles the Fourth, and Sister to Wincestaus, the Emperour of Germany) in Marriage; which was Accorded, and the Lady (who was exceeding Virtuous and Beautiful) was received with great Joy by the King and People; and Anno Dom. 1385, he Summoned a Parliament at Westminster, in which he Created his Unkle Edmund of Langley, Duke of York; and Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Glocester; his Cousin Henry, Eldest Son to the Earl of Lancaster, Earl of Derby; Edward Son to Edmund of Langley Earl of Rutland; Sir John Holland Earl of Huntington, and Thomas Lord Mowbray Earl of Notingham, Declaring Roger Mortimer Earl of March, Son to Edmund Mortimer and Philippa his Wife, Daughter and Heires to Lionel Duke of Clarence, Third Son to Edward

And now the King fell into the dislike of his People,

ated

:368 ated Marquess of Dublin and Duke of Ireland, and would have made him King of that Country, if the Nobility would have consented to it; so that he respected not the sage Advice and Counsel of the grave and most experienced Lords; of this the Parliament took great notice, and upon the Chancellours infifting on the Kings behalf for a Tax of four Fifteens, affirming no less could support his Estate, or maintain fuch Wars as he was likely to undertake, the Lords and Commons not only opposed the motion, but accused the Duke and others for lewdly Counselling the King and by their Purloyning to enrich themselves, wasting his Treasure; That by their bad Advice they had kept the King from coming amongst them; which according to a received Law and Custom, if he refused to do in Forty Days, they might Legally break up, and depart to their own homes without his leave, and of this and other particulars they fent word to the King desiring him within three days he would come amongst them, and give Life to those Laws they should make or they were resolved to separate. But in Answer m this, he required that a select Assembly of Fisty of their Members should attend him. This was refused, and the Duke of Gloucester and Thomas Arundel, Art Bishop of Canterbury, were only deputed; who plainly told the King of the Grievances of his People, and that by his Absence from Parliament he obscured the light of Justice, and hindered the Negotiation of the Commonweal: And if he further declined it, the They also must break up and depart to their homes. craved, with humble submission, as they were command ded, to be informed by whom his Majesties Treasure belonging to the Commonweal, was prodigally conbelonging to the Commonwear, that his large Reve directly to perswade or encourage the King to innues could not suffice to maintain his Estate and charge feeing he had no Wars.

This Mellage, and their Demands, so angered the King Phat he Swore had he fore-known the fawcy bouldness of his Subjects, whom as he supposed, intended to rife in Arms against him, he would more willingly have submitted himself to the King of France, and have relyed on him for Protection, than thus to be baffled and made fervil to those whom his Soveraignty ought to command. But the two Lords in all humble Duty shewed him, that his People stood well affected towards him, and that the French had been and were inveterate Enemies to the King of England: With this and fuch-like submissive Discourse, he was some what pacified, and promifed to come to his Parliament in three days, and failed not to do it; where by Proof and Acculation of the Lords, Michael De La Pool, Chancellour of England, and Duke of Suffolk, was Convicted of Purloyning the Kings Treasure, and purchasing Estates with it; to his own behoof; and giving eyil Comfel to the great damage of the Kings Subjects, and other things, so that his Lands were Sequestered to the King's use, his Person Fined 20000 Marks, committed close Prisoner, and deprived of his Chancellourship and the Offices. The Arch Bishop being made Chanellour in his stead; and in the same Parliament thirteen Persons were Elected, Sworn, and Authorized, with he consent of the King, published in Writing under is Seal, to Examine all or any of his Officers, touching heir Demeanours in their several Offices and Trusts; censure and condemn any that should be found ailty of henious Crimes, and the King took an Oath t to revoke or suppress this Commission without the onsent of Parliament; and it further passed into a w, That if any Person should attempt directly or nge his Oath and Promise, touching all or any of Aa 2 thefe 370 these matters, for the first Offence, to lose his Lands and Goods; and for the second, to be profeeded against as a Traitor to the King and Kingdom: And then a Sublidy of one half Fifteen was granted, if the Commissioners, upon view of the Kings Estate, thought it needful; and so an end was put to this Sessions of Parliament.

This was no sooner done, but the King at the per-Iwasion of his Counsellours Released his Favourite De La Poole, and went with him, the Duke of Ireland Trefillian his chief Justice, other Judges and Ministers of State, to Notingham, where they Pronounced the Duke of Gloucester, Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and the Thirteen Commissioners, to be Guilty of High Treason because against his will and consent they had conpelled the King to Ratifie the Commission by his Oath and under his Great Seal; so going to Coventry, the Judges by an Instrument in Writing under their Hand and Seals, declared and confirmed their Opinions be agreeable and consonant to the Laws of the Law touching these matters.

Whilft Affairs had but an ill Aspect at home, the French King, to Embroyl the Kingdom more, it pa fible, fent his Admiral with a Thousand Noblemen and Gentlemen into Scotland, with Arms and Warling Stores, who joyning the Scots Army, Marched in England; but upon notice of King Richard's approx with a formidable Army, they crossed the Mountain into Wales, leaving Scotland open to the English who Burnt Edenburg, St. Johnstons, Sterling, and Dundee; a having haraffed the Country almost from Sea to Se they returned Laden with much Booty. This gre Loss so perplexed the Soots, who had got little Plund among the Barren Mountains, that on their return they made the French Admiral, and most that Atte

371 Him of note, Prisoners, till the French King (who precipitated them into this War,) should make a farisfaction, as deligning his own Interest and wantage by it, and not theirs; and tho' he was very by at it, yet the Scots kept them Prisoners till the her demanded was fent for their Ransoms. This ed up the French King to raise a mighty Army with folintion to Conquer England, and to Transport it. prepared 1200 Ships; but when they had a long e. in their unruly March, Plundered the French and nings, and by reason the Duke of Berry, the Kings kle, who was to command them, approving not Enterprize, delay d to come to them; their wants e fo great, that to supply them they Sold their fes, Armour, Weapons, and lastly their Cloaths; then fell to horribly to Plundering the Country. the French King not able to endure the cries and aplaints of the oppressed People, and dispairing to any thing in England with such a half-starved diserly Rout, Disbanded them, after he had been at boool. Charge. The English Nobles now began grievously to comin of the Kings breaking his Oath and Promises in rkening to the evil Counsels and Advice of Robert Vere, Michael De La Poole, Alexander Arch Bishop fork. Nicholas Bamber, and Robert Trifillian his Chief lice together with those flattering Judges, who, to le the King, had Subscribed to the Nullity of the umission, and had Censured all such as procured it. e Traitors to the King, &c. Intreating him to ish them the Kingdom; but he would in no wise rken to any Proposals of parting with those Favowho for their better safety, counselled him to give Callice, and his other Towns in France, to the French g, and rely on him for Aid to curb those proud Subjects.

FENGLAND.

Subjects, who fought to Enflave him their Sovereign but this he looked on as dangerous, and would not gree to it: But the Nobles finding no Redress, fin to Arms, he practiced with the Lord Mayor of Lord to raise him an Army in and about the City; which laboured to do, but the Graver Citizens who were me affected to the Nobles, not only refused to further i but hindered it all they could, declaring it was appear to hasten the desolation of that great City, humblyh feeching the King not to require any fuch thing at the hands, but rather feek an Accommodation of Differen ces: This extreamly vexed him, but finding he mile of his purpose, he dissembled his displeasure, and aside that Project, yet forgot them not. But some time after this, desiring a Loan of 1000l. and it being a fused him, he seized into his hands their Charteran Liberties, dissolved their proper Magistracy, turn out John Hind their Mayor, Henry Warner and Ju Shadworth Sherifs; appointing Sir Edward Dallingrey Warden of the City. However finding he could' raise such an Army as he intended, by reason most his inferiour Subjects were well affected to the Lord because they sought not to injure the King, but ton move his evil Counfellours, who were great Opprelo and Disquieters of the Kingdom, he promised to call Parliament, wherein matters might be Debated with out heat or animolity, and that there his five Favor should be Answerable to all Objections; and if Co. victed, stand to such publick Censure or Punishments the Parliament could justly inflict on them.

This Concession much pleased the Lords, so the they disbanded their Forces, and returned the King their humble thanks: But it was not long before the were fensible a Snare was laid for them, for the Duk of Ireland was privately Levying 5000 Men, pretadedly for his Guard and Defence; but it was fecretly intimated they were to He in wait in Parties, and Surprize the Lords as they were coming to Parliament, fo that they fuddainly recalled their disbanded Forces, and that him up on the Banks of the Thames, which he was forced to Swim on Horse-back for the preservation of his Life; and posting to the Sea Coast, took Shipping for France, where some Years after, he was Slain in Chaling a wild Boar; but so great was then the Kings Love rowards him, That he caused his Dead Body to be Embalmed, brought over, and Magnificently Bury'd.

After the flight of the Duke, the Lords Executed some of the chief Ringleaders, and suffered the rest to depart to their Houses, and so passed with their Army to London, where they were Joyfully received by the Citizens. The King, who kept his Court at the Tower, well perceived how much they had gained the Hearts of the greater Part of the People, and therefore for his own fafety he defired a Conference with them, in which it was Agreed a Parliament should be speedily called, to Redress Grievances; and accordingly a Parliament was: Assembled, in which the evil Counsellours and corrupt. Judges were Sommoned to appear and Answer to the Articles Exhibited against them; but upon their default, they were Attainted of High Treason against the King and Common-weal, and for this John Earl of Salisbury, and Sir Nicholas Bambre lost their Heads; the Lord Chief Justice Trislian was Hanged at Tybarn, and the rest of these Judges had suffered in like manner, had not the Queens incessant supplications prevailed to change their Dooms into Banishment; and in this Parliament the state of Affairs was fettled to the high contentment of the People. And tho' the next Year the Scots began to bustle, yet at the Mediation of the French King a Truce was made Aa 4 between the three Kingdoms, and King Richard by this means in Peace and Tranquility, assisted the Duke of Lancaster to raise an Army, when Leaguing with the King of Portugal, he Warred on the Spaniard for the Kingdom of Castile, which he claimed in Right of his Wife; and so prevailed, That the Spaniard was compelled to fue for a Peace; which was granted on that Kings Marrying Constance the Dukes Eldest Daughter, Loading him Eight Waggons with Gold, and allowing him and his Dutchess during their Lives 10000 Mark a Year. And after having Married Ann. his Younger Daughter, to the King of Portugal, he returned into England, Laden with Riches and Honour. And now all Appeals to Rome, and the Popes Authority in this Kingdom, was Abrogated by Parliament; and foon after, the Vertuous Lady Queen Ann Dyed; whose Death so exceedingly grieved the King, that for some Weeks he would not be comforted, causing the stately House at Sheen in which she Dyed, to be utterly Razed; Curling any that should afterward Build it; yet this Sorrow wasting by time, to strengthen his Alliance he Sailed to France, and took the Lady Isabel, Charles the Sixth's Daughter, to Wife, and brought her to England with her Nurie, and a great Train of Ladies; and not exceeding Seven or Eight Years, she was called The Baby Queen; the King having contracted not to Bed her till The should be Fourteen Years of Age, and a 30 Years Peace was concluded: whereupon the King gave up to the Duke of Britany, the strong Town and Castle of Brest; which much offended the English Nobies, especially the Duke of Glocester his Unkle, who plainly told him, he had dishonoured himself and the English Nation by tamely parting with fuch an important Place, which had not been gained but at the expence of much Blood and Treasure;

Treasure; this so angered the King, that he privately Swore to be Revenged on him and fuch other Noblemen as he faid usually checked and controuled him in his Proceedings; and accordingly getting a Parliament to his mind, Sir John Bushe one of his Creatures being Speaker of the Lower House, This upstart Speaker boldly Accused Thomas Arundel Arch Bishop of Canterbury, who fitting in the House of Peers by the King, was ordered not to Answer and it should be no damage to him, his filence nevertheless was taken for Confession, and he was Banished the Realm; the Earls of Arundel and Warwick in this Parliament were Attainted of High Treason, upon which the former lost his Head, and the latter being confined to the Isle of Wight. through Grief and want of Necessaries, shortly Dyed. But the Duke of Glocester stood too high in the Peoples Favour to be reached this way; therefore he was privately seized at his own House, hurried to Callice, and there by the command of Thomas Moubray then Earl of Notingham, and for this wicked exploit created Duke of Norfolk, the Valiant, Prudent, Virtuous, and Renowned Duke, was Smothered to Death; tho' in the manner of it Authors disagree; some will have it by pressing and keeping him long between Feather-Beds; others, that he was thrown into, and headed up in a Butt of Malmsey: However here he was wickedly made away, and never feen afterward, to the great grief of all but the King and his Favourites who hugged themselves with joy, to think they had removed out of their way the great Obstacle that hindered their Advances to Arbitrary Power.

After this Moubray proceeded to Accuse Henry, Duke of Hartford, Son to the Duke of Lancaster, of Speaking Treasonable and Scandalous Words of the King; whereupon Hartford Challenged his Accuser to the fingle Combate, to try by the Sword the Truth and Justice of his Accusation; but when they were both entered the Lists, and prepared for the Encounter, the King threw down his Warder, staid the Combate. Banished Hartford for six Years, and Moubray sorever; who Travailing to Venice, there Dyed miserably, confessing his Guilt and trouble for the Death of the Noble Duke of Glocester; but Hartford was honourably Entertained by Charles the French King, who would have Married him to a Beautiful Lady, Daughter to the Duke of Berry his Unkle; but King Richard industriously prevented it, as fearing such an Alliance might enable him to grasp at his Crown; and when the Duke of Lancaster Dyed, he seized on his vast Treasure, tho' he had given his Cousin Henry leave (on his departure) to appoint his Attorney to Act for him, and take care of his Inheritance. But these Proceedings bred much Mischief: For the King having lost most of his old, and getting a new fet of Counselors, viz. The Earl of Wiltshire, Sir John Bushe, Sir James Bagot, and Sir John Green; they advised him to many things contrary to the Advice of his grave Council and much troubled the People; and now the Irish Rebelling, the King to Raise an Army Farmed the Kingdom, and all his Revenues belonging thereunto, for certain Years, and Sailed for Ireland.

the

The Duke of Hartford who wanted no Intelligence how matters went in England, looked on the Peoples Ferment, and the Kings Absence, to give him a very favourable advantage to shake off his Chains; wherefore as privately as he might, he came to England, accompanied by the Banished Arch Bishop and many other trusty Friends, declaring to the People he only came to take quiet Possession of his Dutchy of Lancaster, which by the Death of his Father was his Undoubted Right;

Right: fo that Troulands flocked to him. And finding how the People were beat to favour his cause. he Raised a considerable Army and seized the before named Counfellours, whom they Beheaded.

King Richard in Ireland hearing of these Stirs, setled Affaires there as well as he gould, and halted over with a small Army; but before he could pass Wales, most of them had Deferted him; and then being afcertained that his Counsellours in whom he had reposed much trust to Levy Forces for him; were taken off, despairing of any fafety to be gained by force, he came to Henry Duke of Lancaster of his own accord; and publickly owned his Infufficiency and Weakness to Govern well; praising the Duke's mare and singular Virtues; his absolute worthiness to be a King, &c. profering to make him an absolute Surrender of his Kingdom, if he would accept of it.

The Politick Duke, who well knew this proceeded not cordially from him, but from the effects of fear and constraint, however refused it; for tho' he much affected the wearing of a Crown, yet be thought it more advisable to receive it at this time from the Nobility, Gentry, and Commonalty; and hereupon he caused the King with a very respective and honourable Attendance, to be conveyed to the Tower; and a Parliament being called in his Name, Twenty Four Articles were Exhibited against him for Milmanagement and ill Conduct in Government, and many henious Crimes: which in his Restraint he seemed to confess and own, and by an Instrument under his Hand and Seal, he Resigned his Crown and Kingdom to Henry of Bullenbrook Duke of Langaster; which being publickly and generally Ratified and Approved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons Assembled in Parliament, Henry stood up and made this Challenge to the Crown, viz.

In the Name of God Amen, I Henry of Lancaster, Claim the Realm of England and the Cyoun, with all the Appurationances, as coming by the Blood Royal from King Henry the Third, and the Justice which God of his Grace bath sent me by the help of my Friends, for the Recovery of the said Realm, which was at the point of Perdition, through default of Government, and breach of Laws.

These words being said, all the Estates acknowledged him for King; and Richard was formally Deposed, in the words and in manner Recited in Edward the Seconds Reign, and thereupon was sent to Ponsier Castle; but long he had not been there, ere upon some practices of his Favourites to Reinstate him, he was villanously Murthered by Sir Pierce of Exton and Eight others, of whom he Valiantly killed Four with a Bill he wrested out of one of their Hands:

Thus untimely Dyed King Richard the Second, when he had Reigned 22 Years, 3 Months, and 8 Days: Being the 32d Sole Monarch of England. After his Death, his Body was brought to London, and exposed to the view of the People to Satisfie them he was Dead, and prevent their taking part with Impostors; and then Busied at Langley.

In this Kings Reign the River Ouse between Swelstone and Harleswood near Bedford, stood still, and divided it self; so that the Botton in the Middle remained dry for three Miles. Soon after Urred Bolton, John Ashwerby, Walter Bruce, John Ashton, and Peter Petesball, were Persecuted; some by Perpetual Imprisonment, some by Barishment, for Preaching and Maintaining Wickliffe's Doctrine.
In the last Year of this Kings Reign, all the Bay-

Trees in England Withered, and when Lancaster came to the Crown fresh Branches sprouted from the supposed dead Stocks: And an Army of Birds Fighting in the Air, strangely destroyed each other.

In the tina the me l Real of G ledg T pose the S Castle pract villan other he wi Wang fonds Bamdon Elden Th · Lakenhethe A he ha LMildnall 1 Being Deat Heringeswell A Hengrare West PAR (7 to the and pr Newmerkel then H in t CAM stone at Bradley vided BRIDG ed dr Ashwel SH Have were A.R. some t T Wickli In t English Miles Trees i to the posed de

the Air.

Remarks on the County of Suffolk, &c.

Cuffolk has many Advantages in its Situation, by reason the Eastern part of it opens to the Sea, and is stored with commodious Havens; befides this County abounds with Cattle, Wooll, Corn, Marshes, producing fat Pastures, store of Butter, and much Cheefe, but not much approved of; It is mostly plain, branched with several curious Rivers, flowing from and runing into the Ocean : On the North, it is Bounded with Norfolk; on the West, with Cambridgeshire; and on the South, with Esfex: It contains 22 Hundreds, 575 Parishes, 28 Market Towns, 1 Castle, 2 principal Rivers, 32 Bridges, 27 Parks, most of them well stored with Deer: It sends Members to Parliament 16, viz. Alborough 2, Dunwich 2, St. Edmunds-Bury 2, Ipswich 2, Orford

2, Sudbury 2, Eye 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Ipswich in this County was Founded by one Gipsa; it bas a flourishing Estate in Shiping-Trade by reason of the Navigable River it stands on; it was often harassed in antient times by the Danes; and is particularly noted for the Birth of that great Pagentry of Fortune, Cardinal Wolfey, mbose Father was a Butcher in it. St. Edmunds-Bury is Memorable for King Edmund's being Shot to Death by the Danes; for Expiation of which Cruelty, King Canute Erected here a stately Monastery, once accounted the Richest in Europe: And bere a Parliament was held in the Reign of King Henry the Sixth: Exning is the Birth-place of St. Audri, Sister to King Ina. At Renlisham, Redwald. (the first Christian King of the East-Angles) kept his Court: Lidgate is the Birth-place of John Sirnamed Lidgate, a famous English Poet.

The Seats of the Nobility are Busbrook Hall, belonging to the Duke of St. Albans; Ewston, to the Earl of Arlington; Christs Church in Ipswich, Sudbury Hall, Soham

Lodge,

Lodge, to the Lord Viscount Hereford; Denham Hall, to the Lord Viscount Townsend; Broom Hall, and Carleford Hall, to the Lord Cornwallis. Besides these, there are a great many stately Buildings belonging to private Gentlemen. In some of the Cliffs to the Sea, Hawks build; and there is much Game for Recreation, as Fishing; Fowling, Hunting; &cc. Here also stands Framlingham Cassle, we place of great State, Reauty, Strength and Conveniency, and the Ruins of Burgh Cassle Remain.

The Reign of HENRY the Fourth (commonly called Henry of Bullenbrook.)

THIS Henry was Crowned by the consent of the Estates, in the life time of Richard the Second, and created Henry his Eldest Son Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwal, and Earl of Chester: Then he called a Parliament in his own Name, in which the Bishop of Carlisse, for speaking in the behalf of King Richard, and moving a commisseration of his wrongs, was committed close Prisoner to the Abby of St. Albans, and the Crown was entailed on Henry and his Heirs forever.

This Parliament no sooner ended, but many Lords Conspired the Death of the King, entering into Oath and Covenant to do it at Oxford, where they had appointed sollenn Sports for his Entertainment, in honour (as they Flatteringly pretended) of his happy Accession to the Crown; but really with an intent to restore King Richard: And accordingly they met Armed, all but Edward Plantagenet, Duke of Aumarle, Son to Edmund of Langley, Duke of York, the Kings Unkle; who as he sat at Dinner with his Father, had by chance chance the Label of the Instrument of Combination hanging out at his Bosom, of which the old Duke taking hold, drew forth the whole Writing, and Reading the Contents of the Conspiracy, prepared for Windsor, to give the King an account of it, which the young Duke perceiving, hastily took Horse, and outstript him, himself revealing all the Intrigue, for which he had his Pardon.

Upon this Discovery, the King put off his Journey to Oxford, and hastened to the Tower of London, securing the City to his Interest, and raising an Army; of which the Lords at Oxford had no sooner notice, but they encreased their Forces, causing one Magdalen, much in likeness, to Personate King Richard, and advanced their Standard to meet the King; but finding they were much inferiour to him in Number, their courage failed; which fo disheartened the Souldiers, that they dispersed and left their Leaders to shift for. themselves; so that most of them were Taken and Executed in divers places; others fled the Kingdom, and referved themselves to broach new Broils; and this hastened King Richard's Murther, in the manner as has been faid: For King Henry complaining that fo long as he Lived he should never be at rest, and demanding if none loved him so well as to rid him of that Torment, Pierce of Exton, to curry favour with him, posted away, and with other Russians villainously performed it; at which the French King was mightily displeased, purposing to send his Letters of Desiance to King Henry, and Invade his Kingdom; but upon fecond thoughts, tho' he had raised a potent Army, he disfolved it, and proceeded no further in the business. Yet foon after he Levied another Army to Invade Aquitaine, and Guyan; but was fo stoutly withstood by King Henry's Forces, That he retired and Disbanded ded them. But the King of England doubting the fecurity of his ill-got Title, laboured to make Peace with him, the better to strengthen himself, offering a Marriage between Henry his Son, and the Lady Isabella Widow to King Richard, and Daughter to Charles the Sixth of France; but that King considering how unfortunate Marriages had been between France and England refused it; whereupon she was sent over in great State, and Married to her Cousin Charles, Eldest Son of Lewis Duke of Orleance, her Unkle.

Soon after this, Owen Glendour, with his Wellh, Rebelled; Overthrowing the King's Army, and taking the Lord Grey of Ruthen and Edmund Mortimer, the Kings Coulin, Prisoners; using them exceeding hardly, the sooner to oblige the King to Ransom them; but he neglected it, because Mortimer was nearer Allied to the Crown by Right of Descent, than himself; yet tho' he might have had his Liberty, if he would have joyned with the Welsh, and some English Nobles, that were fled thither, he rather chose to endure Extremities, than to comply with them: Whereupon they folicited the Scots, who Invaded the Northern parts of the Kingdom, doing much Mischief; but the King soon requited it, by entering Scotland, and laying all waste before him: However he no fooner returned, but the Scots re-entered England with 20000 Men, committing many Barbarous Cruclties; but being Encountered by Henry Sirnamed Hotspur, Son to Henry Piercy Earl of Northumberland, 10000 of them were Slain, and 500 taken Prisoners; and of note Mordacke Earl of Fiffe, Archibald Earl of Douglas, Thomas Earl of Murray, and Robert Earl of Angus. The following Year the French fent 12 Ships with 1200 Nobles, Gentlemen and others, to assist the Welfh, but most of them were Shipwrack'd on the Point of Cornwal, and the rest with much difficulty returned to France; yet soon after he Landed 12000 Men in Wales to affift Glendour and his Rebellious Companions, who joyned them with 10000. But upon the Kings approach with an Army. the Wellh fled into the Woods and Mountains, leaving the French to shift for themselves; which made them hasten to their Ships, and return to France, without doing any thing Memorable; which made the French King become a Jest to the English, viz. That he was often Big, but never Brought-forth. Notwithstanding King Henry, to Strengthen his Interest Abroad, Married Jane, Widow to John the deceased Duke of Britany, and gave Blanch his Eldest Daughter, to William Duke of Bavaria, Son and Heir Apparent to the Emperour Lewis of Bavaria; and some time after Philippa his Youngest Daughter to the King of Denmark.

In the Third Year of his Reign he required Henry Piercy Earl of Worcester, Henry Piercy Earl of Northumberland, and Piercy Hotspur his Son, to deliver up the Scots Prisoners taken in the late Battel on the Northern Borders; but was Answered, Those Prisoners were theirs by Right of War, and they would not part with them; defiring him at the same time to Ransom his Cousin Mortimer; but this he refused, alledging, That he had voluntarily made himself a Prisoner to give Ghendour and other his Accomplices a colourable pretence for Rebellion, feeing he was fo near Allied to the Crown: and therefore his own Safety, and his good Discretion, gave him Advice not to hearken to their Motion, but to punish his offence.

This much displeased the Piercies, and designing to Levy War against the King, they Ransomed Mortimer at their own charge, secretly entering into a League and Friendship with Glendour, they promited him great matters when King Henry by their United Strength flould fhould be Deposed; then they Engaged the Score Prisoners to take part with them; also the Earl of Stafford, Richard Scroop Arch Bishop of Tork, and many others; and as they had done against Richard, so they framed and published Articles against him, as to his Misdemeanours in Government, false claim to the Crown, charging him with the Murther of King Richard his Lawful and Rightful Soveraign; also his refusing to Ransom his Cousin Mortimer who was taken Fighting in his Cause, but rather wished he might die in a loathsome Prison, because the Crown of Right belonged to him, as being Son and Heir to Philippa, Daughter and Heiress to Lionel Duke of Clarence, Elder Brother to John of Gaunt, Father to Henry, whom they stilled a Usurper.

This made many joyn with them, so that their Army became very Formidable to the King: And to bind the Welsh more simply to them, Edward Mortimer Earl of March, Married Glendour's Daughter; by which means in a little time they flattered themselves they should have a King of England of the Antient British Blood: And indeed a very great danger about this time threatened the King, for a Calibrop, or Engin with three very sharp Teeth or Spikes, was placed in his Bed, which had certainly procured his Death, had he suddainly lain down upon it, but it was timely Discovered; yet the Party who placed it could not be made known, and divers Gray Fryers scattering defamatory Libels against the King, several of them were taken and Hanged.

The King finding his greatest advantage now lay in Expedition, suddainly raised an Army, and by long Marches prevented the Earls joyning with the Welsh, so that both Armies meeting near Shrewsbury, Piercy Hotspur, a Person of undaunted Courage, no fooner sooner saw the Royal Standard, but he resolved to throw his Fortune on the hazard of a Battel; fo the Charge being Sounded, the Scots gave the first onset, and Fought desperately, but were over-born, and a great part of them Slain; yet notwithstanding the Lords renewed the Battel with great fury and obstinacy, perswading themselves of good success, until the King and the Prince his Son (determining by Honourable Death to leave their Bodies in the Field, rather than fall into the hands of their Enemies, or betake them to shameful flight, and leave their Men a Sacrifice behind them) redoubling their Strength and Valour, fet fuch Examples to the rest, that the declining Battel was restored, and Piercy Hotspur with many of chief Command being Slain, the Lords Army fell into rout and confusion; so that in the Field and Pursuit 6000 were slain, the Earls of Worcester, Douglas, and many others were taken Prisoners, and a famous Victory was obtained; and it is faid the King slew in this Battel 36 with his own hands; but because the Earl Douglas in fingle Combate had fought with him, and approved himself a valiant Man, he had his Liberty granted without Ransom; but the rest of the Prisoners had not that good luck; for the Earl of Worcester, and several of the chief, were Beheaded; many of a lower degree Hanged and Quartered, and their Heads placed on London Bridge. In this Battel the King lost not above 600 Men.

To follow this lucky Success, the Prince was sent into Wales, with part of the Army; where he found Owen Glendour for saken by most of his Companions, and with the rest for his safety he retired into a vast Wood, which being encompassed and narrowly watched, he was there, with many others, Famished to Death; and such as were taken by hunting and beating that Wood;

Bb 2

fuf-

fuffered by Execution. And hereupon the Prince returned to the King; and in the mean while the Earl of Northumberland came and submitted himself to the Kings Mercy; and tho' he was excused, it was with no hearty goodwill, but rather to prevent the Castle of Berwick, and other strong Places on the Frontiers, from falling into the hands of the Scots, as being held by such Officers as the Earl had appointed under him.

These Troubles were no sooner over, but Lewis Duke of Orleance fent the King (in a Bravado) a Challenge to meet him and a Hundred French with a Hundred English, to Combate it for Honours sake in an indifferent place; whereto the King returned Answer, That his former Actions in Warlike undertakings, could clearly acquit him from the imputation of Cowardize; and that Kings ought not to be so careless of their Peoples wellfare and safety, as to meet every Madman who had the vanity to send them a Challenge: But that he would be at all times ready to Repel any Violence or Injury which he should dare rashly or unadvisedly to Attempt against him or bis People. This exceedingly nettled Mounsieur; fo that in an angry mood, deligning Revenge, he Besieged the Town of Vergie in Guyan; but having wasted his Army in almost a four Months Siege, he was constrained to raise it, and retire with disgrace.

After this the Duke of Burgundy, to mend the matter, raised an Army to reduce Callis; but upon King Henry's preparations to pass the Seas with an Army, he was Remanded by the French King; which he looking on as the Duke of Orleances doings, to hinder him from gathering expected Lawrels, a mortal hatred fprung up between them, and several Battels were Fought; King Henry sirst assisting Burgundy, and then Orleance; and gained much Money by their Contention, whilst they weakened each other, and the whole Estate of France; whilst they drew in Parties to side with them. In the mean while the Marshal of France laying Siege to a Town in Gascony with 4000 Men at Arms, was beaten off by Sir John Blunt, with 300 English, 12 Noblemen, and 120 Gentlemen, taken Prisoners and carried into the Town in Triumph.

And now tho' the King had Pardoned the Earl of Northumberland, yet he resenting some Indignities put on him, grew restless for Revenge, and therefore Associating with Richard Scroop Arch Bishop of York, Thomas Moubray, Earl Marshal, The Lords Hastings, Faulconbridge, Bardolf, and divers others, Forces were resolved to be raised, and another hazard of the Field to be Enterprised: But the Earl of Westmoreland, whom they would have drawn to their Party, revealing their Delign to the King, he secretly Marched with an Army into the North, and furprifing Moubray, Scroop, and some others, caused their Heads to be stricken off; but Northumberland, Bardolf, &c. Escaped to France, from whence they afterward came to Scotland, where that King promised to Aid them; but to prevent the threatening Danger, the King raised a potent Army, and fent it under the Prince of Wales into Scotland. where he Retook Berwick, Alnwick, and other strong places, that the Earl had delivered to the Scots, and Burnt many Towns in the heart of that Kingdom; whereupon the Scots, finding themselves unable to make Relistance, craved a Truce, which was Granted for twelve Months; and thereupon the Prince returned home with his Spoils.

Whilst this was doing, the French (to favour the Design) set out several Armed Ships, to Alarum the Coast Towns of England, when the Lord Castile, with three other Lords, 20 Knights, and a greatmany Soldiers, Landing at Dartmouth, were Encountered by the Country People, who Slew Castile, and most of his Soldiers; and taking the rest Prisoners, brought them to the King, who very well rewarded the Rusticks for their Care and Vigilancy, and put the Lords and Knights to great Ransoms; and the King going to see them on Board at their departure, in his return from the Downs very narrowly scaped being taken by a French Privatier's supposedly lying purposely in wait for him; whereupon the Lord Commois who attended him, being a Norman Nobleman, was suspected of Treachery. but upon his Tryal acquitted, and received into Favour.

Bb. 3

The HISTORY

The Truce with Scotland Expired, Northumberland and Bardolf Animated the Scots to Invade England, which they did, doing much mischief in Northumberland, and other Northern parts: Whereupon the King Levied an Army and Traveled by long Marches to Encounter them, but before his Arrival, they were Fought-with and Overthrown by Sir Thomas Rookby. High Sherif of Yorkshire, who slew the Earl and sent his Head as a Present to the King that was very acceptably received, and the Lord Bardolf being Wounded, fled into Scotland, and there Dyed of his Wounds.

After this the King Assembling a Parliament, Created therein his three Younger Sons, viz. Thomas Duke of Clarence, John Duke of Bedford, and Humpbry Duke of Gloucester; and many Laws were therein Enacted profitable to the Common-weal; and from this Day till his Death, the King Enjoyed a Life free from Hostility, but found fuch Inward perplexities of Mind, for having Conserved to, or Instigated, the Murther of King Richard his first Cousin, for the lucre of his Crown, that to make some Attonement, and quiet his Conscience, he Levied an Army, resolving (as he had Vowed) to make War against the Infidels that Oppreffed the Christians in the Holy Land; which the Popes Popes of those times declared was a full Atonement, or fufficient Expiation for any Crime, how Notorious fo ever; but whilst things were getting ready, he fell into an Appoplexy; and finding Death approaching, caused his Crown to be placed on his Pillow, with an intent to deliver it to the Prince when he was near Departing, but he, impatient of delay, supposing him (when fallen into a Drows ness) to be Dead, removed it thence; whereupon the King raised himself, and misfing it, demanded Who had taken it? And the Prince Replying, It was he: The King fell back, and fetching a deep Sigh, faid, My Son, what Right I had to this Crown, and how I have Enjoyed it, God knows, and the World bath seen; and thereupon he fetched a deep Groan; but the Prince not minding that, faid, Comfort your felf in God, Father; The Crown you have, and if you Dyc, it is mine, and I will keep it with my Sword as you have done; and within a few Hours the King dyed, in the 46th Year of his Age, when he had Reigned 13 Years, 5 Months, and 19 Days; and was Buried at Canterbury, Anno 1412.

In this Kings Reign two Blazing Stars appeared before the breaking out of the Piercy's Rebellion, and many Drops of Blood fell on Peoples Garments in the Northern Parts, as from the Clouds.

Anno 1407 a great Plague happened, that destroyed in London 30000 Persons, and multitudes else where; and the Year after, a violent Frost held 15 Weeks.

And by the wicked procurement of Thomas Arundel Arch Bishop of Canterbury, William Sawtree, William Swinderby, and William Thorp, worthy Divines, suffered Martyrdome for opposing the Romish Superstitions and Idolatry, Preaching the Gospel, and much adhearing to Wickliffe's Doctrine.

389

Remarks on the County of Surry, &c.

CUrry is a very spacious · County, and would be aboun. dantly Fruitful, did not a ridge of barren Hills run in a manner quite through it; however it abounds in Corn, Cat. tle, Rich Medows and Upland Pastures, and Open and Inclosed Grounds, yeilds store of Honey, Wooll, Fowl, Fish, Deer, and is abundant in pleasant Gardens and Orchards of Fruit-Trees. It is Bounded on the North, with the Thames and Middlesex; on the East, with Kent; on the South, with Suffex; and on the West, with Hampshire and Buckinghamshire. It contains 13 Hundreds, in which are 141 Farishes, 8 Principal Market Towns, 7 Bridges, 4 Forrests; and 17 Parks; as for Rivers, there are many small ones, as at Gilford, Casholton, Kingston upon Thames, Wandsworth, and other places; but the River Thames which is a great part in this County, is the most Remarkable, and the little River Mole, that runs a great way under Ground, and rifes again. It sends Members to Parliament 14, viz. The Borough of Southwark 2, Rygate 2, Blechenley 2, Gatton 2, Guilford 2, Hallemore 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

In this County the little Town of Lambeth is noted for the stately Palace of the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, being founded by Arch Bishop Bladwin, who made it his Seat Anno 596; here Henry Canute the Danish King Dyed, of a Surfeit. Croydon is also famed as another Seat of the Arch Bishops, and for the stately Monument of Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, Erested there to his Memory. At Ockley, Ethelwolfe won a great Battel over the Danes. New Oatlands, Julius Cæsar sirst passed the Thames, at a place then called Cowstakes. Putney gave Birth to that great Minister of State Thomas Cromwel, who from a Black-Smiths Son, in Henry the Eighth's time, rose to be Created Earl

Earl of Essex, and made Vicar General of England. being greatly Instrumental in the Reformation. At Wimbleton Anno 560, Cheaulin King of the West-Saxons, gave a great Defeat to Ethelred King of Kent: Richmond is famed, as having been the Country Retirement of a great many of our Kings and Queens, and much delighted in by his present Majesty King William the Third; and in this place, besides a great many of her Predecessors, Queen Elizabeth drew her last Breath. Kingston on Thames is Memorable for the Residence and Coronation of the Saxon Kings, Ethelston, Edwin, Ethelred, and others; Gilford was the Seat of many Saxon Kings, and is famous for its Hospital and Free-School. At Morton a Parliament was held Anno 21 of Henry the Third, which produced an Act which to this day is called The Statute of Merton. There is a Bourn near Croydon by its rising foretels Mortality. At Casholton are excellent Trouts, and near Nonesuch a large Vein of Potters Earth: Here are found at Ebsham or Epsom, as also near Lewisham, those Medicinal Waters that Cure many Diseases in all sorts of People.

The Seats of Pleasure are Richmond, belonging to the Royal Family; Albury and Waybridge, to the Duke of Norfolk; Nonsuch to the Duke of Southampton; Rowhampton, to the Duke of Devon; Bysset, to the Duke of St. Albans; Flanchford, to the Earl of Plymouth; Rygate Place, to the Lord Mordant; Towting Graveny, to the Lord North and Grey; and the Bishop of Winchesters Place in Southwark, called Winchester-House.

The Reign of HENRY the Fifth (commonly called Henry of Monmouth.)

This Henry, the greater part of his Fathers Reign. was much lead away by evil Company, and was not free from committing in his Frolicks Robberies on the Highway, especially on his own Receivers; and one of his Gang being taken, and about to be Sentenced in the Court of Kings Bench, he rushed in and laboured to pull off his Irons, in order to fet him at Liberty: but the Lord Chief Justice commanded him to desist: whereupon in a rage, he went up to the Bench, and Struck him on the Face; for which (after he had given him some mild Reproofs, as that the Bench he saton was the Kings, and that himself in that place represented his Person, and what Injury was done to him, was done to the King; and if he shewed such evil Examples, none would Obey him when he came to Reign) he fent him to the Kings Bench Prison, till the Kings pleasure should be known in the matter. The King no fooner heard of it, but he commended the Judge for his Courage and Impartiality, wishing all his Ministers were like him; and though the Prince was Enlarged, yet for this he was put from his Presidentship in the Council, and his Younger Brother Thomas Duke of Clarence placed therein, to his great Grief.

These and other Irregular Passages of his past Years, (when he was Crowned by Arundel Arch Bishop of Canterbury at Westminster) he wisely considered; and to repair what had been amis, strictly forbid the Leud Companions of his Youth to enter his Court, or any where where come near his Person, till he had some cause to believe they had reformed and mended their Manners; yet ordered some of them, who had run out their Estates in pursuing his wild Extravagancies, small Pensions to Subsist on, till they could better provide for themselves, Electing none for his Councel, nor into Places of Justice, or publick Government, but such as were of known Integrity, Wise, Sober, and not to be Biased through fear or favour; greatly labouring to Reform the Abuses of the Clergy; and for the better security of the Marches, he caused the Castles and Towns thereabouts to be Repaired and Strongly Garisoned, by which means he Awed the Scots and Welsh, and kept his People free from their former fears and apprehensions of danger.

And the better to shew he had no hand in, nor was consenting to the Death of King Richard, he caused his Body to be brought from Langley to Westminster, in much Funeral Pomp, and to be Interred by Queen Ann his beloved Wife.

In the Second Year of his Reign he Assembled a Parliament at Leicester, wherein he was Importunately Addressed to supress Religious Houses, where they were ill mannaged, and in stead of promoting Godly Lives, had been made the Nurseries of Gluttony, Idleness, Pride, and all Uncleanness; considering they would yield into his Cossers an Annual Rent of 20000s; which might be better Employed for the Support of the Crown, and Honour and Sasety of the Kingdom, in maintaining 15 Earls, 1500 Knights, and more than 6000 Men at Arms; besides a great Number of Almes Houses for the support and relief of the Poor.

This much startled the Abbots, Priors, Fryers, Monks, Nuns, &c. as fearing to be Un-Hived, and forced to Labour for their Livings; which they were little able to do, confidering they had fo long been inured to a habit of Idleness; and therefore to turn the Stream another way, at their instant Entreaties, Henry Chiche. My who Succeeded Thomas Arundel in the Archieniscopal See of Canterbury, took an opportunity in a verv Learned Oration to make the King sensible of his Right to the Crown of France, inciting him to Claim it as his proper Inheritance; and in the Clergies behalf, for the carrying on the Wars, he offered a large Sum of Money; whereupon the other business was laid aside, and nothing now considerably debated or spoken of, but how the King might Recover France:. The People every where shewing a willingness to Embark in the Undertaking: And a Noble Embassy was sent to King Charles the Sixth, peremptorily to demand the peaceable delivery of the Kingdom, together with the Dutchies of Aquitain, Normandy, Anjou, and whatever had formerly appertained to the Crown of England; and if the French King without Effusion of Blood would yield to his demands, he would take the Lady Catherine, the Kings Daughter, to Wife, and Endow her with all the Dutchies and Provinces; and be tractable in every thing tending to the French King's Honour and Estate; but upon the Refusal, he would attempt the gaining it by the Sword, and bring on that Kingdom all the Miseries that are inseparable attendants on a cruel War.

The unexpected strangeness of this Message, so amazed the French King and his Nobles, that they could make no ready Answer, but promised to send Ambassadors to King Henry, who should endeavour to Adjust this weighty Affair; yet the Dauphin of France had no sooner notice of the King's Demands, but despising his Youth, and holding him unsit to attempt a matter of so high a consequence, in a scossing manner sent him a Tun of Racket-Balls to sport with in his Tennis-Court: This so Angered him that He Vowed (by Gods assistance) ere many Months were over, he would toss so many Iron Balls within the Kingdom of France, that their strongest Rackets should be too weak to turn them. And hereupon he Levied a puissant Army; so that the Dauphin seeing him in earnest, began to repent of his Rashness, and governing Affairs under his Father, whose Imbecility rendered him not very capable of it, he sent Ambassadors to Insorm King Henry, That is he would desist from his Purpose, and Live in Amity with that Nation, and take the Lady Catharine his Sister to Wise, he should then receive with her a large Sum of Money, with some small Territories and Possessions in that Kingdom.

To this King Henry Replied, That unless with the Lady he might have the Dutchies of Normandy, Anjou, Aquitain, and all the other Signories, to him and to his Crown justly appertaining, he would not wave his Title to the Crown of France, but attempt by all Hostile means to win it, if he might; and with this Answer the Ambassadors departed much distaissied: Whereupon King Henry settling his Affairs, appointing his Mother Regent, and joyning to her Council many grave Persons for the Management of the Government, he Marched his Army to the Sea Coast.

And now the Dauphin began to play another game; for Richard Earl of Cambridge, Henry Lord Scroop, and Sir Thomas Grey, three approved Captains, Bribed by him with vast Sums, resolved to Seize the King, and carry him into France; or if that proved too difficult, to Murther him in his Tent before he took Shipping; but this Treason being timely Discovered, and made out by Proof, and their own Confessions, they were the day after their Tryals Executed in the Camp; and as

foon

foon as the Wind ferved in 140 Ships he Transfor. ted his Army to Normandy; and in 34 Days Took Hareflew, on the River Seine; Inriching his Army with the Spoiles, and placing the Duke of Exeter his Unkle, as Captain there, and a Garrison of 1500 Men. He resolved, because the Season advanced apace to March over-Land to Callis, and Winter there.

The Dauphin by this time had got a very numerous Army in the Field, and was attended by almost all the Nobility and Gentry of the French Nation, and having notice of King Henry's March, it was Debated whether he should be suffered to pass to Callis, or be Fought with by the way; at last in the French Kings Council by far the greater Number, it was carried to give him Battel, fince he had passed the River Soam, and was intangled in the Country, his Army confifting but of 2000 Horse, and 13000 Archers and Men at Armes, many of them being Sick, and wanting mostly Provifions; whereupon a Herald was fent to him with Defiance, commanding him to prepare within a few days for the Battel: To this he presently Answered, That his Army being afflicted with Sickness and Wants, he was bending his Course to Callis to Refresh his Men. and therefore would not feek his Enemy; but if they dared to Interrupt bim in his Passage, he was of sufficient Force to Repel all Violence which the French Nation should oppose against him; upon this Answer a Proclamation was put out, That all who loved their Country, and were defirous to fight for Honour, should straight-waies repair to the French Kings Standard; fo that the Army foon encreafed to upward of 60000, mostly Horse, consisting of the Flower of the French Nation. King Henry was not Ignorant of this, nor of their hasty Marches towards him; fo that pitching his Tents between the Towns of Balangie and Agincourt, in the County of St. Paul, he resolved to expect them; which was not long, so that in a manner Incompassing his little Army with their Multitudes, they were so sure of Victory, that they made great Fires; and held Revels in their Camp. whilst King Henry and his People were in a deep Hu-

of ENGLAND.

miliation, deliring affiltance of God.

On the 25th of October, Anno 1414, The Armies on both sides were set in Array, each dividing into three Battels; King Henry's Vaunt-Guard was Commanded in chief by the Duke of York, the Main-Battel by himfelf, and the Rear-Guard by Thomas Duke of Exeter: and to prevent any fuddain breaking in of the French Horse, he caused his Archers and Men at Arms to be invironed with Stakes fix or feven Foot long, headed with sharp Iron, which fastened at one end in the Ground, might easily upon occasion be removed; on the Wing, as the French Horse were to come on, he placed in a Meadow 1500 Archers, having a Ditch before them, that could not easily be Leaped; and when Sir Walter Harpington Marshal of the Field, cast up his Gantlet, the whole Band of Archers were to deliver their flights of Arrows with a great shout; all which was so exactly observed. That the French Horse of their first Battel were no sooner within the danger of the Ambush, but they were gauled by the Archers, and many of their Riders thrown to the Ground and trampled to Death; Then the English Vant-guard let fly, dimming the Air with their showers of Arrows, working a miserable Destruction to the French; so that by the unruliness of the wounded Horses, this Battel foon fell into diforder and confusion, pressing violently upon one another, breaking in upon the Foot for Retreat, and doing great mischief; which the English perceiving, slung their Bows and with Mawls, Axes, Swords, Gleves, and Bills, made an incredible flaughter flaughter among them; and having put these to the Rout, they run fiercely on the middle Battel of the French, who for a while Fought with great Courage and Resolution; and having done them considerable mischief, they seemed Politickly to Faint and Retire which was to train the Enemy on their sharp pointed Stakes; and it so well succeeded, that the French Horse rushing on furiously, without seeing the danger. were miserably Goared, stopping one another, and making a Barricade for the English, whilst they had leafure to ply them with their flights of Arrows, till in a short time that Battel (as the former) was altogether in Rout and Confusion; and then the English breaking in as before, the King fought hand to hand with the Duke of Alanson, and was so violently striken by him, that it broke the small Crown he wore on his Helmet that day, to distinguish him in the Battel; and he had nearly taken him Prisoner, but the King recovering from the Stund he received from the forcible blow, flew two of his Companions, and beat him down; whereat he cried out, I am your Cousin Alanson, spare my Life; and the' the King laboured to do it, his Guards were so enraged against him for endangering the Life of their Soveraign, that they flew him as he lay on the Ground.

This Battel being utterly Defeated, the Third (which confifted almost all of Foot) being Charged, and fearing to be Incompassed, threw down their Arms, and as many as could fled; but great Numbers who could not, fell on their Knees and begged Quarter, which was granted: But fatally to them, in the close of the Fight, Robinet of Bonvile with 600 of those Horsemen which had first acquitted the Field, entered the Kings Camp, Guarded only by Lacquies and Scullions, and slew many of those weak Defendants, who raising a doleful cry, the King verily supposed fresh Forces were come to Engage his weary Soldiers; and there being almost as many Prisoners as he had Men of his own, fearing they should Revolt, and do him great mischief in a renewed Fight, he caused it to be Proclaimed on pain of Death, That all ordinary Prisoners should immediatly be put to the Sword; which was accordingly done to about 8000; but when the King knew the true cause of the new uproar, and had slain almost all those 600 that rifled his Camp, he condemned himfelf of too much Cruelty in putting the Prisoners to the Sword, when he had given them Quarter, bewailing it with Tears, and caused his Surgeons to lookafter such as yet weltered in their Blood, or there might be any hopes to recover, and some were recovered; for in so fuddain an Execution, many received Wounds that were not Mortal.

This famous Victory obtained, the King fell on his Knees, and caused all the Army to do the like; and with up-lifted Hands say, Lord, Not unto us, not unto us, but to thy Name be Glory and Honour.

In this Battel (which the King said should be called The Battel of Agincourt to all Posterity, because Fought near that Town) were slain of the French, Charles Lord Delabreth, Constable of France, Jaques Lord of Dampire, High Admiral, John Duke of Alanson, Anthony Duke of Brabant, Edward Duke of Barre; The Earls of Marle, Vaudemont, Blawmount, Grand Pree, Russey, Faulconbridg, Foys, and Lastrake, 25 Lords, 8000 Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen, and about 10000 of the meaner sort.

The Prisoners of Note were Charles Duke of Orleance, John Duke of Burbon, The Lords Donuart, Fosseux, Humiers, Roy, Cawny, Hamcourt, Noell, Bonciqualt, and some others; and on King Henry's part of Note were slain Edward Duke of York, and the Earl of Worcester:

r.c

Some

Some Historians will have the latter to be the Earl of Suffolk, and not above 600 others of all Ranks. The King who before the Battel had Vowed to Dye or. Conquer, and that England should never be at a Penny charge for his Ransom, was informed by some of his Noble Prisoners, That the French were so confident of the Victory, that they had not only disposed of his Person, and the spoil of his Camp before hand, but also of Places and Offices in England: But when Man proposes. God disposes.

The Dead being Honourably Buried, and the Soldiers Inriched with the Spoil, the King Marched to Callis, without any interuption; and having fettled his Affairs, passed into England, where he was received by his Subjects with unspeakable loy.

Soon after this, the Duke of Exeter, Captain of Hareflew, Ravaged the Countries, and Overthrew the Earl of Arminiack, the new Constable of France, with confiderable flaughter; taking many Prisoners, for which he had large Ransoms: And Sigismund the Emperorof Germany coming into England, laboured to conclude a Peace between the two Kings; but not being able to effect it, he made one for himself; and being honourably attended by the King and his Nobles to his Ships, he returned home, highly fatisfied with his Entertainment: Shortly after the Duke of Burgundy made a Peace with King Henry only for the Counties of Flanders and Arthois, for which he was suspected as an Enemy to the Crown of France.

In the Kings absence, the French Besieged Haresten by Sea and Land; but their Fleet, Commanded by John Viscount Narbon, was utterly destroyed by John Duke of Bedford; whereupon the Constable raised the Siege by Land, and hasted to Paris; upon which the French Nobility Quarelled among themselves about the several bad Successes, charging the Miscarriage upon one another, which made for King Henry's Interest; fo that he called a Parliament at Westminster, declaring publickly his Right and undoubted Title to the Crown of France, and the many wrongs the French had done the English Nation, which now they had an opportunity to repair, in giving him Supplies to enable him in the profecution of his Wars, which they liberally Granted him; and it was raised without any murmurings of the People, as in other Reigns had happened on the like occasion: In the mean while John Holland Earl of Huntington, after a sharp Engagement, took three Carracks of Genoa, and funk other fix, that were going to Aid the French; and in the Prizes found great store of Treasure; and early in the Spring the King Landed a strong Army in Normandy, took the Castle of Tonque, whereupon the Villagers of that Dutchy fled into their Walled-Towns, and he laid Siege to the City of Caen, which after many fierce Assaults, he took, putting to Death the most obstinate, who had too long refused his proffered Mercy, in holding out against him; and the niore Wealthy Citizens he put to Fines and Ransoms.

And now a Quarrel happened between the Queen of France and the Dauphin her Son, for the having raked together great store of Treasure, he forcibly seized it for the use of the War; which so enraged her, that she vowed Revenge, and procured John Duke of Burgundy to be Protector of the Kings Person and of the Kings dome; fo that an irreconcileable Quarrel continued among them: The Constable and Dauphin labouring to weaken his Interest, and he on the other hand supported by the Kings Favour, was not wanting to do the like for them. Whilst King Henry was Warring in Normandy, and took in about 50 strong Towns and Castles, reducing the Normans for the most part to his

Cc 2

obedi-

obedience, and having appointed Sir Gilbert Umphrevile Captain of Caen Castle, and Sir Gibert Talbot the like of the Town, Sir John Popham Baylif, &c. and disposed the other Places in Trufty Hands, he Marched to Roan, where he found the Citizens had drawn a great Trench about it, and strongly Fortified it with Towers and Bullwarks, and having laid Siege to it, at Pontle-Arch he laid over a ftrong Chain, and a Wooden Bridge to hinder any Succours coming by Water, keeping likewife that Paffage blocked up with a strong Squadron, under the Command of the Earl of Warmick; and whilst he lay at this Siege, the Lord Kilmay with 16000 Irishmen, came to him Armed with Darts and Coats of Mail, being joyfully received, and proved very fervicable. But the King finding his violent Assaults were repulsed, the Garrison being very Numerous, incompassed the place to the Landward, with a wide and deep Trench, impailed at the bottom with sharp Stakes, and fo well guarded with Archers, that they durst not approach it; so there being Multitudes of useless People in the City, the Famine encreased so fore among them, that nothing Uuclean was left uneaten; nor were those they turned out suffered to pass the English Camp, so that many Hundreds with piteous cries lay and died under the Walls; and the Siege having continued from Lamas tide, till Christmas, on New-Years Day they defired fafe Conduct for their Commissioners to pass to the King, which was allowed, but to little purpose; for a bold Frenchman fo angered him with his vaunting fpeech (wherein he taxed him with unprincely degenerateness, and meanness of Courage, for Cloistering up the Garrison to Starve them, as not daring to let them be at liberty to Fight, and fell their Lives bravely in the Field) That he resolved not to hearken to any Terms, but the Surrender of the City upon discretion, Gran-

Granting them only a Truce of Eight Days to well advise in the matter; but nothing being determined, the half-Starved Inhabitants with hideous cries and shouts compelled the Governour and Magistrates to a Surrender; so that having Four Days more allowed, they Surrendered the City and Castle to the King, there being Famished during the Siege 5000, and 12000 Starvelings were turned out, who many of them dyed in the Fields and Lanes: Then he compelled the Burghers for their Ransom to pay him 356000 Crowns and swear Fealty to him and his Successor, and with this Capital City went the currant of the rest, so that he became sole Master of Normandy.

Upon this, the Duke of Burgundy came to King Henry under safe conduct, to treat of an Accommodation; but whatever the King asked, was denied; which made him in a passion Swear, That he would have the Lady Catharine in Marriage, and what he demanded with her, or otherwise he would ere long drive both him and his Master out of the Kingdom: To which the Duke Replied, Those words were easie to be spoke, but that he must take much Labour and Toil to make them good. After this, the Duke reconciled himself to the Dauphin, ratified under their Hands and Seals before a publick Notary, and King Henry to let the world see he resolved to persist in what he had enterprized, created Gascoyn D' Foyes, Earl of Longeville; Sir John Grey, Earl of Tankervile; and Sir John Bourchier, Earl of Ewe in the Kingdom of France; and upon the approach of Captain Bueff with 1500 Men to Ponthoyse, the Lord Listendame, the Governour, with 10000 Inhabitants, Deferted it, leaving for hafte most of their Rich Goods behind them. This Place the King Fortified, and Marched to Paris, which he lay before Three Days, bringing a great terror on that that City; but with his finall Army not able to in-

compass it, he Marched back to Ponthoyse.

John Duke of Burgundy, as is faid, having reconciled himself to the Dauphin, yet it being superficial, and not hearty, he determined in a more submissive manner to humble himself unto him, that thereby their Loves taking a deeper root, might bring forth the fruits of Unity and Peace; but when they met, the Dauphin, whose Mallice was irreconcileable, and whose mistrustful Jealosse did perswade him that the Duke would not be faithful, procured him treacherously to be Murthered, by the blow of a Battel-Ax in his presence, as he was about to kneel and pay him Homage. This was looked on by many as a just Judgment, because much in the same manner he had caused Lewis Duke of Orleance to be Murthered in the Tenth Year of King Henry the Fourth.

This made not amiss for King Henry, but hastened his advancement; for Fhilip, Son to the Murthered Duke, was so highly displeased, that he not only in his melancholy Anger determined forever to separate himfelf from his Innocent Dutchess, without any other reason or cause, than that she was Sister to the Dauphin, but as his fury abated, her Tears and the fober Advice of his Counfellours, brought him to better reason; so that for that time his Love continued to her as at first: Yet he resolved on Revenge another way, viz. By joyning his Interest with King Henry; for he was very powerful in Flanders, as well as Burgundy, and was able to give a confiderable check to France, but more especially to the Dauphins Interest; and to bring this about, he laboured to Reconcile the Kings of England and France; and in those his endeavours he was the more powerful.

1. Because his Wife was Daughter to the French King.
2. Be-

2. Because the Lady Catharine, who could do all with een Isabella, passionately desired to be Married to King

3. Because the Queen, for depriving her of her Treasure, d some other Affronts put upon her, had conceived a morbatred against the Dauphin, insomuch that she could not

dure to hear him Named.

4. Because the Dauphin was more Subtile, Cunning, afty, and Revengeful, Than Politick, Wise, or Valliant; And Lastly, Because the treacherous Murther of Burndy bad rendered him Abborred among the Neighbouring Finces, and for the most part in France.

And soon after this, by the means of the Duke and Dueen of France, matters so ripened towards a Peace, That it was Agreed King Henry should have an Interview with Charles the French King, his Queen, and Daughter, at Trois in Campaign; whither he went, accompanied with his Brothers, the Dukes of Clarence and Gloucester, the Earls of Warwick, Salisbury, Huntington, Longevile, Tankervile and Ewe; and to prevent any I reacherous Surprise, drew a Camp of 15000 Men lear the Place; and so luckey were their Consultations, hat within a few Days a strict Amity was made, and a sace Proclaimed between the two Kings, upon many tricles: But the Substance briefly was,

That the Crown of France and all its Rights, after e Death of King Charles and his Queen, should rein to King Henry and his Heirs forever; whereupon Married the Lady Catharine with great Pomp and lendour: So that the Salique Law of France was at stime made void. Yet the Pope being solicited to ifirm King Henry, would not consent to it: Hower the Articles of Peace and Agreement were Promed in both Kingdoms; so that King Henry being wore at leasure, and commanding for the French

Cc 4

King,

King, as being appointed Regent or Protector of France. he pursued the Dauphin from place to place, stripping him with little labour of many important Towns, Castles, and Fortresles; and in the strong Town of Moylin on the River Seine, they took the Lord Barbafon, and divers others, who were concerned in the Murther of the Duke of Burgundy; who being fent to Paris, were Tryed, Sentenced, and put to Death; and the Dutchess Dowager of Burgundy Appealing to a Grand Council in which the two Kings fat as Judges against the Daupbin and seven others, they were Summoned to appear at the Marble Table in Paris at a fixed Day; but failing to do it, as likewise in the Parliament foon after called, They were Banished the Realm. deprived of their Honours, Names, Titles, and Dignities whatfoever, and Proclaimed Enemies. This greatly perplexed the Dauphin: Yet going into Languedock, he was fuccoured and supported with Money Arms and other Necessaries, by the Earl of Arminack.

Almost all France being reduced to Obedience, the two Kings and Queens took leave; and Henry received in his way to England Homage of all the Nobles of the Dutchy of Normandy, and conferring high Honour and Titles on many, came to Callis, and from theme Sailed for England, where he was Joyfully received; and the February following Queen Catharine was Crowned at Westminster, with great Solemnity.

The Dauphin upon King Henry's departure, began to look up a little, and having made the Young Duke of Alanson his Lieutenant; the Duke of Clarence was left Lieutenant for Henry, who deceived by one Andrew Forgusa, a Treacherous Lombard, whom he too much Trusted, thinking to repress the French Forces, was drawn into their Ambush, and after a desperate Fight against four to one, the English were Overthrown near Blang;

Blangy; yet the French lost 1200 of their choicest Men; and of the English were slain the Duke of Clarence, the Earl of Tankervile, Sir Gilbert Umphervile, the Lord Ross, and near 2000 of less Note; and taken Prisoners the Earls of Suffolk, Sommerset, and Perch; the Lord Fitz-Walter, and others: But upon the approach of Sir Thomas Beaufort with a Band of Archers, the French hasted out of the Field with their Prisoners and Spoil, as having had hot work on it already, and not willing to try a fecond Encounter.

The King was much troubled at this Overthrow. and the death of his Brother; but refolving Revenge, he sent the Earl of Mountague to succeed him in the Command of the Provinces, and assembling a Parliament, caused to be laid before them the State of both Nations; whereupon to enable him in his Wars, the Temporality gave him one Fifteenth, and the Clergy two; and for Expedition, the Bishop of Winchester Advanced 20000l. and received it again out of the Tax Granted by Parliament; whereupon an Army confifting of 24000 Men was Transported under the Command of John Duke of Bedford, the King's Brother, driving the Dauphin from the Siege of Chartieres, from thence the Duke Marched to Paris, and was foon joyned by the Duke of Burgundy with 4000 Horse; nor was the King flow in following his Army, having with him James the Young King of Scots, who with his own People Besieged and Took Direux, and delivered it to King Henry, and so they chased the Dauphin out of all his strong Holds, compelling him to take Refuge in Berry, whither the King thought not fit to tire his Army in following him; but having taken in a great many places, repassed the Loire.

About this time Queen Catharine was delivered of a Son at Windsor; which News coming to the King, very much troubled him, because he had charged her not to Lye-in there; but being unexpectedly taken in Labour, necessity compelled her to do it. The King's Reason for it, was grounded on an old Prophecy, Predicting No Prince Fortunate that should be Born there: Whereupon, in a Passion he said to the Lord Fitz-Hugh, his Chamberlaine, Good God! I Henry of Monmouth shall have but a stort Reign, and Win much; but Henry of Windsor shall Reign long, and Loose all: But God's Will be done.

very

Soon after this, the King having Reduced the Isles of France, and almost all other Places, fell Sick, and unable to Travel: whereupon he committed the charge of the Army to his Brother John Duke of Bedford. Then calling together his Nobles, and fending for the Queen, he appointed the Duke of Bedford Regent of France, and Lieutenant General of Normandy; and his other Brother Humphry Duke of Glocester, Regent of England, and Protector of his Son's Person; Exhorting the Nobles to maintain the Friendship with the Duke of Burgundy, and always to be at Union among themselves: to be faithful to his Son and Queen, and never to conclude a Peace with the Dauphin till he fubmitted to his Son: Soon after this, he Dyed, August 31st Anno 1422 at Boice Le Vincenois in France, of a Burning Feavour, and Flux, in the 30th Year of his Age, when he had Reigned 9 Years, 5 Months, and 10 Days; and his Body being brought over, was Buried among his Noble Ancestors at Westminster, with extraordinary Solemnity.

In this Kings Reign those that held Wickliffe's Doctrine were sharply Persecuted, at the Instigation of the Roman Clergy; 73 languished in Prison, and Lawrence Redman, David Sawtree, William Jones, Thomas Brightwel, William Hawham, Ralph Greenburst, and John Schute, were

408

very mud not to L Labour, Reason f dicting I Whereur his Cham shall have Windsol

Will be do Soon a France, an to Trave the Army calling to he appoir and Lieut Brother A and Prote bles to m gundy, and to be faith clude a Pe Son: Soo

at Boice I and Flux, Reigned Body bein

Body being ble Ancel lemnity.

In this

rine were Roman Clei Redman, I wel, Willian were Burnt and Strangled in St. Giles Fields. And Sir John Old Castle, Stiled Lord Cobbam, being Condemned in Parliament, tho' he produced the Articles of his Belief, and offered to Prove them by his Sword in fingle Combate, according to the Word of God; neither that, nor the great Services he had done, could Protect him against the Clergy's Mallice; for being hung up in an Iron Frame, he was Burnt Alive in St. Giles Fields, being a Man truly Religious, Virtuous, and Valiant.

Remarks on the County of Suffer, &c.

Suffex is a very pleasant open County in most parts, and much advantaged by its lying open on its South side to the Sea; It produces a considerable sprinkling of Corn, flocks of Sheep, and many Large Cattle; Fruit great store, and much Pasture-Ground; It abounds in Butter, Cheese, and some Honey, Flax and Hops; on the West it is Bounded with Hampshire, on the North with Kent and Surry, and on the East with the Sea, and some little part of Kent: It contains I City, viz. Chichester, which is a Bishops See, 65 Hundreds, Parishes 312, Market Towns 17, 1 Castle, 2 Rivers, 10 Bridges, and 33 Parks.

It sends Members to Parliament 20, viz. Arundel 2, Bramber 2, Chichester 2, East Grinstead 2, Horesham 2, Lewis 2, Midhurst 2, New Shoreham 2, Steyning 2; and 2 Knights of the Shire: Besides the Cinque Ports, viz. Hastings 2, Rye 2, Seaford 2, and Winchelsea 2.

Chichester in this County is held to be Founded by Cissa a South Saxon, and the Bishoprick was Translated thither from Sesley by William the Conqueror; at Lewis King Ethelston Coined his Money, and a strong Castle was Built there by Earl Warren, and a Bloody Battel fought near it between King Henry and his Barons; at Pensey or Pevenfey the Conqueror Landed when he won England; and near Hastings the great Fight was fought between William and King Harold for the Kingdom, and the place is called to this day Battel-Field; at Buckstead the first Great Iron Guns in England were Cast: The Waters in this County produce the best Carp in the Island, and on the Sea Coast store of Lobsters are taken. Near Walsal are store of Lime Pits; Selley is famed for Cockles; near Tenderden Steeple is a Stone that sensibly appears to Grow by the falling of the Rain.

The Seats of the Nobility are Arundel Castle, belonging to the Duke of Norfolk; Buckhurs and Stoneland, belonging to the Earl of Dorset; part of Bolebrook, to the Earl of Thanet; Herst Monceux, to the Earl of Sussex; Cowdrey, Battel-Abby and Poynings, to the Lord Montague; Petworth-Place, to the Duke of Sommerset; Eridg, to the Lord Abergavenny; Up-Park, to the Lord Grey; and Chichester Palace, to the Bishop of the Diocess And many sightly Houses belonging to the Gentry, &c.

The Reign of HENRY the Sixth (commonly called Henry of Windsor.)

HENRY the Sixth, being at the Death of his Father not above three Months Old, a Parliament was foon after called, and he Crowned at Westminster, at five Months Old, the Queen holding him in her Lap whilst the Ceremony was performed, and likewise brought into the Parliament-House, where the Lords paid Homage to him as their Rightful Soveraign; a Speech on his behalf being made to them by the Queen, Exhorting them to be stedsaft and Unanimous in securing curing his Right, and opposing his Enemies, &c. which they promised to be, and endeavour to the utmost.

Not long after this, King Charles the Sixth Dying, the French Nobles began to bethink themselves, that it stood little with their Honour to be subject to a Prince of another Nation, whilst they had a Son of their King amongst them; and forgeting their Oaths and Fealty, they began on a fuddain to grow cold towards the English, and seemed desirous to shake off their Yoak; of which the Regent giving notice to his Brother in England, care was taken continually to fend him over Men and Money, to compell them, if necessity required it, to their Obedience; but first he used all manner of fair Means, minding them if they perfevered in their Loyalty, the happy conclusion would make them Rich and Fortunate, win to them the Love and Favour of their Young King, as he grew up and increased in Wisdom and Years, &c. However the Dauphin got himself Crowned by his Party, under the Title of Charles the Seventh; and with his small Army took the Field, fending the Lord Grandval to Besiege Pont-Melance on the River Seine, which he had the fortune to surprize before the English Garrison was aware of his coming, putting most he found therein to the Sword; but it was soon regained by the Earl of Salisbury, and the Lord Grandval swore Allegiance for his Ransom, to King Henry, but basely revolted as soon as he was Enlarged: Then the Earl took Senes; whereupon the Parisians sued to the New French King to assist them underhand, tho' at the same time they had for a colour fent some of their Citizens to King Henry, promising a continued Duty and Loyalty, for yet they found not matters ripe for an open Revolt: But whilst the Regent was Magnificently Celebrating his Nuptials with the Lady Ann Sister to the Duke of Burgundy, they secretly fecretly sent to Charles, Advertising him, That if he came speedily with any considerable Power, they would over-master the English Garrison, and deliver the City into his hands.

This greatly Rejoyced him; but whilst his Preparations were flow, the Conspiracy was made known to the Regent, who swiftly Marched his Army in at their Gates, seized on the chief Conspirators, and cansed them to be Executed in fundry places of the City placing a greater Garrison, which very much curbed them, bridling them more with the Castle of Pacy and Coursay, not far from thence, which he took, and strongly Fortified; and to prevent the Scots Aiding the French, James their King was fent home, who had been taken on the Seas, and a Prisoner at Large to the English many Years; yet the English Interest was something weakened by the Revolt of the Duke of Britainy, who fearing the Regent growing Powerful might bring him into subjection, joyned with the Dauphin, as did his Brother Aithur Earl of Yvrie, causing that Townin Normandy of which King Henry the Fifth had made him Captain, to Rebel; yet that and Vernoille, which had likewise Revolted, were soon Regained, and the French Armies that came to Relieve them, were Overthrown.

Soon after, the defeated Governour of Turie, whom the Dauphin had unworthily made Constable of France, Besieged St. James Town in Bayon, with 4000 Men, but the Besieged issuing out with nideous cries of St. George and the Earl Salisbury, who by his Martial deeds was grown Terrible to the French, that Army being seized with a fear that the Earl was entered with his Army on the other side, and about to break-in upon them, all in consusion threw away their Arms and sled, so a handful of Men pursuing, a great many of them leaped leaped into the River and were Drowned, others were flain, and all the Rich Plunder of the Camp fell to the English. But whilst we thus Triumphed in France, a Mischief had like to have marred all at home, by a difcord that happened between the Duke of Gloucester and his Unkle the Bishop of Winchester: But the Regent leaving the Earl of Warwick his Lieutenant General in France, came timely over, and made them Friends in a Parliament he called; in honour of which Reconciliation, the Young King held a folemn Feast, and the Regent Dubbed him a Knight; after which, the King made Richard, Son to the late Earl of Cambridge. Duke of York, and Restored John Moubray Earl Marshal, to his Fathers Dutchy of Norfolk; and the Bishop of Winchester going to Callis, met the Popes Bull which Invested him with the Dignity of a Cardinal, which highly pleased him; and new Forces being Levied in England, were fent to strengthen the Armies in France; for that a great number of Towns that had Revolted, were Regained, and many French Nobles put to their Ransoms, which raised Money to maintain the War.

Orleance being now the strongest place the French held, the Earl of Salisbury laid Siege to it; but after two Months lying before it, the Earl from a Watch—Tower taking a view of the Town where it was easiest to be Assaulted, was slain by a shot from a Culverin; being the first Noble Englishman ever known to be kill'd by a Great Shot; and with his Death, the Courage of the English much abated. However, the Earl of Suffolk succeeded him in the Command, who sending out Sir John Falstaff to procure Provisions for the Camp, the Lord Delabreth in his return intending to surprise him with a great Power, was beaten by his small Party, as being catched again with the Agincourt Trap, by Goaring their Horses on Irons Pointed, whilst

return

whilst the English retired safe behind them, and with their Arrows made a miserable Slaughter of 25000 his Men, taking 11000 Prisoners, and a great Book whereupon the Besieged in Orleance offered to delive up the City to the Duke of Burgundy, if he would take them into his immediate Protection, which he conserted to do, if the Regent would Agree to it! But when he proposed it, the Regent told him, He could not, so fince King Henry had been at such great Charge to reduce it to Extreamity, and at a point to Tield, it was altogethed reasonable it should obey no other Soveraign but him. This much perplexed the Duke, and made him ever after lessen his Affections to the English, till he quite fell off, and to their great detriment joyned with the adverse party.

The Citizens of Orleance finding their Proposal fruit less, sent to the Dauphin for speedy Succour, resolving to hold out to the last Extreamity, and the Watchesof the English Camp being careless, as expecting every day it would Surrender, in the depth of Night they thrust several Thousand Men in, with store of Provifions; fo that within a few days they boldly Sallied with their main Strength, won a strong Pass, and sew 600 English that Guarded it, but Assaulting a Bastile where the Lord Talbot lay, he fell on them with fuch fury, that leaving half their Number Dead, the rest fled fearful into the Town. But the next day the Earl of Suffolk, by reason of the new Supplies, seeing no probability of winning the Place, raised the Sirge, and put the greater part of his Army into Garrisons; but whilst himself lay at Jargeaux, the French won it, and took him Prisoner, and many Noble Prisoners were Slain, because the French hotly contended among themfelves to whom they rightly belonged; and about 25000 French under the Earl of Vendosm and others, meeting meeting with the Lords Scales, Talbot, and Hungerford who Fought with them desperately; but not having above 5000 English, they were Overthrown, and the Lords taken Prisoners; yet the French magnifying their Victory, many finall Towns and Castles Revolted to them, as Trois, Rhemes, Challons, and many others; which made the Regent resolve to give Charles Battel, sending to defie him as a Usurper and Traytor to his hord and Master; and tho' he drew out his Army and made fome semblance as if he accepted the Challenge, yet he shifted and fled from place to place, and could not be brought to a fair Field; and the Towns still Revolting, it was thought Expedient to fend for King Henry over, thinking his Presence might keep the rest in Obedience; and accordingly coming to Paris, he was Crowned there King of France, with much Royal Pomp and Solemnity: Yet this stopped not the current of the Revolt; whereupon no fooner was the King returned to England, but the Regent hastned into Normandy to fecure his Interest there; for things run so strongly, he knew not whom he might trust.

Whilst these things were doing, Charles who had been likewise Crowned King of France, with many Flatteries and large Promises of Honour, Riches, and Promotion, laboured to withdraw the Duke of Burgundy from King Henry's Interest; yet at this time, tho' he was not well affected to the English, by reason of the distaste he conceived at the Siege of Orleance, he refused his offers, and acquainted the Regent with the whole Intrigue; so that when Charles perceived this device was fruitless, he drew down his whole Army before Paris, but after many Assaults, he was beaten off; with a great slaughter of his Men, by the English in Garison there, and some few Citizens as were well assected to King Henry; for which the Regent at his return gave them many Thanks and Rewards; at which they seemed greatly to rejoyce, promising much,

but in the sequel performing little.

These troublesome Wars having held a long time. the Princes of Europe mediated for Peace, which only came to a fix Years Truce, and yet that was broke much fooner, upon the death of Ann, the Regents Dutches, Sister to the Duke of Burgundy, and his Marrying the Lady Jaquet, Daughter to the Earl of St. Paul. For as much as hereupon the Duke of Burgundy's Love to the English more and more declined, and the bond of Affinity that tied him more strictly to the Regent, being fundered by the Death of his Sifter; and now the French taking all advantages, secretly conveyed 200 Men into the Castle of Roan in Normandy; but they were Assaulted by the Garrison with such timely Courage (for they had been Introduced by the Treachery of the Deputy-Governour, as Friends) that they were beaten into the Dungeon, from whence they were fentenced some to the Gallows, others to a different manner of Death, by Cruel Torments; and those that fped best, were put to great Ransoms.

Hereupon the Regent took the Field, and being Reinforced by 800 Men at Arms, brought over by the Lord Talbot, who had fometime before, by his Ranfom being paid, been fet at liberty; and often urged the French to a Battel, which they declined: In the mean while, the Boors in Normandy rose in a tumultuous Rebellion, but being Overthrown by the Earl of Arundel, about 1000 of them Slain, and several of their Ringleaders Executed, this disturbance was quieted. But as the Earl went to recover St. Rue, which had Revolted, attempting to take in by the way Greborie Castle, he was shot in the Ancle with a Culverin Ball, and being taken Prisoner, soon after Dyed of his Wound. The Duke of Bourbon, who had been taken Prisoner at the Battel of Agincourt, after fifteen Years Imprisonment. paid his Ransom; but the day he intended to Imbarke for Prance, Dyed at London. And now after many lealousies between the Regent and Duke of Burgundy. their Friends laboured to Reconcile them, and they feemingly were again united in frict Amity; But going together into the Town of St. Omer's, the Regent expected the first Visit, as due to his Character and Dignity, but the Duke being Soveraign Lord of that Town, supposed he should be Checked by his Subjects for such a dishonourable condesention; thereupon they declined the Visits, and both left the Town in much Anger, and forthwith the Duke of Burgundy entered into a strict League with Charles, who had taken on him the stile of King of France. After this, St. Dennis, and other Towns were Surprised, or otherways Taken by the French, but many of them again Retaken; and those that were not looked on as Teneable. Dismantled: And now the Regent by reason of his unwearied Toil. falling into a desperate Languishment, Dyed; and was Buried in a stately Monument, erected for him in our Lady's Church in Roan; and Richard Duke of York appointed Regent in his stead, against the Mind of the Kings nearest Friends and best Counsellours, who were not Ignorant of his Aspiring and pretensions to the Crown: Soon after Paris Revolted, and another Rebellion was raised in Normandy, but soon suppressed by the Lords Talbot, Scales, and others, and the Duke of Burgundy laid Siege to Callis, but was compelled to raise it and fly by Night, upon notice the Protector was sending great Forces from England to Relieve it; and 20000 Men foon after Landed, Burning and Wasting the Dukes Countries of Flanders, and Arthois. But now the French began to deal with the Scots, the better Dd 2

to Favour their Deligns, and James the First of Scotland forgetting the Benefits he had received from King Henry the Fifth, entered England with 30000 Men, and Belieged Roxborough Castle; which was valiantly De fended by Sir Ralph Grey: But upon the approach of the Earl of Northumberland, he raised his Siege, and sed

About this time Queen Catharine, Mother to King Henry, Married Omen Tutber, a goodly Gentleman, descended from Cadwallader the last of the British Kings; and by her had Iffice two Sons, viz. Edmund and Jaffer Edmund was by King Henry created Earl of Richmond, and took to Wife the Lady Margaret fole Daughter to John Duke of Sommerfit, and on her he got King Henry the Seventh; and Jasper was created Earl of Pembrook. And now the Kings Council fo prevailed with him, that Richard Duke of York was discharged from his Regency in France, and the Earl of Warnet appointed in his Itead; who beat the Duke of Burgundy from the Siege of Croy, when in his flight Sir Thomas Tyrrel falling in his Rear, took his Cannon, and the greater part of his Baggage, finding in Plate and Money 20000l. And the Earl of Mortagn, Son to Edmund Duke of Sommerset, Assaulting the Galtle of St. Augu in Mayn, took it by Storm, and put to the Sward 100 Scots, and Hanged all the Frenchmen he found therein because having Sworn Allegiance to King Henry, they Revolted.

Whilst these things were doing, the Elder Son of Charles raised a strong Faction, and Rehelled against him, and by publick Edicts divulged the infufficiency of his Father to Rule that Kingdom. This Glord threatened a coming Storm, and begat the Question in his Father and his Counfellours of State, Whetherit was most proper to attempt the curing this Mallady by Civil War, & letting of Blood, or by Discretion and Policy, without Blows But the Latter was approved, and Proclamations made by the French King to Prohibit all his Subjects on pain of Death, not to yield any Obedience to the Dauphins Commands, Pardoning fuch as by his perswasion had undertaken his Service; so that divers Letters and Messages passing between them, an Accommodation was made.

SENGLAND.

Whilest this Difference lasted, the English endeavoured the regaining Paris; but that failing, John Lord Clifford surprised Panthois, by Attiring his Men in White, and passing the Ditches hard Frozen and covered with Snow, scaling the Walls and killing the Watch. And now the noble Earl of Warwick Dying, the Duke of York a second time was made Regent of France; yet the French by Encroachments and Revolts of many Towns, encouraged (when their Courage failed) by one Joan of Arc, a Martial Maid, who pretended the was fent by Heaven to affilt her Bleeding Country, and indeed Leading the French Troops, she did many brave Exploits, till taken by the English, after the had received many Wounds, they tryed her and burnt her for a Witch, tho' great Ransoms were offered for her by the French; and this they the rather did, not only for that the beat them off from the Siege of Orleance, and worsted them in many Skirmishes, but because the French conceived a superstitious confidence that whilst she Lived, their Proceedings would be succefsful and prosperous: Yet both Potentates in the End, on the French recovering Ponthois, growing weary of so tedious a War, that had wasted their People and Treasure, a Conference was appointed at Callice, and here they often confulted about Peace; but in conlufion adjourned the Negotiation, because King Henry's Demands were looked on as unreasonable in Three Points, viz.

1. In regard of the great Ransom demanded for the Duke of Orleance. 2. For that the peaceable and quiet possession of the Dutchies of Aquitaine and Normandy were required without any Homage or Soveraignty acknowledged to the Crown of France. 3. For that the surrendering and yielding up into King Henry's hands all such Cities, Towns, Forts, and Territories in France as the English had at any time enjoyed within the space of thirty Years past, was required.

However tho' the Parley was dissolved, yet the Duke of Orleance being brought to Calice, tho' King Henry the Fifth on his Death-Bed had commanded he should not be Ransomed, he was Ransomed by the Duke of Burgundy, and Honourably convey'd to the French Court. And now to make way for Calamities at Home, as well as Misfortunes Abroad, a Quarrelarose between the Cardinal of Winchester and Duke of Gloucester; for the Duke being Protector of the Realm, making Complaints against the Cardinals Acting many things contrary to the Interest of the King and Kingdome, without any Warant, or making the King Acquainted with it, The Cardinal in Revenge procured the Dutchess of Gloucester to be accused of Sorcery and Witchcraft, holding correspondence with Witches, to take away the King's Life; and tho' most believed there was nothing at all in it, yet the Cardinal being backed by the Clergy, procured her upon groundless fuggestions, to do publick Penance twice in the City of London, and to be doomed to perpetual Imprisonment; and the better to colour the matter, some who were pretended to be her Associates, suffered the Flames.

After the refusal of some other Matches, as the Earl of Arminack's Daughter, &c. King Henry (by the means and procurement of the Earl of Suffolk, Bribed by the French French King) Married the Lady Margaret, whom he received by Suffolk his Ambassador at the Hands of the French King, and Reyner her Father, Duke of Anjou, Titular King of Sicily, Naples, and Jerusalem, tho' with her he had little or no Dowry; which made the Match be much difliked by the Nobles and Commons. Yet for this Service the Earl was created Duke of Suffolk, and stood high in the Queen's favour; and they foon found means to difinifs the good Duke of Gloucester from his Protectorship, after he had a long time faithfully Served the King and Kingdom. And foon after, the deposed Protector, by the contrivance of his Grand Enemies, was Accused (in a Parliament assembled by the Queen in the King's Name at Bury) of High Treason, and committed to the Tower; where the next day he was found dead in his Bed, to the great Grief of almost all the Kingdom, as being a Pious, Valliant, and Virtuous Prince; it was generally concluded he was Smothered, for no Wound was found about him: But God was not flow in requiring his Blood at the hands of those that were undoubtedly the contrivers of his fall; for upon the removal of this great and beloved Statesman, Richard Duke of York found an open way to thrust in, and set up his pretensions of Title to the Crown, making himself strong in Friends and Treasure, the better to carry on his defigns. So that being now Intent on his own Advancement, he grew carless of his Command, which turned greatly to the advantage of the French; for the Truce no sooner expired, but they came strongly prepared into the Field, and making three Armies, took in divers little Towns; and this success emboldened them, that holding secret correspondence with the Inhabitants of Roan in Normandy, they drew an Army before that City; whereupon the Citizens compelled the Dd 4

the Earls of Sommerset and Shrewsbury to Surrender the place; having leave to depart to Caen with all their Goods: Soon after Hareslew, and divers other places were lost.

A Rebellion about this time breaking out in Ireland. the Duke of Sommerset was made Regent or Lieutenant in Normandy, and the Duke of York fent over to quell the Irish Rebells, which he easily effected. But this dividing, weakening the English Strength, the Kings Army in Normandy was Overthrown, and Caen Loft, and foon after all Normandy; and now Divisions happened at Home; for the Duke of Suffolk the Queens Favourite, being Envied by the People, they were Instigated by the Duke of York, and his Faction, to make many grievous Complaints against him, upon the mifcarriages in Government; whereupon he was (to please them) colourably committed to the Tower, yet had his Liberty at will; which fo Incenfed them, that making a Fellow their Captain, nicknamed Blewbeard, they fell into Rebellion; but were foon Quelled, and some of their Ringleaders Executed, the rest were Pardoned. Hereupon the King and Queen thinking to reconcile all Differences, a Parliament was called; but contrary to their expectation, the Commons craved Justice on the Duke of Suffolk, and upon his Affociates, viz. James Fines, Lord Say, and Treasurer of England, John Bishop of Salisbury, and some others; whereupon he was Banished for Five Years; but as he Sailed for France, being waylaid, he was taken by an English Man of War, brought to Dover, and had his Head Choped off on the fide of the Ship's Boat; supposed to be done by the Duke of York's contrivance; yet he was not Lamented by any but the King and Queen, because it was verily supposed he had a hand in the Duke of Gloeffer's death. And now the Duke of York (though in Ireland)

Ireland) did by his Agents here flir up a Rebellion among the Plebeans, whose Ringleader was Jack Cade, who fally Named himself John Mortimer right Heir to the Crown; but the King's Forces dispersed them, many being Slain, and Cade being Proscribed, and a Thousand Marks set on his Head, it was soon after brought to the King.

of ENGLAND.

The Duke of York being defeated in this, by the Advice of his Friends returned out of Ireland withour the King's leave, and confulting with the Earls of Warwick, Devonshire, Salisbury, and others, they resolved to complain in Parliament of the Queen's Milgovernment; who by reason of the Kings Weakness and Imbecility. did what she pleased, as also did her Favourits, the chief of which now was the Duke of Sommerset; but his complaints not taking such effect as he supposed, upon new Counfels he took other Measures, railing an Army under pretence of removing Evil Counsellours from the King, charging the Duke of Sommerfet with oppressing the People, and the many Milcarriages in France during his Regency, occasioning the loss of Normandy and Aquitain, with many other things. The King upon this fearing the worst, raised likewise an Army: whereupon the Duke of Tork fent a submissive Message and Letter to him. That he intended nothing against his Royal Person, nor against the State, but only craved, That in Parliament the Duke of Sommerset might be Tryed, and caused to Answer to such Crimes as would be Objected against him; and the Duke of Sommer set upon this, being for flew fake, committed to the Tower, the Duke of York dissolved his Army, and came to the King; where contrary to his expectation, he met with the Duke of Sommerset, who Accused him of Treason, for that without the Kings Leave or Commandment, he had raised an Army, with which he intended tended to have Murthered his Soveraign, and made himself Inheritor and Possessor of the Crown: Whereupon the Duke was Arrested, but in a few days Released.

Whilst these things happened in England, the Lords of Guyan and Aquitain threw off their Subjection to France, and fent fecret Messages to King Henry, That if he would furnish an Army to Protect them, they would re-deliver those Provinces into his Possession: upon which, the Earl of Shrewsbury was fent with 3000 Men, who received them into the Kings Protection: But foon after, being fought with by 20000 French, he was Overthrown and Slain, with almost all his followers; and thereupon these Provinces were utterly Lost. In the mean while the Queen was delivered of a Son, whom she caused to be Named Edward.

The Duke of York having strengthened his Faction, made grievous Complaints to the Lords in Parliament against the Duke of Sommerset, so that in the Queen's Chamber he was Arrested for High Treason, and conveyed to the Tower. But the Parliament being suddainly Adjourned, and the King by many protestations faithfully promising, that at some other time he should Answer those Accusations, he was set at Liberty, and made Captain of the Castle and Town of Callice, which made the Duke of York Leavy another Army, and fought with the King at St. Albans, and so prevailed, that the Duke of Sommerset, the Earls of Northumberland and Stafford, the Lord Clifford, and about 8000 others, were Slain; the King was also hurt in the Neck with an Arrow, and taken Prisoner; but used with much dissembled Civility, and brought to London; where at the Duke of York's entreaty he called a Parliament, and the Earl of Salisbury was made Chancellour, The Earl of Warwick Captain of Callice; The Duke of of ENGLAND. Took was likewise appointed Protector of the Kings Person, and of the Realm; but the Queen being perswaded he Aimed at the Crown, they were soon displaced.

Whilft these Differences continued, many disorders happened; The Houses of Merchant-Strangers were Rifled and Robbed in London, and the French greatly Annoy'd our Merchants on the Seas, which compelled the Queen (who was Wife, Politick, and of a Masculine Spirit) to use a Stratagem, which was to get the King to retire into the North for his Pleasure, and fent Letters to the Three Lords immediatly to come and Confer with him, who delay'd not to do it; but having fecret notice their destruction was intended, they timely Fled, and prevented their Ruin. Yet the King advised by his grave Counsellours, laboured for an Accommodation of matters, appointing for this purpose a General Meeting of all his Lords at London, who came strongly Guarded with Friends and Servants, where the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, and other great Clergymen, used such Perswasions and Arguments, That the King, Queen, and all the Lords, were pleased in friendly and in kind fort to consent that all Jars and Discontents should be laid aside; and by Instruments in Writing a Reconciliation was outwardly Confirmed. but not with any hearty goodwill on either fide; yet it greatly Rejoyced the People, who thought it Real. After this, the King rod through the City with the Crown on his Head, the Duke of York conducted the Queen, and the Lords of either Faction rod two and two together.

Not long after this, one of the Kings Servants was Wounded in the Court by a Gentleman belonging to the Earl of Warwick, who escaping, the rest of the Kings Servants fell upon the Earl as he came from the Council-Table_

Table, but he Escaped by Water, and was learched after in London in order to be fent to the Tower; yet he was not there but fled into Yorkshire, Complaining to his Father the Earl of Salisbury, of the Injury that had been done to him; who Advised him immediatly to repare to his Government of Callies, and then the Earl of Salisbury raised an Army, and Marched towards London, of which the Queen had no sooner notice, but fhe fent the Lord Audley to oppose him; fo that the Battel being joyned, after a sharp Fight the Lord Audier and 2200 of his Men was Slain, the rest slying and leaving Salisbury Master of the Field; upon this success. the Duke of Tork conceiving he should gain what he aimed at, raifed an Army on the Marches of Wales, and Joyning with Salisbury near Ludlow, the King's Army came in fight of them; but the Lords fearing they were Betrayed by one Andrew Trollop and John Blunt, two famous Captains, trained up in the French Wars, who had been brought over by the Earl of Warnick, because after they had shewed them advantageously how to Attack the Kings Army, they had on feruple of Conscience deserted and gone over to him; raised their Camp in the Night, and secretly Retiring, disbanded their Army, and shifted for themselves; yet several of their Captains being Taken, were Executed, but the common Soldiers Pardoned, and the flying Lords Proclaimed Arch Traytors to the King and Kingdom; their Goods, Offices, and Lands Sequestered to the Kings Use, &c. And the King made Henry, Son to the Duke of Sommerfet, Slain in the Battel of St. Albans, Captain of Callice; and now the King on good Advice Assembled a Parliament, in which the Lords of the Torkist's Faction were Attainted of High Treason; and to prevent the Returning of fuch as were Fled beyond the Seas, the Ports were Fortified, and strictly Guarded:

Guarded; yet they returned, took Sandwish, and in a short time raised an Army of 2,000 Men; with which they Marched towards London; to secure which, the Lord Scales was fent by the King ; but the Lord Mayor refused him admittance, daying, He was able to defend the City, and would do it, seeing the King had committed it to his sharge; to that after many Countermarches, the Army the King had raised, and that of the Lords; met near Northampton, where the King was Overthrown and taken Prisoner, 2000 of his Men were Slain, and of Note Humpbery Duke of Buckingham, John Earl of Shrewsbury, Thomas Lord Egremont, and John Viscount Beamont, whereupon, the Queen, with the Young Prince and Duke of Sommerfet, and into Scorland, and were kindly received; the King was conveyed to the Tower, and the Lord Scales attempting to pass the River in disguise, was discovered by the Wherryman, who cut off his Head and less his Body on the Sands; and Thomas Thorp, the Second Baron of the Exchequer, shaving his Crown, and putting himfelf in the Habit of a Monk, was taken flying to the Queen, and being brought to the Earl of Warnick he committed him to the Tower, where he remained a long time after.

The Duke of Kork informed of this Victory, hafted from Ireland, and produced a Parliament to be Assembled in the Kings Name at London, where placing himself in the Throne, he declared his Right to the Crown, Dic.

That he was Son and Heir of Ann, Paughter to Roger Morrimer Earl of March, who was Son and Heir to Philippa, fole Daughter and Heires to Linnel Duke of Clarence, Elder Brother to John Duke of Lancaffer, Great Grandfather to the present things the Sixth; and then proceeded to lay before them the Mischiefs and and Losses that had befallen the Kingdom by misblacing the Succession, by reason God was Angry with them for so doing; and to prevent many more he de fired it might be restored in the Direct Line.

When the Lords and Commons had deliberated upon this weighty Affair, the contrary Party (more out of fear than conscience, goodwill, or affection) agreed with the Duke's Faction; and it was Enacted. That King Henry during his Natural Life should retain the Name and Honour of a King; and that the Duke of York should be Proclaimed Heir apparent to the Crown. and be Protector of the Kings Person and of the Realm, and should have the present possession of the Crown delivered to him, if at any time King Henry, his Friends, Allies, or Favorites, on his behalf attempted to infringe this Ad, which was Agreed to and Confirmed by their Oaths.

The Duke of York by this means being got near to what he aimed at, required the Queen, the Dukes of Sommer set and Exeter, the Earl of Devonshire, the Lords Clifford, Ross, and others, immediatly to repair from the North, whither they were fled, and confer with the King; but instead of so doing, being much displeased with the Proceedings of the Parliament, they Levied an Army and with it advanced towards London: The Duke of York had foon notice of it, and Marched with all speed to oppose them, leaving the King in the custody of the Duke of Norfolk and Earl of Warwick; and the two Armies met near Wakefield: Where the Duke being too weak, was perswaded to stay for the arrival of Edward Earl of March, his Son, who was advancing from the borders of Wales with an Army to Joyn him; but being carried headlong by his forward Destiny, which designed him not to be a King, though he wanted but one step to the Throne, he forthwith gave the onfet; but within an Hours space, almost three Thousand

Thousand of his Companions were Slain, together with himself; and his Youngest Son the Earl of Rutland, not exceeding 12 Years, who kneeling on his Knees defired Mercy, but was cruelly Stabbed to the Heart by the Lord Clifford; who horribly Swore, By that All be would be Revenged for his Fathers Death: So that upon this the rest of the Army Fled: The Duke of York's Head being cut off by those that found him dead in the Field, was presented to the Queen, who caused a Paper Crown to be set on it in derision, and placed it on the Walls of the City of York, Beheading the Earl of Salisbury, and others of his Favorites, who were taken Prisoners, and placing their Heads with his to bear him company.

The Queen supposing now her fears were over by the flaughter of her Capital Enemies, Advanced towards London, overthrowing the Earl of Warwick, and fuch Forces as he had gathered to oppose her, by which means King Henry was fet at Liberty, and Joyfully received by her: But then News came that the Earl of March, who hearing of his Fathers death, had taken on him the Title of Duke of York, had Overthrown the Earls of Pembrook, Ormond, and Wiltshire, Beheaded Owen Tuther, the King's Father-in-Law, who had Married his Mother the Queen Dowager, and divers others, whose Heads he placed in the Room of his Fathers, and other Heads of his Friends, which the Queen had caused to be set on the Walls of York.

This suddain Turn of Fortune made the Queen draw out her Army and hasten towards him, having raised an Army of 60000 Men, and near a Town called Towton, the New Duke of York and Earl of Warwick met her with near 50000; so that a cruel and bloody Battel enfued, wherein on both sides about 36000 were flain, among whom were the Earls of Northumberland, Westmorland, the Lord's Dacres, Wells. Clifford, &c. The Dukes of Sommer fet and Exeter faved themselves by flight, but the Earl of Dewonshire with fundry others of Note were made Prisoners.

Northum-

Upon this great Overthrow ( for it fell on the Kings side, who was always Unfortunate in the Field) he with the Queen and Prince fled into Scotland, where they were favourably received, and in lieu of their kind Entertainment delivered Berwick to the Scots, which they much defired, and attempted often times to gain, tho' beaten off with great loss; so that the Duke of York being every where Received as King, may be said here to put an end to Hemy's Reign (tho' he Lived much longer) when he had Reigned 38 Years, 6 Months, and 3 Days, and was after Stabbed in the Tower by Richard Duke of Glocester, King Edward the Fourths Brother, Anno 1471 in the 49th Year of his Age as will appear more largely in the Reign of that King: His Body was first Buried in the Abby of Chertsey in Surry, then by King Henry the Seventh at Winchester, after removed none can tell where, as not being found in History. In this Kings Reign from the beginning of April to Allhallontide, fell fuch abundance of Rain and the Corn and Hay Harvest were atterly spoiled; which occasioned a dearth among Men and Cattle.

Anno 1435 the Thames was fo Frozen, that no homeward-bound Ships could enter it, and Games and Pastimes were Exercised on the Ice.

Amo 1438 all the Lions in the Tower of London dyed; and in the 23d Year of the King, on Candlemas Eve, terrible Thunders and Lightnings happened, by which the Church of Baldock in Hurtford bire, and that of Walden in Effex were greatly fluttered, and St. Paul's Steeple in London fet on Fire.

Anno

430 Nort Cliffe them fundi North King Lichfeld B he w PART 0F they kind STAFFORD Z which to g SHIRE. Duke may OF Corpson \ Angh Cross he Li Hoppsford LECESTER 6 M PART Tow Four Age  $\mathbf{OF}$ King Cher Win WARWICK bein OF Ir Wediley C Allh NorT: SHIRE. der Prors Hardeit Marfton Wether Pillerson Warr mleighton and ed a Marylor Officer Start of SHIRE. Ayon fl. wai SHIRE Stones Salahy Compton

A Shire stones Salahy Compton

a b.C. SHIP ftin English Miles GLOUCESTER i.P. of Worcester S. b.P. of Oxford S. c.P. of Gloucester dye Eve ∃by that Pau

Anno Dom. 1459, the Useful and Noble Science of Dinting was found out by a Soldier, at Magunce in Germany, and brought into England about 12 Years after, by William Caxton a Mercer.

Remarks on Warwickshire, &c.

W Arwickshire is an Inland County, very pleasantly situate, well Wooded, and incumbered but with sew Hills: It is Bounded with Staffordshire, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, Oxfordshire, and Gloucestershire: It abounds with Cattle, Corn, Wooll, Cheese, Butter, pleasant Pastures, Fish and Fowl. It contains 5 Hundreds, in which are 158 Parishes, 14 Market Towns, 4 Castles, 10 Rivers, 10 Bridges, 13 Parks, and 2 Forrests: It sends Members to Parliament 6, viz. Coventry City 2, Warwick 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Warwick, the Shire Town, is of very Antient foundation; held to be Builded by Gurguntus a British King, 375 Years before the Birth of our Saviour; the Castle yet retaining very many marks of great Antiquity, and Memorable for the Residence of the Renowned Guy Earl of Warwick, where is kept a Vessel called his Pot, and usually filled with good Liquor to be Drunk by all comers, on memorable Days. It is commodiously situate on the River Avon.

Coventry jointly with Litchfield make a Bishoprick; on one of its Gates, called Gissord-Gate, is the Bone of a Monstrous Beast fastned, said to be that of the buge Boar Guy slew, who with his Snout turned up a deep place now called Swanes Mear.

At Wolney, Anno 1469, King Edward the Fourth was taken Prisoner by the great Earl of Warwick, and his Forces scattered. At Backlow Hill, Pierce Gaviston was taken and Beheaded. The other Places of Note are Henly, Southam, Sutton, Atherstone, Kyneton, Roughy, Aul-chester, Bitford. The River Tame abounds with Fifth and finely branches the Northern part of the County, as Avon does most of the rest, over which leading to Warwick is a fightly and strong Bridge. At Lemington a Salt Spring arises a great distance from the Sea. At Newenham or Menhem Reges is a Petrifying Well. Snale Stones, Star Stones, and Cockel Stones, are found near Shugbury.

The Noblemens Seats are Milcot-House, belonging to the Earl of Dorset; Compton-Place, to the Earl of Northampton; Newnham Padox, to the Earl of Denby: Wormleighton, to the Earl of Sunderland; Comb, to the Earl of Craven; Ragley and Luddington, to the Earl of Conway; Hewel Grange, to the Earl of Plymouth; Ettington, to the Lord Ferrers; Warwick Castle, Knowel, and Beuchamps Court, to the Lord Brook; Fletchamstead and Stonely, to the Lord Leigh; Wotenwaven and Aln-Lodg, to the Lord Carrington; besides many pleasant Seats of the Gentry, sightful to Travellers.

The Reign of King EDWARD the Fourth.

E DWARD Duke of York having prevailed over the Lancostrians and put to death many of his the Lancastrians, and put to death many of his great Enemies, Marched Triumphantly to London, where he was by the Citizens joyfully received, and Proclaimed King on the 4th of March Anno 1461, and the 19th of June following he was Crowned at Westminster; but his carriage towards the Citizens afterward made them repent their forwardness to take part with him against King Henry, who had always loved them, and been their constant Friend. Soon after his Coronation, he called a Parliament, and laboured therein to settle the Affaires of the Kingdom which were much disordered by the Civil War. And all former Statutes made in the Reign of Henry, which Attainted him and his Adherents of High Treason, were Cancelled and made void. The Earl of Oxford, and Sir Ambrey Vere his Son, were in this Parliament Attainted of fundry Treasons, and lost their Heads; and to strengthen his Interest, he conferred Titles of Honour on a great many of his Friends. Whereupon feeing little hopes left of King Henry's Recovering his Crown, the Duke of Sommerset, Sir Ralph Piercey, and others, fubmitted themselves to Edward's Mercy, and were received into favour; but upon notice the Queen was arrived from France in the North, and by the Aid of the Scots had raifed a confiderable Army, they fecretly fled to her.

Edward had soon notice of these Proceedings, and fent the Lord Montacute before him with a considerable Force, himself followed with the rest of the Army? and this Lord with fuch resolution and bravery set upon the Lords Hungerford and Ross, that at the begining of the Fight they Cowardly fled away; but Sir Ralph Piercey, and other stout Commanders, who preferred an honourable death before a shameful desertion of their Men, fought it out bravely till they lost their Lives in the Field, and left the Victory to their Adversary.

The Lord Montacute flushed with this success, and thursting after fame, without staying for the King, set upon Queen Margaret's Army, and after a bloody Fight put her to the Rout; and Henry Duke of Summer set; William Tallboies (who stiled himself Earl of Kent) the Lords Ross, Mollines and Hungerford, Sir Henry Nevel, Sir Thomas Wentworth, and Sir Richard Tunstal, being Taken, were in several places Beheaded, and 27 others were shortly after Executed in divers manners. But after this Overthrow, Henry Escaped to Scotland with his half-Brother Jasper Earl of Pembrook, Sir Ralph Grey and others, and hereupon all the Castles in the North fell into King Edward's hands.

For this Service done by the Lord Montacute, the King would have given him the Earldom of Northum. terland; but upon that Earls submitting, though he had fought against him, he restored him to his Lands and Honours, giving Montacute in lieu of his Relignation, the Title of a Marquess; and to encourage his Soldiers. and fuch as had deserved well, he bestowed on them great Bounties out of the confiscated Estates of his Enemies, causing many advantagious Laws to be Enacted. the better to fettle him on the Throne, by gaining the affection of the People. Soon after this, King Henry returning disguised into England, was discovered, taken Prisoner, and sent to Edward, who committed him to close ward in the Tower.

King Edward now thinking himself firmly fixed in the Throne, by the advice of the Estates, after the proposals of several Matches, concluded to send his great Friend Richard Nevill, Earl of Warwick, to require the Lady Bona, Daughter to Lewis Duke of Savoy, and Sifter to Charete Queen to Lewis the Eleventh King of France, in Marriage; the Earl was fent over with a very splended Equipage, and with many Rich presents to the Lady; and was so prosperous in his Negotiation, that all things he had in Commission were soon agreed to, the Portion assigned, and the Instruments for settling her Dowry ratified; but this wrought much mischief to King Edward: For going to Recreate himself at his Mannor of Grafton, he there cast his Eyes on the Beautiful Elizabeth, Widow to Sir John Grey, flain in King Henry's cause at the Battel of St. Albans; and by no perswasions being able to gain her for his Concubine, though though he had freely granted her her Husbands Estate, which she Petitioned to him for, so enflamed was he with the defire of Enjoying her, (and the plainly telling him. As she thought ber self of too mean a condition to be his Wife; so she thought her self much above his demands of being his Concubine; and tho' her Life might be at his dispose, ber Chastity was not to be violated but with that Cumpulsion that would pull down vengance on his Head) that laying aside the thoughts of any other, he Married her; promoting all her Kindred to Dignities and Honours, creating the Lord Rivers her Father Earl Rivers, and High Constable of England; her Son Sir Thomas Grey, Marquess of Dorset, and preferred him and others to Rich Heiresles of Noblemen, and did many other things for them, that displeased his nearest Friends: For no fooner the Duke of Clarence his Brother heard of the Earl of Warwick's being greatly displeased at the Kings having put that affront on him, but they met and confulted which way to constrain the King to lay aside these new Favourites; and so great was the Earl of Warwick's Anger for the difference the King had made him incur in Foreign Courts, by this Marriage, which utterly disannulled that which he had treated about, that he cast nothing in his mind more, than how he might Depose him, and Restore King Henry; and several Consults with the Marquess Montacute his Brother, and others, were held, to further his purpose.

of ENGLAND.

The King (who feared Warwick's Greatness and Popularity) was not altogether ignorant of his discontents, tho' he outwardly dissembled it as well as he could; and therefore the better to weather the Storm he saw coming, tho' as yet at a distance, he concluded a Truce for Fifteen Years with the King of Scots, to weaken the Earl on that side; and to Henry King of Castile and John King of Arragon he sent (as a Present to make Friends with them) about a Hundred Cotfball. Sheep, a thing they never before, nor any of their Predecessors, upon any Intreaty, or for large sums offered. could obtain from the Kings of England; from which small Number such Multitudes have since Encreased. as in the Woollen-Trade has turned greatly to our damage. And that he might be the better able to deal with Lewis the French King, if War by him should be Proclaimed, or he should underhand assist the Earl of Warwick in any attempt, he made a League with Charles the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy, and gave him his Sifter Margaret in Marriage, and two other Sifters to the Dukes of Exeter and Suffolk.

But for all this, Warwick's design was closely carried on, and it was Agreed among them, That he and the Duke of Clarence should go to Callice; and there to ftrengthen the Alliance, the Duke should Marry Isabella the Earls Daughter; and in their Absence, as if without their knowledge or confent, the Marquess Mentacute and Arch Bishop of York Brothers to Warwick, should with the help of their Friends raise a Rebellion in Yorkshire; which they did, by inciting the Rusticks not to pay Tribute of Corn to the Hospital of St. Leonard in the City of York, which upon refusal being exacted by the Collectors, commotions arose, and at length about 15000 came before the City with an intention to Plunder and Demolish that Hospital, &c. but by a Sally of the Citizens, they were beaten off, and fo Marched away towards Northampton, Headed by Sir John Conyers an Experienced Soldier, but were met by William Earl of Pembrook, and Humpbry Lord Stafford, who by the Kings Command had raifed Forces in Wales, and after they had overthrown 2000 Archers that the Lords had laid in Ambush to fall on their Rear, upon a diffention ariting between Pembrook and Stafford, the latter withdrew his Forces, so that the former with much courage, tho' few in Number, giving the Rusticks Battel in Banbury Field, having near gained the Victory, the Scale of fuccess was suddainly turned in a surprising manner, viz. One John Clapham, a Servant to the Earl of Warwick, having got his Masters Standard, in which was Portraied the White Bear, coming in with a small Troop, and crying A Warwick, a Warwick; so daunted the Kings Men (who thought the Earl had been there with a fresh supply) that they threw down their Arms and fled; and being hotly Purfued, more than 5000 were slain: Sir Richard Herbert, and Eight others of Note, being taken Prisoners, were Beheaded at Banbury by the Rusticks. Upon this Success, their Army greatly encreased, and a separate Party making one Robin of Risdale their Captain, Plundered the Kings Mannor-House at Grafton, and finding there the Earl of Rivers, Father to the Queen, and his Son John, they carried them to Northampton and Beheaded them; and fome of the Kings Forces having Taken the Lord Stafford, he lost his Head at Bridgwater for Deserting the Earl of Pembrook at Banbury Field.

The Duke of Clarence and Earl of Warwick taking the advantage of these Troubles, Landed; and with considerable Forces put themselves at the head of the Rusticks; so that by this addition, and Warwick's Great Name in War, they became so formidable to the King, that (at the earnest request of some Nobles, who fear'd the desolation of their Country by such a cruel War as was threatened) he consented to a Treaty; during which, the King being more careless than he ought to have been of his Person, the Earl of Warnick with a strong Band entered his Camp by Night, and having killed the Watch, carried him Prisoner from his Tent to the Castle of Middlebam in Yorksbire; Committing him to the ward of the Arch Bishop; but soon after. having liberty to go a Hunting, he was Rescued by Sir William Standley and Sir Thomas Burgh, who upon private notice lay in Ambush behind the Wood with a Troop of Horse, and immediatly Posted to London. This inwardly vexed the Earl of Warwick, who thought to draw great Advantages from his Imprisonment: However the Truce continued, and a meeting of both fides was appointed in the great Hall at Westminster. where nevertheless the objections of good Deserts and unthankful Requitals, were with fuch vehement expressions repeated and maintained by the Earl of Warwick, that the King being highly displeased, with Threats and Fury they parted from each other: The King taking his way to Canterbury, and the Confederate Lords into Lincolnshire; where they raised an Army, and placed Sir Robert Wells, Son to the Lord Wells, in chief Command over it, as being very expert in Millitary Affairs.

Ee 4

him

438

King Edward had no sooner notice of this, but he fent for the Lord Wells and Sir Thomas Dymock his Brother-in-Law, commanding them to use their endeavours to bring over Sir Robert to his Interest; but though they very much laboured to do it, it proved without effect; which so angered the King, that contrary to his follemn promise, he caused the Heads of the Lord Wells and Sir Thomas Dymock to be stricken off; which gained him much displeasure of the Nobles and Commons, and hastned Sir Robert Wells to give him Battel ere the Confederate Lords (who wanted but a days March) came up, with the Lincolnshire-Men he commanded; so that the King oppressing him with his Number, though he fought Valiantly to revenge his Fathers and Unkles Death, his Soldiers at last tired out for want of fresh supplies, gave way, and soon after fell into a general Rout, throwing away their Coats to run the nimbler; for which reason it is to this day called the Battel of Loose Coat Field; and in it were slain about 10000; Sir Robert and some other of Note being taken Prisoners, lost their Heads.

of ENGLAND.

The Earl of Warwick, Duke of Clarence, and other Lords, hearing of this fatal Overthrow, distrusting the fidelity of the Army they Commanded, left it fecretly by Night, and with a small Train took Shipping at Dartmouth, and Sailed till they came before Callice; but was denied Enterance by Monsieur Vaucier, whom the Earl had left as his Deputy there; for which he was made Captain of the place by King Edward, and had a Thousand Pounds a Year Pension from the Duke of Burgundy. And here on Shipboard the Dutchess of Clarence was brought to bed of a Son, to whom Vauclear would not fend any Necessaries, nor suffer the Child to be brought on Shore to be Christened; yet Sayling hence to Diep, they took by the way a Rich Prize belonging to Burgundy, and Landing were met by the French King at the Castle of Amboys on the River Loyer, and highly welcomed, with promises of Assistance; and being conducted to the French Court, they found there Queen Margaret, Prince Edward her Son, and Jasper sometimes Earl of Pembrook, who had escaped a little before out of the Tower of London, with others; where they entered into new Conferences in order to Depose King Edward and Restore King Henry; and the Earl of Warwick to make his own Party the Stronger, gave his Second Daughter in Marriage to Prince Edward, and foon after the French King furnishing them with Shipping, Men, and fuch Necessaries as they required, leaving Queen Margaret and the Prince her Son at the French Court, to attend their success; they put to Sea, and Landed at Dartmouth in Devonshire; where the Earl Earl Marshalled his Forces, then few in Number, but quickly encreased by the Peoples flowing to his Standard from all fides, upon his putting out a Proclamation in King Henry's Name, requiring them to repair to his Aid with Money, Victuals, and all things Necessary for the War, and valiantly to fight against the Duke of York, whom he stiled a Usurper, and bloody Tyrant, untruly and falfly calling himself King.

Having by this time mustered a powerful Army, he Marched it towards London: The King was not idle at this Juncture, but with what Army he could gather on the fuddain, Marched to give the Earl Battel; yet on the way hearing that in all the places where his Enemies came, the People applauded them, and no cry was heard but King Henry and a Warwick, and having little confidence in his own Soldiers, by the wavering he found in them; notwithstanding his wonted courage, his Heart now failed him: Whereupon in the Night taking with him about 800 of his Friends he could rely on, he left the Army, and posted into Lincolnshire; but finding nothing there in a readiness to advantage him, he took Shipping and Sayled for Holland, and io passed to Burgundy, where he was kindly received by the Duke his Brother-in-Law.

Upon this the Earl of Warwick came to London, and King Henry was taken out of the Tower, and carried in Triumph to St. Paul's Church, where having paid his Devotions, and made his Offerings, he was convey'd to the Bishop of London's Palace, where he kept his Court, with much Bounty and Magnificence; and Parliament being assembled at Westminster, in his Name, in it Edward and all his principal Adherents, were Attainted of High Treason, their Goods and Possessions Confiscated to King Henry; and by the same Authority the Duke of Clarence was declared to be the next Heir to Richard Duke of York, tho' his Second Son, and the Dutchy of York was setled on him and his Heirs: Also the Crown entailed to King Henry and the Heirs Male of his Body; and for want of fuch Issue, to the Duke of Clarence and his Heirs Male; and fuch as had been difpossessed for Henry's Cause, were restored to their Titles and Estates: Clarence and Warwick were stiled the Kings best Friends, Patriots of their Country, and made chief Rulers in all things under Henry.

Upon notice of this great Revolution, Queen Margaret and her Son came over; but long they had not been here, ere Edward furnished by the Duke of Burgundy with Ships, Men, and Warlike Stores, Landed at Ravenspurg in Yorkshire; declaring he came not now for the Kingdom, but to possess himself of the Dutchy of York, his Rightful Inheritance, on which he intended as a Subject to live Peaceably; which drew many to favour his Caufe; but having got admittance into that City he foon discovered other Intentions: For tho' a little before he had Sworn the contrary to the Citizens, he Garisoned it with his own Soldiers, and exacted Money of them to raise more Forces, and so Marching towards London, the Marquess Montacute, who was fent to oppose him, let him pass; whereupon he caused himself to be Proclaimed King, setting up the Royal Standard: This obliged the Earls of Warwick. Oxford, and divers other Nobles, to raise an Army, and advance to give him Battel, but the Duke of Clarence Marching another way, with a separate Army, being reconciled to his Brother Edward, and joyning his Army with him, the Earl thought fit at that time to take other measures, not harkening to any fair Words or large Promises, to draw him from King Henry's side, but bitterly inveighed against the Duke of Clarence. laying. He had always rather be an Earl firm to bis Word and Oath, than a Perjured Duke, tho' in hopes of a Kingdom. Edward being now very much strengthened, Marched to London, whilst Warwick was raising more Forces; and being with fome difficulty received by the Citizens, he fent King Henry again to the Tower; yet having continual News of Warwick's approach, he drew out his Forces, and Encamped near Barnet, about Ten Miles from London, having King Henry as a pledg with him, fearing if he had left him in the Tower, the Londoners in his Absence would have set him at Liberty; and the next Morning the Earl of Warwick resolving to throw all on the fortune of a Battel, drew up in Battel Array, viz. The Right Wing he gave to the Marques his Brother, and the Earl of Oxford; the Main Battel to the Duke of Sommerset and others; the Left Wing was Commanded by himself and the Duke of Exeter; the Vant-Guard of King Edward's Army was commanded by the Duke of Gloucester, the Main Battel by himself and the Duke of Clarence, in which was King Henry the 6th; the Rear-Guard by the Lord Hastings; and after they had confronted each other a little space, and both Generals made moving Orations to animate their Soldiers, the Trumpets founded the Charge, and they rushed together with great fury, fighting five or fix Hours fo desperately, that Victory seemed to encline to no fide, whilst the City of London was greatly amazed and terrified with various Reports of the different success: But at length the Earl perceiving fresh supplies continually press on his weary Soldiers, thinking by his Example to give them new Courage, he difinounted; and with his Sword in his Hand pressed into the Front of his Enemies, making miserable flaughter: But breaking in too far, and not being timely fuccoured, he was flain; together with the Marquess his Brother, who threw himself into the opening Jaws of Thefe Death, in hopes to bring the Earl off.

These great Commanders slain, the Army grew faint and giving way by degrees, at length fell into a total rout, about 10000 being flain; and of King Edward's Part, of Note, only Sir Humphry Bourcher Son to the Lord Barns; and the dead Bodies of the Earl and Marquess being brought to St. Paul's, were exposed to view three Days, and then Honourably Interred among their Ancestors in the Priory of Bissam. Queen Margaret having notice of this Defeat, fled with her Son to the Abbey of Bewley in Hampshire, whither divers Lords reforted to her, and agreed to raise new Forces, and try the fortune of another Field, which they did, and were Overthrown at Temxbury; about 3000 being flain, and of Note the Duke of Sommerfet, Sir John Lewkner, Sir John Delwes, &c. The Prisoners of Note were the Queen and Prince, the Prior of St. John's, Sir Jervis Cliffton, Sir Thomas Tristram, and Twelve others of Note; all but the two first being Beheaded the next day; and soon after Prince Edward being presented to the King by Sir Richard Crosts who took him Prisoner, was piteously Murthered in his sight, by the Dukes of Clarence, Gloucester, and others, on the fignal given by the King, in striking him on the Mouth with his Gantlet; nor was it long after, that Innocent King Henry was Murthered in the Tower by the fame Duke of Gloucester, who struck a Dagger to his Heart; his Body being afterward exposed to view in St. Paul's. three days, that the People might be fure he was Dead; however these Proceedings caused the King much hatred among the People; when somewhat to satisfie them, he consented to Ransome the Queen, to pay which the poor Prince her Father fold his Titles to Jerusalem, Naples, and Sicily; and returning home she Lived a Melancholy and Disconsolate Life, which lasted not long ere she dyed of Grief, particularly for the Death

Death of the Prince her Son, whom she dearly Loved.

King Edward by Bloodshed being rid of his greatest opposers, took sollace in Pleasures, being very Lustful, and was rarely without two or three Concubing tho' his Queen was Young and Beautiful; and among them fane Shoar, Wife to Mathew Shoar, a Goldsmith in Grace-church-street, was most pleasing to him; though in the end it brought her to shame and misery. But to pass this over,

The King being now as I may term it Established in the Throne, the Duke of Burgundy vehemently incited him to War on France, and recover it as his Antient Right and Inheritance; upon which condition himfelf promised to do great matters towards assisting him. The King was not flow in listening to it, for many reasons urged by his Council; as, The French having frequently assisted his Enemies, &c. Yet Money being wanting, it feemed difficult. But to furmount this, he resolved without a Parliament to ask it of his Subjects, as a Free Gift; which many indeed complied with, tho' with an ill will. But one thing in this is Remarkable, The King to oblige them to bring in more freely, if not for Love, yet for fear of after-claps, on Penal Laws, seeing many that were Rich had engaged their Persons or Purses in the War against him, he sat fundry Hours in a Day to receive it himself; when among others, a Rich yet Nigardly old Widow brought Twenty Pounds, this so highly pleased him, That he not only returned her thanks, but told her For her kindness she should Kiss a King; and having performed it once, the Old Woman pull'd out another Bag, crying Udsbodikins, if Kings Sell their Kisses so Cheap, give me tother Touch on the Lips, and here is another Twenty Pound for you: The King smiled at this, took her at her word; and thought his Kisses well Sold. With

With this Benevolence of his Subjects, and his own Treasure, he Transported a fair Army over Sea, but found the Duke of Burgundy altogether unprovided even of the promised Necessaries for the support of the English, who Lying without the Towns on the cold Ground, soon began to murmur; however to employ them, he Marched with the Duke towards St. Quintins. which was fecretly promised to be delivered to him by Lewis of Luxemburg, great Unkle to King Edward's Queen; but on their approaching its Walls, the Cannon not only plaid fiercely on them, but the Garison made great Sallies; so that finding no good to be done, they were constrained to draw off; and soon after the Dake (without taking leave) went to raise Forces, leaving only word. That he would come again with an Army as foon as be was able: These Proceedings made the King begin to repent he had come over upon his account; and the French King making large offers to obtain a Peace, it was after some debate Agreed to without the Dukes consent, viz. 1. In consideration the French King Paid Edward 65000 Crowns towards bis Charge, and 50000l. per Annum for bis Life. 2. That in one Year be should send for the Lady Elizabeth, King Edward's Eldest Daughter, and Marry her to the Dauphin, allowing them for Nine Years space Annually 50000 Crowns, and then the Peaceable possession of the Dutchy of Guyan; and in consideration of this, Hostages should be left till the English had quitted France, and were returned bome.

This being Agreed on, tho' the Marriage was never performed, the Duke of Burgundy hastened to the Kings Camp, and in a blustering and storming manner greatly inveighed against what he had done, and was as sharply Answered by him; whereupon he rod away in much discontent, and the French King came to an Enter-

Enterview with King Edward, highly Feasting himan his whole Army, giving Money to the Officers and Soldiers, and commanding all his Subjects to use the with much Bounty and Civility; which done, King Edward Marched to Callice, and there passed over in England; and then the Lord Howard and Sir John Chency, the Hostages, were sent after him with great Rewards. The Duke of Burgundy however continued the War, and was thrice Overthrown in one Year in the last, at Nancy, he was slain.

King Edward being now at leafure to look if the were (after so many flaughters) any that could by Claim to his Crown, or Interrupt by fuch a pretun the Peace of him or his Heirs; for by this time held two Sons and five Daughters, he at last thoughten Henry Earl of Richmond, who remained with the Dake of Brittany, he being of the Royal Blood, and neard Allyance to the Crown: To get this Prince into in hands, he Bribed Peter Landois the Dukes Treasure with great Sums of Money, to Betray him over, which he earnestly laboured to do, shewing him the King Letters in a Loving stile, wherein he invited him in England, promising at his Arrival to give him is Daughter Elizabeth in Marriage, and by this mean the Treacherous Treasurer trained the Earl to & Malloes, where a Ship and Equipage lay ready to Trasport him. But no sooner had John Chevelet, the Earls Friend, truly informed the Duke of Brittal that this pretended Marriage was designed for the Earls destruction, but he commanded his Treasurer pain of Death to re-possess him of his Person; wh accordingly stole him from the English, whilst himi made merry with the Ambassador, and caused his so vants to thrust him into a Sanctuary, whose priviled might not be violated; excusing and laying it on the wn Neeligence for not taking more care to keep im when in their custody. This Loss both of Money and of Prey, made King Edward exceeding angry, but there being no remedy, he seemed slightly o pais it over.

Not long after this, by the instigation of the Duke f Gloucester and others, the King grew exceeding Jeabus of his Brother the Duke of Clarence, being the hore incited to it by an old Prophecy which Predicted G should Reign after an E, and this Dukes Name eing George, he verily believed he was meant by it; alling freshly into his mind his Practices with Warnick, nd what had been done concerning him in Parliament; nd thereupon, by his contrivance, he was accused of High Treason, for Conspiring his Death, and Aspiring b the Throne: and after a few days Imprisonments e was found Drowned in a Butt of Malmiey, leaving chind him but two Children, Edward and Margaret, tho were both Unfortunate: for Edward being creaed Earl of Warwick, was Imprisoned very Young, and aultely Beheaded in the Reign of Henry the Seventh, n a furmize he intended to Escape Prison, and joyn vith Perkin Werbeck, to raise Commotions: And Mararet was Married to Richard De La Poole Earl of Salisbry, who being a Widow after the Earls Death, was eheaded in the Reign of Henry the Eighth: fo strange is that Competitors for Crowns rarely enjoy that alm and Tranquility that attends on a meaner Estate: Nor do Historians excuse this King from being of a ruel Temper, as causing a Mercer in Cheapside to be langed at his own door for Jestingly saying to his ttle Son, If he would be a good Boy, he would make him Veir to the Crown, meaning his House bearing that Sign; It it being otherways wrested, it cost him his Life. e also caused one Thomas Burdet Esq. to be Beheaded BOOM upon a very slender occasion, viz. Being on his Progress in Warwickshire, he chanced to Hunt in one of Burdet's Parks, and among others killing a White Buck which he highly esteened, News of it was no fooner brought, but the Gentleman in a passion wished The Horns in the Belly of those that Counselled the King to kill him: This being told by some Pick-thanks to Edward, with this addition, viz. That he wished the Horns in his Belly; the Judges soon construed it that thereby he wished the King's Death; who with those Horns in his Belly could by no means Live; and so the poor Gentleman, in lieu of the great Entertainment he had given the King and his Nobles at his House, lost his Life at Tyburn, being there Beheaded.

The King in the latter-end of his Reign, contrary to his former Generous humour, grew exceeding Co. vetous, and Nigardly, so that to encrease his Treasure he extorted much Money from his People, by vexing them with the execution of Penal-Laws, which quenched their Love and Affections very much; with this Money he proposed to Match his Daughters, and sent to the French King to mind him of his Oath sworn to in the Articles that he should send over for the Lady Elizabeth, and Marry her to the Dauphin; but he never intending it, excused it only with fair promises that he would do it speedily; and whilst this was on foot, James the Third, King of Scots, required the Lady Cicilia, another of the Kings Daughters, in Marriage with his Son and Heir apparent, which was agreed to, and part of her Portion paid before hand; but instead of her being fent for, and a Friendly Allyance concluded, the King of Scots with this Money raised Forces and entered England, committing many cruel outrages The Duke of Gloucester was sent with a Line Louble Army, forcing his way into the Town of

Berwick

Berwick and Besieging the Castle, defended by Earl Bothwel; but purposing to March into Scotland, he less the Lord Standy with 4000 Men to maintain the Siege, and pursued the Scots King, wasting his Country with Fire and Sword: Till the Nobility perceiving the miserable estate of the Realm, humbly sued to the Duke for Peace; which was granted on these Conditions viz.

That full Restitution should be made to King Edward's Subjects for the Injuries done them: That the Scots King should Restore his Brother the Duke of Albany, who was in the English Army, to his Honours, &c. That the Castle of Berwick should be Yeilded, or not Rescued from the present Siege, and the Marriage Money Re-paid.

The First of these they performed not, as being unable: but the other were observed, and the Castle of Berwick soon Surrendered. But the French King utterly broke all Frindship with King Edward, by denying the Yearly Pension, and Marrying the Dauphin to the Lady Margaret, Daughter to Maximillian Son of Frederick the Emperour, which Affront had certainly caused a War, had King Edward lived to have profecuted what he had projected; but falling Sick of a Surfeit with Eating too excellively at a Banquet, he grew daily weaker and weaker, and a visible decay of Nature appearing in him, he called his Nobles about him, and laboured to make Friendship between his Wives kindred and his own, causing them to Embrace and give Solemn assurances of it in his presence; then recommending to them the care of his Queen and Children, earnestly Exhorting them to live in Unity, he gave up the Ghost at Westminster, on the ninth of April 1483, in the 40th Year of his Age, and 23d of his Reign. His Body being buried in a Chappel of his own foundation at Windsor.

In this Kings Reign John Hust was Burnt on Tower-

Ff 2

Hill

The HISTORY

Hill for the profession of a good Conscience. A Rose-Tree in the beginning of the calamitous Wars between the two Houses, Bore on one Branch a White and a Red Rose, the Cognizances of Tork and Lancaster; and a Spring of Blood gushed out near Lancaster. Amazing Voices were heard in the Air, Firey Meteors and Blazing-Stars, &c. appeared; as also Fiery Armies Fighting suriously.

Remarks on Westmozland, &c.

This County is partly Hilly, and partly Plain; It produces Cattle, a good sprinkling of Corn, store of Wild-Fowl, and in some places abounds in Fish, Venison, &c. It is Bounded with Yorkshire, Lancashire, and Cumberland. It is divided into five Wards, containing 26 Parishes, and 8 Market Towns, 6 Castles, 8 Rivers, over which are 15 Bridges; 2 Forrests, and 10 Parks: It sends Members to Parliament 4, viz. Appleby 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire. In this County is the famous Forrest of Marlerstrange and the Castle of Howgil: Its chief Towns are Appleby, Kendale, Kirby, Burg, or Brough under Stainmore: This last is undoubtedly the Ruine of an eminent Place antiently called Verterl, where a Roman Commander kept his Spation with a Band of Directors.

Amble-side or Amboglana, not far from Winander Meer (in which a Fish called a Charr is found, and in no other Water) is the Ruins of some samous City of the Romans which may be gathered from Paved Ways leading to it, and the Roman Coins that have been often Digged up there.

The Rivers Spaud and Barrow with many windings pleasantly water the Country. The Peak of Morton is much taken notice of, for near the River Loder there are Piramidal Stones pitched for a Mile together, some Nine, some Fourteen Foot thick; and near Kirby Longdale are many

45
H
T the Reas Vo

Fon It is land and 15 to P Shire strain App mor Place der k

Mees other which the R The pleafarmach Piram forme.

of ENGLAND.

Write

many deep places like Caves. The River Ken in this County bas a Cataralt which is held by its fall to foretel Rain of Fair-Weather.

The Seats of the Nobility are Beltham-Hall, belonging to the Earl of Derby; Appleby-Castle, Brough-Castle, and Pendragon-Castle, to the Earl of Thanet: and some very fightly Houses belonging to the Gentry.

The Reign of King EDWARD the Fifth.

KING Edward the Fourth being Dead, and leaving the Crown to Edward his Son, being about Twelve Years of Age, who kept his Court at Ludlow in the Marches of Wales, the better to Ingratiate himself with the Welfh, and continue them firm to the English Interest: That Prince upon notice of his Fathers Death. prepared for his Journey to London, in order to be Crowned; being then under the tuition of Anthony Earl Rivers, the Queens Brother; but whilst great preparations were making in order to his Reception. Richard Duke of Gloucester was contriving how he might defraud his Nephew, and place the Crown on his own Head, drawing into his Confederacy Edward Duke of Buckingham, Richard Lord Haftings, and others: And having laid the Project, in the next place they proceeded to remove all Obstructions; and hearing that the Lords of the Queens Blood intended to bring the King up with an Armed Power, the Duke of Gloucester-wrote, dissembling Letters to the Queen, putting her in mind of the Friendship the deceased King her Husband had made between those of his own Blood and hers, on his Death-bed; Intreating her she would not give any saufe of diffrust in that matter; and defired she would

Write to the Lords to dismiss those Forces, for saving Charges, and quieting the Peoples minds, who might draw conjectures from it that there was Misunderstandings among the Nobles, tending to another Civil War: That as for himself, he Protested and Swore, That his humble Duty to his Soveraign, his unfeigned Love to her, her Children and Kinsfolks, had incited him thus feriously to Counsel and Advise her and them in so weighty a matter, as might be for the good of them all with much more to the same purpose; which prevailed with her to believe it Sincere; that she Writ to her Brother and Son, who were principally the Young Kings Conductors, to dismiss their Armed Attendants and come to London by easie Journies, with a finall Number of his felect Friends: This however they had some scruple to do before Gloucester wrote to them very obliging Letters, protesting an Eternal friendship and kindness: So in an unlucky hour, contrary to the minds of many with them, and of the Young King himfelf, the Guards was fent every Man to his Habitation, and with a slender Train they kept on their Journey. . The Duke of Gloucester having gained this main Point, delayed not to hasten his meeting the King taking with him the Duke of Buckingham and a strong Guard, and by this time the Earl Rivers had brought the King so Stoney-Stratford; but because that little Town could not accommodate his Train, the Earl took up his Quarters at Northampton, about ten Miles from thence: where unlooked-for, the Dukes of Buckingham and Gloucester came into their Inn, and courteously faluted them; but the Scene was foon changed; for they were no sooner in their Beds, but the two Dukes seized on the Keys of the Inn, causing the Ways between the two Towns to be stopped, and strongly Guarded; pretending for excuse, that no Man before them should in the Morning pay his humble Duty to the King: Earl Rivers having notice of this, perceived he was over-reached and infnared by Gloucester's Policy; and resolving to make the best of it, dissembling his fears, came to the two Dukes, and demanded in a forced locose way, Why they had so done? But in stead of giving any fatisfactory Answer, they fell into a needless Quarrel with him; and causing him to be Arrested, and put under strict Ward, hastned early the next Morning to Stoney-Stratford, and in a submissive manner presented their humble Duty to the King, who received them with much kindness and affection, as being ignorant of what had passed: But this Scene was likewise changed, upon their Arresting the Lord Richard Grey, the Kings half Brother, and Sir Thomas Vaughan in his presence; of which usage when he complained, they told him all should be well; and what they did, was for the best; protesting abundance of Love and Loyalty. However, they fent the Lords and Knights to Pomfret Castle in the North, under a strong Guard, out of which they came not Alive: Then they removed from the King all his Officers, and placed Creatures of their own about him, giving out that those of the Queens Blood intended to destroy all the Kings nearest Relations, and to Rule both Him and the Kingdom at their pleasure.

The Queen who lay at Westminster, hearing this unexpected News, greatly grieved that she had been overreached by Gloucester's cunning to Write to the Lords to dismiss their Strength; and fearing the worst, retired with her Son Richard Duke of York, and her sive Daughters, into the Sanctuary. In the mean while they brought the much discontented King to London, where he was received by the Lord Mayor and 500 Citizens in their Formalities: In whose presence Gloucester, plaid his part so cunningly, that not only they

F f 4

par

but the Nobility were won to believe him fincere: and thereupon he was appointed Protector of the Kings Person and Kingdom: Which Trust he most passionately defired, to further his main Defign, which now he questioned not to bring about, if he could get the Duke of York into his possession; and in order to it. calling a Council of Nobles and Prelates, he laid before them how difgraceful it was that the Queen in her perverfness should keep an Innocent Prince in Sanctuary, which was looked on as a place fuitable to protect the Guilty; that it would cause them to be spoke evil of abroad, and therefore desired them to advife how they might get him out of her hands, to folace and sport in the company of the King his Brother, who was Melancholy for his absence, and passionately defired to fee him.

This, and much more to the same effect, made them think the Dukes words Reasonable, and thereupon agree to fend such as had greatest interest with the Queen, to perswade her to deliver him; of whom the Arch Bishop of Canterbury was to be Spokesman, who laid many Reasons before her of the Necessity at that juncture which required her confent: But with Sighs and Tears she Replied. That the Duke being Sickly and Weak, none was more fit than his own Mother to look to him; that Brothers (when together) rarely so well agreed as with those that were not so near a kin. But the main is, faid the, my Lord, it is dangerous that these Princes, as. Affairs stand, should be together; since asunder they are each others safety. And if the one of them do well, the other cannot be in Peril or Danger; and there is nothing more bazardow than to keep them in one place; fince the Life of the one separate, is maintained in the Body of the osher.

But for all these Reasons, perceiving he would be forced forced from her, if the confented not willingly to deliver him, after many tender Killes and falling Tears, praying Almighty God to preferve and defend him from all dangers, the delivered him; bitterly Weeping to the Arch Bishop, saying, That before the High Maiesty of Heaven, she should require that poor Innocent Infant at his Hands.

FENGLAND.

The Protector, who with many Nobles waited in the Star-Chamber, was over-joyed when he saw the Arch-Bishop return with what he so passionately defired, and taking the Young Duke in his Arms, he kissed him, and said, Welcom, my Lord, with all my Heart: Protesting so great a love to him, that most believed it real.

Thus having gotten the Prize he aimed at, the better to fecure it, he conveyed both him and the King in great State through the City of London to the Tower, in order as he pretended to the Coronation when things were fetled; tho' indeed there was nothing out of frame but what himself had disordered; where having placed them under fuch as he confided in he began more openly to tamper with the Duke of Buckingbam whom he knew was Popular and Powerful, offering to Marry his Son to his Daughter, and give him the Earldom of Hartford (which the Duke claimed in King Edward's time as his Right, but could not obtain) if he would to the utmost endeavour to place the Crown on his Head; and by this means he won him entirely to his Interest, tho' it afterward proved to his destruction: For Gloucester being made King, performed nothing of his promise.

The next thing he had to do, was to gaine the Lord Hastings, who had been in high favour with Edward the Fourth, and was now Lord Chamberlain to the Young King; but fearing to disclose his mind openly to him, for great Rewards he procured one Catesby, a Favourite of Hastings, secretly with dark discourse to found him: This Man, tho' he had been maintained by that Lord, and had his Fortunes raised to what he was by him, proved fo Treacherous, that having done what he could, and finding that Lord no ways inclinable to favour Gloucester's design, he not only told him of it, but encouraged him to remove him out of the World, if he intended to compass his desires: Which being Resolved on, he called a Grand Council of Lords at the Tower, to consider of suitable preparations for the Coronation; and when they had fat a confiderable time, he came in and took his Chair, Jesting with some of them after he had excused his too long stay, requesting of Doctor Morton Bishop of Ely some Strawberries that grew in his Garden at Holbourn; which he immediatly fent for, and took it as a favour that the Protector was fo kind to him, as to put it in his power to oblige him in any thing; for there had been formerly no good understanding between them. Then making excuse for a short Absence, he desired them to proceed in the method proposed; when about an hour after, coming in, he took his Chair, frowning, biting his Lip, and rubbing his Fift; which tokens or displeature strangely amazed them, so that they kept a profound filence; which the Protector perceiving, demanded what punishment they deserved who had wickedly procured his destruction, he being Uukle and Protector of the King? This amused them more than before: but knowing themselves Innocent of any such intention, the Lord Hastings, who by reason of the antient Friendthip that had been between them, thinking he might make bold, Replied, My Lord, such as have so wansgressed, deserve the severest Punishment the Law can in sill: To which the other Lords Assented: Then, said he, that Sorceress (meaning the Queen) and Shoars Wife, having Conspired by Witchcraft to destroy me: So drawing up his Sleeve, he shewed his Arm, which had been wasted from his Infancy, as they all knew, as a Testimony of what he had faid; biding them behold how their Charms had begun already to take effect on him. Hereupon the Lord Hastings, who had taken Jane Shoar to his Bed, upon the Death of King Edward thinking to excuse her, said, My Lord, if they have done so, they deserve punishment: Thou Traytor, Replyed the Protector, Servest thou me with Iss and Ands? I tell thee they have done it; and that I will make good upon thy Body: And so striking his Fift upon the Table, the Room was presently filled with Armed Men, one of which struck at the Lord Standley, and as nimble as he was to fink under the Table, grievously Wounded him in the Head, and himself Arrested the Lord Hastings; biding him make hast to shrive himself; For by St. Paul (which was his usual Oath) he would neither Eat nor Drink till bis Head was off: And accordingly he was Beheaded on a Log on the Green within the Tower; and the same day by the Protectors order, the Lords, and Sir Thomas Vaughan were Beheaded at Pomfret; to whose Death this Lord had consented, as appears by his own Story to one Hastings a Priest, whom he met on Tower-Hill, as he was going to the Council, viz. That he should soon hear that Snare they had laid for him in Edward the Fourths time, which caused him much trouble, would now take themselves.

One thing more is remarkable, The Lord Stanley, the Night preceding, Dreamed That he and Hastings were Wounded by a Boar, that the Blood run about his Ears; and seeing the Protector had the White Boar for his Cognizance, he truly Interpreted it, desiring he would accompany him in Flying, ere they could be missed, out of his reach; but he made slight of it, defiring the Messenger to tell his Lord, That Dreams were Fables and Fancies; yet at his Death he repented he had not taken this warning as sent from Heaven.

missed,

The Protector having Imprisoned the Lord Stanley, Arch-Bishop of York, Cardinal, Bishop of Ely, and several others, put himself and the Duke of Buckingham into old Armour, as if first come to hand, in some great danger; and fending for the Lord Mayor, and many of the chief Citizens, movingly told them, That bimself and the Duke of Buckingham were by Conspiracy of Hastings and his Accomplices to have been Murthered at the Council Table, had be not by force prevented it; desiring them to make that report to their Neighbours; and that this was all that had occasioned the Disturbance and Execution in the Tower: Nor had Hastings been dead above two Hours ere a large Proclamation, with the Broad Seal to it, was read in divers parts of the City by a Herauld at Arms; so that it was plain to the People, that this matter was not fuddain, but premeditated.

These Advances coming near the Throne, the Citizens were Assembled at Guild-Hall, and the matter openly proposed to them by the Duke of Buckingham, who used many Arguments to induce their consent to the Proclaiming Richard Duke of Gloucester King, and lay aside King Edwards Line; but they appeared little inclinable to it. However Dr. Shaw, Brother to the Lord Mayor, in a Sermon at St. Paul's Magnified him as a Prince of the greatest Magnanimity and Virtue imaginable; labouring to Bastardize Edward the Fourth, and all the other Sons of Richard Duke of York, except this Richard, who he faid was his own Picture, and the true imitator of his Valour and Virtues: Which was taken for such a piece of Dissimulation and Flattery, that he being afterwards very evilly spoken of, he was ashamed ever after to appear in a Pulpit. This

s weighty matter being now brought to a home the Duke of Buckingham, to finish the work he gun, carried divers Citizens of the meaner fort nards Caftle, where the Protector kept his Court; he made them feem to impose the Crown on with threats, if he refused it, to place it on the of fome Nobleman not of the Family of the Plants, for they would not have any of Edward the h's Line to Rule over them: This and much to the like purpose, the Duke spoke for them. with a faint shout of God fave King Richard. him with great unwillingness (as appeared to accept what he had so hard laboured for, and nately defired: And thus an end was put to rd the Fifth's Reign, if I may so terme it, two hs and thirteen Days after his Fathers Death: vas afterward, together with his Brother, Murd in the Tower; as will appear in the next Reign.

Reign of King RICHARD the Third.

chard Plantagenet, Third Son to Richard Duke of York, having by Pollicy and Stratagem crouded elf into the Throne, he called a Parliament, rein by the power of a leading Faction, he was rmed King: The Crown Entailed on him and leirs, his only Son Prince Edward being made Heir rent: But against his Coronation, fearing some rection on the meeting of so great a concourse as solemnity required, he sent for 5000 Soldiers out to North, under the Leading of Robert Risdale; and it, he set at Liberty the Arch-Bishop of York and ord Stanley; but continued Bishop Morton; yet at missed, out of his reach; but he made slight of it siring the Messenger to tell his Lord, That Dr were Fables and Fancies; yet at his Death he repe he had not taken this warning as sent from Heave

The Protector having Imprisoned the Lord Sta Arch-Bishop of York, Cardinal, Bishop of Ely, an veral others, put himself and the Duke of Buckin into old Armour, as if first come to hand, in great danger; and fending for the Lord Mayor. many of the chief Citizens, movingly told them, himself and the Duke of Buckingham were by Conspired Hastings and his Accomplices to have been Murther the Council Table, had be not by force prevented it; ring them to make that report to their Neighbours; and this was all that had occasioned the Disturbance and cution in the Tower: Nor had Hastings been dead a two Hours ere a large Proclamation, with the B Seal to it, was read in divers parts of the City Herauld at Arms; so that it was plain to the Pe that this matter was not fuddain, but premeditate

These Advances coming near the Throne, Citizens were Assembled at Guild-Hall, and the m openly proposed to them by the Duke of Bucking who used many Arguments to induce their conse the Proclaiming Richard Duke of Gloucester King lay aside King Edwards Line; but they appeared inclinable to it. However Dr. Shaw, Brother to Lord Mayor, in a Sermon at St. Paul's Magnified as a Prince of the greatest Magnanimity and Vi imaginable; labouring to Bastardize Edward the Fol and all the other Sons of Richard Duke of York, ex this Richard, who he said was his own Picture, an true imitator of his Valour and Virtues: Which taken for such a piece of Dissimulation and Flat that he being afterwards very evilly spoken of, he ashamed ever after to appear in a Pulpit,

This weighty matter being now brought to a home outh, the Duke of Buckingham, to finish the work he had begun, carried divers Citizens of the meaner fort to Baynards Caftle, where the Protector kept his Court; where he made them feem to impose the Crown on him; with threats, if he refused it, to place it on the Head of some Nobleman not of the Family of the Plantagenets, for they would not have any of Edward the Fourth's Line to Rule over them: This and much more to the like purpose, the Duke spoke for them. which with a faint short of God fave King Richard. made him with great unwillingness (as appeared to them) accept what he had so hard laboured for, and passionately desired: And thus an end was put to Edward the Fifth's Reign, if I may so terme it, two Months and thirteen Days after his Fathers Death; and was afterward, together with his Brother, Murthered in the Tower; as will appear in the next Reign.

The Reign of King RICHARD the Third.

R Ichard Plantagenet, Third Son to Richard Duke of York, having by Pollicy and Stratagem crouded himself into the Throne, he called a Parliament, wherein by the power of a leading Faction, he was confirmed King: The Crown Entailed on him and his Heirs, his only Son Prince Edward being made Heir apparent: But against his Coronation, searing some Insurrection on the meeting of so great a concourse as that solemnity required, he sent for 5000 Soldiers out of the North, under the Leading of Robert Risdale; and after it, he set at Liberty the Arch-Bishop of York and the Lord Stanley; but continued Bishop Morton; yet at the humble supplication of the University of Oxford, he was delivered to the Duke of Buckingbam, who sent him to his Castle of Brecnock in Wales, as a Prisoner at large; for he had his Liberty of the Parks, and Grounds lying about it.

the

King Richard knowing his Title to be bad, laboured by Favours and Interest to strengthen it: He Created his Son about Ten Years of Age, Prince of Wales, and John Howard (a Man of great Experience in seats of Arms) Duke of Norfolk; and Sir Thomas Howard, his Eldest Son, Earl of Surry: The Lord William Barkley was Advanced to the Earldom of Notingham; and Francis Lord Lovel, his great Crony and Favourite, was made Viscount Lovel.

And thus, as he immagined having fettled his Estate fecurely at Home, he fent Ambassadors to Lewis the French King, to conclude a Peace with him: thereby to prevent Storms from Abroad: But that Prince fo far detested his proceedings with his Nephews, That he would not admit his Ambassadors to his Presence nor own him for a King: This much perplexed him, and as is thought put him upon the Project of Murthering the Young Innocent Princes, as supposing by what had passed at the French Court, he could never be Reputed and truly Honoured as a King, whilst they Lived; and that their Murther might not be imputed to him, he purposely took a Progress to visit the City of Gloucester, from whence he sometimes took his Title; and from thence sent his Letters to Sir Robert Brakenbury Lieutenant of the Tower, whom he had raised from a Low Degree to a confiderable Fortune, expressly Commanding him to make away the two Princes: But either fear of after-claps, or his abhorrence of fo villanous a Deed, made him absolutely refuse it: Upon notice whereof Richard stormed, and appeared much perplexed in Mind; retiring himself for some Hours to confider how it might be done; and then remembering there was one Sir James Tirril, a retainer to the Tower, whom he knew to be very Indigent and Necessitous, this Man he doubted not to prevail on for the Execution of his wicked purpose; and therefore sent him a supply of Money, with large promises of preferment, if he Executed his pleasure; and withal his Commands to the Lieutenant to deliver him the Keys of the Tonet. This wicked wretch not weighing the Guilt, closed with the Golden offers, and had the Keys delivered to him, tho' not without regret, by Sir Robert Brakenbury; and the same Evening he hired two desperate Ruffians. viz. John Dighton and Miles Fornest, to Smother the Princes in their Beds, which they as wickedly performed, by claping Pillows on their Faces, and lying on them with all their force, till by their no longer frugling they found they had bereaved them of Life of &

This cruel Marther being committed, the next thing was to consider how to dispose of their Bodies; which after some consults about it, they Buried under the Stairs, from whence they were removed, and Buried none knows where: Thus King Edward the Fourth's Male Issue, became extinct; which some looked on as a Judgment, for his consenting to the Murther of Pious King Henry, and Innocent Prince Edward his Son. However it alleviates not the Guilt of those that dipt their hands in this Blood; for all that were concerned in it, came to untimely ends; so just and severe is God in punishing Murther, even in this Life; for rarely wee find his vengance stays till the shedders of Innocent Blood drop into a timely Grave.

This being rumoured abroad, the many things were urged by his creatures to excuse the Kings knowledge of it, and Terril was secretly commanded to fly beyond the Seas: But in Henry the Seventh's time returning was Executed for Treason; yet the People, as well Nobles as Commons, detefted him for it. The Queen grew Frantick for some time, and much ado they had to prevent her laying violent hands on herself; but being brought to her Sences, with Tears and bitter Excecrations against her wicked Brother-in-Law, she passed a Melancholy Life for many Months: King Richard after this, was troubled with fears and frightful Dreams of Devils and Spirits, haling and tormenting him, that he is faid to shed-some Tears, and wish it had not been done: However he came to London and summoned a Parliament, wherein (to ingratiate with the People) many good Laws were made, which are highly in Esteem to this day: But God shew'd him an early token of his displeasure, by taking away his only Son, being all the Children he had, he falling from a Horse dyed of the Bruise.

462

Bishop Morton, as is said, being committed to the Duke of Buckingbam's Custody, that sagacious Prelate fo wound himself into his favour and good opinion, that finding he was Ambitiously enclined, he spared nothing to encrease his aspiring thoughts to that height, as to make him look with envious Eyes on King Richard's Crown, and fancy it would fit more comely on his own Head: He was indeed of the Royal Blood by the Female side, but at a considerable distance: However King Richard having broke Promise with him by detaining the Earldom of Hartford, tho' he had been chiefly instrumental in Advancing him to the Royal Dignity; That for many Reasons the Bishop urged, he began to hate him; which more and more encreafing, from new disapointments, and disfavours; and in fine the Duke however feemed to decline the Crown, it was urged by the Bishop he might be Instrumental to do good to his Country, and gain Immortal Fame by Uniting the Houses of York and Lancaster, in promoting a Match between the Lady Elizabeth, Eldest Daughter to Edward the Fourth, and Henry Earl of Richmond. Son and Heir to Margaret Countess of Richmond, Daughter and Heir to John Duke of Sommer fet his great Unkle, Son to John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, Fourth Son to Edward the Third. This he attentively harkened to. and thereupon the Bishop desired to go into the Isle of Ely, and there he would raise Men and Money to forward this matter. But the Duke confidering his Absence would be charged on him, and be a means to discover the Intrigue, and that also he should want his Counsel at need, refused to consent; however the Bishop in disguise soon after got away, and escaped to the Earl of Richmond, Counselling and Animating him to prosecute the Project laid in England. .

of ENGLAND.

King Richard hearing there were fecret Cabbals held against him in Britany by the Earl of Richmond and others, renewed his Brothers Stratagem to get him into his hands: But tho' it cost him much Money, yet his Counsels being revealed, he also was frustrated in his expectations: But by this time having notice of Buckingham's discontents, he by Friendly invitations entreated him to come to Court; but the Duke excused it. on pretence of Indisposition; but King Pichard, well informed to the contrary, knew it was rather an Indifposition of Mind than Body, sent a second Summons, peremptorily commanding him to make his personal appearance; which made him believe his design was discovered; and thereupon he stoutly replied by the Messenger, That he reputed him a Monster, a Tyrant, Murtherer, and not his Lawful King; and therefore would not trust his Person in his bands, who was cruelly unmerciful to his nearest Relations: And so with many of his Friends.

Gg

Friends, raised Forces in Wales, whilst Sir Edward Courtney did the like in Devonshire and Cornwal, Sir Richard Guilford gathered many of the Kentish Commons, and in Yorkshire the Marquess of Dorset leaving Sanctuary, drew a great Number to him.

This Storm that threatened Ruine to the Usurper. roused him to Arms; so that Levying a considerable Army, he Marched against the Duke, to give him Battel ere he joyned his Friends, supposing if he could rout him, the rest would soon be Subdued: The Duke was as resolute as he, and intended to pass the Severn at a low Ford near Gioucefler, to meet him; but that Night and for Ten days after, such abundance of Rain fell. that the River over-flowed its Banks, drowning all the Meadows, fo that he could not pass; and by lingering his Victuals growing scanty, most of his Forces left him: which unexpected misfortune made him shift for himfelf, when coming to the House of one Humphery Banifler near Shiewsbury, who had been his Steward, and got a good Estate under him, he was there sheltered for a time; but King Richard Proferibing him, and fetting a Thousand Pounds on his Head, that Treacherous Servant discovered him to the Sherif of Shropshire, who apprehended him in poor Apparel, digging in the Garden, and conveyed him to the King at Salisbury, where in hopes of favour, he made an ample confession, but it availed not; for without any Legal Proceedings he was Beheaded, upon which the rest dispersed.

The Earl of Richmond knowing nothing of this difappointment, having gotten some Forces of the Duke of Britany, put to Sea for England; but by contrary winds was driven into Normandy, where the French King not only succoured him with Money and other Necessaries, but gave him safe condust through his Territories to Britany, where he found a great number of his Friends Arrived

Arrived before him; and there making a follemn promise to Marry the Lady Elizabeth Daughter to Edward the Fourth, if his success answered his expectations, they owned him in a manner as their King, vowing to adventure their Lives to settle him on the Throne. King Richard in the mean while was busied in Fortifying the Sea-Ports, and cutting off by terrible Executions all that he thought favoured the Earls Interest, getting him and his adherents attainted in Parliament, so that he feized their Lands and Effects, bestowing them on his Creatures, which caused much murmuring among the People: And one Collingborn an Esquire of good Estate, being in a Poetical strain, reflecting on Richard's three Favourites, viz. Sir Richard Ratcliff, Sir William Catesby, and the Viscount Lovel, in this Distich,

The Rat, the Cat, and Lovel our Dog, Rules all England under a Hogg:

Was Executed for it at Tyburn, the Judges construing the last word, to allude to the King, because he had the White Boar for his Cognizance; and fo in their opinions the Scandal was wrested to Treason. And then he laid another Trap for the Earl of Richmond, by Bribing Peter Landoys, the Duke of Britany's Treasurer; but he escaped it on timely notice, and fled to the French King; however King Richard made an Alliance with James King of Scots, by Marrying the Lady Ann (one of his Neices) to the Duke of Rothsey, his Eldest Son; and with large Presents and fair Promises so won on the infatuated Queen Dowager (his Brothers Widow) as to deliver her Daughters into his hands, tho' she was fensible he had Murthured her Sons: Then he caused it to be given out that Queen Ann his Wife, who was Daughter to the great Earl of Warnick, and had been Gg 2 Wife

Wife to Prince Edward, Son to Henry the Sixth, was fuddainly Dead; and though then very well, yet foon after the was found unexpectedly dead, not without fuspicion of Poison; which he so little regarded, that he immediatly tendered Courtship to Elizabeth his Brothers Daughter, who fearing her own and her Sifters fafety, put him off with delays, without any absolute denyal, till the Battel of Bosworth-Field ending his I ife, fet her at liberty to Marry the Earl of Richmond: whom this News of Courtship hastened over with fuch Forces as the French King and his own Friends furnished him with, to the Number of 2000; with those he Landed at Milford Haven in Wales, and for a time few reforted to him; yet no sooner the Welshmen underitood he was of the Family of the Tuthers, and of their own Blood, and might prove an especial Favouour of them, if he was advanced to the Crown, but they flocked to his Standard from all parts, under their Captains John Morgan, Rice ap Thomas, Richard Griffith, and others; having by this means gotten a little Army, he Marched forward by Sir George Talbot, Sir Walter Hungerford, Sir Thomas Bourcher, and others, with Forces they had raised for King Richard.

This News foon flew to London, and much perplexed the King; infomuch that he scarcely knew who to trust; yet he Levied an Army of 20000 Men, and with John Duke of Norfolk and others, that he had Obliged by many great Gifts, Marched against his Enemies, resolving to venture his Crown and Life on the fortune of a Battel; and tho? many indeavours were need to withdraw the Duke of Norfolk from his side, none could prevail to shake his sidelity; however the Night before the Battel, to amuse him, and to weaken his hand, This Distich was fixed on his Chamber

Jack

Door, viz.

Jack of Norfolk be not too bold; For Dickon thy Master is bought and sold.

On the 20th of August 1485, The two Armies faced each other near Bosworth in Leicestershire: But when King Richard perceived the Lord Stanley who commanded a part of his Forces, stand wavering at a distance, he fent to him to come immediatly and joyn with him; to which he Replied, He would do it when he faw his time. This fo enraged him, that he commanded the Son of that Lord, whom he had as a Hostage of his Fidelity, to be instantly cut off; however he was diswaded to defer it till the fortune of the Field had been tried; and fo both Armies joyning, fought desperately, none knowing which would be victor, till by the Lord Stanly's Revolting, and breaking in upon the Kings Battallion with fresh Men, he turned the scale; when the King perceiving Fortune against him, resolving to restore the Battel, or Dye, in a desperate mood he rushed into the Karls Battel, and with his Sword made a free pafsage, till he encountered Sir William Brandon, Standardbearer to the Earl, whom he flew, and then fingled out Sir John Cheney, whom he tumbled to the Ground. much Bruifed and Wounded, and thus gaining a passage to the Earl, they Encountered like enraged Lions; and Richard in all appearance had flain him, had he not been beaten down by others, and slain; tho' the Earl had it given out he slew him with his own hands; for notwithstanding his many evil qualities, all Authors allow him to have been Valiant, and of extraordinary Strength; so that had half his Army imitated his example, it is concluded he had been Victor: But such was the will of God, to punish him for his many Murthers, that at once he lost his Kingdom and Life. Upon his fall, his Army partly fled, and partly revol-Gg 3 ted:

ted; the Duke of Norfolk likewise Fighting valiantly, was flain, and in all about 4000 others.

The Crown he brought into the Field, was found in a Hamthorn Bush, and placed on the Earl of Richmond's Head by the Lord Stanley; whereupon he was faluted King by the General Voice,

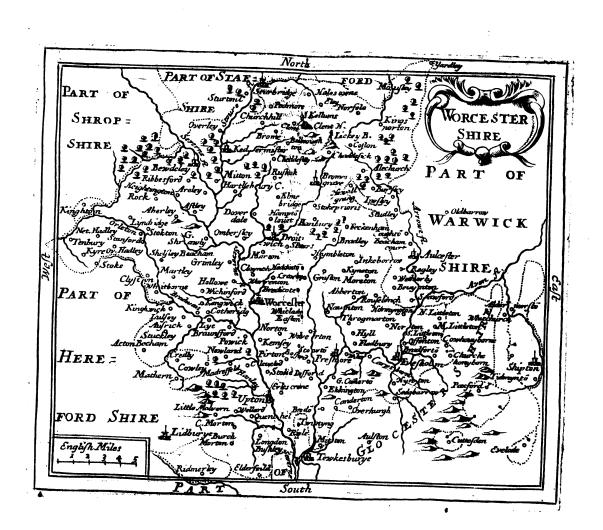

Among other dead Bodies, King Richard's was found, Stript, and carried Naked and Bloody on a Horse to Leicester; where it was two days exposed to the view of the People, and then Buried in the Grey-Friers Monastery; when at the dissolution of Religious Houses, the Stone Cossin wherein his Corps lay, was taken up, and said now to be a drinking Trough for Horses at a common Inn in Leicester.

He began his Reign June 22, Anno Dom. 1483, and Reigned two Years and two Months.

Remarks on Wozcestershire,&c.

Orcestershive produces store of Sheep, and large Cattle, much Corn, and rich Passures; It is pleasently Watered by the River Severn, branching in a manner through all the County, afferding store of Fish, as the Parks do Venison: It is towards Staffordshire pretty Woody, with some rising Hills: It is Bounded with Shropshire, Herefordshire, Glocestershire, Warwickshire, and Staffordshire: It sends Atembers to Parliament 9, viz. Bewdly 1, Droitwich 2, Evesham 2, Worcester City 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

Worcester is questionless the antient Branconium of the Romans, called by the antient Britains Caer Wrangon, and held to be of Roman Foundation. In the Cathedral of St. Mary, which is of stately Building, was Buried the Bodies of King John, and Prince Arthur, Eldest Son to Henry the Seventh. It is numerable for the Battels fought near it, in the late Civil Wars, and King Charles the Second's Escape.

At Eversham King Kenry the Third gained a great

Victory over the Barons: Kiderminster is of great Antiquity, also Sturbridg: On the edge of this County, at Eckington is a Medicinal Well whose Waters are Restorative. In this Shire are Hartlebury, Holt, and Emsley Castles.

In this Shire are Hartlebury, Holt, and Emsley Castles.

The Seats of the Nobility are Grafton, belonging to the Earl of Shrewsbury; Lenwick, to the Earl of Craven; Feckenham Lodg, to the Lord Coventry; and Hattelbury Castle, the Bishops Seat. This Shire contains 7 Hundreds, 152 Parishes, 1 City, which is a Bishops See, 12 Market Towns; and is Watered with 5 Rivers, over which and Branches are 15 Bridges: It has moreover 7 Cassles, 1 Chase, 2 Forrests, and 16 Parks.

The Reign of King HENRY the Seventh.

A Fter the Battel of Bosworth, Henry hasted to London; and foon after his arrival, was Crowned King: Then calling a Parliament, King Richard was Attainted, and the Crown entailed on him and his Heirs; and the January following, he Married the Lady Elizabeth, Eldest Daughter to Edward the Fourth, by which means the long Warring Houses of York and Lancaster were joyned in one; and in the ensuing September, she was delivered of a Prince, who was Christned Arthur; and the King published his Pardon to all that had born Arms against him; conditionally if they would Swear Fealty and Allegiance to him; which many refused, and had their Goods and Estates Confiscated. Then he chose Grave and Wise Counsellours of State, who by their prudent mannagment of Affairs, thorowly fettled the Kingdom in Peace and Tranquillity; and fo proceeding to make large amends to the Duke of Britany and French King, for the favours he received from them during his Exile.

But now whilst all things seemed quiet, and Trade began to flourish, a suddain Rebellion broke out in the North, Headed by Sir Humphry Stafford, the Lord Lovel, and others, who left their Sanctuaries, and drew great Numbers to fide with them. But King Henry raifed an Army with much celerity, and coming fwiftly on them, the Ringleaders fled by Night, which fo amazed the Plebeans, that the next Morning they fubmitted to the Kings mercy: However Sir Humphry Stafford, and his Brother Thomas, were taken out of Culibam Abby in Oxfordshire, whither they had fled for Sanctuary, and the first Beheaded; the latter being spared because he Acted by the Dictates of his Brother.

This combustion was no sooner over, but another more dangerous enfued: For one Richard Symond, a Priest, set up a Pupil of his, whom he had cunningly Instructed to claim the Crown, by the Name of Edward Plantagenet, Eldest Son to the Duke of Clarence; tho' it afterward appeared his true Name was Lambert Symnel: His Age agreed with that of the Prince he reprefented, who was then a Prisoner, and in likness he refembled him, and his carriage was extreamly Genteil and Taking; so that many flocked to him who were defirous of change, as well of the Nobles and Gentry, as Commons; but not finding here a fufficient Scrength, he failed to Ireland; where Sir Thomas Garendine, the Lord Chancelor, espoused his Quarrel, and drew many to take part with him; and to him the Dutchess Dowager, a mortal Enemy to King Henry, fent supplies of Money, Men and Arms; and by her Encouragement many English espoused his Interest, so that he became very formidable: This constrained King Henry to bring the true Edward out of the Tower, and carry him through the Streets of London, to fatisfy the People of the Imposture; where the Nobility were required to be present, and to confer with him. But this did little, for the others Army encreasing, The King raised Forces to repel him, and a Battel was joyned near Stoke in Lincolnshire, which was maintained with great resolution; but the Irish who compossed the greater part of Symnel's Army, being destitute of Warlike Weapons, tho' they fought valiantly, were routed; whereupon the rest gave way: And in this Battel the Earl of Lincoln, the Lord Lovel, Sir Thomas Garendine, Marian Swart, and Sir Thomas Browghton, were Slain, Symnell was taken Prisoner, and after a publick Confession who he was, made Scullion in the Kings Kitchen, and after that his Faulconer.

Peace now being fettled, the Queen was Crowned. and Thomas Bourcher, Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, being dead, Bishop Morton was preferred to that Archiepiscopal See, and made Lord Chancelor of England: foon after which preferment, he was dignified with the Hat and Habit of a Cardinal, by Pope Alexander the Sixth.

Whilst these things Passed, a Quarrel arose between Charles the French King, and Francis Duke of Britany; whereupon the latter, too weak to oppose his powerful Enemy, required Aid of King Henry; but he having in his necessities been befriended by them both, rather laboured to make an Accomodation; yet underhand, the King winking at it, many English went over to the Duke's Affistance; but were mostly slain in a fatal Overthrow the French gave near the City of Nantz, with their chief Leader the Lord Woodvile. This made King Henry openly affift the Duke with Men and Money; to furnish which, he raised by Parliament a Tax Tax of the Tenth Penny on all Moveable Goods, which caused a Rebellion in the North, where the Earl of Northumberland enforcing the Kings Orders for the strict Levying it, was Murthered by the Rout; but Thomas Earl of Surry going against them with an Army, they dispersed and fled; yet several of the Ringleaders were taken and Executed in fundry places.

During the War in Britany, That Duke dyed, and the Estates Marrying his Daughter and Heiress to the French King, tho' she had before been contracted to Maximillian the Emperour, a Peace enfued; and the Lady Margaret, Daughter to the Emperour, whom the French King had taken as his Wife, was returned with difgrace; which occasioned a War between them; and Henry being on both sides solicited for Aid, he for many waighty Reasons adhered to the Emperour, and Transported an Army under the Command of his Unkle Jasper Duke of Bedford, and John Earl of Oxford; but the Emperour not being forward in his promifed Preparation, the King passed into France, and laid Siege to Bullen, which made the French King for fear of Britany, of which by his Marriage he was become Soveraign Prince, sue for Peace; which was concluded between him and King Henry during their Lives: The French King, for defraying his Charges, paying 1862001. and a Yearly Peniion of 25000 Crowns, which was Paid during King Henry's Life; whereupon he returned with his Army.

Not long after this, the Dutchess Dowager of Burgundy set up another Imposture, who though his true Name was Perkin Warbeck, was to pass for Richard Plantagenet, the second Son of Edward the Fourth, and the better to surther her design, she used such Policy in England, that she gained many of the best Rank, who were well affected to the House of York, to sayour him.

King

Henry however, to Countermine her Stratagem, to work him Mischief, secretly caused divers of Friends seemingly to fly to this new pretended e. and offer him their Service; their Estates the h while, the better to colour the matter, being d in England: And by this means he gained pri-Intelligence of all the Proceedings, and an Account he Names of such as being in England held corresdency with him; which brought many into uble, and fome to Execution. And finding the berour, disgusted at the Peace he had made with ce, fecretly encouraged this design, he removed the which Mart from the Low Countries to Callice, which ved greatly prejudicial to the Flemings, especially h a Prohibition of Flemish Wares being brought iningland, which made the Emperour publish the like hibition to hinder the Importation of English Goods hy part of his Territories; which causing a decay Frade, incited the meaner fort of Handicrafts in don to commit divers Outrages on the Persons and ds of the Flemings that Inhabited among them; about 80 of the Ringleaders being Taken, were risoned, till by the Kings Pardon they were Reed, and the Flemings Banished.

ir Robert Clifton, whom the King by Promises and is had won to his Favour, about this time came o; and the better to Apprehend such as he should ruse, without Blows, he appointed to meet him in Tower; where among his Great Courtiers, he led out Stanley, who had been Instrumental in setting the Crown on the Kings Head, and was now his d Chamberlain; who was nevertheless committed Prison, and the main Evidence on his Tryal being, at he had said, That if he was sure this Perkin was the c Duke of York, he would not draw his Sword against

bim;

Tax of the Tenth Penny on all Moveable Gowhich caused a Rebellion in the North, where the of Northumberland enforcing the Kings Orders so strict Levying it, was Murthered by the Rout; Thomas Earl of Surry going against them with an A they dispersed and fled; yet several of the Ringles were taken and Executed in sundry places.

During the War in Britany, That Duke dyed. the Estates Marrying his Daughter and Heiress to French King, tho' she had before been contracted Maximillian the Emperour, a Peace enfued; and Lady Margaret, Daughter to the Emperour, whon French King had taken as his Wife, was returned diffgrace; which occasioned a War between the and Henry being on both fides folicited for Aid, h many waighty Reasons adhered to the Emperour. Transported an Army under the Command of Unkle Jasper Duke of Bedford, and John Earl of Ox but the Emperour not being forward in his pron Preparation, the King passed into France, and laid to Bullen, which made the French King for fe Britany, of which by his Marriage he was become S raign Prince, fue for Peace; which was concluded tween him and King Henry during their Lives: French King, for defraying his Charges, pa 1862001. and a Yearly Pension of 25000 Cro which was Paid during King Henry's Life; whereu he returned with his Army.

Not long after this, the Dutchess Dowager of gundy set up another Imposture, who though his Name was Perkin Warbeck, was to pass for Richard P tagenet, the second Son of Edward the Fourth, and better to surther her design, she used such Polic England, that she gained many of the best Rank, were well affected to the House of York, to sayour h

King Henry however, to Countermine her Stratagem, bent to work him Mischief, secretly caused divers of his Friends feemingly to fly to this no pretended Duke, and offer him their Service; their Estates the mean while, the better to colour the matter, being feized in England: And by this means he gained private Intelligence of all the Proceedings, and an Account of the Names of such as being in England held correspondency with him; which brought many into Trouble, and some to Execution. And finding the Emperour, disgusted at the Peace he had made with France, fecretly encouraged this design, he removed the English Mart from the Low Countries to Callice, which proved greatly prejudicial to the Flemings, especially upon a Prohibition of Flemish Wares being brought into England, which made the Emperour publish the like Prohibition to hinder the Importation of English Goods in any part of his Territories; which causing a decay of Trade, incited the meaner fort of Handicrafts in London to commit divers Outrages on the Persons and Goods of the Flemings that Inhabited among them; but about 80 of the Ringleaders being Taken, were Imprisoned, till by the Kings Pardon they were Released, and the Flemings Banished.

Sir Robert Clifton, whom the King by Promises and Gifts had won to his Favour, about this time came over; and the better to Apprehend such as he should Accuse, without Blows, he appointed to meet him in the Tower; where among his Great Courtiers, he singled out Stanley, who had been Instrumental in setting the Crown on the Kings Head, and was now his Lord Chamberlain; who was nevertheless committed to Prison, and the main Evidence on his Tryal being, That he had said, That if he was sure this Perkin was the True Duke of York, he would not draw his Sword against him; he was thereupon Sentenced, and all his great Services could not attone to fave his Life, for he was very foon after Beheaded. Yet with this the Storm blew not over, for the Native Irish declaring for Perkin tho' the King fent an Army thither under Sir Edward Poinings, yet he could do little good there, they being too nimble for him in their Woods, Bogs, and Mountains; and not being affifted by the Nobles and Gentry, as he expected, the fault was charged by him on the Earl of Killdare, whom he brought over Prisoner: but that Lord so well acquitted himself, that he was foon fet at Liberty, and fent back again with Honour and Rewards; and Perkin putting to Sca, Landed in Kent; but he was beaten off, and a great many of his Men slain; and such as were taken, Executed; which discouragement made him return to Burgundy. Yet soon after he Sailed for Ireland, where he was received with Promise of large Assistance; but not finding it according to his expectation, he passed thence into Scotland, and was highly welcomed by James the Fourth, who esteeming him (by reason of his Courtly Behaviour) as the True Prince he represented, Married him to Catharine Gourdon his Neice; and then with a Puissant Army Invaded England, which miserably wasted the Northern Borders, and compelled King Henry to set forward with all the Forces he on the fuddain could raife, under the Command of Giles Lord Dawbeny; but was foon recalled upon an Insurrection in Cornwal, occasioned by the Levying a Tax to Support the War: They strongly charging the fault on John Morton Arch-Bishop of Canterbury and Sir Reynold Bray, who (as they faid) to Inrich themselves had advised the King to oppress his Subjects; desiring they might be removed from their Dignities & Offices, and Punished as Enemies to the Common Weale; and chose chose for their Captains Thomas Flammock a Lawyer. and one Joseph a Blacksmith; and gathering as they Marched, brought a great Terrour on the City of London, being joyned by the Lord Audley, and many Thousands he brought to their assistance; and found a free passage till they came into Kent, where the Kentishmen opposed them; and now the King thinking it histime to fet upon them, gave them Battel at Blackheath near Greenwich, and totally Routed them, ilaying 2000, and taking their Ringleaders with many others Prisoners, who were most of them Executed: Joseph the Blacksmith glorying in his way to Execution, that' for this deed he should be Recorded in History: and indeed he missed not of his Expectation.

bim;

certain

The King being now at leafure to revenge the wrongs the Scots had done in the North, ordered the Earl of Surry and Richard Fox Bishop of Durham, to raise such Forces as they could, and oppose their Ravages till he fent a greater Strength; but thefe two active Men raised such a Power, that the Scots upon their approach immediatly retired into their own Country. and were followed by the English, who retaliated in a fearful manner the injuries done within the English Pale. winning and razing many strong Castles, Towns, and Fortresses; and though the Scots King made shew he would give Battel, and Challenged the Field, yet in the Night he Decamped and gave his Army free leave to disperse it self; so that for seven Days the English hunted them in Woods and Mourtaines, tho' to little purpose; for Winter approaching, the Barrenness of the Country constrained them to return to Berwick, to receive King Henry's Orders. But in the mean while Peter Hyalus, Ambassador from Ferdinand King of Castile, arrived to Mediate a Peace between England and Scotland; yet it came to no more than a Truce for knew

Certain Years, on condition the Scots King Banished Perkin, and all his Adherents out of his Dominions: and about the same time the French King sent to Ratify the Peace that had been concluded between King Henry and himself, which was Accorded; and Maximillian perceiving his Country of Flanders, &c. much Impoverished for want of the English Trade, with many Entreaties procured it to be Restored; and our Merchants coming to Antwerp, were received by the Inhabitants with folemn Processions, Feastings, and all demonstrations of loy imaginable.

Perkin Warbeck by means of the Truce being Expell'd Scotland, Sailed away with four Ships and Landed in Cornwal, where the ordinary fort of People received him with Joy and loud Acclamations, raising in a short time a great Multitude to Aid him; tho' for Rebellion they had severely smarted but a little before; and immediately with great Multitudes he Besieged the City of Exceter, but the Citizens stoutly withstood them in their Attempts to Scale the Wales, flaying very many of them. Whereupon they put Fire to the Gates and Burnt them, but could not Enter by reason the Besseged Countermured them with Fire, and kept it with continual supplies of Fuel, so sierce that they had time to raife Bulwarks and Ramparts. Then the Rebells by Threats and fair Promises endeavoured to oblige them to fubmit; but these proved fruitless, for being encouraged by the King, who promifed to come to their Relief very speedily, with an Army, they stoutly resuled all Conditions of Surrender; and upon the Kings approach, the Siege was raised, the Rebells Marching into Somer sets hire, where they laid Siege to Taunton Dean; but being close followed, Perkin with 60 Horse sled from the rest, and finding the Sea-ports stopped, he took Sanctuary in Beauley Abby near Southampton; Registering gistering his own, and the Names of some few of his Companions, who had got thither with him; the greater part of his Train being Taken by the King's Light-Horse-Men, who closely Pursued: And the Multitude Submitting, and throwing down their Arms, were received into the Kings Protection, unless some of the Chief, who being Taken were Executed in divers places.

The King after this coming to Exeter, highly commended the Citizens for their Loyalty and Courage. rewarding the Meaner fort with Money, and those of Note with Knighthood and profitable Places of Trust giving his own Sword to the Mayor, with a Priviledge that it should always be born before him. And the Sanctuary where Perkin was, being incompassed with Armed Men, and he perceiving their orders were to take him thence by force, he Surrendered himself to the Abbor of Sheen. Intreating him to procure the Kings Pardon for him; whereupon he was brought to Westminster, and publickly declared his mean Birth and Parrentage, and that he had been perswaded to this Undertaking chiefly by the Dutchess Dowager of Burgundy; whereupon with a Paper of all the Intreague Pinned on his Back, he was fet upon a Scaffold, fastned in a pair of Stocks a whole Day before the Palace at Westminster, and the following day in like manner at Cheapside-Cross, and then made a close Prisoner in the Tower, where Bribing the Keepers, and practicing to Escape into Flanders, tho' he had been Pardoned before, he was for this Executed at Tyburn; and the King laying hold on this to rid him of the fears he had of the True Earl of Warnick's being one day advanced to the Throne, was not wanting of Evidence who Accused him to have attempted his Escape with Perkin, and tho' having been kept in Prison from his Infancy, so that he knew not a Goose from a Hen, that poor Prince was wrongfully Condemned of High Treason, and Beheaded on the Tower-Hill, whose Innocent Blood fixed a stain on King Henry to all Posterity; his Death being rather looked on as a State-Policy, than any ways Just; and that in this he had done that Crime, for which he had so vehemently accused Richard the Third; only with this difference, That he made his Courts of Justice Guilty of a Crime not inferiour to what the other had imposed on private Assassins: For this Edward Earl of Warwick was Son to George Duke of Clarence, second Brother to Edward the Fourth, and the last of the Male Line of the Plantagenets, who had fway'd the Scepter from Henry the Second. King Henry by this Bloodshed having more firmly Established his Throne, or at least himself, from those fears that he apprehended from mutable Fortune, whilst this Young Prince Lived, Married Arthur Prince of Wales, his Eldest Son, to the Lady Catharine, Daughter to Ferdinand King of Spain, with great Magnificence, in St. Paul's. But that Young Prince soon after Dying, she was Married to Henry his Second Son, who Succeeded: But upon some pretended scruples, Divorced; as will appear at large in the History of his Reign. And James the Fourth, King of Scots, suing for the Lady Margaret the Kings Eldest Daughter, the Match was concluded, tho' the French King and others had required her, but could not obtain their Suits; for in this Henry wisely considered, That if his Sons Issue should fail, it would be a means to unite Scotland to England; when if he had Married her to a more Powerful Kingdom, this must have been Subjected to that, which he concluded would prove very dishonourable to the English Nation; and the Lady being sent to Edenbourough, was there Married with great Solemnity.

The King in the latter end of his Reign growing exceeding Covetous, contrived how he might extort Money from his Subjects; and for this, as his chief Inftrument, he used Sir Richard Empson and Edmund Dudley two Lawyers, whom he appointed to put the Penal Laws in execution with great Rigor; which they spared not to do, to the utmost, tho' in the next Reign it cost them their Lives; nor was the complaints of the oppressed People minded, tho' exceeding great and many, from all parts of England, which encouraged a whole swarm of Locusts, as under Officers, to pill and pole them in every Shire, which caused the King much hatred.

After this, Philip Duke of Austria, in Right of his Wife, coming to be King of Spain was in his Voyage thither driven by a Tempest into Weymouth Harbour in Dorsetshire, where with his Queen he was Entertained by Sir Thomas Trenchard, and after Invited to the King's Court at Windsor; where, for the Entertainment he gave him, he procured the Duke of Suffolk, fled into Austria, to be put into his hands, on condition he should have no violence offered him; and indeed during this Kings Reign he was only kept a Prisoner; but in the next lost his Head. King Henry soon after falling Sick of a languishing Disease, which was looked on as a Judgment for oppressing his Subjects, remitted all offences against his Penal Laws, enlarged all Prisoners, except for Treason & Murther, restored Moneys to those that had been Ruined, relieved the Poor, and did many good Acts. And having Reigned 23 Years and 8 Months, he Dyed, and was Buried at Westminster, in the famous Chappel of his own founding, by Elizabeth his Queen, (who Dyed not long before) in the 52d Year of his Age.

In this Kings Reign Wheat was Sold for Six Pence a
H h
Bushel

Bushel, Nantwich Salt 6d. and Bay Salt 3d. per Bushel, White Herings 6s. per Barrel, Red Herrings 3s. per Cade, Sprats 6d. per Cade, and Gascoign Wine at 61. per Tun.

Anno 1495 a mighty Storm of Hail fell, killing and wounding many Cattle and People, several Stones being taken up at St. Neots in Huntingtonshire 18 Inches about: And soon after a fearful Plague raged, which made the King and Queen for a time remove their Court to Callice: And during his Reign about Nine Persons, Men and Women, suffered the Flames for the profession of a good Faith: Several did Penance by carrying Faggots on their Backs, and some were Burnt in the Check, &c.

Remarks on Wiltshire, &c.

Vilishire is Renowned for the Frugal Industry of the Inhabitants: It produces numerous Flocks of Sheep, of whose Wooll Cloath is made, and many Thousands of People set on Work; as also large Cattle, store of Corn, and Pastures, Venison, Fish, Fowl, &c. It is Bounded with Barkshire, Hampshire, Dorsetshire, Somerfetshire, and Gloucestershire; It contains 29 Hundreds, in which are 304 Parishes, 23 Market Towns, 5 Rivers, 1 City, viz. Salishmy, which is a Bishops See. 3 Bridges, 1 Castle, 1 Chace, and 2 Parks. The River Avon branches its Southern parts, and Wilby-Bourn extends to the West; as also does a part of Avon; and in other parts it is pleasantly Watered; the Castle is that of Castlecomb.

It sends Members to Parliament 34, viz. Bedwin 2, Caln 2, Chipenham 2, Cricklade 2, Devizes 2, Downton 2, Heitsbury 2, Hindon 2, Ludgarsale 2, Malmsbury 2, Marleborough 2, New Sarum 2, Old Sarum 2, Westbury 2, Wilson 2, Wooton Basset 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire.

At Willton, Egbert King of the West Saxons Overthrew and Slew Bernulf King of Mercia, but afterward the Danes gave him there a great Overthrow. At Edington King Alfred Deseated the Danes: At Bradford a great Battel was Fought among the Saxon Competitors: At Wodensbury, Cheulin King of the West Saxons, Overthrew the Britains. Cld Savum was a Station of the Romans, and here the Britains were Overthrown by Kenrick the Saxon. At Caln, Dunstan opposed the Married Priests, and the Controversy was ended by the fall of the Floors.

Floor; whilft his Chair remained fixed. Brokenbridge and Costain were feats of the Romans, and of some Saxon Kings. Creiclade is held to be the first University, and thence removed to Oxford. At Malmsbury were Born William, thence Sirnamed Malmsbury, a famous Historian; and Thomas Hobbs of this Age. It took its Name from Madulphus, who Brecked a Monastery there. Caln is noted for its sair Church. Salisbury for its stupendious Minster and Cathedral.

Church. Salisbury for its stupendious Minster and Cathedral.
On Salisbury Plain, is the memorable Wonder called Stone Henge, supposed to be Erected as a Monument to Hingest the first Saxon Invader; its Stones are of a prodigious bigness, some 28 Foot long, and 7 broad, Morticed one within another; tho' wasted by time, some are falln. Near Sawerth are Cockle-stones, and those called the Grey Weathers near Marlborough. On the Borders of this County, between Great Bedwin and Lockington, are certain deep Holes called the Giants Caves; The Water breaking out of certain Stones near Knet, is accounted a presage of Dearth. At Luckington is a Well whose Virtue is to Cure Sore Eyes. At Aubury is cast up a Ditch of a prodigious depth, near Circular, set round with large Stones, supposed once a strong Encampment of the Romans, 4s Tarnborough Casse on Salisbury Plain is supposed to have been one of their Fortresses.

The Seats of the Nobility are Matleborough-House, and Allington-House, belonging to the Duke of Somerset; Wilton and Falstone, alias Fallerdown, to the Earl of Pembrook; Clarkton, to the Earl of Bark-bire; Stourton-Castle, to the Lord Stourton; Wardour-Castle, to the Lord Arundel of Wardour; Long Leats, to the Viscount Weymouth, Baron of Warmister; the Bishops Seat in Salisbury.

The Reign of King HENRY the Eighth.

HENRY the Eighth, being Eighteen Years old, began his Reign the 22d of April, Anno Dom. 1509. and was Crowned at Westminster by William Warham, Arch-Bishop of Canterbury. His first Policy was to wind himself into the Affections of his Subjects; and soon found out a way to do it by issuing out Proclamations That such as had been Injured by Extortions and Oppressions of evil Persons in his Fathers Reign, should Hh 2

be favourably heard, and receive Satisfaction for the wrongs done them: Whereupon great Numbers came with grievous Complaints; those that had received the least Injury, being the most clamorous; and having recompensed many, to please the rest, Empson and Dudley the two corrupt Judges, were Convicted of High Treason, and Beheaded on Tower-Hill; and divers imployed under them were Difgraced by Pillories, Stocks, and Whipping-Posts, tho these Catterpillars had exceedingly Enriched the Kings Treasury, as well the greatest Mass of Money that any King of England before him had done. Things being a little fettled, Ferdinand the King's Father-in-Law, craved Aid of him against the Moors, who infested his Kingdom, which he obtained, and drove them by that means out of Spain; but the War ceasing, he fent home the English poor and ill rewarded for their Service, which much offended the King; and Wars arriting between Pope Julius the Second, and Lewis the French King, in Italy, where the latter feized on the strong Towns of Bologna and La Gasse, and became very Formidable, King Henry became a friendly Mediator between them. But the French King refufing to yeild to Propofals of Peace, purfuing his Conquests, he required him by his Ambassadors to restore him the Peaceable possession of Guyan and Normandy, with his Antient Inheritance of Mayne and Anjou, uninftly detained from his Ancestors and himself; which being refused, he Proclaimed War; and for this, and Writing a Book in defence of the Roman Pontificate, against Martin Luther, the Pope (on whose account this Quarrel was espoused) stiled him Defender of the Faith; which Title has ever fince been retained by the Kings and Queens of England.

as their own Coffers. For his Father left behind him

The King was not flow in raifing an Army, and King Ferdinand of Spain having notice of his preparations, fent to offer his Service if he would Land his Forces in Biscay, a part of his Country, and from thence March into Guyan, which was agreed to, and done under the Leading of Thomas Crey Marquess of Dorset: But the crafty Spaniard intending nothing but his own advantage by this, after the English had suffered many hardships in his Country, he joyned them, and fell unexpectedly on the Kingdom of Navarre, which he feized in a short time; the Natives being so amazed at the suddainness of the Invasion, that they made little or no refistance. But after this success, he afforded them no fubfistance, or any part of the spoil; which made the Soldiers Disband of their own accord, and come straglingly into England, Poor and almost Naked: But Sir Edward Howard, Youngest Son to the Earl of Surry, being Lord Admiral of England, many times Landed in the French Territories, and greatly endamaged them, and at Sea overthrew their Navy; in which Fight Sir John Carew of Devonshire, in the Regent, grapling with a great Carrick of Brest, both Ships in the contest fell on Fire, and in them (on both sides) about 800 Men perished. This distress on his Coast, made the French King augment his Fleet, and Fortify his Harbours: However the Admiral entered that of Brest with Boats and armed Barges, and affailed three great Galleys of Rhodes, brought to the affiftance of the French King, by Prior John, these they soon Boarded; but the Boats and Barges then returning, and leaving them well Manned, to be brought off at high Tide; by this overfight the French regained them; and in the contest, the Admiral was born overboard by a Pike, and Drowned. But in few days his Elder Brother was made Admiral, and two Land Armies prepared, one under Hh 3 tho

The

of ENGLAND.

Scots with 26000 Fighting Men, Anno 1913 the fatal

the Leading of George Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury, and the other by Charles Somerset Lord Herbert, Chamberlain to the King: These had not long been Landed but the King leaving the publick mannagement of Affaires to the Queen, and directing the Earl of Surry to Guard the North against the Scots Incursion, he Sailed to Callice and caused his Army to March to Termyn, which he Besieged; and upon the overthrow of the French Army that came to its Relief, had it put into his possession, which he rased, and consumed by Fire, except the Cathedral and Bishops Palace. During this Siege, Maximilian the Emperour, with 30 Nobles and Gentlemen, repared to King Henry's Camp; where, to the Honour of England, they Enrolled themselves in the King's Pay, and were Nobly entertained.

The next Place that opposed him in his intended Conquest, was Tournay, which despairing of succour, after many fierce Assaults, yielded; and on condition of their paying 10000l. the Citizens were received into Henry's Protection, and Wolsey his Almoner, took an Oath of Allegiance of them, to be True to him, as his own Subjects. However, in his Absence the Scots Invaded England with 8000 Men, under the Command of the Lord Humes, and did great mischief; but as they were returning with their Plunder, Sir William Bulmer who lay in wait with 1000 Archers, put them to the Rout in a sharp Fight, slew 500, and took 400 Prisoners, and recovered all the Booty; fo that those who had the luck to Escape returned Poor and Beggarly into Scotland. But King James the Fourth, to revenge this diffrace, raifed the Power of his Kingdom, and come before the Castle of Norham, (some Historians fay with 100000 Fighting Men) which he Took, by reason the Captain being prodigal of his Powder, too foon spent it. But the Earl of Surry Marching against the Battel of Floden Field was Fought, September 9, in which the Victory fell to the English; the Scots King, 2 Bishops, 12 Earls, 14 Lords, and 12000 others of lesser note, being flain. For this good Service the Earl of Surry was Created Duke of Norfolk, Charles Brandon Viscount Lysle, Duke of Suffolk, and Woolsey was made Bishop of Lincoln, and after some Bickerings with the French on the Coast of Normandy, King Lewis, stricken much in Years, fued for Peace; and the better to confirm it, Married the Lady Mary, Second Sister to King Henry, a Young and very Beautiful Lady, at whose Wedding and Coronation many brave feats of Chivalry were performed by the English Nobility and Gentry, who waited on her: But Lewis the 12th Dying three Months after this Marriage, she returned again for England, and with the King's private consent was Married to Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, who had a long time been her Lover.

Woolfey, who was a Butchers Son at Ipswich, now began to rife a pace; for Doctor Bambridge dying, he was made Arch-Bishop, (and after, by the Pope, Cardinal) of York, which puffed him up with so much Pride, that he undertook to Rule the King and Kingdom, doing for a time, without controul, what he listed, placing and displacing Officers, and meddling in all Affairs where there was Advantage or Homage to be gained: Especially when made Lord Chancelour, and Counsellour of State; demanding Accounts of the Treasurers, Captains, and other Officers that had been in the Wars; by which he got much Money out of some that were Rich; and those that could not furnish him, he Punished and Imprisoned; Erecting Courts of his own head, and by subtilty got himself to be made the Popes Legat; and to Build two Colledges, by the

Popes Hh4

Popes permission, suppressed and seized on the Lands & Effects of many Religious Houses, which gave an inlet to King Henry's suppressing the rest some time after; who concluded if it were not Sacriledge in the Pope, but he could alow of it at pleasure, it would be none in him. However, this Cardinal was sent on several Honourable Embassies, wherein he behaved himself so Proudly, Naming the King but in the Second place, as Ego et Rex meus, I and my King; That Forreigners admired how such Arrogancy could be suffered by any Prince in his Subject; but his Fall was swifter than his Rise; so that what he chiefly aimed at, (viz. to be Elected Pope, in making Interest for which promotion at Rome, and in other Courts, it had cost England vast sums of Money) he never attained to.

For King Henry growing into a dislike of the Marriage between him and the Lady Catharine, of Spain, because she had been his Brother Arthur's Wife, tho indeed (as it after appeared) rather by a Divorce to make way for a fresh Beauty, the Cardinals delays and crossing the Kings haste in this purpose, made him fall into disgrace, which brought him to his End; as will by and by be manifested.

The King by Riotous Living at home, and Expences in Forveign Courts, where Ambassadors (especially Woolsey) were attended with such State that they rather seemed the King himself, than his Representatives; had now pretty well emptied his Cossers, which put him into some discontent: But Woolsey, both to Enrich the King and himself, laid hold of his Melaucholy and Wants, as a savourable opportunity, of his own Authority granted out Commissions under the Great Seal for Levying a Tax all over England and Wales, according to the true value of every Mans Estate, viz. Of every Fifty Pound value, and upwards, Four Shillings in the Pound; and for every Pound above Twenty, and under Fifty, two Shillings; and all under Twenty, Twelve Pence in the Pound; and in London he appointed himself chief Commissioner: And by another Commission the Clergy, without exception, were Taxed Four Shillings in the Pound for their Livings.

This seemed so grievous to all forts of People, so great a Tax never having been laid on them before, and this done without Authority of Parliament, that the Meaner fort grievously Cursed the Author and Contriver of their Miseries; and those more discreet, laboured for these Reasons to have the Commission Revoked.

1. Because the Commissions were not established or grounded on the Laws of the Kingdom.

2. Because the Execution of them would be a dangerous President against the Liberty and Freedom of the People of England in time to come,

3. Because Mens Credits many times exceeded their Estates, and to bring them upon Oath, or other ways to discover that, it would prove their Ruin.

And Lastly, That not one in ten had the value demanded in Plate or Ready Money; and if they parted with so much, Trade must cease for want of Coin to Trade with.

But these and many more Reasons prevailed not, till the King perceived the Peoples discontents every where so great, that he feared a general Insurrection; and then he sent his Letters to countermand the Commission, dissembling that he knew any thing of those Commissions that had been given out to Levy the Tax; and the Cardinal seeing his Project frustrated, and sawningly to excuse himself to the People, he certified in all Counties by his Letters, viz. That because he saw those Taxes were too grievous for them to bear, he had in compassion to them, kneeled to the King, and and prevailed with him to Revoke the Commissions: Yet few believed him, for the greater part were satisfied that it was done against his mind, and that he inwardly fretted at the disappointment, it being the first rub that had checked his Arbitrary Will. When to spend his Gaul on some body, and ease his Anger, he after he had given the King Hampton Court, and all his sine Buildings there, in exchange for his Palace of Richmond, prevailed to have the ordering the King's Household; which was no sooner granted, but he turned out all worthy deserving Persons, and Sold their Places and Offices to such as would be more obedient to him.

About this time the French King requested the Lady Mary, King Henry's Daughter, to be given in Marriage to the Dauphin his Son; but whilst this Match was folicited, and by fome liked, and by others disapproved, a Scruple was cast in the way (as most thought upon the secret intimation of Woolsey, in despight to the Emperour, because by Strength he had not made him Pope, when by his Money and Policy he had failed to obtain it) by the President of Paris, who Questioned Whether the Lady was Legitimate, as Born in Lawful Matrimony, feeing she was Begetten on the Body of the Lady Catharine, who had been his Brother Arthur's Wife. This made the Lawfulness of the King's Marriage be called in Que stian, and himself so averse to it, that (by the Counse) of Doctor Longland his Confessor, who told him is had Lived Incestuously almost twenty Years)he for sook the Queen's Bed, to her great grief and discontent: And however, tho' upon this pretence the Match was broken off, yet Woolsey was sent over, who concluded Peace with the French King.

The Legality of the King's Marriage, after this coming hotly to be Disputed, to determine which, the Pope sent Campeius with a power Legantine, which the alfogranted to Woolfey; and fo the two Legates reparing to the Queen to Inform her of their Power and Authority, which she took very uneasy, sharply telling Woolsey, He was the first causer of this scruple, to be Revenged on her Nephew, because he had not made him Pope; and on her, because she had secretly in a loving and gentle manner, often times Admonished him of his Coveteousness and Tyrany, his Extortions and Oppressions, his Pride and Lechery, But with protestations he laboured to excuse it, as if he had been altogether Ignorant of the matter, and proceeded to erect a stately Court for himself and his Brother Cardinal, in the Black Fryars in London, where the King and Queen were Cited and Appeared: The King protested. That nothing but his trouble of Conscience could make him part with so Tender and Loving a Wife; and if with the removal of that scruple he could Cohabit with her be should be exceeding Joyful. But those that knew what little Scruples this King made in other weighty matters, did not lean greatly on the truth of what he faid; however the Queen, advised by her Councel, appealed to the Court of Rome. But her Appeal was not allowed; and tho' the King defired a quick dispatch, the business was delayed: Yet they proceeded to fit Weekly, and hear Learned Disputes on the matter.

At length the King being informed, That after the Last day of July the Legates would sit no more till the Fourth of Ottober; in a great passion he sent the Dukes of Norfolk, Suffolk, and other Lords, to demand a dispatch to the Judicial Sentence, one way or the other. Campeius Answered, It could not be done so soon, for by the Tearly Custom of the Court of Rome, they were bound to Adjourn; and if any Sentence in the interim was given, it was utterly void in Law. At this the Duke of Suffolk, in a Rage struck his Fist on the Table, saying, That never Cardinal nor Legate did any good in England; and whilst was an ordinary Pedagogue, or Schoolmaster. But at the fight of Sir William Kingstone, Constable of the Tower. with a Guard of Yeomen, to convey him Prisoner thither, his fears so encreased, that he fell Sick at Leicester Abby, and taking a strong Confection, which some suppose he did purposely to Poison himself, he breathed his last; saying a little before he Dyed, If he had Served bis God so faithfully as he had done his King, he would not at that time have cast him off. And thus fell that Pageant of fuddain Greatness, unpitied by all, Inriching fome by his Death, tho' in his Life-time he had Ruined many more. He Built White-Hall, a stately Colledge at Oxford, another at Ipswich, and many other stately Buildings; leaving much Money, Plate, and Rich Furniture, which was feized to the Kings ufe, who distributed part of it, and his Lands, among such as had well deferved.

The King by this time having gotten it under the Seals of most of the Universities in Christendom, That his Marriage was Unlawful, procured a Divorce with out the Popes Dispensation; and soon after he Married Anna Bullen, whom he had Created Marchioness of Pembrook, a Protestant Lady, Daughter to the Lord

Rochford, afterwards Earl of Wilt/hire.

Elizabeth Barton, stiled the Holy Maid of Kent, for Prophecying That if King Henry proceeded to the Divorce, and Married another, he should not be King of England one Month after, was Hanged, together with

Seven of her Desciples, at Tyburn for Treason.

A Parliament being called, the Clergy therein totally fubmitted themselves to the King touching their Spiritual and Ecclefiastical Affaires, and the Pope was by Parliament utterly deprived of all Annates and First Fruits of Bishopricks, and other Spiritual Promotions: The Marriage with Queen Catherine was Annulled, and n Queen Anna Confirmed; and by the same Crown was entailed to the King and the his Body (out of which the Lady Mary was d) and to this all the Lords and Burgess prearliament were Sworn, except Doctor Fisher f Rochefter and Sir Thomas Moor, who refused Wherefore they were marked out by the Destruction as a Terror to others; for not using to Swear, but Contesting and Protesting the proceedings of the Parliament, they were he Tower, where upon denying the Kings Su-, Ordained by another Act, and atributing it ope, they were Accused, Tryed, Convicted, eaded: And by this Act the King was Acged to be Supream Head of the Church in all and Ecclesiaftical Things and Causes, and the alls, Pardons, Indulgences, and other Instruthe like Nature, made void: For Grief of nd her own hard Usage, Queen Catharine who d Dowager, and Lived with a small Attendance, and Dyed; nor did her Successor long fur-me time after Queen Ann had been fafely def the Princes's Elizabeth, (who was afterwards England) a Conspiracy was laid to take away supposedly on the account of her Religion; of the Romish party were not without supshe swayed much in those Alterations; and being Accused of Incest by some of her Subedchamber-Women, as if she had Layn with d Rochford, her own Brother; the furious e her up to be Tryed by her Enemies; who er Guilty of High Treason, for that being a he had defiled her Marriage-Bed; and being hed, she was Beheaded on Tower-Hill, protest-

490 whilst the King was expecting a final Determination Campeius seeing a Storm likely to arise, thought sit to be packing for Rome, pretending the Pope had fent for him: Upon notice of this, the King was much perplexed, as knowing they defigned to fix it in the Court of Rome, to tire him out with vast Expences and Delays: fo that from that time Cardinal Woolfey began to fall from his favour: For having fecretly promifed a Divorce, yet fearing to displease the Court of Rome, he had now refused it. And the next Term the King caused his Attourney General to prefer an Indictment against him, on the Statute of Premunive, on several Articles, which being found by the Grand Jury, he Confessed all the material points by his Attourney: And all his Promotions, except the Arch-Bishoprick of York and the Bishoprick of Winchester, were taken from him; and Sir Thomas Moor was made Lord Chancellour. The King likewise seized his Mass of Plate, and Rich Furniture, and confined him to his House at Asher near Kingstone.

A Parliament being Assembled, the Commons made great complaints against the Clergy, exhibiting divers Articles relating to their Pride, Luxurious way of Living, Trading as Husbandmen, and Merchants, to the Injury of those brought up to it, &c.

This was strongly opposed by Dr. Fisher Bishop of Rochester, who Reflecting on the Commons (by faying Now with our Commons is nothing but Down with the Church; and all this is for lack of Faith only) they complained of it to the King, by Sir Thomas Audley their Speaker, and others; but the Bishop excusing himself by putting another Interpretation on the meaning of his Words, they were contented with the King's sharp ly reprehending him; and then they proceeded to Article against Woolsey under several Heads, Charging him with Misleading and Abusing the King, wasting and purloining the Treasure; That in his Letters he had Written I and my King, as if the King had been his Inferiour, and at bis Command. To be brief, they loaded him with Pride, Cruelty, Oppression, Lecbery, Evil Counsel, &c. However the King, by reason of his sormer Favour, permitted him to retire to the Arch-Bishoprick of York. and there continue privately till further orders. But he tampering with the Pope, and being encouraged by his Letters to oppose the King, and force him if he would not otherways comply, to restore him to Favour, or else by virtue of a Bull to Curse him, and take the power of the Clergy Government into his own hands, as the Popes Vice Roy; whilst he was in his way to York, and preparing for his Installment, he was Arrested by the Earl of Northumberland: whereupon he shewed the Meanness of his Spirit and Birth, as all Cruel, Proud Upstarts usually do, when they fall into any affliction, though in their prosperity they are regardless of others Calamities, but rather labour to promote than decrease them: For however upon his first being seized, thinking to terrify the Earl, who never bore any good-will towards him, he told him He was a Member of the Colledge of Cardinals at Rome, and that neither the King, nor any other Temporal Prince, could or ought to Intermeddle with bim for any Cause or Matter what soever. But this nothing availing, he fell into Tremblings and Frights, and when the Kings Letter was produced to give him some beams of Comfort, that he might not altogether despair of Mercy and Favour, with a fordid Meanness of Spirit, he fell on his knees in a dirty place, and kissed it, shedding Tears for Joy; when in the height of his State and Pride, he had accounted the King as his Pupil, more than his Soveraign: For indeed his first Station in the World was an ordinary Pedagogue, or Schoolmaster. But at the fight of Sir William King stone, Constable of the Tower, with a Guard of Yeomen, to convey him Prisoner thi. ther, his fears so encreased, that he fell Sick at Leicester Abby, and taking a strong Confection, which some suppose he did purposely to Poison himself, he breathed his last; saying a little before he Dyed, If he had Ser. ved bis God so faithfully as he had done his King, he would not at that time have cast him off. And thus fell that Pageant of fuddain Greatness, unpitied by all, Inriching fome by his Death, tho' in his Life-time he had Ruined many more. He Built White-Hall, a stately Colledge at Oxford, another at Ipswich, and many other stately Buildings; leaving much Money, Plate, and Rich Furniture, which was feized to the Kings ufe, who distributed part of it, and his Lands, among such as had well deferved.

The King by this time having gotten it under the Seals of most of the Universities in Christendom, That his Marriage was Unlawful, procured a Divorce with out the Popes Dispensation; and soon after he Marn ed Anna Bullen, whom he had Created Marchioness of Pembrook, a Protestant Lady, Daughter to the Lord

Rochford, afterwards Earl of Wilt/hire.

Elizabeth Barton, stiled the Holy Maid of Kent, for Prophecying That if King Henry proceeded to the Divorce, and Married another, he should not be King of England one Month after, was Hanged, together with

Seven of her Desciples, at Tyburn for Treason. A Parliament being called, the Clergy therein totally fubmitted themselves to the King touching their Spiritual and Ecclesiastical Affaires, and the Pope was by Parliament utterly deprived of all Annates and First Fruits of Bishopricks, and other Spiritual Promotions

The Marriage with Queen Catherine was Annulled, and

h Queen Anna Confirmed; and by the same Crown was entailed to the King and the his Body (out of which the Lady Mary was d) and to this all the Lords and Burgess prearliament were Sworn, except Doctor Fisher f Rochester and Sir Thomas Moor, who refused Wherefore they were marked out by the Destruction as a Terror to others; for not using to Swear, but Contesting and Protesting he proceedings of the Parliament, they were he Tower, where upon denying the Kings Su-, Ordained by another Act, and atributing it ope, they were Accused, Tryed, Convicted, eaded: And by this Act the King was Acged to be Supream Head of the Church in all and Ecclesiaftical Things and Causes, and the alls, Pardons, Indulgences, and other Instruthe like Nature, made void: For Grief of nd her own hard Usage, Queen Catharine who d Dowager, and Lived with a small Attendance, me time after Queen Ann had been safely def the Princess Elizabeth, (who was afterwards England) a Conspiracy was laid to take away supposedly on the account of her Religion; of the Romish party were not without supshe swayed much in those Alterations; and being Accused of Incest by some of her Subedchamber-Women, as if she had Layn with d Rochford, her own Brother; the furious e her up to be Tryed by her Enemies; who r Guilty of High Treason, for that being a he had defiled her Marriage-Bed; and being ed, she was Beheaded on Tower-Hill, protest-and Dyed; nor did her Successor long fur-

ing

was an ordinary Pedagogue, or Schoolmaster. Bu fight of Sir William Kingstone, Constable of the with a Guard of Yeomen, to convey him Priso ther, his fears so encreased, that he fell Sick at Abby, and taking a strong Confection, which suppose he did purposely to Poison himself, he b his last; saying a little before he Dyed, If he ved bis God so faithfully as he had done his King, not at that time have cast him off. And thus f Pageant of fuddain Greatness, unpitied by all, ing fome by his Death, tho' in his Life-time Ruined many more. He Built White-Hall, a Colledge at Oxford, another at Ipswich, and man stately Buildings; leaving much Money, Pla Rich Furniture, which was seized to the Kin who distributed part of it, and his Lands, amo as had well deferved.

The King by this time having gotten it un Seals of most of the Universities in Christendon his Marriage was Unlawful, procured a Divor out the Popes Dispensation; and soon after he ed Anna Bullen, whom he had Created Marchi Pembrook, a Protestant Lady, Daughter to th Rochford, afterwards Earl of Wilt/hire.

Elizabeth Barton, stiled the Holy Maid of R Prophecying That if King Henry proceeded to vorce, and Married another, he should not be England one Month after, was Hanged, togeth Seven of her Desciples, at Tyburn for Treason.

A Parliament being called, the Clergy therei fubmitted themselves to the King touching th ritual and Ecclefiastical Affaires, and the Pope Parliament utterly deprived of all Annates a Fruits of Bishopricks, and other Spiritual Pron The Marriage with Queen Catherine was Annu that with Queen Anna Confirmed; and by the same Act the Crown was entailed to the King and the Heirs of his Body (out of which the Lady Mary was Excluded) and to this all the Lords and Burgeis present in Parliament were Sworn, except Doctor Fisher Bishop of Rochester and Sir Thomas Moor, who refused to do it: Wherefore they were marked out by the King for Destruction as a Terror to others; for not only Refusing to Swear, but Contesting and Protesting against the proceedings of the Parliament, they were fent to the Tower, where upon denying the Kings Supremacy, Ordained by another Act, and atributing it to the Pope, they were Accused, Tryed, Convicted, and Beheaded: And by this Act the King was Acknowledged to be Supream Head of the Church in all Spiritual and Ecclesiastical Things and Causes, and the Popes Bulls, Pardons, Indulgences, and other Instruments of the like Nature, made void: For Grief of which, and her own hard Ufage, Queen Catharine who was stiled Dowager, and Lived with a small Attendance, Sickened and Dyed; nor did her Successor long furvive her.

For some time after Queen Ann had been fafely delivered of the Princess Elizabeth, (who was afterwards Queen of England) a Conspiracy was laid to take away her Life, supposedly on the account of her Religion; for some of the Romish party were not without supposition she swayed much in those Alterations; and therefore being Accused of Incest by some of her Subborned Bedchamber-Women, as if she had Layn with the Lord Rochford, her own Brother; the furious King gave her up to be Tryed by her Enemies; who found her Guilty of High Treason, for that being a Queen, she had defiled her Marriage-Bed; and being Condemned, she was Beheaded on Tower-Hill, protesting her Innocency to the last, which most people be lieved. The Lord Rochford was likewise Executed. and some of her Bedchamber Attendants; but the Kings hasty Marriage, makes Historians apt to conclude. he grew weary of her, and doated on a fresh Beauty; for within Twenty Days he Wedded the Lady Jane Seymor, a Beautiful Young Gentlewoman, who Dyed in Child-Bed of Prince Edward, afterward King Edward the Sixth; and about this time the Lord Howard lost his Head for Marrying Margaret, Daughter to Margaret Sister to the King, and Archibald Dowglas Earl of Angus, who Married the Queen Dowager of Scotland; and their Issue being so of the Royal Blood, it was held Treason in the Lord Howard, for Marrying her without King Henry's confent, to whom he was a Subject; and indeed, so Absolute was this King over his Judges and Ministers of State, that they rarely denied him any Head he required, for fear he should Quarel with them for theirs. And now a Book of Six Articles, called the Bloody Articles, from the much Blood shed on that occasion, being made publick, the People rose in Arms Tumultuoully; but upon the King's and his Generals Approach in Lincolnshire, and the North, they were Dispersed, and many of the Ringleaders Taken, and Executed. The Articles were these:

1. That after the speaking the Words of Consecration by the Priest, The Real Natural Body and Blood of Christ, & be was Conceived and Crucified, was in the Sacrament, and no other Substance.

2. That the Communion in both kinds, is not necessar. to Salvation.

3. That Priefls may not Marry.

Laws of God.

5. That private Mass ought to be continued.

Bi That Auriculae Confession in Expedient to be retained in the Church.

And upon the denyal of these, many good Christians suffered the Flames; and several Papests were Executed for denying the King's Supremacy, it being made Sheher (of Retinal Peat, and Prignanolson

The Lord Crommell, a Blacksmiths Son of Putney in Surry, who had a long time Served Wolfey and by the King raifed upon the fall of that Favourite, was made Vicar General of Ecclefastical Assairs, and soon after created Earl of Effen; and to please the King by Enriching him, for complaining of the Lewd Lives of the Monks, Fryars, Nuns, and their Superiours, who Lived in Luxury and Ease, on the spoil and labour of others, he was foon incited to harken to his Advice; so that laying before him the great Sums that would accrue to his Treasury by the suppression of those Houses, he considering what Wolsey had done by the Popes Approbation and Authority, resolved to make havock of the rest; and accordingly calling a Parliament at Westminster, he procured them to be suppressed; and tho' most of the Religious Houses were Demolished. yet at a Rate no doubt half the value, the Account given in to the King was 183707l. 13s. per Amum. And intending Posterity should not be enabled to Restore them again to their former Uses, he liberally exchanged the Abby-Lands, &c. with the Gentry, for lands of a less value; so that at this day most of the principal Estates, or great part of them, consist of posfellions of that nature.

This was followed with a very bloody Execution. for the King being Jealous that many dealt with Car-4. That Vows of Chastity ought to be observed by the dinali Post, who was beyond Seas, to prevail with the Pope and King of France, by Force to restore the Rights ofthe Roman Catholick Church, it was improved to far 6. That Modifi by fuch Evidence as were produced, what the Marchel of Exceter, Henry Pool, Lord Montacute, and Sit Nicholas Cary, Knight of the Garder, and Mafter of the King's Horse, were Beheaded; and on the same account, with in a few Months after, the Lady Margaret Counters of Salisbury, Mother to Cardinal Pool, and Daughter to Te Duke of Charence, Brother to Edward the Fourth; lallo Gartrude Widow to the Marques of Exceter, six Adria Fortescue, and divers others, were Executed, infomuch that the Hangman of those times is said to have continued.

plained. That he was weary of shedding Rhoded beisen Soon after this, the Irifh Rebelled under On Want O Donel, and others, but were foon suppressed by the Lord Grey Deputy of Ireland. And now the word Cromwell, being high in favour with the King, Enterprized a buliness that not only tumbled him from the ticklish Pinacle of Honour where he stood burisho cost him his Life. The King by the Death of the Lady Jane Seymour was a Widower and that he might not lye pensive alone, Crommell undertook to provide him a Wife, and proposed the Lady Ann of Cleve, Alluring him with flattering Pictures, and unmerited immoderate Commendations of her Beauty and Parts; butindeed, tho' she was very Religious, and replenished with many Virtues, in Person and Countenance she was not ther well Composed, Fair, nor Lovely: yet, on Crow well's Commendations, the Matchiwas concluded; and the Lady brought over in great State: But when the King met her on Black-Heath, at the first fight he took a diflike; infomuch that although he was Married to her four Years, he in all that time, had not (as he protested) any Carnal knowledge of her, nor ever could have any defires that way when in private with her; whereupon in a Convocation of the Clergy, by an Atthentick Instrument under the Seals of the two ArthBillops, the Marriage was declared void, and that the Lidy might take another Husband when the pleafed and it was made Treafon for any to Write or Say the contrary, and the King being in hafte, Married the Lady Catharine Howard, Daughter to the Lord Edmund Howard, Brother to the Duke of Norfok.

The Wedding was no fooner over, but the King gave way to the Enemies of the Lord Cromwell, who Exhibited a Bill against him in Parliament for Treason; Misprison of Treason, and Heresie 2 and so far they prevailed, by the King's altogether withdrawing his Favour and Protection from him, that he with the Lord Hungerford lost his Head on Tower-Hill. And soon after the new Queen Catharine was Accused for having been Familiar before her Marriage with one Francis Dorbam, and after with one Thomas Culpeper; but whether it be True or Falfe, the two Gentlemen lost their Lives, as did the Queen and Lady Rochford, who was accused of Introducing Culpeper, at a time he stay'd five Hours privately with the Queen, on her Progress. and returned Gifted with a Chain and Rich Cap. And in this Parliament the King was Proclaimed King of Ireland, which Title his Predecessors never had, being only stilled Lords of Ireland . . hero, specif

The King, unwilling yet to Lye alone, took to Wife the Lady Cacharine Par, Widow to the Lord Lattimer, who in the end of his Reign-was in a fair possibility to have kift her Head; if her Vertue, Modesty, and the King's Death, had not reserved her to a better Fortune. However, the Lord Gray, Deputy of Ireland, lost his Head, for winking (as it was alledged against him) at the Fight entering within the English Pale, and not timely Repelling them.

Sit Edmund Knevet of Norfolk, having been Arraigned before the Green Cloth, for Striking one Mr. Char of Norfolk

Nonfolk within the Tennis Court of the King's House and being found Guilky, he had Judgment to lole his Right Hand, and to forfeit all his Lands and Goods and all things being prepared for the Execution of this Sentence, and Sir Edmund brought in the Chief Justice declared his Offence, which he Confessed, and humbly submitted himself to the King's Merey, only he desired the King would spare his Right Hand, and take his Left; For, faid he, if my Right Hand be spared, I man Live to do the King good Sarvices. Of which Submission and Saying when the King was informed, he ordered he should lose neither of his Hands, and Pardoned himselfo as to his Lands and Goods.

The Scots had lain still a long while; but now began under James the Fifth, their Young King, to make great Disturbances; but after some Bickerings, and much Spoil in either Country, they were Overthrown; and the Earls of Cassels and Glencarn, the Lords Maxwell, Fleming, Sommervel, Oliphant, Gray and Car, were made Prisoners; and many Slain. The News of this Overthrow somerplexed King James, That salling into a deep Grief and Melancholly, he Dyed a week after, leaving only a Daughter to Succeed him, who was then but newly Born, and Christened Mary. Upon notice of whose Birth, when he lay Sick, he burst out in this Prophetical Saying, It came with a Lass, (meaning the Crown) and it will go with a Lass, (meaning the Crown) and it will go with a Lass.

Soon after the King of Scott Death, the Lords that were Prisoners in England, the curry favour, for their Liberty, proposed a March between Prince Edward, Henry's Son, and their Young Queen; which was kindly accepted. The Match being proposed to the Parlie ament of Scotland, they seemed highly to approve it, ratifying a Writing under the Hands and Seals of the Nobility, as also with their Oaths, yet the Entrack favour cion to prevailed that is came to nothing. But King Elemyenraged to be thus abided, Went a powerful Army into Scotland, Which Spoiled the Country, taking feveral Towns and great Plunder; nor was the King flow to raffi over to France, where laying Siege to Bullen, he had it vielded so him, and having Fortified it, returned into England to raffe Money for & Supply of the War which (tho' the Emperour without his confent had made a Peace with France) he resolved vigorously to profecute: and because Richard Read, an Alderman, refused Sir Thomas Wryothstey the Chancellor, the Supply he demanded of him, he was compelled in Person to Serve the King in his Wars against the Scots, by whom he was taken Prisoner, and paid a large Ransom. And foon after the French were worsted by Sea, and Land, and the Scots Routed, who Invaded England, and followed into their Country: Whereupon Peace enfued between England and France. Soon after the King tavelling with the Duke of Norfolk and his Son the Earl of Surry, for bearing in their Escutchion certain Arms appropriated to the King and Prince only, tho they had been born by his Ancestors time out of mind unquestioned; being Indicted for High Treason, they were both Condemned: The Son was Beheaded, and the Father escaped by the King's Death, which soon enflued, viz. on Tuesday the 28th of January Anno Dom. 1546, in the 56th Year of his Age, when he had Reigned 37 Years, 9 Months, and 6 Days. He was Buryed with much pomp and Funeral solemnity in the Chappel at Windfor.

In this King's time happened a great Famin, viz. 1527, upon the falling of a violent Raine, November, December and January; and from the 12th of April every day till the 3d of June.

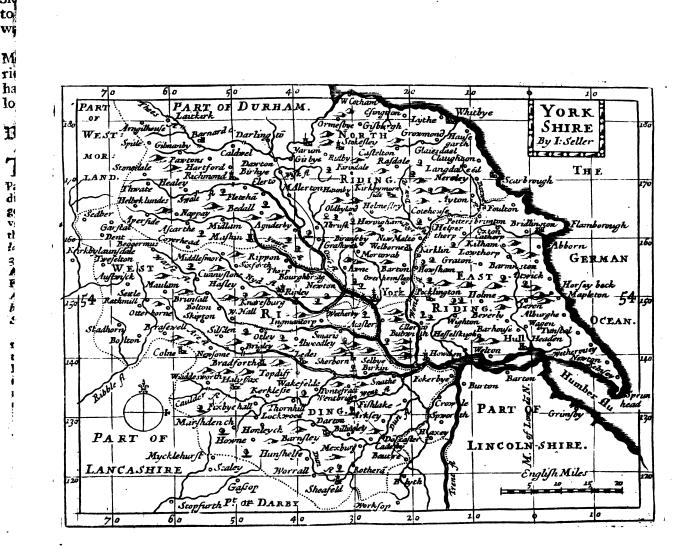

Anno 1545, William Foxley Potmaker to the Mint, 113 Slept Slept in the Tower of London, not being by any mean to be Waked 4 Days and 15 Nighta; and when he waked it feemed to him but as one Night, and when he

The Number of Religious Houses Suppressed were Monasteries 3, 3, Priories 290, Friances 122, Number ies 142, Colledges 152, Hospitals 129, and their Inhabitants turned out to wander in the Fields, after long Ease and Luxury.

Remarks on Porkshire in its three Rivings.

This is the largest Shire in England, and not inseriour to some of the biggest Provinces in France. It is divided into three Parts or Ridings, viz. The North, East, and West Ridings. It pluduces store of Hortes, large Cattle, Sheep, and in many places very good Corn and Pastures, great quantities of Weollen Cloth, and very Subtil People. It is Bounded with the Bishopriok of Durbon, the German Ocian, Lincolnshire, Derbyshire, Lancashire, and Westmans and Rivers of which the Humber is the chief, it City, which is in Archiepiscopal See, viz. Tork, 14 Castles, 62 Bridges, 4 Chases, 3 Forrests, and 72 Parks. It sends Members to Parliament 30, viz. Alborough 2, Beverly 2, Borrough-Bridge 2, Hildon 2, Hull 2, Knowledge 2, Malton 2, North-Alerton 2, Pomstret 2, Richmond 2, Rippon 2, Starborough 2, Thrisk 2, Tork City 2, and 2 Knights of the Shire York is the Second City of England: Severus the Raman Emperour kept his Court and Dycd in it; alfo Conftantius Chlorus, Father to Constantine the Great,, here the Learned Alcum, Tutor-to the Emperour Charles the Great was Born; it was made an Archiepilcopal See Anno 62's, and as fituate on the River Oufe, which Water a great part of the Shire. At Leeds, Ofwey King of Northumberland Overthrew Ofwald, Ethelbert, and Penda, three Saxan Princes, flaging the two latter; Selby gave Birth to King Henry the First; Water field is famed for its Cloth Work, and the memorable Battel fought between the Houses of Tork and Lancaster; and that in the late Civil Wars between the Earl of Newcastle and Six Thomas Fairfax. Pomfret Cafile was Builded by Hildebert Lacy a Norman; at Rothman was Born Thomas of Rotheram Arch-Bishop of Tork. Stanford Bridge, in the East Riding, from a Battel fought against the Danes, is called Battel Bridge. Dryfield is noted for the Tomb of Alfrid, King of Northumberland. Beverly as the Eirthplace of John D' Beverly, Arch

Billiop of Asta Amely as Newhouse Abby is fauted for the Name it gives to our old English Hiltorian William of Newborough, Kingston upon Hull, was Founded by King Edward the First.

This Shire affoards fibre of Tron, Pit-Coal, and Sca-Coal; at Whithy are Stones of a Serpentine figure; near Eurrough Bridge are 4 Piramidal Stones, supposed fome Roman Monument; on Rejemacy Joping, are Stones found like Sea Wincles and Cockles, at Giglewith are 3 Springs, one of which constantly Ebbs and Flows four times an Hour; in the North are Tingtong Wells, failt to be three Miles in the Earth; and near Knarsborough the Well Dripa, whole Water, diffills from a Rock that, hangs over it. The Castles of note are those of Sheffield, Coning shorwayb, Tickil, Sandal, Harwood, Knasborough, Cawood, Scarborough, Kilton, Skelton, Gre. On Wakefield Bridge stands a Chappel Founded by Edward the Fourth, in memory of the Bactel fought there; near Flamborough-Haad are Waters called Visitis, which show out of the Springs every other Year, and fell visitished when the Springs every other Year, and fall violently into the Sea. The Seats of the Nobility are Sheffeild-Manner, belonging to the Duke of Norfolk; Bishops-Hill and Hemsey Castle, to the late Duke of Buckingham; Slingsby Castle, to the Honourable Family of Newcastle's Snap, to the Earl of Exceter, Markin-field, to the Earl of Bridgwater; Mulgrave Castle, to the Earl of Mulgrave: Shipton Castle. to the Earl of Thanet; Namort Caffle, to the Earl of Carlifle; Wharlton Caftle and Japons Abby, to the Earl of Ailesbury; Lounsborough, Boiton, and Braden Tower, to the Earl of Burlington; Hall and Wimbledon, to the Duke of Leeds; Thorn-Hill, to the Earl of Macclesfield; Hackforth, Anderly Le Miers, to the Earl of Holderness; Newborough Abby, Coxwold Hall, Oulfton Hall, Aldwark and Murton, to the Lord Faulconberg; Wressel Castle, to the Duke of Richmond; Easty Hall. to the Lord Eure, Baron of Witton; Wheldrake, to the Lord Howard of Escrick; Holm in Spadingmore, and Dalton, to the Lord Lexinton; Wilton Caffle; to the Lord Corporalles; Bishopsthorp, to the Arch-Bishop of the Province.

The Reign of King EDWARD the Sixth.

Eighth, was Crowned at Westminster, January 28, Anno Dom. 1547, and Edward Seymour, Created Duke

keep the 6th of August, on which the Rebels were Beaten off, yearly Holyday; and indeed they were so obstinate, that till they had been four times worsted by the Lord Russel, they gave not over, tho' the King offered them pardon; however many of the Ringleaders being Taken, were Executed; and among others the Mayor of Bodmin was Hanged; also a Millers Man, who took upon him his Masters Name and Cause, till seeing he was about to Susser, he recanted and cryed out, He was not the Miller but his Man, and that his Master Ordered him to do what he had done. To which Sir Anthony Kingsson, Marshal of the Field, told him, He could never do his Master better Service than to Hang for him; and so not being credited, he was turned off.

Long these Western Troubles had not been alayed. but others broke out as dangerous in the north, under pretence of throwing down Inclosures and Parks, that had been taken from the Waite, which the Common fort of people claimed as their Right. This was chiefly Headed by Robert Ket, who took the City of Norwich. But the Lord Dudley put them to the Rout, caused Ket to be Hanged in Chaines on the top of the Castle, and 60 others in divers places, 9 of them in the Oak of Reformation, a Tree in which Ket used to sit to Judg and Determine of their intended purposes and proceeding, as also to order Parties out to Plunder the Houses of fuch as he judged not well affected to their Cause. In Yorkshire others Rose under the Leading of William Omble, a Yeoman, Thomas Dale, a Parish-Clerk, and one Stephens a Postmaster; but the King sending down his Pardon, the common fort left their Leaders to be Lead to York, where they were Executed.

The French taking the Advantage of these Tumults, Besseged Bullen, and sent a Fleet to pillage the Islands of Jersey and Guernsey; from the Islands they were beaten

en with the loss of 1000 Men, and few on our side, on the Main Land having won the out-works of whilst they pretended to Parley with the Engy forcibly entered the Town, and after that, luced all the Forts and Castles near it, except, which held out till the Winter made them
essiege.

have heard how the Lord Admiral was reout of the way, and now the Duke of Somerset ther is to go next: For his greatest Enemy, Earl of Warwick, delay'd not to make a strong rainst him; upon secret notice of which, he beh the King at Hampton Court, sent dispatches to d Mayor and Aldermen of London, immediately him 1000 Armed Men to defend the King's and himself, against the Treachery and Vioat threatened them; and that Night removed e King to Windfor Caftle; upon this, the Earl of Assembled the Privy Counsellours, and other at London, making grievous complaints against te, and amongst others. That he had laid wait Head; and so Inveggled them, that they joyned m to fend their Letters to the Citizens to Levy for their use, in order to Rescue the King out hands of his Enemies; and as the chief of them, med the Protector; sending abroad Proclamaherein they lay'd many grievous Crimes to his as his Male Administration of Government, and t Mischiess that had thereby befallen the Kingdom; verting the Publick Treasure to his Private Use, his uring to set the Peers at Variance, &c.

Duke upon this, finding he Londoners denyed d, but on the contrary had affifted his Advertised with 400 Armed Men, who had drawn the Peers to his side, and that contrary to his

402

of Somerset, Unkle to the King by the Mothers side, constituted Protector of the King's Person and of the Realm, during his Minority; and was sent by the Estates into Scotland, to require their Young Queen in Marriage with Edward, as had been agreed between them and the King's Father; but they refusing, a Battel was sought, in which the Scots were Routed, and 14000 of them Slain, among which were divers of the Nobility; whereupon a great many Towns and Gastles fell into the hands of the English. This Battel was sought at Musselburg the 10th of September, in which the whole Power of that Kingdom was so broken, that in many Years they could not recover their former Strength. However the Winter coming on, the English Army retired into the Northern Borders.

The next thing taken in hand was to reform Religion; and after some contests, King Henry's disannuling the Pope's Supremacy, was confirmed, and whatsoever in his time had been Enacted against the Authority of the See of Rome: Images and Statues were cast out of the Churches; The Clergy allowed to Marry; The Liturgy, or Common Prayer, turned into English; The Sacrament administred in both kinds; Auricular Confession abrogated; The Scriptures permitted publickly to be Read in English; Mass and Praying for the Dead silenced; and such of the Popish Clergy as would not Conform to this, outed; as Gardner Bishop of Winchester, Bonner of London, Tanstall of Durham, Day of Chichester, and some others; Gardener for contempt was Imprisoned; and most of the Bishopricks feized into the King's hands, and bestowed on such as would Conform, tho' the Nobles much fleeced the Churches Patrimony to enrich themselves.

The Scots by this time having taken breath, surprised Humes and Fas-Caftle, Garisoned by the English, and sew flew most they found therein, through the carelesness of the Centinels; which made the Earl of Rutland demolish Haddington, as a place not tenable, and so retired with the Garrison into England. And a contention arising between the Duke of Somerset Protector, and Sir Thomas Seymour his Younger Brother, who was Lord Admirál, upon a Quarrel happening between their Wives, the latter having Married Queen Catharine Par, Widow to Henry the Eighth, it went fo far, that the Admiral was Accused in Parliament of High Treason, in Conspiring to get the King into his hands, and by Marrying the Lady Elizabeth, to whom indeed he formerly made Courtship, in her Right, when the King should be made away, to Claim the Kingdom; and so unheard, being Attainted, he was Executed on a Scaffold at Tower-Hill, protesting to the last his Innocency touching the matter laid to his charge; and his Brother was by most blamed, for permitting him so easily to be cut off, and found, in the end, that it was chiefly contrived by his fecret Enemies, to lay him the opener to Destruction, which he Escaped not.

In these times of Reformation, Bucer, Fhagus, and Peter Martyr, three Learned German Divines, came over, but the two former soon Dying, Martyr Disputed at Oxford about the Sacraments, and other material Points; and caused a Book of the Disputation to be Printed, which opened the Eyes of many to see God's Truth, that by Popish Superstition, Error and Ignorance, had a long time been darkened. However the Popish Clergy stirred up divers to Rebel in Devonshire, Commal, and other parts of the Kingdom; and especially to the City of Exceter, which City for its Loyalty and stout Resistance, had not long after the Manner of Exilond bestowed upon it by the King, and in memory of their deliverance from a Sack that time, the Citizens

keep

keep the 6th of August, on which the Rebels were Beaten off, yearly Holyday; and indeed they were so obstinate, that till they had been four times worsted by the Lord Russel, they gave not over, tho' the King offered them pardon; however many of the Ringleaders being Taken, were Executed; and among others the Mayor of Bodmin was Hanged; also a Millers Man, who took upon him his Masters Name and Cause, till seeing he was about to Susser, he recanted and cryed out, He was not the Miller but his Man, and that his Master Ordered him to do what he had done. To which Sir Anthony Kingsson, Marshal of the Field, told him, He could never do his Master better Service than to Hang for him; and so not being credited, he was turned off.

Long these Western Troubles had not been alayed. but others broke out as dangerous in the north, under pretence of throwing down Inclosures and Parks, that had been taken from the Waite, which the Common fort of people claimed as their Right. This was chiefly Headed by Robert Ket, who took the City of Norwich. But the Lord Dudley put them to the Rout, caused Ket to be Hanged in Chaines on the top of the Castle, and 60 others in divers places, 9 of them in the Oak of Reformation, a Tree in which Ket, used to sit to Judg and Determine of their intended purposes and proceeding, as also to order Parties out to Plunder the Houses of fuch as he judged not well affected to their Caufe. In Yorkshire others Rose under the Leading of William Omble, a Yeoman, Thomas Dale, a Parish-Clerk, and one Stephens a Postmaster; but the King sending down his Pardon, the common fort left their Leaders to be Lead to York, where they were Executed.

The French taking the Advantage of these Tumults, Besseged Bullen, and sent a Fleet to pillage the Islands of Jersey and Guernsey; from the Islands they were beaten

en with the loss of 1000 Men, and few on our side; on the Main Land having won the out-works of whilst they pretended to Parley with the Englisheribly entered the Town, and after that, luced all the Forts and Castles near it, except, which held out till the Winter made them essiege.

have heard how the Lord Admiral was rebut of the way, and now the Duke of Somerset ther is to go next: For his greatest Enemy, Earl of Warwick, delay'd not to make a strong gainst him; upon secret notice of which, he beh the King at Hampton Court, sent dispatches to d Mayor and Aldermen of London, immediately him 1000 Armed Men to defend the King's and himself, against the Treachery and Vioat threatened them; and that Night removed e King to Windsor Castle; upon this, the Earl of Assembled the Privy Counsellours, and other at London, making grievous complaints against te, and amongst others. That he had laid wait Head; and so Invested them, that they joyned m to fend their Letters to the Citizens to Levy for their use, in order to Rescue the King out hands of his Enemies; and as the chief of them, med the Protector; sending abroad Proclamaherein they lay'd many grievous Crimes to his as his Male Administration of Government, and Mischiess that had thereby befallen the Kingdom: verting the Publick Treasure to his Private Use, his uring to set the Peers at Variance, &c.

Duke upon this, finding he Londoners denyed d, but on the contrary had affifted his Advertraick with 400 Armed Men, who had drawn the Peers to his side, and that contrary to keep the 6th of August, on which the Rebels were Be ten off, yearly Holyday; and indeed they were so stinate, that till they had been four times worst the Lord Russel, they gave not over, tho' the King red them pardon; however many of the Ringse being Taken, were Executed; and among other Mayor of Bodmin was Hanged; also a Millers Man took upon him his Masters Name and Cause, till she was about to Susser, he recanted and cryed on was not the Miller but his Man, and that his Master ted him to do what he had done. To which Sir A Kingsion, Marshal of the Field, told him, He could do his Master better Service than to Hang for him so not being credited, he was turned off.

his

Long, these Western Troubles had not been a but others broke out as dangerous in the north, pretence of throwing down Inclosures and Parki had been taken from the Walte, which the Co fort of people claimed as their Right. This was Headed by Robert Ket, who took the City of N But the Lord Dudley put them to the Rout, cau to be Hanged in Chaines on the top of the Cast 60 others in divers places, 9 of them in the Oak of mation, a Tree in which Ket used to sit to Jul Determine of their intended purposes and proce as also to order Parties out to Plunder the Hot fuch as he judged not well affected to their Caul Yorkshire others Rose under the Leading of " Omble, a Yeoman, Thomas Dale, a Parish-Clerk, a Stephens a Postmaster; but the King sending do Pardon, the common fort left their Leaders to b to York, where they were Executed.

The French taking the Advantage of these Tu Belieged Bullen, and sent a Fleet to pillage the of jersey and Guernsey; from the Islands the beaten with the loss of 1000 Men, and few on our side; but on the Main Land having won the out-works of Bullen, whilst they pretended to Parley with the English, they forcibly entered the Town, and after that, soon reduced all the Forts and Castles near it, except Guisness, which held out till the Winter made them raise the Siege.

-Von have heard how the Lord Admiral was removed out of the way, and now the Duke of Somerfet his Brother is to go next: For his greatest Enemy, Budley Earl of Warnick, delay'd not to make a strong Party against him; upon secret notice of which he being with the King at Hampton Court, sent dispatches to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, immediately to fend him 1000 Armed Men to defend the King's Person, and himself, against the Treachery and Violence that threatened them; and that Night removed with the King to Windsor. Castle; upon this, the Earl of Warwick Assembled the Privy Counsellours, and other Nobles, at London, making grievous complaints against the Duke, and amongst others, That he had laid wait for his Head; and so Invested them, that they joyned with him to fend their Letters to the Citizens to Levy Forces for their use, in order to Rescue the King out of the hands of his Enemies; and as the chief of them, they named the Protector: sending abroad Proclamations wherein they lay'd many grievous Crimes to his charge, as his Male Administration of Government, and the great Mischiefs that had thereby befallen the Kingdom; bis converting the Publick Treasure to his Private Use, his endeavouring to set the Peers at Variance, &c.

The Duke upon this, finding he Londoners denyed him Aid, but on the contrary had affifted his Adver-fary Warwick with 400 Armed Men, who had drawn most of the Peers to his side, and that contrary to his expectation, he was left in a manner alone; he now too late faw his Brothers Fall was contrived in usher in his: However putting the best construction on the matter, he fent a Messenger to them, desiring they would forhear all rough proceedings and deal with him according to Law and Right; which they promising to do, he yielded himself and the King's Person into their hands; and was committed to the Tower, together with Sir Thomas Stanbop, Sir Thomas Smith, and others, his Favourites; but having been a Prisoner 3 Months, and nothing made out against him, upon acknowledging himself worthy of the punishment he suffered, and begging the King's Pardon, he was fet at Liberty, but deposed from his Protectorthip; and by the more Peaceable Nobility, the Earl of Warnick and he were made Friends; and to bind it the firmer, the Earls Eldest Son was Married to the Dukes Daughter; and new Honours bestowed on persons that had well deserved, viz, John Lord Russel, was created Earl of Bedford; William Lord St. John, Earl of Wiltshire, Sir William Paget Lord Paget; and soon after the King called a Parliament at Westminster, wherein was Enacted a Statute for the punishment of Rebells and Riotous Assemblies; upon which ensuing Statute, the Duke was about two Years after Condemned. The Parliament being ended, the Earl of Bedford and Lord Paget were fent Ambassadors with other Assistants, to France, and the Emperour; by whose means a Peace was concluded upon divers Articles advantageous to the English, and the Queen of Scots was included in it; and it was Proclaimed with great Joy in the City of London. Now all the high Altars being taken down in the Churches, Tables were placed in their stead, for receiving the Communion; and Sir Andrew Jude Builded the Free-School at Tunbridge, and fix Almshouses honses in St. Hellins within Bishopsgate: And the Book of Common Prayer, which had in some part been Corrected and Amended, was appointed by Parliament to be Read in all Churches and Chappels.

his

In Aprill Anno 1551. An unaccountable Sweating Sickness happened, and held till October; of which vast numbers of people dyed: Most that were taken with it dying in 24 Hours, or sooner; it seizing mostly on lusty young Men, and very little on Women, Children, or aged people; and of it dyed Henry Duke of Suffolk, and his brother, Sons to Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk; both of the Royal Blood by the Mothers side, viz Mary younger Sister to Henry the 8th: So that the Dukdome sell to Henry Grey Marquess of Dorset, who had marryed the Lady Frances, Eldest Daughter to Brandon, and Mary his Wife.

And now the Duke of Northumberland growing powerful, and labouring to get the King at his disposal, to bring his purposes about; found he could not do itunless the Duke of Somerset were Removed: And the feud growing hot between them, the Duke of Somerset (by the perswasion of some private Enemies, Employed by his Adversary) went Armed to the Council under his Surcoat; where the Duke of Northumberland feignedly pretending to Clasp him about, as in Friendship, discovered his Coat of Male, and found Weapons about him. Whereupon Northumberland laying hold on the opportunity, Charged him with an Intention to have Murthered some of the Kings Privy Counsellors, and afterwards produced Witnesses to aver, he had before come with Armed Men to attempt his Life, but that his Courage failed him; and one of his followers, when he returned, demanding if he had done it, and he faying No, replyed, then you are undone: Upon this, with divers of his Favorites, he was feat to the Tower; and process process being drawn up against him, he was Tryed by his Peers in Westminster Hall, on two Articles.

1. For High Treason, viz. That be had not only Imprudently but Treacherously administered the weighty affairs of Government.

2. For Conspiring the Death of Northumberland, who was a Privy Counsellor, which by the new Law was Fellony.

Of the former he Acquitted himself; wherupon the Ax being taken away, fuch a shout arose in the Hall among the Common People, that it was heard to Charing Cross; but on the other Article he was found Guiltv and Condemned; but it was a confiderable time before they could constrain the King to Sign the Warrant for his Execution: which he did, not without Tears; Saying he was the unhappyest Creature Living: For at his Birth be had been the Death of his Mother: And had fince (tho. against his Inclination) signed the Death of one of her Brothers; and now they urged him to do the like for the Noble Duke his Uncle; and therfore concluded, the Lord Judge between me and you, that Constrain me to do this against my mind. However having got the Warrant figned, they hastened the Duke's Execution; and diverted the Kings Melancholly (the mean while) with Balls, Plays, and Mulick. And so infatuated was this Great Man, that according to the opinion of divers, had he thought upon demanding his Clergy, he might have faved his Life, his Crime by the new Act being only Fellony. However he made a very Pennitent and Christian-like end, much bewailing he had forwarded his Brothers Destruction, and now saw it brought his own upon himself, by opening a way to his Enemies. He lost his Head on Tower-Hill, and was much Lamented by all forts of people, except his enveterate Enemies, who Rejoyced at his removal to another World; and in his fall many of his Favourits boxe their part, by Northumberland's contrivance, viz. Sir Ralph Vane and Sir Thomas Arundel, Beheaded for Conspiring with Somerset to Kill Northumberland, the latter of which declared his Blood should be a Bolster for the Duke of Northumberland as long as be Lived, (intimating thereby he should have a troubled Conscience) and all of them professed their Innocency to the last, as to the Crimes they were charged with.

Doctor Ridley, Bishop of London, Preaching before the Young King of the excellency of Charity and Almsdeeds, he was to affected with his Sermon, that thinking he directly pointed at him, who was in the highest Station, after the Sermon was ended, he held a private Conference with him how he might effectually bestow his Charity; who advised him to send for the Mayor and Aldermen of London, who would give him fatisfaction in that matter, as being most acquainted with the needs of the Poor; which he did; and after confulting with them, allotted them Christs Hospital (formerly the Grey Fryars of St. Francis Order) St. Thomas's Hospital, and Bridewel, dividing the Poor into three Ranks, 1. Poor by Impotency. 2. The Poor by Casualty. 3. The Thriftless Poor. And foon after this, the King tell Sick of a Languishing Disease, which began with a Hedick Feaver, and by degrees inclined to a Confumption: When Northumberland who had gotten the power into his hands, was Plotting how (if the King Dyed) he might get the Crown into his Family, and at last concluded to lay his Project with the Duke of Suffolk, which was, That his Youngest Son Dudley Lord Gilford, should Marry the Duke of Suffolk's Eldest Daughter, the Lady Jane, who was of the Blood Royal; and that they would prevail with the King to Difinherit his two Silters, and by his Will appoint her Queen, if the Dutchess of Suffolk would be so contented, whose whose Right was before her Daughter. And indeed, this Northumberland prevailed with the Languishing King to do, under a specious pretence of securing the Reformed Religion; on which, to serve his ends, he laid a mighty stress, tho' himself was not much concern'd for any, as will appear in the next Reign.

Head

Upon this account divers Marriages were contracted, and the Nuptials celebrated, viz. The Pious and Virtuous Lady Jane, Eldest Daughter to the Duke of Suffolk, in a fatal hour was Married to the Eord Guisford Dudley, Fourth Son to the Earl of Northumberland; for all his other Sons were Matched before: Catharine, another Daughter of the Earl of Suffolk's, was Married to the Earl of Pembrooks eldest Son; and Mary a third Daughter, some what deformed, to Caies, the Kings Master Porter; and the Duke of Northumberland gave Catharine, his youngest Daughter, to the Lord

Hastings, Son to the Earl of Huntington. Whilft these things were doing, the Kings Sickness much encreased; for Northumberland had displaced his Physitians, and put him into the hands of a Woman to cure, who it is thought haftened him to his Grave; for no sooner had they procured him by his Will, which was read in the hearing of the Counselors, Judges, &c. And confirmed by their Assents, to Disinherit Mary and Elizabeth his Sifters, whose Interest ( as Northumberland faid ) was so closely Joyned, that if the Crown fell to either of them, it must first come to the Lady Mary, who was a professed Papist, and not by any entreaties to be brought over to the Reformed Religion, and by his faid Will to appoint the Lady Jane his Successor; but plain Symptoms of Death appeared. And not above Three Hours before he Dyed, thinking no body had been near he thus Piously Prayed.

Lord God deliver me out of this Miserable and Wretched Life; Take me amongst thy Chosen; howbeit not my will, but thy will be done. Lord I Commit my Spirit to Thee; O Lord, thou knowest how Happy it were for me to be with thee; yet for thy Chosens sake, if it be thy will, send me Life and Health, that I may truly Serve thee. O my Lord Bless thy People, and save thine Inheritance: O Lord God, save thy Chosen People of England: O my Lord God, defend this Realm from Dopery, and maintain thy True Religion; that I and my People may Praise thy Holy Name. Amen.

About three hours afterward, he faid, I faint; Lord, have mercy upon me, and receive my Spirit; and fo yielded up the Ghost. The Conjectures how this Sickness came upon the King, were various among the People; fome that it was caused by his finelling to an Impoisoned Nosegay, presented him for a New-Years-Gift; others. That Northumberland's Woman purposely destroyed him; and such indeed was then that Dukes power, that though the King's Physitians shook their Heads, as much grieved, yet they durst not utter their Minds. He was a Prince exceeding Pious, and Learned to a Miracle, confidering his Years, in Latin, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish; Musick, Logick, &c. He Dyed the 6th of July, Anno Dom. 1553, in the 7th Year of his Reign, and the 16th of his Age; having Reigned 6 Years, 5 Months, and 8 Days; and was Buried without any great Solemnity at Westminster.

In this Kings Reign one George Paris, a German, was Burnt in Smithfield for Arianisme, in denying the Divinity of our Saviour. Three Whales and divers Dolphins were taken in the Thames, and on the Coast. A Woman at Middleton near Oxford brought forth a Monstrous Child with two Heads, and two Bodies joyned together, of the Female Sex, and all other Members proportionable, the Bodies being as it were

 $\mathbf{K} \mathbf{k}$

Head and Tail, one Head at one end, and the other at t'other; it Lived 14 Days, and was killed at last by Cold, in being too often exposed naked, to satisfy Peoples curiouty. A great blow of Gunpowder was given in a House near the Tower, which killed Fifteen Gunpowder-Makers, shattered divers Houses, and wounded many Persons in them.

Remarks on the Principality of Wales.

HE Principallity of Wales does firifily contain but Twelve Counties, and is commonly Divided into North-Wales and South-Wales;

North-Wales Contains

Flinesbire, Merionethsbire, Anglesey, Montgomeryshire, Carnarvanshire, Denbeighshire.

South-Wales Contains

Cardizanshire, Pembrookshire, Caermarthenshire, Glamorganshire, Brecknockshire. Radnorshire.

Of each of which I shall give you a brief Account Alphabetically.

- 1. ANGLESET Island, called Mam Cimbie, or The Mother of Wales, for its Fertility, Rich Passures, breeding store of Catele, &c. It is divided from Carnarvanshire by the Water or River menna, the rest incompassed with the Irish Sea. It contains 6 Hundreds, 74 Parishes, 2 Market Towns, 4 Rivers, 8 Bridges, and 2 Chases; It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Beaumaris 1, and a Knight of the Shire. This Town was Built by King Edward the First, and stands advantageous for a Passage to Ireland, Newborough is a place of Antiquity, and once a Court of the British Princes; The chief Rivers are Llinnon, Guynt, Keveny, Alow, and Brant:
- 2. BRECKNOCKSHIRE, tho' full of Hills, yet is accommodated with very fruitful Plaines, and Watered with pleasant Rivers, producing Cattle, Wild and Tame Goats, some Venison, store of Fish, and Fowl. It is Bounded with Cardiganspire, Carmardenshire, Glamorganspire, Assumouthshire, and Radonshire: It contains 6 Hundreds, and 4 Market Towns. It sends 2 Members to Parliament, viz. Brecknock 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. At Linsuathan is a Meer that is said to have swallowed up a City that stood in the place

t'othe Cold, People given Gunp woan

Rei

South-

Flin Mer

Car Gla Of eat

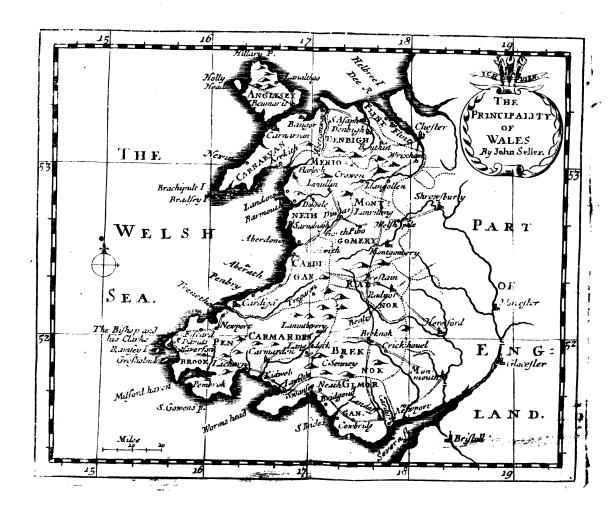

Wales, It is a the re 74 P: It fen of the

ot Ai River

fland

of Fi fhire, 6 Hi ame: is a !

vers,

place of it, and through it runs the River Levenney, keeping its own Stream unmixed; Hay was once a Memorable Place, but Ruined in the Rebellion of Owen Glendour. Best is renouned for being the Seat of Aurelius Ambrosius. The Seats of the Nobility are Crickhowel Custle and Tretonor Castle, belonging to the Duke of Beaufort.

- 3. CARDIGANSHIRE lies (on its West part) commodious to the Irish Sea, and the rest Bounded by Caermardershire, Pembrookshire, Brecknockshire, Radnorshire, Montgomery and Monmouthshire: It is very Hilly, tho' well Watered with Rivers, and has in divers places large Mears and Pools. It containes 5 Hundreds, 64 Parishes, 4 Market Towns; and has a Bishop belonging to it: Its principal River is Tivy, which Waters its South Borders, and branches into the County, and in it are 13 Bridges, and 1 Park. It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Cardegan 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. Cardigan, the Shire Town, was Walled about and Fortisted with a Castle by Gilbert D' Clare, who was Lord of the whole County, by the Gift of King Henry the First.
- 4. CARNARVANS HIRE has in it divers Meers and Pools, some branching Rivers, and a sprinkling of Hills: It affords some Corn, store of Patture, and a considerable quantity of Cattle. It is Bounded on the West by the Irish Sea and the Isle of Anglese, and the South has the Sea slowing to it, as likewise the North; so that what remaines to the Land-ward, is Bounded by Denbighshire, and Merionethsbire. It contains 7 Hundreds, 68 Parishes, 6 Marker Towns, 17 Rivers, and 3 Cassles. Carnarvan was Built by Edward the First, on the Ruins of the Antlent Segontium, where was said to be found the Body of Constantius, Father to Constantine the Great, Anno 128's. And here Edward the Second was Born. It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Carnarvan 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. The Seats of the Lord Vaughan, Baron of Emlyn, Gre. are Golden Grove and Emlyn. The Bishop of Bangar's Seat, Bangor Place.
- 5. CAERMARTHENSHIRE is Watered by the River Tony and others. It abounds in Hills, the mostly of a moderate height; and in some places is Woody, and a great many Cattle are bred up in it. It is Bounded with the Sea, Glamorganshire, Brecknockshire, Cardiganshire, and Pembrookshire. Carmarden is strongly Walled and Defended by a Castle. Here was Born Merlin, the sum of the string Prophet, who forecold in the several Ages Changes of Government. On the high Hills of this Shire are two Meers, in one of them is bred a Fish that has but one Eye; and the other has in K k 2

it a floating Island, in which one no sooner sets his Foot, but it seemes in all appearance to drive surther off from Shoar. This Shire cone into Hundreds, in which are 87 Parishes, 8 Market Towns, 28 Rivers great and small. It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz Carmarden 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. The Seat of the Bishop of St. Davids, Abergwilly.

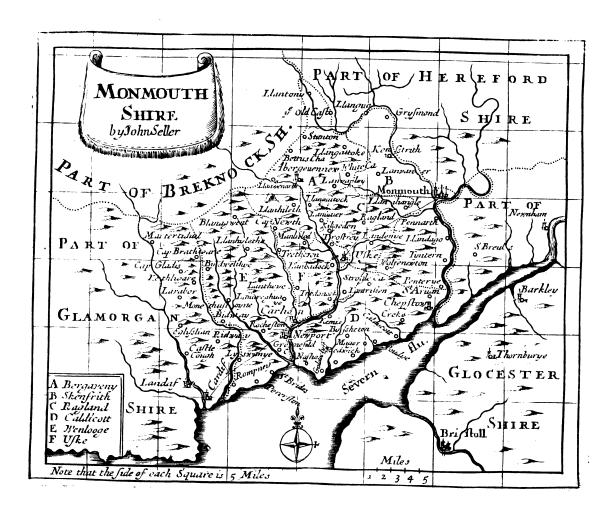

6. DENBIGHSHIRE is pretty well flored with Hills, tho it has Valleys that produce good Pasture, and Corn, and breeds up flore of Cattle. It is pleatantly Watered with the Rivers Chied, Alen, and Dee; Bounded by Flintshire, Cheshire, Shrophire, Section the live, Carnarvanshire, and the Sea; It contains 12 Hundreds, 57 Parishes, 4 Market Towns, and 24 great and small kivers, 6 Bidges, 2 Castles, and 6 Parks. It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Dunligh 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. Denbigh, the Shire Fown, was Walled about and Fortisted with a Castle by Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, in the Beign of Edward the First. On the top of high Hills, called Moilenly Hills, are very large Springs: Luthin and Bresham are places of great Antiquity, and Memorable for having been the Seats of British Princes.

7. FLINTS HIRE, tho' small, is yet a pretty pleasant County, Watered by the flowing of Dee, Cluyan, and other Rivers. It produces Corn, Cattle, Fish, Fowl, Wooll, Butter, Checfe, &c. It is Bounded by Denbighshire, Shropshire, Cheshire, the River Dee, and the Occan. It contains 4 Hundreds, 28 Parishes, 2 Market Towns, 4 Caftles, 2 Bridges, and 2 Parks. The Caftle of Flint, Founded by Henry the Second, and Finished by Edward the First, gave reception to King Richard the Second when he came our of Ireland and lost his Crown. This County is famous for St. Winifrid's Well, called Holy Well, formerly much frequented, partly by way of Prigrimage, and parely for the great Virtue its Waters was reputed to have in the Cure of many Listempers. This Spring is held by some to have rifen upon the falling of the Virgin Winifita's blood, when to fave her Chaftity the loft her Head, by a Pagun Prince; and that the Stones that look Bed at the bottom, ftill bear a tincture of it. Many Miracles have been held to have been done by this Water; but these I look on as Monkish Fables; yet certain it is, that out of this Well runs a very pleasant Stream, and that the Water is Medicinal. This Shire fends Vembers to Parliament 2, viz. Flint I. and I Knight of the Shire. At Kilben in this Shire is a little Well that keeps a constant Ebb and Flow like the Ocean. The Seat of the Bulhop of the Diocels is St. Afaph. 8. G LA:

it a float feemes it Shire co Townt, ment 2, of the Bi

6. D it has V. flore of Alen, am fitre, Ca Yarifhes 2 Caffle Denbigh Was Wa Lincoln, Hills, ca ham are the Sea

7. F Watere duces C Eounde the Oci 4 Cafti Henry t to him his Crc Holy W and par the Cu have ri fave he the Sto Many! bur the of this Medici and t that ke the Bu

- 8. GLAMORGANSHE its South and West part open to the Sea, and the rest so with Carmarden, Brechneck, and Monmouthshires. It is mostly accommodated with hills and Vallevs, branched with some pleasant bivers. Llandaff in this Shire is a Bishops See; Glamorganstire contains to Hundreds, 118 Parifhes, 10 Market Towns, 16 Rivers, 5 Cafiles, 6 Eridges, and 5 Parks. It fends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Cardiff 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. The chief Town and Episcopal See is Clanday, tho' Cardiff is famous, as having been the refidence of the renowned Fitz Hamon, who with his Norman Knights, in the Reign of W. Rufus, beat Rhesus Prince of Wales out of his Country, and kept his court in the flrong Castle he built, in the Hall whereof are vet to be feen the Enfigns of him and his Knights; and in this Castle is held the Audit for the Earl of Pembrook's Estate in Wales. Llandaff contains a Castle and fine Cathedral. At Abbarbarry is a Cave at the bottom of a Hill, the Mouth whereof is a gaping Cleft or Chink, into which the Wind entering, makes harmonious Wufick, like the found of Cymballs. And near Barry on the Cliffs is often a found as if Smiths were at work. The Seats of the Nobility are Swanzy Castle, belonging to the Duke of Beaufort; Cardiff Castle, Caerplily Castle, to the Earl of Pembrook; Coyty Castle, to the Earl of Leicester; Llandoff Palace, to the Bishop, Irc.
- 9. MERIONETHSHIRE, is partly Watered with the River Dee, which entering the North East point, falls into a Lake or Meer, at Bala; as does the River Trowryn. Riauder proceeds from Dee. There are some very large Hills in this Shire, yet the Plains afford Wood, Pasture, and a good sprinkling of Corn and Cattle. It is divided into 6 Hundreds, containing 27 Parishes, 3 Market Towns, 26 Rivers small and great, 2 Castles, 7 Bridges; It is Bounded with Cardigan, Carnarvan, Denbigh, and Mongomeryshires, and the Irish Sea. It sends to Parliament only 1 Knight of the shire. Harleeb, the principal Town of this Shire, is more noted for its stately Castle, than any other Ornament. The Pool of Lake at Bala is never observed to be fill'd by Land Floods, though rising never so high; yet in Tempestuous Weather swelleth above its Banks.
- Principality of Wales, and is therefore now brought in amongst them; the rincipality of Wales, and is therefore now brought in amongst them; the rin the Reign of King Charles the Second it was made an English County, the Judges keeping the Affizes there, as in other English Counties. But being omitted in its proper place, I thought it better to place it among the Weish Counties, than to leave it quite out;

K k 3

Fo:

For being a pleasant Count products much Corn, Cattle, Pastures, Wooll, &c. It is Eounded by Severn, (a River to which Severus the Reman Emperour gave Name, on a memorable Battle fought on its Banks) Brecknock, Hereford, Glammgan, and Gloucestersbires. it is divided into 6 Hundreds, containing 127 Parishes, 15 Rivers, 7 Market Towns, 7 Caffles, 14 Bridges, and 8 Parks. It fends Members to Farliament 2. viz. Monmouth 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. The Town of Monmouth is held to be the place where King Arthur kept his Court; and that it has been an Accademy of Philosophy and Arts, The Birth-place of Amphibalus, whose Disciple our Proto Martyr St. Alban was; and here King Henry the Fifth was Born. Usk is a place of Antiquity, and confiderable in this Shire. Abergavenny, &c. The Seats of the Nobility are Troy House, Monmouth Caftle, Ragland Caftle, Chepftow Caftle, Tintorn Abby, and Chepflow Grange, belonging to the Duke of Beaufort; Abergavenny Caffle, to the ford Abergavenny; St. Julian, to the Lord Herbert, Earon of Cherbury; Matherne Palace, to the Bishop.

11. MONTGOMERTSHIRE receives great advantage from the River Severn, over which are divers confiderable Bridges, This River in many branches winds very pleasantly among the Hills, Pertilizing the Valleys and Plaines, so that the Earth produces fufficient Plenty where the barren Hills are not Interposing. It is Bounded with Cardiganshire, Radnorshire, Shropshire, Denbighshire, and Merionethshire. It contains 7 Hundereds, in which are 47 Parishes, 6 Market Towns, 25 Rivers, 3 Castles, 6 Bridges, and 1 Chase. It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Montgomery 1, and I Knight of the Shire. Montgomery is pleasantly Situated, and has a very strong Castle appertaining to it. Dolevere is sounded on large Antiquity, and some others. The Seats of the Nobility are Powis Casile and Buttingto, belonging to the Marquess of Powis; I limere Lodg and Llyflin, to the Lord Herbert, Baron of Cherbary.

12. PEMBROOKSHIRE lies very advantageous to the Sea, St. David's being the extream point of Land, from which in the Sea are those dangerous Rocks called The Bishop and his Clerks. This County is not much Mountanous unless to the North-East part. It is Bounded by Cardigansbire, Carmardensbire, and the Sta. Milford Haven opening with a large Stream to its Southward, and the River Dougledy makes the other branches. It is thereby pretty Fruitful, and much subject to Seafaring Trade; It contains 7 Hungreds, 145 Parishes, 9 Market Towns, 6 Rivers, 1 Bishoprick, 5

Castles, 7 Bridges, 2 Forrests, 1 rks. It sends Members to Parliament 3, viz. Haverso delicity and 1 knight of the Shire. And the here Pembros is accounted the County Town, ver St. Davids is more remarkable, as having been an Arctitepite spal See, translated from Isa Legionam, by the great Archbishop Devi, now fuled St. David; whose Day is kept by the Native fairains the First of March, in memory of a great Battel he gained over the Saxons; and the wearing the Leek comes from his ordering the Soldiers on his part, the better to be diffinguished in Dattel, every one to place a Leek in his Cap. The Isle of Schaney in this County is almost all over-grown with Wild Thime.

12. RADNORSHIRE has many pleafant Valleys in the Mid-land parts, producing Corn, and breeds plenty of Cattle, unless where the Hills hinder; It is pleasantly Watered by the River 1994, which winds on the Southern fide of it, and spreads branching into it, receiving other Rivers as Ithon, Weverly, Delas, Go. It abounds in rish, and particularly store of Salmon. This Shire is Bounded by Montgomers Shire, Shropsoire, Hereford Shire, Breknockshire, and Cardiganshire. It contains 6 Hundreds, 52 Parishes, 4 Market Towns, r Rivers, 5 Casties, 5 Eridges, and 3 Forrests. It sends Members to Parliament 2, viz. Radnor 1, and 1 Knight of the Shire. Radnor is the Antient Magnus of Antonie, and the station of the Roman Regiment called the Pacentine, tho' in Beauty and Euilding it is Inferiour to Prestain.

And thus much shall suffice to be said of the Principality of Wales.

The Reign of Queen MARY the First.

KING Edward was no fooner Dead, but the Lords of the Duke of Northumberland's party hasted to Proclaim the Lady Jane Queen; and in order to do it, fent for the Lord Mayor of London, fix Aldermen, and fix of the Common Council, to Greenwich, where the King lay dead; and declared to them his death, which before was kept as fecret as possible. Moreover shewing them his Will, and the Letters Pattents with the Great Seal made fourteen Days before, causing them to Swear Allegiance to the Jane as their Soveraign Lady; and now the Policy was to surprise the Lady Mary, whom they thought knew nothing of the King's Death, or their Proceedings; for it had been carryd on very closely. But the having fecret Intelligence from her Friends at Court, left St. Edmunds Bury on presence the feared the Infection, one of her Servants being dead of the Plague, and Riding forty Miles, came 10 Freming ham Cafile in Suffolk, about Eighty Miles from Lordon; confidering that being near the Sea, if Corrune turned against her, she might Escape into France. And here taking upon her the stile of Queen, (for King Harry at his Death repenting his Illegitimating his two Daughters, Mary and Elizabeth, had by his last Will appointed they should Successively Reign in default of Issue) she dispatched Letters to her Friends and Allies, that they should hasten to come to her.

Kk4

Swear

This was no fooner known by the Lords at London, but the Lady Jane was immediately Proclaimed Queen: Yet the received the Regalia unwillingly, not without fome Sighs and Tears, which Prefaged the Misfortune fhe was violently thrust upon; so that it plainly appeared to all present, it was much against her will she ascended this height of Honour; and indeed as she pailed through the City, tho' there were crouds of Gazers, yet very few Shouts or Acclamations of Joy. as in fuch cases are usual, were heard: Which gave convage to the contrary Party, who heitherto had kept filence; but now began to grow bold in their discouries; and the Council fitting, a Letter was prefented from the Lady Mary, wherein she commanded the I ords to repair to her, acknowledg her the Right Heir to the Crown, and their Lawful Princess, and do their Duties and Services, as became Loyal Subjects. Many that that envyed Northumberland Breatness, hereupon began to encline to her Party; but then they found it could not be well contrived to bring her to London, as Queen, whilst Northumberland's Presence hindered; whereupon hearing that the Suffolk-Men, and a great part of Norfolk, had promised her their Aid, upon condition of enjoying the freedom of Religion, they concluded it was convenient to fend Forces against her, that she might be suppressed before she became Strong; and tho' the Duke of Northumberland would have shifted it, Forces were raifed, and he appointed General; and so on the 13th of June he set out from London; but was much daunted when he heard none of the Multitude that crowded to fee him pass along, bid him good speed: Which he noted to the Lord Grey as an Omen of bad fuccess. However he Marched flowly towards Cambridge, and in the mean while the Lady Mary's Party greatly encreased by the coming over of the Earls of Bath and Suffex, Sir Thomas Cornwallis, Sir Henry Jernington, Sir Robert Drury, Sir John Williams, Sir Robert Waldgrave, and others; and foon after Sir Edward Hastings, Brother to the Earl of Huntington, Revolted from the Duke of Northumberland, with 4000 Foot he had Raised by his order; for which he was after created Earl of Lowborough.

Soon after this, fix Ships with Stores, Ammunition and Provision, which the Duke had caused to Watch the Coast, and Intercept Mary, if she should fly, fell into her hands, as driven by stress of Weather into Yarmouth, when a great part of her Forces were there, by whom they were seized. And Sir Henry Jerningham configned them to her use. Having by this means got a Traine of Artillery, she Marched towards Northumberland, Snow-Ball like, gathering as she proceeded; which made the Duke fend to the Lords at London to Supply him with more Forces, for on the Muster he found many were Deserted, and till their coming he resolved to stay at Cambridge; but they hearing how things went, and finding the People unwilling to engage, began more to confult their own safety, than any other matter; and leaving the Tower, they met at Bai-Rard's Castle; and there contrary to their sollemn promises, they consulted to Depose the Lady Jane, whom they had so lately advanced to the Throne; and the Earl of Arrundel being Spokesman, boldly declared the necessity of it, enveighing bitterly against the Duke of Northumberland, recounting many things that have been already mentioned of him, urging the unlawfulness of what they had done; and that there was no hetter Cure of Error, than mature and timely Repentance; and therefore he befought them all prefent, with one Heart and Mind to endeavour to the utmost that Mary (the undoubted Lawful Heir of the Crown) might presently be Proclaimed Queen. See in this the wonderful Convertion Fear can work in Mens minds, for untill he perceived the Lady Mary Powerful, and likely to come in by Force, except Northumberland, he was the most violent against her.

Upon this Advice, and some other Debates, it was agreed the Lady Mary should be Proclaimed Queen; for the Earl of Pembrook saying he heartily agreed with Arrendel, and laying his Hand on his Sword, Swore He would try it with any one that should presume to maintain the contrary, most became willing, and the rest were carried away in the stream of Power; and so sending for the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, they went to Cheap Cross, and there, to the great wonderment of the People, Proclaimed Mary Queen; and passing to St. Pauls, Te Deum was Sung, sending some to take possession of the Tomer, and others to Summon the Duke of Sussible laying laying all Excuses aside, to appear at the Council-Board. The Duke perceiving Ruin threatned him and his Family, by laying too great a stress on Treacherous Friends, and drawn into a Snare by Northumberland's fubtilty, he yet concluded to use such means as he hoped might avert the coming Storm; wherefore upon this notice he went to his Daughters Chamber of State, causing her to lay aside her Princely Ornaments, Adviling her not to take it grievously that she was to return home, and live a Private Life: To which, with a composed Countenance, she Reply'd, Most loving Father, I with more Joy and Gladness entertain the Message you now bring me, than that, when fore against my will, you placed me in the Throne. I then displeased my self that I might shew my Obedience to you and my Mother. I believe I have greatly Offended in what I have done, but now I willingly Obey you, and am well contented to renounce the Crown and to confess my fault; if at last so great an offence may be wiped away by an acknowledgment of my Error. After this, she retired to her Closet, and the Ladies that waited on her, were discharged from that Office, and defired to retire to their respective Habitations; which they did, tho' not without Tears, to fee Innocence precipitated into so great a misfortune as was likely to follow.

The Duke of Suffolk after this, went to the Council of Lords, and subscribed the last Proclamation; and thereupon the Earl of Arrundel and divers others, posted to Queen Mary (for so now I must stile her) with a great Train, and procused their Pardons. The Duke of Northumberland somewhat late, hearing of these Proceedings, in much perturbation of mind, shewed his meanness of Spirit, in running into the Street at Cambridge, and Proclaiming Queen Mary, throwing up his Cap, and capering amongst the croud, as if he had done it with all the fincerity and alacrity imaginable; when every body knew Fear, and hope of Pardon, compelled him to it. Yet a few days after, he and divers others, whilst they were preparing for flight, as doubting the worst, were Arrested by the Lord Arrundel, and convey'd to the Tower of London, and the Army he commanded Disbanded, and ordered on pain of being reputed Rebells to repair immediatly to their feveral Houses; and the Virtuous Lady Jane (after ten Days Ading the Queen as on a Stage) by special order confin'd to the Tower, The Marquess of Northampton was Imprisoned, and divers others of Note, who they suggested were any way concerned in this business; and the Lady Elizabeth, upon her Sisters coming towards London, went to meet her Sister, and Congratulated her Success, highly commending her for so undauntedly pursuing her Right to the Crown; and upon her enterance into London she caused the Duke of Norfolk, and Edward Courtney, Son to the Marquess of Exceter Beheaded in Henry the Eighth's time, to be set at Liberty, as also Stephen Gardener, and all the Romish Clergy were released from their confinement, with many o. thers; Constituting Gardener Lord Chancellour of England, restoring the deprived Popish Bishops to their Offices and Dignities, outing those of the Reformed Religion that had by King Edward been preferred to those Bishopricks, as London, Winches Durham, Worcester, Chichester, &c. But for all this Dr. Bourn Preaching at St. Paul's Crofs, and bitterly inveighing against the Reformed Religion, had a Dagger flung at him, whole mortal Point narrowly missed his Breast, the the party that did it (upon the narrowest search and ferutinie) could not be discovered.

Things being a little fettled, the Queen by Advict of her Council chosen for the purpose, proceeded in ge herself on her opposers, and procured the of Northumberland, the Earl of Warwick, his Eldest d the Marquess of Northampton to be Try'd and mn'd for High Treason, and soon after the Duke ought to the Scaffold on Tower-Hill, where he L himself (in hopes of Lise) a Roman Catholick; g all prefent to return to the Mother Church, and pbrace a new uncertain Religion that had work'd fo Mischiefs and Disorders in the Kingdom: And that own part he always embraced and loved the Religion wed from his Ancestors, with much more to the surpose. But by the way pray hear what he said g Edward when he perfwaded him to exclude his from the Crown, which I should not have menhad he by his Ambition brought none but himthis kind of Misfortune.

told him, The Lady Mary his Eldest Sister was a d Roman Catholick, and if she came to the Crown, destroy the Reformed Religion, and therefore it was tty of a good and Religious Prince to set light by all I tyes and refpects of Blood, in regard of the Glory of nd the benefit of his Subjects Salvation: That venawaited those that stould do otherwise; for when this as ended, they must appear before Gods high Tribunal, give an Account of all their Actions, either to rehe Reward of Eternal Life, or the Doom of Eternal

But this was then to ferve his ends. And I od too many in our days do not make Religion ence to advantage themselves. One thing more arkable in this great Mans fall, of which it is faid k exceeding notice, viz. As he passed to the when first committed, a Woman out of a Balhook a bloody Handkerchief, faying, Look you be Blood of a right Noble Man and the Kings Unkle, was shed through your wicked Treathery; and now it with all the fincerity and alacrity imaginable; every body knew Fear, and hope of Pardon, com him to it. Yet a few days after, he and divers o whilst they were preparing for flight, as doubtl worst, were Arrested by the Lord Arrundel, an vey'd to the Tower of London, and the Army h manded Disbanded, and ordered on pain of be puted Rebells to repair immediatly to their Houses; and the Virtuous Lady Jane (after te Adding the Queen as on a Stage) by special orde fin'd to the Tower, The Marquels of Northampt Imprisoned, and divers others of Note, who the gested were any way concerned in this business the Lady Elizabeth, upon her Sifters coming to London, went to meet her Sifter, and Congrat her Success, highly commending her for so unda ly pursuing her Right to the Crown; and up enterance into London she caused the Duke of A and Edward Courtney, Son to the Marquess of Beheaded in Henry the Eighth's time, to be fet berry, as also Stephen Gardener, and all the Romish were released from their confinement, with m thers; Conftituting Gardener Lord Chancelle England, restoring the deprived Popish Bishops t Offices and Dignities, outing those of the Re Religion that had by King Edward been prefer those Bishopricks, as London, Winches Durhan cefter, Chichefler, &c. But for all this Dr. Bourn ing at St. Paul's Crofs, and bitterly inveighing the Reformed Religion, had a Dagger flung whose mortal Point narrowly missed his Brea the party that did it (upon the narrowest feal scrutinie) could not be discovered.

cryeth

Things being a little fettled, the Queen by of her Council chosen for the purpose, proces

Revenge herself on her opposers, and procured the Duke of Northumberland, the Earl of Warwick, his Eldest Son, and the Marquess of Northampton to be Try'd and Cendemn'd for High Treason, and soon after the Duke was brought to the Scaffold on Tower-Hill, where he declared himself (in hopes of Life) a Roman Catholick; Advising all present to return to the Mother Church, and not to embrace a new uncertain Religion that had work'd so many Mischiefs and Disorders in the Kingdom: And that for his own part he always embraced and loved the Religion he received from his Ancestors, with much more to the same purpose. But by the way pray hear what he said to King Edward when he perswaded him to exclude his Sifters from the Crown, which I should not have mention'd had he by his Ambition brought none but himfelf to this kind of Misfortune.

He told him, The Lady Mary his Eldest Sister was a professed Roman Catholick, and if she came to the Crown, mould destroy the Reformed Religion, and therefore it was the Duty of a good and Religious Prince to set light by all natural tyes and respects of Blood, in regard of the Glory of God and the benefit of his Subjects Salvation: That venseance awaited those that sould do otherwise; for when this Life was ended they must appear before Gods high Tribunal, there to give an Account of all their Actions, either to receive the Reward of Eternal Life, or the Doom of Eternal Death. But this was then to ferve his ends. And I Truy God too many in our days do not make Religion a pretence to advantage themselves. One thing more is remarkable in this great Mans fall, of which it is faid he took exceeding notice, viz. As he passed to the Torer when first committed, a Woman out of a Balcony shook a bloody Handkerchief, saying, Look you bere's the Blood of a right Noble Man and the Kings Unkle. which was shed through your wicked Treathery, and now cryeth for Revenge against you. But his profession of the Popish Religion saved not his Life; tho' it is supposed Dr. Heath his Confessor, had on this account put him in great hopes of Pardon, which was conjectured from the unwillingness that appeared in him to submit to the stroak: Near the same time Sir John Gates, and Sir Thomas Palmer, two of the Dukes Favourites, were Beheaded for accompanying him to Cambridge, which by the Judges was construed Rebellion, and confequently Treason against the Queen: And divers Protestant Bishops, as Dr. Hooper of Gloucester, Dr. Coverdale of Exceter, Dr. Farrar of St. David's, &c. and all Ecclefiaftical Persons, were deprived of their Livings, who would not comply with the Romish Religion.

Soon after these Proceedings, the Lords Ambrose and Guilford Dudley, two Sons to the Duke of Northumberland, with the Virtuous Lady Jane, Wife to the latter, were Try'd and found Guilty of High Treason, and Condemned: Arch Bishop Cranmer was Imprisoned; but nothing of Treason appearing against him, he was at that time Released, but afterwards Condemned to the Flames for Herefy, as in the Martyrology annexed to this Reign, will appear; wherefore by the way, take notice that to avoid breaking the thred of History, by so many occasions as must in his, and other cases of that nature, occur; for the better understanding of the Reader, I shall omit them here, to place them by themselves. However they agreed to send Peter Martyr under fafe conduct to Antwerp, supposing he would there fall into rougher hands, but he escaped into Germany.

The Queens Coronation had been hitherto deferr'd, but now was performed with much Pomp and Solemnity. And a Parliament was called, in which almost he Laws Enacted in the Reigns of Henry the 8th and ard the 6th against Popery, were Repealed; and in nod at London, Disputations were held concerning Real Fresence in the Sacrament, in which the Popish tors were nonpluss'd; yet as their saying was, They the Sword, tho' we had the Word; so that by outouring some, and over-awing others, they gave. ence That it was necessary the Roman Catholick Relishould be Restored. And the Queen exhibited a eral Pardon, so called, but with so many Exceptions Exclusions, That those of the Clergy and Laity stood in most need of it, could reap no benefit by and foon after this, the Queen enclining to Marry, p King of Spain, among many others proposed, thought the most agreeable Match; for as much was laid before her, That an unsettled Kingdom t to have a potent Prince to defend it, if Troubles ld arise, as well Abroad as at Home; which upardendr Bishop of Winchester's moving Oration to ords, was approved, and the Spanish Ambassadars ng over with full Power to Treat about it, the iage was concluded on, and Articles figned, very ntageous to the English, as to Trade, and disenberance from Wars Abroad; she being to Rule lute, and he not to intermeddle with the Affaires of Kingdom, unless by way of Advice; and that such lren as fhould proceed from this Marriage, fhould re brought up, and not carry'd out of the Kinge. Yet many disliked it, as fearing when the n was Married, her Husband would do as he ed, by easily prevailing on her to have the dispo-Offices, Treasure, and Armies; and under this ence Sir Thomas Wiat raised a Rebellion in Kent. attempted to enter the City of London; but being bly resisted at London-Bridge, setching a compass cryeth for Revenge against you. But his profession the Popish Religion saved not his Life; tho' it is s posed Dr. Heath his Confessor, had on this acco put him in great hopes of Pardon, which was con ctured from the unwillingness that appeared in him fubmit to the stroak: Near the same time Sir 9 Gates, and Sir Thomas Palmer, two of the Dukes vourites, were Beheaded for accompanying him toC bridge, which by the Judges was construed Rebell and confequently Treason against the Queen: divers Protestant Bishops, as Dr. Hooper of Glouce Dr. Coverdale of Exceter, Dr. Farrar of St. David's, and all Ecclefiaftical Persons, were deprived of t Livings, who would not comply with the Ro Religion.

Soon after these Proceedings, the Lords Ambrose Guilford Dudley, two Sons to the Duke of Northun land, with the Virtuous Lady Jane, Wife to the la were Try'd and found Guilty of High Treason, Condemned: Arch Bishop Cranmer was Imprisor but nothing of Treason appearing against him, he at that time Released, but afterwards Condemne the Flames for Herefy, as in the Martyrology ann to this Reign, will appear; wherefore by the take notice that to avoid breaking the thred of His by so many occasions as must in his and other cal that nature, occur; for the better understanding the Reader, I shall omit them here, to place the themselves. However they agreed to send Peter tyr under fase conduct to Antwerp, supposing he w there fall into rougher hands, but he escaped Germany.

The Queens Coronation had been hitherto defe but now was performed with much Pomp and So nicy. And a Parliament was called, in which a

all the Laws Enacted in the Reigns of Henry the 8th and Edward the 6th against Popery, were Repealed; and in a Synod at London, Disputations were held concerning the Real Fresence in the Sacrament, in which the Popish Doctors were nonpluss'd; yet as their saying was, They had the Sword, tho' we had the Word; so that by outclamouring some, and over-awing others, they gave. sentence That it was necessary the Roman Catholick Religion should be Restored. And the Queen exhibited a General Pardon, fo called, but with fo many Exceptions and Exclusions, That those of the Clergy and Laity that stood in most need of it, could reap no benefit by it; and foon after this, the Queen enclining to Marry, Phillip King of Spain, among many others proposed, was thought the most agreeable Match; for as much as it was laid before her, That an unsettled Kingdom ought to have a potent Prince to defend it, if Troubles should arise, as well Abroad as at Home; which upon Gardenar Bishop of Winchester's moving Oration to the Lords, was approved, and the Spanish Ambassadars coming over with full Power to Treat about it, the Marriage was concluded on, and Articles signed, very advantageous to the English, as to Trade, and disencumberance from Wars Abroad; she being to Rule Absolute, and he not to intermeddle with the Assaires of the Kingdom, unless by way of Advice; and that fuch Children as should proceed from this Marriage, should be here brought up, and not carry'd out of the Kingdome. Yet many difliked it, as fearing when the Queen was Married, her Husband would do as he pleased, by easily prevailing on her to have the dispofal of Offices, Treasure, and Armies; and under this pretence Sir Thomas Wiat raifed a Rebellion in Kent, and attempted to enter the City of London; but being forcibly resisted at London-Bridge, setching a compass to pass the Thames at Kingston, in the mean while such Forces were prepared, as routed his Followers, and obliged him to surrender himself Prisoner; and being Committed to the Tower, he soon after lost his Head.

This Rebellion (in which her Father had under-hand fided) haftned the Death of the Lady Jane and her Husband; for Dr. Fecknam being sent to her to per-Iwade her to the Romish Religion; but she being constant and unmovable, the Warrant was figned for her Execution; and the Lord Guilford being first Beheaded. the unconcern'd beheld his Body brought all Bloody into the Tower, exposed to her view, the more to terrify her, and with a fettled Constancy of Mind (tho' fhe did not much exceed Sixteen Years) mounted the Scaffold, and Embracing the Divine that had attended her, Defined God to reward bim for his Pious endeavours, in Counselling and Advising her about the weighty Concern of an Immortal State; and then turning to the by-standers with a composed Countenance, Lovely in Sorrow, she thus spoke her Mind.

If I am Guilty (faid the) it is not because I affected the Kingdom, but that I refused it not, being cash upon me, and must seave a memorable Example and Monition to all Posterity, That Innocency cannot excuse those grievals Milions which tend to the Publick Damage; for it seems they commit wickedness enough, that serve the Ambitious Designs of others, tho it be much against their own will.

Having Spoken these words, she Eray'd servently; then desiring her Gentlewoman to help her off with her Gown, she vailed her Eyes, and submitting to the Block, demed the Executioner to do what the Law had appointed as her bitter Portion; whereupon her Head being stricken off, cancel many Tears even in those that savoured not her Religion. And thus a worthy Author speaks of her:

She was, fays he, Religious, Wise, and Learned, above her Age or Sex; who for taking the fatal Title of a Queen, unsought-for, and forced upon her by others, was snatched from a Throne to a Prison, and from thence to the place of Execution; where she suffered Patiently for the Offences of others, and yet overcame the many blows of Adversity with Coastancy and Innocency.

A while after, the Duke of Suffolk being Imprisoned, was Condemned for having a hand in Wiat's Rebellion, and attempting to raise others, as it was Charged against him on his Tryal; tho' on very slender proof. Being brought to the Scaffold he thrust from him the Popish Priests, who were busy and troublesome in endeavouring to perswade him to change his Religion, and Praying fervently, he among other Expressions Desired the Queen to forgive him as he forgave all that had offended him: At which Dr. Weston, who had been carnest with him to change his Religion, faid aloud to the people, The Queen had forgiven him: Whereupon some Reply'd, such forgiveness God send you. And then preparing for the Stroke, he underwent it with much constancy and courage, not varying from what the series of his Life had expressed him.

Divers taken in Wiat's Rebellion being about this time Executed, and some Pardoned, Wist (in hopes of Life) was wrought on to Accuse the Marquess of Exceter, and the Lady Elizabeth, the Queens Sister; but being nevertheless brought to Execution, he heartily begged both their pardons with Tears, excusing them from having any hand in his Rebellion; for which, tho' he dyed by the Ax, his Body was Quartered, and set upon several Gates in the City; and within a while, Thomas Lord Grey, Brother to the Duke of Suffolk, was Beheaded: For this Queen seemed to have learned her Fathers way, viz. To spare none that stood in her way,

1.1

way, or from whom she apprehended any danger. The Queen calling a Parliament, propounded to the Houses her Intended Marriage, and the desire she had of reltoring the Popes Supremacy; but to the latter at this time the could not get their Confents, the Nobles imagining they must restore the Church-Lands, if the Pope once came to assume a power over the Ecclefiastical State. But the former, upon several advantagous additional Articles, they allowed; and King Philip with a great Train of the Nobility of Spain, and other Nations, came to Winchester where the Queen stay'dto receive him; and on St. James's Day they were Married there, with great pomp and folemnity, and their Stiles pronounced in Latin, French, and English: Whereupon John Figuora, the Emperours Ambassador, refigned to them (in his Masters name) the Kingdom of Naples; and the rejoycing being a little over, they came to London; where they were received in much splendor; and going to Windsor, the King was Installed Knight of the Garter, and Cardinal Pool fent for over to settle the affairs of the Church, being appointed the Popes Legate; and in Parliament his Attainder was taken off, and he restored to all his Honours and Dig-1 nities; and making a moving Oration to both House, won upon them to be Absolved by him, as in Formh did after the whole Kingdom; and in the end procured Popery to be reftored; but not the Lands of the Church: For tho' they fet light by Religion, those were too iweet morfels to be parted with.

The Queen after this laboured to have King Philip Crowned; but the Parliament refused their consent; and foon after that, the fancied herfelf to be with Child, and by her Error led many to believe it, fo that the Infant was Pray'd for. Some in the Pulpets undertook to describe its featurs when it should be born, others others to direct how it should be brought up; abundance of Cradles, Rockers, Nurses, and such like, were provided, and at last it was spread abroad with uncertain Rumour, she was Delivered of a Frince; then he was described again in the Pulpits, the English Merchants at Antwerp fired their Guns, and made great Rejoycing; but at length it was discover'd the Queen had never been with Child. But if any thing was in it, she had been deceived by a Mole, which tho' without Life, some times stirrs as if it were Quickened. However it occasioned various Conjectures of the Queen, but time blew over the Cenfures.

Many Persons now were advanced to Dignities, to ballance in the House of Peers; and the Earl of Savoy and Piedmont coming to fee England, was highly welcomed, and Lodged at White-Hall; but after a short ftay he departed to his own Country; and the Prifons being in a manner fill'd many were Pardoned, others without it fet at Liberty; and Sir Nicholas Throckmorton's Head being aimed at, the Jury for Acquitting him upon Tryal, were feverely Fined, and Punished, to the Ruin of the greatest part of them.

The Lady Elizabeth, Sister to the Queen, (after a long Imprisonment in the Tower and other places, being often put in danger of her Life, by Firing the Boards under her Lodgings, Ruffians enterprising to Murther her, and many hardships undergon, so that she wished her self a Milk-Maid, when she heard the merry contented Life of one finging in a Park near her Priion) was fet at Liberty, as also the Lord Courtney Marquess of Exceter, who had been a Prisoner from the time of his Fathers being Beheaded in Henry the Eighth's Reign.

The Lord Stourton, a great stickler for Popery, having Murthered one Hargil and his Son, relying on his Pardon, don, found he was deceived; for himself was Hanged in a Silken Cord, and four of his Servants (who assisted him) in Hemp. It seemes there had been Law-Suits and other Variances between him and the Murthered Person, and the sooner to end them he and his Servants knocked them down with Clubbs, cut their Throats, and Buried them Fifteen Foot deep; but such was the will of God, the Murther should be discovered by such as went to digg Gravel, and the Murtherers punished. Thomas Stafford, second Son to the Lord Stafford, getting a few Ships Landed in the North, and surprized Scarberough Castle, Proclaiming Queen Mary held the Crown without Right, and had betray'd the Kingdom to the Spaniards; but fix Days after his Landing he was Taken by the Earl of Westmoreland, and at London lost his Head, Three of his Followers being Executed at Tylurn. And King Philip being in War with France, upon the account of his Father Charles the Emperour, notwithstanding by Articles of Marriage it was agreed upon that the English should not Intermeddle, the Queen laboured to Quarrel that she might come in with a colourable pretext to Assist her Husband; and theretore made divers Complaints of Injuries done, especially, That the French King had fitted out Stafford with Men and Money, and encouraged divers othersto molest her Kingdom; and was about to Proclaim War: But Pope Paul the Fourth Envying the Emperour, and taking part with the French, hereupon (to crofs Queen Alary's purposes) took Cardinal Pool's Authority Legantine from him, and appointed one Peter - Peton, a Monk of the Order of St. Francis, to Succeed him, naming him Bishop of Salisbury; but the Queen forbad his Landing; and by submitting to the Pope got Tool restored.

Whilst these things passed King Ibilip raised an Army in Flanders, and other Countries, of 25000 Foot and 12000 Horse; and the Queen under-hand, sent to his Aid 1000 Horse and 4000 Foot under the Earl of Pembrook, and other experienced Generals, which overthrew the French Army, and took the Town of St. ! Quintins: and because the English had thus assisted, contrary to the Truce between the two Nations, the Duke of Guise set down before Callice and battered it furioully, of which the Queen having notice, ordered Supplies to be immediatly fent of Men, Ammunition, and Provision; but so outragious was the sea, that no Ships could put out; fo that the Lord Wentworth Governour of the Town, found himself constrained to surrender it on Articles when it had been held by the English 211 Years, for the Taking of which fuch joy was made in France as if England was falln into their hands. After that they Invaided Flanders, pillaging the Country, but were Fought with and Overthrown; and foon after a great Fleet being fet-forth, the English Landed near Brest in Britany, and Sacked Conquet a considerable Port-Town in that Tract, which they afterwards Burnt: When the French, to strengthen their Interest, Married Mary the Young Queen of Scots, to Francis the then Dauphin, she having been (in King Edward the Sixth's Reign) conveyed into France to that end. But whilft Queen Mary was making great preparation, she fell Sick, some fay of Melancholly for the Absence of King, Philip, who now feemed little to regard her; but herfelf affirmed, when that was alledged to her in her Sickness, It was not his Unkindness troubled her, but if she Lyel they might open her, and find the loss of Callis written upar her Heart; and of that Sickness she Dyed, on the 17th of November, Anno 1558, when she had Reignod 5 Years, 4 Months, and 11 Days, and in the 40th Year of her Age; and was Interred among her Royal An.

Whilf

cestors, in Il cstminster.

In this Queens Reign a Tempest happened, accompanied with prodigious Thunder and Lightening, and in Notinghamshire it threw down many Churches and Houses, tore up huge Trees, threw the Bells out of Steeples, and took off Sheets of Lead, writhed them together like a Glove, and threw them 400 Foot from their place: A Child was taken by the force of the Tempest, out of a Mans Arms a great height, and Dyed by the fall. Five or Six People were Kill'd, and many Cattle, by Hail-Stones Fifteen Inches in Circumference.

A great Mortality happened at the time of the Queens Death, which fell mostly on the Clergy; and of that burning Feaver 13 Bishops dyed, besides a great Number of Priests, and others; also Cardinal Poole.

A Brief Chrenology of Barty 15, and famous Men and Women that have Suffered the Flames, and other Totures and Perfecutions under Popery in England, before and fince the happy Reformation: With the Exhertations and Dying Words of the most Eminent of them.

Coording to my Promise (tho' this History by reason of many things occuring, swells to more Sheets than my intended Brevery designed it) I shall in this place set down together, a Summary Account of the Persons who have Suffered in England for the sake of a good Conscience; and could think it no where more fitly to be placed, than after a Reign, wherein the Blood of those of the set semmed Church, was shed like Water; yet Dyed with such Constancy as amazed and startled their cruel Persecutors. I have already spoke somthing of our English Martyrs, after the Kings Reigns wherein they were Persecuted, but for Brevity having omitted many, I now come to place them closer together, that a better view may be taken, and the Method by its plainness, more easily understood.

Know then, That when the Purity of the Primitive Churches was Clouded, and almost Obscured by the Romish Traditions, Errors, and Superflitions, to make Godliness in the Litteral worldly sense, a Gain, by leading People into Ignorance and blind Devotion in keeping the Word of God from their knowledge, and in its flead, imposing the Doctrine of Men, not agreeable with it, God in his great Mercy was pleated to raife up such instruments, as laboured to rekindle that Light, wicked and defigning Rome had near extinguished; who for the take of Gods Holy Truth, exposed themselves to the fury of the Adversary; and as in other Nations there were many. fo in England faithful Witnelles were not wanting, very early to lay down their Lives. I shall not look back so far as the Perfecutions under the Heathen Roman Emperours, Saxons, and Danes, for tho' they were very grievous, yet more Cruel enfued under the Tyranny of that which calles it felf Christian Rome, or the Roman Catholick Church. For after John Wickliff, William Wickbarn Diffiop of Winchester, and many other Learned Men, had Lighted the Candle, as I may term it, and opened the Eyes of many in this and the Neighboring Nations, to discern Truth from Falshood (and of this we have just cause to Glory, since the Reformation in all Churches was grounded on it) True Religion foon raifed her Head; and tho' Cruel Adversaries made her Profelites few for a time, their Constancy and Zeal was very great.

of ENGLAND.

In the Year 1280 Uter Bolton and John Afherly were severly Persecuted; and soon after Walter Bruce, John Ashton, John Patescul. and divers more, some of which are mentioned in the History; but as yet it began not to grow up to Flames, but by degrees it did; for William Swinderly was Burnt in Smithfield; also William Thorr. and divers others, Stigmatized, Banished, Whipped, and Starved in Goals; the Popes in whose time they Lived, Inciting and Encouraging their Clergy here, to purfue them with all Violence and utmost Rigor. So that in the Year 1417, the Lord Cobham was Burnt Hanging on a Gallows, in St Gille's Fields, and soon after William White, John Purrey and Richard White, confessing their Faith, and Dying with Courage and Christian bravery, for the fake of a good Conscience; and Peter Clark being forced to fly for maintaining Wickliff's Doctrine, from Scripture and Fathers, was taken beyond the Seas and put to Death by exquisit Torments, viz. His Tongue cut out, then Hanged by the Heels, and a flow Fire made under him till he Dyed. Roger Overly, for speaking against the Mass, and other Superstitions, and offering to prove them nor consonant to the Word of God, was Executed. And to put a Scandal on the Profesiors of the Truth, they Nick-Named them Lollards, and their common Prison was called the Lollards Tower. But Persecution rather encreased than diminished their Number, as appears by the largness of their Assemblies, some to Teach and others to Hear: For one of these Meetings being surprised in St. Gilses Fields, Anno 1415, by Armed Force, and wrongfully charged as a Riotous or Tumultuous Meeting, tending to Insurrection and Rebellion, it was by Popish Judges construed a Treasonable AC; and hereupon Roger Atton, John Beverly, John Brown, and about 36 more, were Drawn, Hanged and Quartered, in the Place where they met; and John Claydon and Benidiel Ulman Burned; and about 100 others Languished in Prison, till most of them Dyed.

In Henry the Sixth's time, William Taylor, for embracing the Doctrine Wickliff had Taught, was Burnt in Smithfield; Henry Web and Henry Florence Scourged unmercifully, and 120 Imprisoned and Tortured divers ways; and some suffered the Flames, among whom William White and Richard Hovelden were Burnt. Soon atter this, Thomas Baly and Richard Wiche, both Ministers, were burne, one in Smithfield, and the other on Tower-Hill.

In Edward the Fourth's Reign, John Huss, or Goose, was burne; and in Henry the Seventh's, Jane Boughton, a Woman of Fourscore Years of Age, was burnt in Norfolk, another in Smithfield, several Branded, and others did Pennance, going in their Shirts, with Ropes about their Necks, and carrying Faggots on their Backs; and Will. Idfworth, being Condemned as a Heretick for owning the Scriptures for the true Rule of Faith and faving Knowlidge, and denying the Romish Traditions, and Image Worship, &c. to make the flaming Scene more dreadful, being bound to a Stake in Amersbam, and the Wood placed about him, they compelled his own Daughter with a Torch to Light his Funeral Pile; whilft he was Singing and Rejoycing in his Martyrdom till the Flames stopped his Breath, and his Soul mounted on Firy Wings to Everlasting Rest. And about two Years after, in Buckinghamshire, were Burned John Melton, Tho, Bennard, and one Roberts, taking that cruel Death with admirable Patience and Cherfulness. Thomas Norrice Suffered in the like manner at Norwich, and Tho. Gueft at Salisbury; and a Woman at Chiping Sudbury; and in this Reign feveral other Persons in divers Places, some against whom there were no colourable Accusations, after severe Rackings and Torturings, were found Murthered in Goals, and Hundreds fled into Germany, Gr.

Cardinal Wolsey in the beginning of Henry the Eighth's Reign, doing all under him, or rather above him, (for he did only what he pleased) to ingratiate himself with the Court of Rome, as aiming at the Pontificate, loofed the Reins of Perfecution against those that had separated themselves from the Romish Churches; for indeed about this time two things mainly encreased the Gospel Professors in England and other Nations, viz. One, The appearance of Martin Luther in Germany, who openly with all his might opposed it, and had gained some Princes to his side; and the other, the Noble Mustery of Printing, which began to be much used, whereby good Books were more eafily Promulgated, and Disperied through divers Nations, in their proper Languages. These alarmed the Pope and his Clergy, fearful of their Diana, Profit, to raise dreadful Persecutions against the Professors of the Gospel, raging against them even to Madness; and of this England now had a smarting thare. For in the Year 1511, John Brewster and William Sweeting were Burnt in Smithfield, and also Robert Harrison, William Carder, and Agnese Greble, the Husband and Daughter being forced in as Witnesses to take away the Life of the latter; and one Mr. Sne, for . having the Book of Revelations in English, was Eurnt with that and other good Books hanging about his Neck in a String, in the lashion of Popish Beads; and five Persons for Reading the four Evengelists in English, were Accused for having in their possession and Reading Hererical Books, containing many Damnable Opinions; and in the Year 1514, Richard Hun was found Murthered in the Lollard's Cafile, after many Torments and much Cruelty had been excercifed towards him. However, their Mallice extended to his dead Body, for it was committed to the Flames; and about this time John Stile, John Brown and Thomas Man, were Burnt in Smithfield; Robert Cousens at Buckingham, Christopher Shoomaker at Newbury, Robert and Richard Bartlet and John Scrivener likewise suffer'd the Flames after all ways had been in vain used to make them Renounce their Profession; and thinking to terrify the latter, his Children were compelled to fet Fire to the pile that burnt him.

In the Year 1519, Six Persons were Eurnt at Caventry, and soon after them Thomas Harding and Robert Silkeb. And the Body of William Tracy Esq; in Gloucestershire, because his Executors refused to Pay for Singing his Soul out of Purgatory, was dug up and burnt, being Charged (for the fore-mentioned reason) to have dyed a Heretick: One Richard Brayfield who had been a Monk at Bury in Suffolk, but left it, upon seeing the Debauched and Dissolute Lives of the other Monasticks, was accused of Herefy, hurry'd to a Dungeon, Bound, Gagg'd, and Whipt, and then flunding to his Profession of that Truth Recorded in Holy Writ, opposite to the Remish Tenents, he was Degraded and Condemned; when being Burnt in London, the Fire was on purpose made so scanty that he continued in it half an Hour Alive, without Complaining; and his Left Arm being burne, he cherfully rubbed it with his Right Hand, fo that it fell into the Fire; and so in Prayers, without moving his Eody, he cherfully ended his days in a bed of flames.

being

Some that were Imprisoned they fed with Sanduft, some were kept continually in the Stocks with great Waights on their Leggs, tome with Manacles and bars of Iron fixed about their Necks, and many Rack'd fall they were Lamed and Differred in Eody. James Bainham, John Tewsbury, Valentine Sheaf, and his Wife, John Bent, and Mr. Trapnel suffered the Flames; three Persons were Hanged in Chains, and Starved to Death, for burning a Wooden Image called the Road, at Dover Court; Andrew Honor, John Frith, Thomas Bennet. John Lambert, William Tindal, William Leighton and Mr. Collier, a Lawyer, fuffered the Flames, accused for Lutherans; for so now they termed the Profesors of the Gospel Truths. And a little while after, Dr. Barns, William Hieron, Thomas Garret, made their passage from this to a better World, through the Fire in Smithfield. Anthony Parker, Henry Filmer, and Robert Testwood, were Burntat Windsor, and many Dyed in Prison, some Natural Deaths, others suspected to be Murthered. In the Year 1541, Kerby and Clarke were Burnt at Inswich, and Bury, and Anno 1546 Mis. Ann Askew (a Gentlewoman belonging to Queen Catharine Par, because she would not accuse the Queen and other great Ladies, of favouring the Latheran Tenents) was put upon the Rack: Wriothsley the Chancellor playing the part of the Hangman, in Torturing and Stretching her Limbs; but the he Sweat at this barbarous Work, the bore it willout a Sigh, or Groan, till the Bloodthirsty Wretch was weary with Formenting her; yet being Condemned for Herely, the was burnt in Smithfield; where she Dyed with such Constancy, Courage, and composedness of Mind, that by her Death many, who saw her suffer, were Converted; and at the same time and place suffered in the Frames Nicholas Bellerian, a Minister, John Addams a Taylor, and John Lassels, a Gentleman belonging to the Court; who were much encouraged to undergo their Sufferings, as having beheld the Conflancy and Patience of Mrs. Askew: And Sir. John Blage a Gentleman of the Kings Privy-Chamber, was by the Romish Bishops Condenined for Speaking against the Efficacy of the Mass; but by the Harl of Bedford's Intercettion Pardoned; when the King foon after meeting him, taid, Ab my Pigg how do'ft thou? Truly, reply'd the Knight (teelingly) If your Majesty had not been kinder to mee than your Bishops, your Pigg had been Koasted long ere now.

Soon after this Bishop Gardener procured the King to put out a Proclamation for taking away the use of the Scriptures, and all other Books in English, that might Enlighten the People in the ways of Truth, or that shewed them the Absurdities of the Romish Praclices; which much rejoyced the Popish Clergy, who supposed by this they had gained a main Point, to Exterpate those of the New upftart Religion, as they called them; tho' indeed what they fincerely Professed, was as Antient as Christ and his Apostles being upon Earth; but God blafted this defign, by putting an end to this King, in the expiration of his Life, when he had waded through a Sea (for the most part) of Innocent Blood, incited thereto by the cruel Principles and finister Defigns of the Popish Clergy. And so on King Edward the Sixth's coming to the Crown, a happy Reformation enfued; but whether God was angry with us for not making a right use of his Favours and Indulgence so mercifully extended towards us, or intended to try the Faith, Constancy, and Patience of those he defigned for Vessels of Honour, I determine not; but that Good Prince being taken to a better Life after a shorr Reign. Mary his Eldest Sister Succeeding him, set open again the floodgates of Persecution, by restoring the Popes Supremacy, and by severe Lawes made by a Popish Parliament, strictly Prohibiting the excercise of the Protestant Religion; for so now it was called, from some Cities and Provinces in Germany, Protesting against the Romith Errors and Superstitions; yet so mightily were the Prosessors of it ftrengthened by the Divine affistance, that neither Flames nor other Tortures, could bring about her purposes. But after she had pur divers of the Nobility to Death, who flood in the way to hinder the introducing Popery, under pretence of their opposing her coming to the Crown, &c. which see at large in her Reign, she and her Counsellors fingled out the most Eminent of the Reformed Clergy, dooming them before-hand to Death, thinking thereby to terrify those of a meaner Rank into any compliance that should be required; whereupon they were dispossessed of their Bishopricks. and Popish Eishops Officiated. Thomas Cranmer, Arch-Eishop of Canterbury, was sent to the Tower; and to put a more colourable gloss on this Design, a Disputation was appointed at Oxford between the Reformed and Romish Clergy, which was willingly undertaken against all Opponents by Arch-Bishop Cranmer, Nicholas Rialey Eishop of London, and Hugh Latimer who had been Bishop of Worcester.

The thief Points to be Disputed on was about the Sacrament of the Lords Supper; and tho' they were shut up in Prisons, had no Books, nor Friends to Conferr with, and a short warning; yet on their several Days, notwithstanding the Noise, Clammour, Reproaches, and great Numbers of their Opposers, one by one, suffering the violence of many at once, without Order, Measure, or Modesty, Confuted their Adversaries to that degree, with found Reasons, and Arguments from Scripture, Fathers, and the Use of the Primirive Church, That being nonplussed, all they in a Rage could retore was, viz. You have the Word, and we have the Sword; fee which is libeliest to prevail. And indeed the Disputation finished. they passed Sentence of Death upon those venerable Prelates, That they should be Burnt as Hereticks; which Sentence they received with great Alacrity and Constancy of Mind; Lattimer expressing much loy that the pleasure of God was such, that being near Fourscore Years of Age, he should have so happy a Period as Martyrdom; and so they were remanded to Prison to expect it at the leafure of their Enemies; and indeed their Execution was delay'd a confiderable time, in hopes they would have Recanted; but at length Ridley and Lattimer were brought to the Town Ditch in Oxford, and bound to the Stake, Exhorting the People to a constant perseverance in the True Religion, and recommending their Souls into the hands of Almighry God, Sung even in the Flames, and fo made an exchange of Earth for Heaven. Whilst Cranmer from his Prison beheld the difinal Spectacle, and on his knees was Praving that their Faith and Constancy might not fail in this their Firey Tryal.

The Archbishops Death was deferred for a time, but the Pope fending an Express Order to Degrade him, and deliver him over to the Secular Power, to be burnt within Ten Days, committing the Degrading part to Thurlby Bishop of Ely, and Bonner Bishop of Landon, who succeeded Risley; which done the Aged Prelate was to cunningly dealt-with by one Frvar John, a Spaniard, That he prevailed over his slumane-trailty in defiring Life, upon promiting a Pardon and Advancement, to Recant his former Tenents, and be reconciled to the Church of Rome; whereupon he subscribed a Writing to that purpose; but Cardinal Fool (for Gardener was Dead, who had defigned it for himfelt ) wanting the archb shoprick, The oid Popish Maxim of No Faith to be kept with Hereriche, was turned agon him; and in the height of expectation of Life, he was brought to Execution; and tho they certified him there was no hopes of Pardon, but he must instantly suffer the Flames, yet they used many Persivations to induce him to a Publick Recantation before he went to the Stake; showing him the Writing he had Signed, at the fight of which he burth our into Tears: Then in a composed Temper, addressing himself to the People, after he had Exported them in moving words to amend their Lives, and bring forth bruits worthy of a Christian Profession, he repeated the principal Articles of the Christian Religion, Explained his own Opinion, and professed the Hingdom of Antichrift was contained in the Papacy, and upheld by the Popes Authority: And Lastly, he shewed how greatly he had offended God by his Recantation; Profeshing that his Right Hand, which had rashly Sighed it, should first feel the Punishmene Eur here he was so Interrupted by the Clamours and Railings of the Popish Priests, that he could be heard but little more; and then being clad in very vile Garments, and hurry'd to the Stake, with many Taunts and bitter Scoffs, when the Fire was lighted, he firetched his Right Hand into the Flame, and drew it not back, unless once seeming to wipe his Beard, till it droped off; and the Flames raging high, he lift up his Eyes and left and towards Heaven, crying out, Lord receive my Soul, and Dyed; not moving his Body whilft he had Life. And when the whole Frame was confumed. his Heart was found whole and unfinged by the Fire, in which God himself, by a Miracle, gave testimony that his Heart was upright with him: And this in any of the Popish Faction, would have been fufficient for a Canonization, and crowded for a place in the Calender among their Adored Saints. And soon after the Eodies of two Learned Men, viz. Martin Bucer and Paulus Phagius, were (a long time after they had been buried) dug up, accused of Herefie, and burnt in the Market-place in Cambridge; and Feter Martyr's Wife dug up likewife, and buried in a Dunghill; fo it appears their Rage and Mallice extended as well to the Dead, as the Living. And Cardinal Pool immediatly entered upon the Archbishoprick, which before was only lequestered.

Whilst these Great Men sell, those of a lower Rank escaped not; for Mr. John Rogers (who in King Henry the Eighth's Reign, had sted, and associated himself with the samous Tindul, after his Death returned into England, in the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, and was made a Prebend of St. Pauls by Bishop Ridley) being taken and cast in Prison, Sentence of Death patied upon him to be burnt, which pain he endured with great Constancy and undauntedness of Spitit, Exhorting his Wife and Ten Children, who weeping came to take their leave of him, to part with him Joysully, and Trust in God, who would be a better Husband and Father to them.

Dostor John Hosper Bishop of Gloucester, came in for a Crown among the number of these Martyrs, and they having Condemned him, he was tent down to Thucester to be burnt; where (as they said) he had done the greatest mischies, in sowing the Seeds of Heresie; and there in mallice, because he earnessly Exhorted the People to be constant in a steadsast Baith, and not to adheare to the destructive Tenents of the Church of Rome, they Burnt him with Green Wood, so that his Leggs and part of his Thighs were consumed whilst he continued Praying and Exhorting the People, yer in these Torments he declared he was as Easie as in a Bed of Rofes.

Dr. Robert Ferrar Bishop of Carmarden, was likewise brought on the stage, for thwarting Bishop Gardener's Humour; and being Condemned as a Heretick by Dr. Morgan, who had been thrust into his Eishoprick, there happened but a short space between that and his futlering the Flames in Carmarden-Market-Place, expressing a firmness of Mind, and much resolution in undergoing his Torments accusing Gardener of his Death, and Citing him to Answer it before

God's High Tribunal.

Rowland Taylor, an Eminent Minister of Hadley, being accused as the former, was fent to that Parish to be Burnt, where he was Lamented by all forts of People, especially the Poor, to whom he had been very Charitable, calling out the Almes-People by Name, and giving them then what Money he had, Exhorting them to follow the Doctrine he had Taught them; and coming to the Stake, he Merrily faid, Now many would be deceived; whereat a Popish Priest supposing he would have Recanted, urged him to it with promises and hopes of longer Life; but he smilingly Reply'd, You mistake my meaning, I do not intend by the Grace of God any that I have Preached his Word to, shall find me Contradict what I have Taught, for Life or any other thing; but once supposing to have been Buried in Hadis-Church-Yard, the Worms will be deceived, because my Corpulent Body that might have fed them, must now be Burnt to Ashes.

Besides these, divers others of Note were Burnt, as Lawrence Saunders, a famous Preacher at Coventry, John Cardmaker, Chancellour of Wells and B.uh. At London, John Bradford, a Man Eminent for his Learning and Sanctity, in Smithfield; At which place also suffered in the Flames that Eminent and Holy Martyr Mr. John Philpot, faying at his Martyrdom, I will pay my Vows in thee O Smithfield. And with him suffered a little Youth, praising God and Rejoyceing in the Flames. Yet this Issue of Blood staid not; for Th. Templins, whose Hand Bonner Bishop of London burnt in Prison, to try his Conftancy, which he endured with much Patience, was burnt in Smithfield; also William Hawtree; And in Effex, Stephen Knight, William Pizot, and John Lawrence; Rawlins White at Cardiff, William Flower and George Marfhal at Westminster, and John Warn in Smithfield.

And now the Goyls being full, and complaint made by the Pope to the King and Aeen, That Hereticks were not fo severely deale with as beyond the seas, they fent to Bonner (prone enough of himself to Cruelty) that he should difincumber the Prisons in his Dioceis, by fending fuch as were Condemned to Execution, and proceed to the Tryals of the reft. In obedience to this bloody Command, he Condemned John Ardely and John Sympson, who were burnt in Effex, and Thomas Wats, Tho. Hawks, Tho. Comond, William Bamford, Tho. Osburn, Inhabitants of Cogfeal in Effex, being Committed for not Receiving the Easter Sacrament, were Condemned and Surnt in several places of that County.

John Bland, Nic olas Shetterden, John Frakesh and Humphery Middleion, also suffered the Flames; and a while after, by the same Cruelty, fell Nicholas Hall, John Harpole, Christopher Wade, and Margery Boley. In Kent, John Launder, Derick Carver, Tho. Ivelon, John Denby, James Athes, John Newman, Patrick Packingham, and Richard Hook, suffered the Flames. Robert Samuel a Minister, was Burnt at Norwich, two more at Ipfwich, five in the Diocess of Canterbury; for Bonner especially took as much pleasure in Condemning these Good People, and fending them to the Flames, as Domition did in Torturing Flys. Seven were Burnt in one Fire in Smithfield, four in Canterbury; A Woman as the was Burning in the Isle of Guernley, had a Child sprung out of her Womb, which the Cruel Totturers threw again into the Flames. To be brief and not tire your Patience, in drawing so Tragical a Scene too wide, There were in this short Raign confumed in the Flames, for the Confession of a Good Faith, 277 of all Ages and Sexes, viz. Five Bishops, 21 Divines, 8 Gentlemen, 4 Tradelmen, 100 Husbandmen, Servants and Labourers, 26 Wives, 20 Widows and Virgins, 2 Boys, and 1 Infant. Eefides these, 7 were Whipped, one to Death; 16 perished in Prisons, 12 were Buried in Dunghills, and many lay Condemned in Expectation of the Firey Tryal, and some Hundreds fled beyond the Seas; but the death of this Queen, who gave way to fo much Cruelty, put an end to the Persecution, the stream of Blood being thereby stopped-And before this time, and foon after, most of the Persecutors were overtaken by Gods ludgments, and came to Miserable and Detelled Ends. Some were Executed for several heinious Crimes, others wandered beyond the Seas, till they Perished; and some were Eaten up by Vermin.

And thus, Reader, have I heitherto made good my Promife; and now paffing over this Acaldama, or Field of Blood, Head you to a more diverting Theme.

The Reign of Queen ELIZABETH.

ELIZABETH Youngest Daughter to Henry the Eighth, after her many Sufferings in close Confinement.

ment, and attempts made to take away her Life, happily Succeeded to the Throne, and put a stop to the cruel Perfecutions her Sifter had raifed, on the 17th of November 1558.

And the first publick Testimony she gave of her Princly Difcretion, and Knowledge in the weightv Affairs of State, was to chuse a Wise and Learned Council, cauting new Commissions and Instructions to be fent to the feveral Ambassadors in Forreign Courts; and defired by Sir Edward Hern, her Agent, who had relicied in Oncen Mary's Time at the Court of Rome, That mutual Good Offices might pass between her and the Pope in matters that concerned Publick Affairs, seeing she had happily Succeeded her Sifter on the Throne: But the haughty Old Man would not Answer but in his usual Dialect, viz. That the Kingdom of England was held in Fee of the See Apostolick; That she could not Succeed, being Illegitimate; That be could not contradict the Declarations of Clement the Seventh, and Paul the Third; That it was a great prefumption to allume the Name of Queen, and Government, without his consent; yet, being desirous to shew a Fatherly Affection, if the would renounce her pretention to the Crown, and refer herfelf wholly to his free disposition, he would do whatever might be done with the Honour of the Apostolick See.

The Queen, who was well assured of her Titleto the Crown by her Right, and by the Estates in Parliament, little expecting fuch an Answer, was very much displeased, called home her Agent; and from that time resolved never more to hold any Correspondency with the See of Rome. But having refused the Kingot Spain's offers of Marriage with her, counting the Difpensation he promised to procure at the Popes hands Unlawful and Wicked, she set her mind to contrive the most easie and inosensive ways how to restore the Protestant

Protestant Religion, consulting with those of the greatest understanding in Assairs of Church and State: and coming to some refult, she placed in the Courts of sudicature, and Offices of greatest Trust, such Persons as were of that Profession, or well enclined to it: And having wifely weighed all circumstances, she made provision against the encouragement and growth of Popery, by restraining the Nobles and others from sending their Children to be Educated beyond the Seas; and caused many Ceremonies in Divine Worship, used in the former Reign, to be laid aside. And so, after the Funeral of her Sifter, prepared for her Coronation; and was in order to it, conducted (with extraordinary Pomp and Triumph) from the Tower, through the City, to Westminster, where she was Invested with the Regal Ornaments; and was Crowned by the Bilhop of Carlile, the other Bishops refusing to perform that Office, as fearing the Popes displeasure, or rather the fall of the Remish Keligion in this Kingdom, to which Alteration if they confented not, they forefaw they must lose their Bishopricks.

And now People differing much in Points of Religion, it was ordered by Proclamation, That none should unreverently speak of the Sacrament; and it was alowed to be received in both kinds; yet a Conferrence was appointed to be held at Westminster between the Papists and the Protestants, upon these Considerations, viz.

I. Concerning Prayer, and the Administration of the Sacrament, in the Vulgar-Tongue.

2. Concerning the Authority of the Church, in Constituting and Abrogating Ceremonies to Edification.

3. Concerning the Sacrifice of the Mass.

But the Papilts in this would come to nothing without the Popes License; and some of the Bishops threat-

M m

ning

yer in these Torments he declared he was as Easie as in a Bed of Roses.

Dr. Robert Ferrar Bishop of Carmarden, was likewise brought on the stage, for thwarting Bishop Gardener's Humour; and being Condemned as a Heretick by Dr. Morgan, who had been thrust into his Lishoprick, there happened but a short space between that and his suffering the Flames in Carmarden-Market-Place, expressing a simules of Mind, and much resolution in undergoing his Torments, accusing Gardener of his Death, and Citing him to Answer it before God's High Tribunal.

Rowland Taylor, an Eminent Minister of Hadley, being accused as the former, was sent to that Parish to be Burnt, where he was Lamented by all forts of People, especially the Poor, to whom he had been very Charitable, calling out the Almes-People by Name, and giving them then what Money he had, Exhorting them to follow the Doctrine he had Taught them; and coming to the Stake, he Merrily said, Now many would be deceived; whereat a Popish Priess fund hopes of longer Life; but he smilingly Reply'd, Tou mislate and hopes of longer Life; but he smilingly Reply'd, Tou mislate my meaning, I do not intend by the Grace of God any that I have Preached his Word to, shall find me Contradist what I have Taught, for Life or any other thing; but once supposing to have been Buried in Hadly-Charch-Tard, the Worms will be deceived, because my Corpulent Body that might have fed them, must now be Burnt to Ashes.

Besides these, divers others of Note were Burnt, as Lawrence Saunders, a samous Preacher at Coventry, John Cardmaker, Chancellour of Wells and Bath. At London, John Bradford, a Man Emnent for his Learning and Sanctity, in Smithsield; At which place also suffered in the Flames that Eminent and Holy Martyr Mr. John Philpot, saying at his Martyrdom, I will pay my Vows in thee O Smithsield. And with him suffered a little Youth, praising God and Rejoyceing in the Flames. Yet this listue of Blood staid not; for The Tomplans, whose Hand Bonner Bishop of London burnt in Prison, to try his Constancy, which he endured with much Patience, was burnt in Smithsield; also William Hawtree; And in Essex, Stephen Knight, William Pizes, and John Lawrence; Rawlins White at Cardis, William Flower and George Marshal at Westminster, and John Warn in

And now the Gols being full, and complaint made by the Pope to the King and Caeen, That Hereticks were not so severely dealt with as beyond the Seas, they sent to Bonner (prone enough of himself to Cruelty) that he should disnocumber the Prisons in his Diocess, by sending such as were Condemned to Execution, and proceed to the Tryals of the rest. In obedience to this bloody Command, he Condemned John Ardely and John Sympson, who were burnt in Essex, and Thomas Wats, Tho. Hawks, Tho. Osmond, William Bamford, Tho. Osburn, Inhabitants of Cogstal in Essex, being Committed for not Receiving the Easter Sacrament, were Condemned and Surnt in several places of that County.

John Bland, Nic olas Shetterden, John Frakest and Humphery Middleton, also suffered the Flames; and a while after, by the same Cruelty, fell Nicholas Hall, John Harpole, Christopher Wade, and Margery Boley. In Kent, John Launder, Derick Carver, Tho. Ivelon, John Denby, James Athes, John Newman, Patrick Packingham, and Richard Hook, suffered the Flames. Robert Samuel a Minister, was Buint at Norwich, two more at Inswich, five in the Diocess of Canterbary; for Bonner especially took as much pleasure in Condemning these Good People, and fending them to the Flames, as Domitian did in Torturing Flys. Seven were Burnt in one Fire in Smithfield, four in Canterbury; A Woman as the was Burning in the Isle of Guernfey, had a Child sprung out of her Womb, which the Cruel Torturers threw again into the Flames. To be brief and not tire your Patience, in drawing so Tragical a Scene too wide, There were in this short Raign confumed in the Flames, for the Confession of a Good Faith, 277 of all Ages and Sexes, viz. Five Bishops, 21 Divines, 8 Gentlemen, 4 Tradelmen, 100 Husbandmen, Servants and Labourers, 26 Wives, 20 Widows and Virgins, 2 Boys, and 1 Infant. Befides these, 7 were Whipped, one to Death; 16 perished in Prisons, 12 were Buried in Dunghills, and many lay Condemned in Expediation of the Firey Tryal, and some Hundreds fled beyond the Seas; but the death of this Queen, who gave way to fo much Cruelty, put an end to the Persecution, the stream of Blood being thereby stopped-And before this time, and foon after, most of the Persecutors were overtaken by Gods Judgments, and came to Miserable and Detested Ends. Some were Executed for several heinious Crimes, others wandered beyond the Seas, till they Perished; and some were Eaten up by Vermin.

And thus, Reader, have I heitherto made good my Promife; and now paffing over this Acaldama, or Field of Blood, Head you to a more diverting Theme.

The Reign of Queen ELIZABETH.

Eighth, after her many Sufferings in close Confinement,

ment, and attempts made to take away her Life, happily Succeeded to the Throne, and put a stop to the cruel Perfecutions her Sifter had raised, on the 17th of November 1558.

And the first publick Testimony she gave of her Princly Discretion, and Knowledge in the weighty Affairs of State, was to chuse a Wise and Learned Council, cauling new Commissions and Instructions to be sent to the several Ambassadors in Forreign Courts: and defired by Sir Edward Hern, her Agent, who had relided in Queen Mary's Time at the Court of Rome. That mutual Good Offices might pass between her and the Pope in matters that concerned Publick Affairs, seeing she had happily Succeeded her Sister on the Throne: But the haughty Old Man would not Answer but in his usual Dialect, viz. That the Kingdom of England was held in Fee of the See Apostolick; That she could not Succeed, being Illegitimate; That be could not contradict the Declarations of Clement the Seventh, and Paul the Third; That it was a great prefumption to assume the Name of Queen, and Goveriment, without his consent; yet, being desirous to shew a Fatherly Affection, if the would renounce her pretentions to the Crown, and refer herfelf wholly to his free disposition, he would do whatever night be done with the Honour of the Apostolick See.

The Queen, who was well assured of her Titleto the Crown by her Right, and by the Estates in Parliament, little expecting such an Answer, was very much displeased, called home her Agent; and from that time resolved never more to hold any Correspondency with the See of Rome. But having resuled the King of Spain's oriers of Marriage with her, counting the Dispensation he promised to procure at the Popes hands Unlawful and Wicked, she set her mind to contrive the most easie and inosensive ways how to restore the Protestan

Protestant Religion, consulting with those of the greatest understanding in Assairs of Church and State: and coming to some refult, she placed in the Courts of sudicature, and Offices of greatest Trust, such Persons as were of that Profession, or well enclined to it: And having wifely weighed all circumstances, she made provision against the encouragement and growth of Popery, by restraining the Nobles and others from sending their Children to be Educated beyond the Seas; and caused many Ceremonies in Divine Worship, used in the former Reign, to be laid aside. And so, after the Funeral of her Sifter, prepared for her Coronation; and was in order to it, conducted (with extraordinary Pomp and Triumph) from the Tower, through the City, to Westminster, where she was Invested with the Regal Ornaments; and was Crowned by the Pifhop of Carlile, the other Bishops refusing to perform that Office, as fearing the Popes displeasure, or rather the fall of the Romish Keligion in this Kingdom, to which Alteration if they confented not, they forefaw they must lose their Bishopticks.

And now People differing much in Points of Religion, it was ordered by Proclamation, That none should unreverently speak of the Sacrament; and it was alowed to be received in both kinds; yet a Conference was appointed to be held at Westminster between the Papists and the Protestants, upon these Considerations, viz.

1. Concerning Prayer, and the Administration of the Sacrament in the Vulgar-Tongue.

2. Concerning the Authority of the Church, in Constituting and Abrogating Ceremonies to Edification.

3. Concerning the Sacrifice of the Mis.

But the Papilts in this would come to nothing without the Popes License; and some of the Bishops threat-

Mm

ning

ning the Queen and her Nobles with Excommunication if they proceeded to make alterations; for their male-pertness some of them were committed to Prison. The Queen appointed a Form of Common Prayer in English, and settled the Reformed Religion, entirely throwing off the Roman Yoak, and began to apply herself to other weighty Affairs, sending to demand the Restitution of Callice, Lost in the preceding Reign; and after many Debates it was agreed, That the French King should Enjoy it for the Term of Eight Years, and that then it should be restored to the Queen of England, or in refusal be Paid 500000 Crowns; and hereupon a Peace was Agreed and Proclaimed between the two Nations, as also between the Dauphin and the Queen of Scots his Wife; whereby Scotland was Included.

Whilst these things were transacting, the Parliament Advised the Queen to Marry, leaving her entirely therein to her own Choice that Children might be Bom to Succeed her. To which the Queen made this reply, That she was already Wedded, which was, to her Kingdom and People; and having promised to take a Husband, if fo the good of the State should require it, she dismissed those that were fent to her by both Houses, on this Meiliage: And foon after came an Ambassador from the King of Sweden, to propose a Marriage between her and Prince Ericus the Kings Eldest Son; but after he had been fumptuously Treated, he was dismissed with a modest Denial; and tho' the Duke of Anjou, the Arch Duke of Austria, and others, sued for her Favour, the only gave them her Esteem, instead of her Love; and put them off with fair words. In the meantime the Scots destroyed in most parts of that Kingdom, the Religious Houses, Altars, Images, &c. declaring for a Reformation, which was against their Queens mind: Whereupon the French, on her Husbands and her part, raifed Forces to oppose them, which made them fend their Complaints to Queen Elizabeth, and implore her affiftance for the speedy driving out the Frenchmen, whom they faid (through their Queens favour) had engroffed all the Places of Trust, Honour, and Profit, into their Hands. This Queen Elizabeth communicating to her Council, after many Debates, to prevent the French getting an inlet into England by the way of Scotland, it was agreed Assistance should be given to the Reformers: And the Duke of Norfolk was appointed Lieutenant General of the North, to fecure the Borders; and on certain Articles agreed, an Army was fent into Scotland under the Command of the Lord Grey, and Ships to Edenborough Frith, who dislodged the French Men of War that lay there. This made the French King sue for Peace to the Queen; but his suit was rejected on many weighty Confiderations, tho' he promised at this time to deliver up Callice in lieu thereof. However a Treaty was held at Edenborough; but it came to little, upon the French King's declining to Sign the Articles agreed on. And now the Pope a Second time laboured to perswade the Queen to own his Supremacy, and not separate England from the Body of the Roman Catholick Church, but the Queen refusing to harken to the Popes Letters, resolved firmly to adhere to the Protestant Religion.

And now the Queen of Scots returning into that Kingdom, her Husband being Dead, sent a Letter to Queen Elizabeth, sull of kind expressions, to desire that a sincere Friendship might be maintained between them; and the Envoy that brought it, had Commission to deal with the Queen to declare her Heir Apparent to the Kingdom; which was infinuated as the safest way to continue Peace between the two Crowns. But the Queen Answered, She would do nothing to the prejudice of her Title, but as to this matter, she would refer it to the Personal Conference that was to be held shortly at York. But that Interview was broken off by the Papilts contrivance, least it might be a means towards creating the Queen of Scots an inclination to the Reformed Religion; whereupon the Queen, the better to strengthen her Hands, built several Sail of stout Ships. cast a great many Ordnance, and the Art of Gun-powder-making in England, was first by her Encouragement found out; so that having a great Fleet always at Sea, she was by Forreigners stilled The Queen of the North Seas, causing the Militia readily to be provided with Arms and frequently Exercised. And the Guisean Faction labouring to destroy the Hugonots, or Protestant Party in France, constrained them for the safety of their Lives to fall into a Civil War. The Queen affifted the latter, and had Haverdegrace and New Haven put into her Hands as Cautionary Towns for the reimbursment of her Charges, when things fhould be fettled; and to keep them firm to her Interest, so that they should not make a Peace without her confent; and hereupon she fent them 6000 Men under the Command of the Lord Ambrose Dudley, and kept the Seas with a considerable Navy.

Mm 2

judice

Whilst matters went thus Abroad, Defigns were carrying on against the Queen at Home; whereupon divers of Note, especially those descended of the Blood Royal by the two Daughters of Henry the Seventh, were Imprisoned. And she calling a Parliament, an Act passed for Assurance of the Queens Royal Power and Authority over all Effates and Subjects within her Dominions: And further Enacted, That the Cathof Supremacy should be administered to all Persons, for the better discovery of such as sided with the Pope & gainst her; which much startled the Papists, and made them them quiet for a time. In the mean while the Prince of Conde, one of the chief Leaders of the French Protestants, being Overthrown at the Battel of Derux, was taken Prisoner; as likewise Sir Nicholas Trockmorton, who paying his Ranfom was fet at Liberty. But the Admiral Chastillion took so many Places, as startled the Guises, insomuch that they consented to an Edict of Pacification; whereby the Princes were to be restored to the French Kings Favour. Conde, alured with the hopes of the Lieutenancy of France, and a Marriage with the Queen of Scots, the Hugonets to enjoy the freedom of their Religion, &c. The Agreement was fuddainly made, and the English not only treacherously Abandoned, but they Joyned with the Papifts to drive them out of the places they held, and straightly Besieged New Haven, which by reason of the Plague raged grievously in it, they had Surrendered to them.

But the Spanish Greatness threatning England, and the French offering reasonable Terms, a Peace was concluded between the two Crowns, and Ratified upon their delivering Hostages to pay the Queen at a set time a large Sum of Money; upon which the French King was Invested with the Order of the Garter: Hereupon the Spaniard in a fret prohibited all Commerce between the English and his Subjects, which made the Queen remove the Wooll-Mart from Antwerp to Ems in Frizland, but the Low Countries being much Impoverished thereby, the Edict was Repealed; and now the Queen made her great Favourite Sir Robert Dudley Lord Denbigh, Earl of Leicester, Knight of the Garter, Chancellor of Oxford, and Master of the Horse, and this she seemed to do the better to qualify him for a Husband for the Queen of Scots; but it swelled him to that Ambition that he foon aspired to make pretentions to herself; and the Queen of Scots soon after

Mm3

Married

Married the Lord Darnly Son to the Duke of Lenox of the Royal Blood, and of this Marriage was born James the Sixth of Scotland, and first of England. This not only displeased Queen Elizabeth, but the greater part of the Scots Nobility, because he was scarce 20 Years of Age, and easie to be sway'd any way. However he was sollemnly Crowned King, but by the contrivance of Murray the Queen of Scots Bastard Brother, and others, he some time after was Blown-up in his Lodging, and his mangled Body thrown by the force of the Pouder into the Garden.

The Parliament of England meeting again, humbly befought the Queen to Marry, but she still declined it. Shortly after the Queen of Scots falling into a Languish. ing condition, Recommended her Son to the Proteclien of Queen Elizabeth; yet Recovering, Earl Bothmell, wife ected to be one with Murray in destroying Daraley, was forced to fly the Kingdom, and Murray raifed a Party against the Queen to Depose her; when after some contesting, being over-powered, she fled into England, and craved Queen Elizabeth's Protection: but by the Advice of some Counselours bribed by Murray's Faction, in stead of allowing her (tho' near in Blood) that favour, she was committed a Prisoner in the cuitody of the Earl of Sbrewsbury, and after 20 Years Confinement, loft her Head, for holding Correspondencies with the Papists, to take away the Life of the Qucen.

A Passage having been discovered by the English to Russia, and great Privileges granted to the Merchants, The Czar or Emperour of Moscovy and Russia sent his Ambassadors to Queen Elizabeth, with Rich presents of Furrs, and such other Commodities as his Country yielded; and with them one Anthony Jenkinson, an Englishman, who had first Sailed the Caspian Sea; his demands mands was to make a League Offensive and Desensive with her; but by reason of the distance of the place, the Queen agreed not to the former, but left the latter indifferent; and so the Ambassadors having been highly Treated, were dismissed with a return of Presents.

In Ireland, Shan O Neal fell into Rebellion, but being defeated by the English, and throwing himself on the Hebridians, he was by them Slain after a feeming kind reception, and the Earl of Definend was feized and fent Prisoner to England, and Sir John Hankins being in America with some Ships, and contrary to the Capitulation, set-upon by the Spaniard, his Goods rifled, and some of his Men flain, the English Nation was fo exasperated with the Treachery, that they demanded a War with Spain, which however at that time was not granted, for the Queen having taken the French Protestants who were cruelly Persecuted under Charles the Ninth, was employed to support them with Money and Ammunition; and in providing for such as fled hither, tho' they had basely abandoned her at New Haven. But the Duke of Alva, the King of Spains General, making fierce War in the Low Countries, he brought in the Inquilition to Extirpate the Pretestant Religion. There, there happened an Accident that opened a Breach between England and Spain, viz. Valt Sums of Money being fent in a Spanish Ship by Italian: Merchants, to be Imployed in the Bank in the Low Countries for the ruin of the Protestants there, those Vessells were Chased upon the English Coast by some French Men of War, and the Money being brought on Shoar, the Queen was Advised by her Privy Council to stay it, and give the Merchants Owners Security for the Repaiment of it: Whereupon the Duke of Alva caused all the Goods and Effects of the English in the Low Countries to be seized, and the Queen caused the fame Mm 4 fame to be done by the Dutch Merchants in England. which were of greater Value; and Commerce being Prohibited, the English removed the Staple to Hamb rough; and the Privatiers fet out to greatly Endamaged the Staniard, that the Queen was forced to restrain them; yet the Duke of Alva secretly practised to raise Rebellion in England and Ireland; and the Earls of Northemberland, Westmorland, and others, did make an Infurication in the North, being Instigated to it by Aiorten a Popilli Priest, and by their Declaration Invited all the Roman Catholicks to joyn them; and at Durbam Tore in pieces all the English Bibles and Comonen Prayer Books they could find in the Churches; but being Proclimed Traytors, upon the approach of the Queens Forces, they Fled with a small company into Sectland, from whence the Earl of Westmoreland fled into the Low Countries, and there Lived in a poor condition till he Dyed; and divers being taken were Executed. Soon after this, a Rebellion broke forth in Cumberland, but the Rebells were routed and dispersed by the Lord Hunflen; and another in Ireland, but quieted by the Lord Teputy. And one Felton by the Popes Command fiftned in the Night time a Bull Declaratory to the Bithop of Londons Palace Gate, wherein he Abiolycd all the Queens Subjects from their Oath of Allegiance; but Felton being taken, Coolessing & Justifying the Fact, he was Condemned and Executed near the place where he fixed the Bull, it being at that time hung about his Neck. And the Duke of Norfol's having been Imprisoned for defigning a Marriage with the Cre nof Scots, and endeavouring her Escape, upon his humble Submiffion, and a Writing agned, wherein he promifed rever to think of the Marriage, or any thing devogatory to Queen Elizabeth's Authority, he was discharged. And a great many of the English for iundry fundry crimes being fled into Scotland, upon refusal of delivering them up, the Earl of Suffex and the Lord Scripp entered that Kingdom with an Army, and comrelled the Scots of the Queens party to abstain from Hostility, and utterly forsake the English Rebells. And a Rebellion being raised in Ireland by the Earl of Thumond and his adherents, the Earl fled into France. for fear of being delivered to the Lord Deputy by his Friends, but upon his humble submission was restored to his Estate and Dignity; and the Duke of Norfolk being again Imprisoned was brought to his Tryal for High Treason; and was thereupon Condemned and lost his Head; and foon after Dr. John Storey a great Perfecutor in Queen Mary's Reign, who was decoyed on Board an English Ship under pretence of seazing Prohibited Goods, as being made the Duke of Alva's chief Searcher, being Tryed for Treason, was found Guilty, and Executed at Tyburn. And Matthew Stewart Earl of Lenox the Young King of Scotland's Grand-Father. and Regent of Scotland, being surprized by the contrary Faction, was Murthered, and the Earl of Marr chosen Regent, who Dyed within 13 Months after. And divers about this time fuffered for conspiring the Queens Death. And a League was concluded with France; and foon after at the celebration of the Marriage between the King of Navar and the Lady Margaret, the French Kings Sister, happened the cruel Massacre at Paris, and by the French King's command the Protestants were Massacred in all the Provinces of that Kingdom to the Number of 300000; among them fell the Admiral Chastillion, and divers other Nobles; yet God delay'd not to Revenge their Innocent Blood: for the King Dyed a while after with Blood issuing from all his Vents: The Duke of Guise, who had contrived at one blow to cut off all the Protestants in France, France, was Murthered in his Palace by the Succeeding King's command, and most of the rest that had contrived this Tragedy came to untimely Ends.

The Earl of Northumberland, who fince his Rebellion had sheltered in Scotland, was by the Earl of Morton delivered to the Lord Hunsdon for a Sum of Money, and foon after Beheaded at York. And Walter Devereux Earl of Essex, whom the Queen held in high favour. being fent with Forces into Ireland to depress the Rebellion, and being envied by some Great Men at Court. in his Absence they made Parties against him. Charging many Miscarriages in his Conduct, so that the Queen was constrained to call him home with a command to refign up his Authority in Ulfer; but the Earl of Leicester being Jealous of his presence at Court, as imagining he was not indifferent to the Queen, foon procured him to be fent back again with the empty Title of Marshal of Ireland, which he took so much to Heart, that in a short time he Dyed.

The Prince of Orange Heading the Flemings, and they supplicating the Queen for Aid, after mature deliberation with her Council, and the States of the Low Countries putting Cautionary Towns into her Hands for Security, she sent over Forces and permitted as many Voluntiers as would to go, and Casimire Son to the Elector Palatine, at the Queens charge brought in a considerable Number of Horse and Foot. These Forces were unexpectedly Attacked by Don John of Austria and the Prince of Parma with a Numerous Army of the Spaniards best Forces, but so siercely Encountered, that after an obstinate Fight they were forced to retreat, leaving some Thousands Slain; which Victory was attributed to the Valour of the English and Scots.

The Duke of Alanzon, the French Kings Younger Brother, now made earnest Suit to the Queen, and tho'

by the means of one Simier a French Courtier, he fo far infinuated into the Queens favour as to be admitted to come over Incognito, and hold a private Conference with her, yet by reason of his Youth, and some other Obstacles, this Treaty of Marriage (as well as the rest had done) came to nothing; yet the Earl of Leicester. for enveighing against it, so far as to reflect on the Queen, was for a time confined to Greenwich-Castle, and the Queen being on the Thames in her Barge, a young Fellow fired a Piece which Shot one of the Row. ers through the Arm; for which being Sentenced to be Hanged, the Queen then understanding it was done Accidentally, and not out of any Design against her. Pardoned him. And the Queen having procured of the Grand Signior a liberty of free Trade in all his Dominions, a Company of Turkey Merchants was first set up. The Pope having bestowed Ireland on the King of Spain, a Rebellion was raised there, but the Lord Grey being made Deputy, the Irish, Spanish and Itallians were totally routed and put to the Sword.

Captain Francis Drake, a Native of Plymouth in Devonshire, adventuring to America with a few Ships, Discovered divers Coasts before unknown, and is reputed to Sail about the World, because he shot the Gulf of Magelan, returning brought home great Riches; and after being Knighted, he made several advantagious Voyages with greater Force, and became such a Terror to the Spaniards, in those parts, that they started to hear him Named. Also Hawkins, Forbusher and others, pursuing that Voyage, not only greatly endamaged the Spaniard, but greatly enriched England with Gold and Silver; so that the Queen having called in the bad Money, the Land soon abounded with plenty of her own Coin.

The Earl of Desmond being routed in Ireland, was after a great Search made for him, found, and flain by a common Soldier, which gave much quiet to that King. dom: And now the Papists using secret Practices against the Queen, among other Expedients to prevent the threatned mischief, a number of Persons Headed by the Earl of Leicester, of all Ranks, bound themselves mutually to each other, by their Oaths and Subscriptions, to pursue all those to Death and final Destruction that should attempt any thing against the Queens Life, and this Combining was called the Affociation. And one Parry a Member of the House of Commons, was Accused by Edward Nevel for having held Secret Confultations about taking away the Queens Life; which he confessing, was condemned and executed; and the Earls of Aurundel and Northumberland were committed to the Tower on suspicion of the like Practice; and in a little time the Latter was found Shotin his Head with three Bullets, which was concluded to be done by himfelf, because the Chamber Door was barred on their fide, and fo the Corroners Inquest found it.

And now the States of Holland being brought very Low, fued to the Queen to take them into Protection, yielding the Soveraignty of the Provinces into her Hands; whereupon taking Sluice as a Cautionary Town, she sent the Earl of Leicester with 5000 Foot and 1000 Horse, to whom, for the Queens use, the absolute Authority over the Provinces was committed, by an Instrument in Writing, and he Invested with the Title of Governour and Captain General of Holland, Zealand, the United and Confederate Provinces, which he Accepted, as also the Stile of Excellency; which much offended the Queen, tho' he appeased her Anger with Submissive Letters: But he Governing with a high Hand, and Imposing unusual Customs on the Merchand, they soon grew weary of him; However to create in those those people a better oppinion of his Actions, he undertook to Relieve the Greve, a Town in Brabant, Befieged by the Prince of Parma; but the Cowardice of the Governour prevented it, by too suddain a Surrender; for which he was Executed. Yet feveral small places were taken in by the Valour of the English, and Princes of the House of Nassaw; but in a Rencounter before Zutphen, Sir Philip Sidney received a Mortal Wound of which he Dyed, being for Learning and Valour the Honour of his Time; but the Earl not able to win this place, left it Block'd up, and came to the Hague; where he was entertained with complaints of his Conduct, and the ill circomstances it had brought their State into, which fo Angered him, that he took away the Jurisdiction of the States Council and Presidents of Provinces, and thereupon came for England to excuse his proceedings to the Queen.

The Spaniard having received much damage from Drake, Hawkins, Cavendish, Forbusher, and other English Adventurers in the West Indies, was now studying how to revenge it, and although there was a feeming Treaty carried on, he was making all imaginable preparations in the Netherlands, and in his own Ports, of which the French King gave the Queen Secret notice; whereupon with all dilligence a Fleet was fet out, some by the Queen, others by Private Persons, tho' much inferiour in Number and Bigness to the Invaders: For belides the Popes Bleffing and promife of Success, for their Fleet, called the Invincible Armado, which confifted of 130 Sail, wherein were 19209 Land Soldiers, 8050 Marriners, 2080 Galley-Slaves, and 2630 pieces of Canon, with small Arms and proportionable Stores; besides they were to be loyned by Forces the Prince of Parma was providing in Flanders.

The Fleet being ready to put to Sea, the Queen appointed

ted the Lord Howard of Effingham Admiral, Sir Francis Drake Vice Admiral, and the Lord Seymour, with an English and Dutch Squadron, to lie on the Flemish Coast. and hinder Parma's sending the intended Succours, and by Land having made the Earl of Leicester, who had refigned his Authority in the Low Countries, General; he ordered an Encampment at Tilbury of 1000 Horse, and 22000 Foot, and raised another Army for the Guard of her Person; but the Spaniards were so handled at Sea by the Admiral, That after several Days Fighting, they were utterly Defeated; fo that what were Taken. Sunk, Stranded, and Perished in their return, they lost the greater part of their Fleet with about 13500 Men: and scarce a Noble Family in Spain, but lost in this Expedition one Relation or other; which blow Spain has not Recovered to this day: For which Success, the Queen caused publick Thanks to be given; and afterward greatly molested the Spaniard, by Warring in Portugal, and fending Adventurers to the West Indies; in one of which Expeditions the famous Sir Francis Drake Dyed. But Sir Walter Rawleigh took a great Carrick, the Prize being valued at 150000l, and others did very famous Exploits.

Whilst these things were doing, Lopez a Jew, and Physitian to the Queen, was hired to Poison her; as also one Patrick Cullen, an Irishman, to Stab her; but these Designs being timely discovered, divers Conspirators were Condemned and Executed. This being found to be a Spanish Intreague, so incensed the Queen, that she sent the Earl of Esex, Sir Walter Rawleigh, and other brave Commanders, to Anoy his Coast Towns, who putting in at Cales, Took and Sacked that Rich Town, and Burnt a Fleet of Merchants and Men of War, Valued at Twenty Millions of Duckets. And now the Earl of Essex, who had done many great and brave things in Ireland, the Low Countries, Spain, Portugal, and France, and had all along stood high in favour with the Queen, was much Dilgusted at the Advancement of some Upstarts, which made them his Enemies, and labour all they could for his Destruction; so that being sent into Ireland against the Earl of Tirowen who was in Rebellion, they procured him to be Recalled, and laid divers Miscarriages to his charge; so that he was brought to a private Tryal; but upon his Submission, Acquitted by the Queens favour, and fet at Liberty. However, being a Man of a high Spirit, he fo refented the Affront, That he concluded to remove his Enemies from the Queen by force; whereupon, being Assisted by the Earl of Southampton, and others, he Fortified his House, Imprisoned her Counsellours sent to him to Advise him to fubmit, and going into London thought to have made an Insurrection in favour of him; but though he was very Popular, they at this time failed him; and at last Surrendering himself, he with the Earl of Southampton and others was found Guilty of High Treason, and the Queen (over-perswaded) Signed the Warrant for his Death, and he was Beheaded, but Southampton Reprieved; Sir Charles Dorves, Sir Christother Blunt, one Cuff, and Merrick, likewise suffered Death, on this account. But the Earls Death fo grieved the Queen, that she laid a bitter Curse on those that advised her to consent to it; and growing Melancholy, she soon after retired to Richmond, where on the 24th of March 1602, she died; when she had the last of the Name of the Teudors of the Royal Race.

In this Queens Reign a Mare brought forth a Foal with two Heads, and a long Tail growing between them.

Reigned 44 Years, 4 Months, and 7 Days, in the 67th

Year of her Age, and was buried at Wellminster, being

21

them. A Sow furrowed Piggs with Arms and Hands, fingered as a Child, instead of Legs. And many other Creatures produced Monstrous Births. A Plague likewise happened, whereof Dyed in 8 Months 23660. The Thames was so hard Frozen that Waines and Carts passed it, Markets and divers forts of Exercises were kept and used on it. Great Floods and Tempests happened, spoiling much Corn, and demolishing many Buildings. In Yorkshire a Tempest over-threw a Church called Patrick Burton, and laid many Villages in Ruins. And many fearful Sights appeared in the Air.

The Reign of King JAMES the First.

Ollcen Elizabeth, a little before she died, having declared King James the Sixth of Scotland her Successor, as indeed he was the next Allied to the Crown of England, as being great Grand-Son to the Lady Margaret, Eldest Daughter to Henry the Seventh; he was, upon that Queens death, Proclaimed by Secretary Cecill and others, and folemnly invited to fill the vacant Throne; when having disposed Affairs in Scotland, for the preserving the Peace of that Kingdom, he fet forward with a very splendid Equipage: And his first Act was to Establish and Continue Religion as it had been Setled by the deceased Queen; causing the Old and New Testaments to be Translated from the Original; and fet many at liberty who were Imprisoned on fundry occasions by the Queen deceased. But whilst these things were doing, there wanted not some who envied his Accession to the Throne; and secret contrivances were laid to Depose him, and set up the Lady Ar abella, Arabella, a Branch sprung from the same Stem by another Branch; but it being timely discovered, divers were Apprehended, Tryed and Condemn'd; yet only George Brook, Brother to the Lord Cobbam, and two Popish Priests, suffered Death, Sir Walter Rawleigh and divers others, being Pardoned; and on the 25th of July 1603, the King and Ann his Queen were Crowned at Westminster in the Marble Chaire brought out of Scotland by Edward the First, which fullfilled the Prophecy Inscribed on it, and mentioned in that Kings Reign; and Prince Henry the Kings Eldest Son, was made Knight of the Garter, and stiled Prince of Wales; and Honours were conferred on divers Persons.

The next thing the King proceeded to do, was to decide the Controversy between the Church of England and the Party that then stilled themselves Puritans, and a Conference to that purpose was appointed at Hampton-Court, where the King so Learnedly Argued, that the former carried the day. And the Jesuits proving over-hot, in stirring up the People to change in opinions (thereby to work their own ends) were Banished the Kingdom, and a Proclamation put out for Uniformity in the Church.

Soon after this the King Assembled a Parliament, recommending to them the care of the Nation, and a lasting settlement of Peace and Tranquility, and thereupon restored the Antient Name of this Island, causing himself to be Proclaimed King of Great Britain. And whilst he and the Parliament happily accorded, a private design was carried on to destroy them both, for the Popish Party being denied the Tolleration they had petitioned for, contrived one of the most Stupendious Mischiefs that ever entered into the Hearts of Men, for their heat of Mallice would not be quenched with the Royal Blood, but that of the Nobility and Gentry, the representative body of the whole Kingdom united at Westminster, was to have been shattered in pieces and difmembered by a blatt of 36 Barrells of Gunpowden which they had placed in a Cellar under the Parliament House; but it was Discovered by a Letter to the Lord Monteagle the Morning before it was to have been put in execution. The principal Conspirators were Robert Catesby, Thomas Piercy, Robert Winter, Thomas Winter, John Garnet, Ambrose Rookwood, John Wright, Francis Fresham, Sir Everard Digbby, and Guido Faux. Latter was to have fet Fire to the Train, and was taken with his Dark-Lanthorn at the Enterance of the Cellar. on the 5th of November, 1605. Which day by Parliament was appointed Annually a Day of Thankfgiving for that memorable Deliverance.

Nn

repre-

Upon this Discovery, the Conspirators that escaped by flying, were divers of them flain by Forces raifed by the High-Sheriff of Warwickshire; Faux upon Examination before the Council, confessed the whole matter, faying, God would have had it prosper, but the Devil Discovered it; expressing himself forry that it had not Garnet the Jesuite, and others, were taken effect. Executed on this account, and fome Lords who were absent from Parliament, and were suspected to have notice of the Delign, were committed to the Town, but after some confinement were released again, and foon after this a rumour was spread, without any certain Author, That the King was Stabbed and Slain with an Impoisoned Knife, as he was Hunting near Ocking ham, which for a time much troubled the People; nor could their fears be allayed, before a Proclamation came out to fatisfie them of the contrary; and the King of Denmark, the Queens Brother, coming to H bite-Hall, was Magnificently Entertained; and having itay'd about a Month, departed highly fatisfied.

The Kingdoms of England and Scotland, that had long continued in bloody Wars, were now United by both their consents in their Representatives, on a foundation advantagious to either Nation, and so it has ever fince continued.

The Duke of Juliers about this time dying, the Dukes of Newburg and Brandenburg strove for that Dutchey, but whilst they weakly contended, Spain (more powerful) resolved to take it from them both, feizing on the City of Juliers, the principal place of the Province; which obliged King James at the States of the Netherlands supplication, to send 4000 English under the Command of Sir Edward Cecill and Sir Hatton Cheek, by whose Valour it was chiefly Reduced. Soon after Henry the Fourth of France was Stabbed in his Coach by one Ravilliack, passing the Ironmongersstreet in Paris, for which the Murtherer was pulled to pieces with Burning Pincers, yet could not be compelled to tell who fet him on that wicked Enterprize; and King James startled with this untimely Death. put out a Second Proclamation to Banish the Jesuits out of the Kingdom, and all Popish Recusants Ten Miles from the Court.

The Lord Sanquire, a Scotish Baron, having his Eye put out by one Turner, a Fencing-master in White-Fryars, in revenge hired two Persons to Murther him; for which he was Hanged before Westminster-Hall-Gate, in the Palace-Yard, and Dyed very penitently, tho' great intercession was made to save him. And the Queen of Scots, (Beheaded in the foregoing Reign) was by the Kings order removed from Peterborough to Westminster, and there magnificently Interred; and foon after the Elector Palatine of the Rhine came into England, and Married the Lady Elizabeth, the Kings Daughter.

But the splendour of the Nuptials were Eclipsed by the and asking him how he did, the Prince among many

News

the Death of Prince Henry the Kings Eldest Son; which happened a little before the Weding, not without fufpicion of Poison, as some have it, by the Scent of Perfumed Gloves, others by eating a Bunch of Grapes: but the Disease affecting mostly the Brain, it carried him off in Five Days, tho' the Physitians gave out he dyed of a Malignant Fever. Whatever his Disease was it carried him off on the 6th of November, 1610, in the blossom of his Youth, he being 18 Years, 8 Months and 17 Days Old: He was a Prince of Extraordinary Wisdom and Piety much above his Years: Of strength and ability of Body equal to most Men, of a Noble and Heroick Disposition; and an hater of Flattery and Flatterers: He had an high Esteem of Sir Walter Rawseigh; and used to fay, No other King but his Father would keep fuch a Man as Sir Walter in such a Cage, meaning the Tower. He kept his Court at St. James's, which was much frequented by the most sober of both the Nobility and Gentry. Something of the gravity of the Prince's temper, may be known by the following flory: Once when the Prince was hunting the Stagg, it chanced that the Stagg being spent, crossed the Road where a Butcher and his Dog were travelling, and the Butchers Dog killed the Stag, which was fo great, that the Butcher could not carry him off: When the Huntsmen and Company came up, they fell at odds with the Butcher, and endeavoured to incense the Prince against him; to whom the Prince foberly Answered, What if the Butcher's Dog killed the Stagg, what could the Butcher help it? They Replyed, If his Father had been served so, he would have Sworn at that rate. That no Man could have endured it. Away, replyed the Prince, All the Pleasure in the World is not worth an Oath. In the time of his Sickness, a Person whom he lov'd, and who had been the Companion of his Diversions, coming to see him, other fober Expressions answer'd him thus, Ab Tom! I in vain wish for that time I lost with thee and others, in visin Recreations. But England was not worthy of fo great a Bleffing as the Life of this Excellent Prince. For whom, notwithstanding the Court was not long in Mourning, because of the Nuptials that ensued; and the Elector Palatine having been highly Featled and Entertained, departed with his Bride. The King having raised one Sir Robert Carr, who had been his Page, high in his Favour, creating him Vifcount Rochester, so-that he Acted as it were all in all, and the Earl of Effex's Lady falling in Love with him, and complaining of her Husbands inability in performing his Nocturnal Duties, the King gave order to the Archbishop, that a Divorce might be sucd out. which accordingly was done, and she Married the ViIcount. But Sir Thomas Overbury, who had been his great Favorite, inveighing much against this Marriage, and labouring to diffwade him from it, because the Lady lay under much scandal of Lust and Incontinency, was by his and her procurement committed to the Tower, and there by tampering with Sir Gervis Ellows the Lieutenant of that Garison, and one Weston and others, they procured him to be Poisoned, and the Earl of Northampton, who was privy to it, the better to colour the business, gave out he dyed of the Pox; and that strange noisom Sores were found on his Body; but this did not long conceal so wicked a practice; for it proved their Ruine: Northampton dyed foon after in a Melancholly difordered condition; and a little after, the Apothecaries Man, who was hired to give Sir Thomas Overbury a Glister, that had been poisoned, falling Sick at Flushing, revealed what he knew, as to the Poisoning; and who was concerned in it. This

 $Nn_3$

News coming over by the means of Sir Ralph Winwood. who had been Ambassador in Holland, made a great noise, and more and more suspicion appearing, the King fent for the Judges to fearch narrowly into the Truth of it; Imprecating a Curse on them and their Polterity, if they were negligent in it; and the like on himself and Posterity, if he favoured any Guilty Perfon ; fo that the Viscount made Earl of Somerset in confideration of his Marriage with the Lady Catharine Howard, Daughter to the Duke of Suffolk, and Niece to the Earl of Northampton, who had been Divorced from the Earl of Effex, when he had got his Pardon figned, as being charged before with Imbezling the Crown Jewells, &c. had it stopped under the Broad Seal; and the Lord Chief Justice Cook sending for him, he went to the King, to complain of the Indignity put upon him, looking on it as a great presumption in the Man that had done it. But the King, much to his diffatisfaction, replied, Thou must go then, for if Cook sends for me, I must go too; and when he parted with him, turning his back, he finiling faid, I shall never fee thy Face more; and the same Day the Earl and his Counters were made Prisoners, and divers others, as Weston, Mrs. Turner, a great confident of the Countesses, Sir Jarvin Ellews, and one Frankling: The Four last being first Tryed, were found Guilty, received Sentence of Death, and were Executed, confessing the fact; and soon after, the Earl and his Countess were Tryed and Condemned; but the King Pardoned them, or rather Reprieved them, giving them only a Lease of their Lives for Term of Years, utterly Banishing them the Court and his Favour: So that deprived of all Honours, places of Truit, and Fortunes, they led mean and despicable Lives, the dying very miserably, her Privy Parts Rotting; and he of Discontent and Melancholly: So punctual

Blood on the shedders of it, and bring them to shame, even in this Life. The fall of this Favourite made way to the rife of George Villers, Son to Sir George Villers of Lancafinre, by a second venture; who being a comely Person, and his Parts improved by Travel, the King upon his first arrival at Court cast his Eyes on him, made him his Cupbearer at large, and in the End created him Duke of Buckingham, growing in a little time as high in favour as the former, doing all with the King as he' pleased, and continued so to do till he was Stabbed by one Felton at Portsmouth, as will appear in the next Reign.

Sir Thomas Mason being Arraigned, as concerned in the Murther of Overbury, had his Tryal fet aside, and the Lord Chief Iustice chequed for venturing to insinuate. That in this there might be the Discovery of more than a Private Person; intimating, tho' not plainly, That Overbury's untimely remove, had fomething in it of retaliation, as if he had been guilty of the same crime against Prince Henry; and glancing some whar that the Earl of Northampton had (but how truly I determine not) assured the Lieutenant of the Tower. That the making away of Sir Thomas Overbury, would be acceptable to the King, he had his wings ever after clipped.

Soon after this the Lady Arabella Dyed in the Tomer, which fet Mens Tongues and Fears on work, that she followed the same sate, but nothing publick appeared in it. She was Daughter to Charles Stewart, Younger Brother to the King's Father, and Elizabeth Cavendish; she Married Sir William Seymour, Son to the Lord Beaucham, and both at a distance being Allyed to the Crown, made the Marriage distasted; but her Husband escaped Nn a Scaped out of the Tower, whether he had been Committed for this conjunction, and fled beyond Sea; and the escaping from her House at Highgate, to follow him, was intercepted, and Dyed in the place aforeshid.

There being a Peace confirmed with all Nations, the King treated with Spain about a Marriage between his Son Charles, now Prince of Wales, and Heir apparent to the Crown, and the Infanta, but Ambassadors being fent, many delays were made about difference in Religion and some other Objections; which the Earl of Salishary, who Negotiated the matter, perceiving would come to no good effect, the Treaty of Marriage was laid aside, and overtures at the same time made in the Court of France; but that, as the former, then succeeded not, by the means of the Duke of Savoy.

The King having been some Years out of Scotland, went thither with a splended Retinue; and unluckily about this time the Book of Sports was Published, allowing, on the Sabbath Day, for the Recreation of the Younger sort, after Evening-Service, Dancing about May-Poles, Church-Ales, and such like; which much displeased sober People to behold that Sacred Day so Prophened; however, notwithstanding many complaints, it continued, and some were punished for op-poling it, by Writing or other ways.

Sir Walter Rawleigh making overtures to the King to find out a Rich Mine of Gold-Ore in Gunia, by the directions of Captain Kentift, once his Servant, he was difinified with some Ships and Men, but Gondemar, the Spanish Ambassador, getting notice of this design, with to Spanish about it with such Expedition, that Letters from thence arrived in the West-Indies, to Advertize of his preparations long before he came; so that sinding almost all places Fortified, except St. Thomes, they took that, and attempted the River, but in passing, found such opposition as constrained them to retire, without attchieving their ends; which so perplexed Kentish, that he Shot himself in his Cabin; and Sir Walter, upon his Return, was seized by Sir Lewis Stukley his Kinsman; and being brought to London, was at the earnest instance and clamour of the Spanish Ambassador, sent to the Tower, and many grievous complaints laid to his charge, of Imposing on the King, and indangering a War with Spain; That it would likewise break off the Treaty of Marrying again, renewed between the Prince and Infanta of Spain; with fuch aggravations, that the King gave way; he was brought to the King's-Bench Bar at Westminster, where the Records of his former Arraignment were Read, and he demanded, why Execution should not be done upon him, according to the Judgment that had been pronounced against him; and he going about to Justifie himself on the account of his Voyage, was told it was not in question; but that he food there upon his former Judgment, which the King would have Executed upon him; and tho' he urged much against it, as the King's Trust by a new Commission, which he look'd upon as a Pardon, &c. his Exccution was appointed, and he Beheaded in the Old Palace-Yard at Westminster, in the 60th Year of his Age, which pacified the Spaniard for the Loss sustained by the West-India Voyage,

fuch

Soon after this, Queen Ann dyed of a Dropsie at Hampton Court, a prodigeous Blazing Star ushering her to another World: And briefly thus stands her Character, She was in her great Condition a good Woman, not tempted from the heighth she stood on to Embroil things below her, only giving herself content in her own House, with such Recreations as might not make Time tedious to her; so that nothing can be fixed on her, but that she may have Engraven on her Monument a Character of Virtue. The

The Bobemians having chosen Frederick, Elector Par latine of the Rhine, who Married the Lady Elizabeth. King James's Daughter, their King, Revolted from the Emperour Ferdinand; but being Overthrown by the Duke of Bavaria, the Imperial General, and all Bohemia recovered, upon his return home, he found his Palatinate Invaded by the Spaniards, who with other Aides beat him out of it, tho' King James sent about 6000 English to his Ashstance, who did many brave poor remains of them in the conclusion of the War returned home. This made the King call a Parliament to Refundihis Treasure wasted in this War, and on chargable Emballeys; but they would not hearken to it before fun. dry Grievances were redressed; and hereupon divers who had oppressed the People, and mis-spent the pub-

things; but being worsted by great Numbers, the spending his days very melancholly afterward, carry. Tempest he narrowly escaped being castaway, for a ing only the empty title of Viscount St Albans to his time neither being able to reach the Ships, or Shoar; Grave. And after many contendings between the but at length he arrived fafe, to the high fatisfaction

which

time Prisoners.

which much troubled and vexed him. And there being many strange Opinions creeping up, the King sent his Letter to the Arch-Bishops for Regulating the Ministry, and Reforming Abuses therein; but the lesuits and other restless People, under-hand laboured to Embroil the Factions, and caused many disturbances.

of ENGLAND.

which, with other diffatisfactions from abroad, cast the King into a Melancholly Temper, especially the flights that were put upon the Prince his Son, who went thither to Court in Person, attended by Buckingham and others, they endeavouring to pervert him in change of his Religion, &c. so that he was Indisposed and so much out of order a long time, that his Favorites durft scarcely speak to him. Then hearing the Spaniards still trifled, his care was to get the Prince home again, least having so wealthy a Prize, they should detaine it, and fent him secret notice to return: lick Treasure, were Questioned and Disgraced; and Whereupon taking leave of the Queen of Spain and among others the Lord Chancellour Bacon, for Briber Infanta, and the other Ladies and Grandees, he was and Extortion, a thing he had always condemned in attended to the Sea Coast; and in his return being in others, and for it lost his Peerage, and the Great Seit a Barge some distance from the Ships, by a suddain

King and Parliament, they not answering his expects of the King his Father; but this Match after vast Extions in giving the Sums required, he Dillolved it, and pence and Trouble, came to nothing, tho' the Lady put out a Proclamation to restrain the peoples Talking had a long time had Tutors to Teach her English, and to his prejudice, but it little availed; and the Earl of pleased enough she appeared at it; but this was at last Oxford having been accused on that account by one found only a device to retard the King from medling White a Papist, and the Earl of Southampton by others, in the Affairs of the Palatinate, and the design of this they were committed and continued a considerable Marriage was his chief aime to restore it; whereupon

The Kings Ambassadors found but slender success positively to declare to the King of Spain That unless in their Negotiations, being delay'd in the Courts of that was restored to the Elector, the Treaty should the Empire, Spain, and with the Duke of Bavaria, proceed no further; and that being refused, the Prince grew

he gave orders to the Earl of Bristol, his Ambassador, grew cold in his Love, and fo all was dashed, upon his thoughts with a Match with the Youngest Daughter of Henry the Fourth of France, whom he had feen in his passage that way to Spain, and to whom (after his Fathers death) he was Married.

570

Upon this the King called another Parliament, and missing the Duke of Richmond his old Friend, and fend? ing to his Lodging, he was found dead in his Bed without any Wound or fign of force upon him, which put the King into such grief and consternation, that he would not go to the House in his Robes; and so put them off for some Days longer. This Parliament greatly inveighed against the Duke of Buckingham, for perswading the Prince to take such a hazardous Journey out of the Land, and advised the King, fince for many Delays and Tricks had been put upon the Ho came from the East-Indies, where the English had five nour of the Nation, to break the Treaty with Span several Factories, two at Hitto and Lerico, and two protesting to assist him for the regaining the Palatinath at Latro and Cambello, in the Island of Seran; but the with their Lives and Fortunes, &c. They infiffing Principal of them was at Amboyna, which is the chief on a Religious War, that might be Aiding to the Place in all the East-Indies, where Nutmegs, Mace, flicted Protestants in Germany and France; but the Cimnamon, Cloves, and other Spices grow; and from King however feemed more to encline to Peace is these Factories the English supplied not only England, appeared by his Letters and Speeches on this occasion and all Europe with Spice; but Persia, Japan, and ofor fearing that when the War was begun, he should the Countries in the East-Indies. This made the not find wherewithal to maintain it; and therefore that to Envy the English, and therefore resolved to thanking them for their prossers and advice, he told disposses them of the Spice-Trade, which is the best them he would consider better of it; however the nall the East-Indies. The English in all these Islands Treaty with Spain was utterly dissolved. This, and were better beloved than the Dutch, and had built a some forwardness for War, so fretted the Spanish Am fortress in Amboyna for the safety of their Trade; ballador, that whether out of Truth and Knowledge at the Dutch having two hundred Soldiers on that (as he pretended) or Malice only, cannot be determined, forced this Fortress from the English, and then ned, he fent to the King to let him know, that Bucking retending a Plot between the English and the Nabam had some dangerous Design against him, tending wes of Amboyna, for the Recovering of the said Fort to his destruction; and that it would be the safest to the Dutch to the English; the Dutch by horrid

however, tho' it was generally thought to proceed from spight, because the Duke set himself against the Spanish Interest, it put the King into fach fears, being now grown Old, that all the Duke's protestations could not a long time remove them, nor till the Duke's Friends gave upon Oath their knowledge of the Duke's fincere intentions, and that this was contrived with the Ambassador by the Advice of a Jesuite; and this Parliament, the Earl of Middlesex, by Buckingbani's procurement, was Questioned, but there came no great matter of it; for the Parliament knowing it was done by the Duke's means, upon his Questioning for the Money excessively spent in Spain, they had no great mind to back him in it.

Whilft these things passed, a melancholy Account confine him to some Country-House for his Life; forments, burning them under the Soles of their Feet, Feet, and under their Armpits, and pouring Water down their Throats when stretched on a Rackwill they were ready to burst, and by other barbarous ways Massacred the English there, and seized upon the Eng. lish Factories, to the value of Four Hundred Thomand Pounds; making the rest of the English (that had escaped their Massacre) Slaves, and sent them into a ther Islands which the Dutch had possessed themselves of: This was in the Year 1622; when but three Year between the English and Dutch in the East-Indies. and This News extreamly troubled the East-India Conpany, who humbly petitioned the King to demand & tisfaction of the States General: But the King cared

before the Dutch had concluded a Treaty of Tride not for War; and tho' the Dutch refused to make any fatisfaction for this Unheard-of Villany, the King only told the Dutch Ambassador, That he never heard nor read of a more Cruel and Impious Act than that of Amboyna; yet, said he, I do forgive them, and I hope God will; but my Sons Son shall revenge this Blood, and putilh this horrid Massacre. And so lest the Dutch in the quiet Possession of what they had so basely gotten from the English, without offering to draw his Sword against them: Which perhaps occasion'd his being being too weak, sunk down in his Bed again, and sking the Treasurer the meaning of it?

pulling at it, but could not get it out.

Westminster. He was of a Stature inclining to tallness, being somewhat higher than Ordinary; his Body very well compacted, his Hair of an Aubourn Colour, and of a Pleasing Countenance; and towards his latter End somewhat fat and burly. He had the repute of a Wise Prince; but his Reign did not shew it: He indeed Writ several Books against the Jesuite's King-Killing Doctrin, but that shewed his Fear more than his Learning; and that he was therein acted by a Principle of Self-Preservation: For the Gunpowder-Plot in England, and the Assassination of Henry the Fourth by Ravilliac in France, were enough to make him afraid of the Jesuites. He was wholly ruled in all things by his Favourites, to whom he was excessively bountiful, and thereby squandered away the Treasure of the Nation. At his coming to the Crown he found the Exchequer Rich, but at his Death (which was a great Unhappiness to his Son) he left it very poor; and well he might, giving so profusely as he did to his Flatterers and Favorites. It is reported of him, That having given Sir Robert Carr

Twenty Thousand Pounds, the Lord Treasurer Salie-

pictur'd with his Sword in his Scabbard, and two Mei bury, that he might make the King sensible of what in he had done, invited him to an Entertainment, and And now the King having permitted the Comt foordered it, that he should pass to it through a Mussfield, General for the Elector Palatine to rail Room wherein he had placed four Tables, and on some Forces here, he soon after fell sick of a Tertim sach Table Five Thousand Pounds in Silver; when Fever, a little before his Death he called for the Prince, the King came into the Passage, he started, as amaand rowfed himself as desirous to speak to him; but zed at the fight, (having never before seen such a Dyed at Theobaids, on the 27th of March, 1623. The Treasurer told the King, It was the Boon he when he had Reigned over all Britain 22 Years and bad given to Sir Robert Carr: Smounds Man, says three Days, being the Twenty Third of his Reigh the King (which was the Oath he usually swore) which means the Lord Treasurer sav'd the King Fifteen Thousand Pounds. This snewed how easie he was to be impos'd upon, giving his Favourites what they pleas'd to ask, without knowing what it was. His letting the Dutch redeem their Cautinary Towns upon their own terms, and letting them also disposses the English of their Factory at Amboyna in the East-Indies, by the most horrid Massacre that any Age had heard of, without any reparation or satisfaction for it; however it might Entitle him to be Rex Pacificus, it could never be an Argument of his Wisdom, nor make him appear a Second Solomon, which his Flatterers usually stiled him.

In the beginning of this King's Reign a Plague raged, of which in London and the Liberties, in one Year Dyed Thirty Thousand Five Hundred Seventy Eight Persons.

A terrible Blazing Star appeared before the Queens death, and the breaking out of the Wars in Hungary.

Anno 1603 John Lepton Rode Five times between York and London in Five Days, beginning his Journy on Monday, finishing it the Friday after.

Anno 1605 William Calverly of York, Esq. Murthered two of his own Children in his House, Stabbed his Wise, and went out with intentions to have Kill'd his Child at Nurse, but was prevented; and was Pressed to death for refusing to Plead.

The Reign of King CHARLES the First.

of ENGLAND.

ING James dying at Theobalds, on the 27th of March, 1625. The same Day his only Surviving Son, Prince Charles, was Proclaimed King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland. On the 7th of May following were Celebrated the Funerals of the Deceafed King; whose Body being brought from Sommerset-House, was Interred in the Abbey at Westminster with great Magnificence, the King himself being the chief Mourner. The next thing after the Celebration of the Funeral, was to hasten the coming over of the Queen, Henrietta Maria, youngest Daughter of Henry the Fourth of France Deceased, and Sister to Lewis the 13th, then Reigning, who had by the King's Proxy, the Duke of Chevereux, been Espoused to him on the first of May, at our Ladies Church in Paris. Upon Trinity-Sunday at Night, she arriv'd at Dover, where being met by the King the next Morning, they went from thence to Canterbury, where they were Married, which the third Day after was Declar'd at White-Hall with great Rejoicing.

On the 18th of June following, the King Summon'd a Parliament to meet at Westminster, where he urged them for Supplies for the carrying on the War against Spain, for the Recovery of the Palatinate; upon which the Commons gave two Subsidies, and the Clergy three. In this Parliament Dr. Mountague, the King's Chaplain, was Questioned for certain Tenents, in his Answer to a Book called the Romish Gagger, and his Defence thereof, Intituled, Apello ad Casarem; and he being brought before the Ear of the House, the Speaker declared their Pleasure, That they would refer his Censure till their next Meeting; and in the mean time he should stand Committed to the Serjeant's-Ward, till Two Thousand Pounds

Bail could be procured for his Appearance next Seffions. And tho' the King (by Bishop Laur's means) took him into his Protection, as his Servant, yet his Bond remained Uncancell'd. Divers Laws were Enacted in this Parliament; and a Bill for Tunnage and Poundage passed the House of Commons, but it Miscarried in the Lords House. because it was Limitted to a Year; whereas it had been Granted to the King's Predecessors during their Lives. And then (the Plague greatly encreasing) the Parliament was Adjourn'd to Oxford; where the King again Soliciting for more Money, in order to the fetting out the Fleet, the Commons entred into a Debate about Grievances, and were about drawing up a Remonstrance to present to the King; but it bearing hard upon Buck ingham, the King's great Favourite, they were immediately Diffolved: And foon after a Fleet was fitted out, and sent against Spain; but having staid Considering what to do, till they lost the Opportunity of Destroying the Spanish Fleet in Cadiz, which at first might have been eafily done, they Sailed to the Southern Cape, in expectation of meeting their Plate-Fleet, but the Contagion having got into the Fleet, they made an Untimely return without doing any thing, but four Dayes before the Fleet came. This unprosperous Success of the Fleet, very much Displeased the King, who prohibited Wimbleton (the General) for some time from his Presence, but he excufing himself, laid a great part of the Miscarriage on the Stubbornness of the Earl of Essex: But tho' all were Blam'd, yet none were Punish'd for the ill Conduct of this Expedition.

And now the War growing very Chargeable, fince Parliamentary Aids fail'd, the King (as advis'd by his Council) reiolved upon raifing Money by way of Loan, by Letters of Privy-Seal, fent to the Ablest Persons in the Kingdom, in each of which Letters the King promifed in the Name of Him, and his Heirs and Successors to re-pay the Money in Eighteen Months after the Payment thereof to the Collector, and the Collectors were Ordered to pay the Suns received into the Excheque, and to return the Names of such as went about to Delay, or Excuse the Payment of the Money required of them. This manner of Proceedings was by all Wife Men thought very improper; for, by the Law no Man was bound to lend the King Money; so this, instead of Supplying the King, only tended to Alienate the Affections of his Subjects from him, and render things more Difficult in the next Parliament. Which after the Coronation was over, met the 6th of February; but with no better Success than the last; For the House of Commons began (where they left off at Oxford) with matters of Religion, and publick Grievances; viz. The Miscarriage of the Fleet to Cadiz; the Evil-Counsellors about the King; Mif-government, and Mif-imployment of the King's Revenues, and an Account of the three Subfidies, and three Fifteenths Granted the 21th of King James: That new Impositions and Monopolies were multiplied, and fettled to continue by Grants, Customs inhanced by the new Book of Rates; and that Tonnage and Poundage was Levied, the' by no Act of Parliament, and the Guard of the Seas neglected. In this Parliament also, five particular Articles were drawn up against Mr. Richard Mountague, wherein he had broken the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, and disturbed the Peace both of the Church and Common wealth. Upon all which, the House of Commons Ordered he should be brought to Exemplary Punishment, and all his Books Burnt. Nor do I hear that ever he made any Defence or Answer to those Articles that were brought against him. It is affirmed, That Dr. Land, (who was a mighty stickler for Arminianism and Ceremonies, and who first of all fet up this Mountague) understanding from the D. of Buckingham that the King intended to leave Mr. Mountague to a Tryal, was heard to fay, I feem to see a Cloud arising, and threatning the Church of England; God in his Mercy dissipate it.

After this, the Commons Question'd several Persons who were of the Council of War, in the Affairs of the Palatinate, concerning the management of that Bu-

O o 2

finels.

578 finess. But the King understanding that the House of Commons were very bufie in fearthing, the Original of a Letter under the Signet, written to the Mayor of York, for Reprieving divers Jesuits, Priests, and Popile Recusants, interrupted their Proceedings therein by a Message seut by Sir Richard Weston, Chancellor of the Exchequer, demanding a Supply for the English and Irish Forces; this was so highly resented by the House. that Mr. Clement Cook, one of the Members, openly Protested, That it was better to Dye by a Forrigh Enemy, than to be Destroy'd at Home. And Dr. Turner (another Member of the House.) seconded him with these Quaries, 1. Whether the King had not lost the Regality of the Narrow Seas, fince the D. of Bucking ham was Admiral? 2. Whether his not going as Admiral in this last Fleet, was not the Cause of the ill Success? 3. Whether the King's Revenues has not been Impaired through his Immense Liberality? 4. Whether he hath not Engroffed all Offices, and preferred his Kindred to unfit Places? 7. Whether he hath not made Sale of places of Judicature? 6. Whether Populh Recai fants have not Dependence upon his Mother and Father in Law? These bold Expressions so provok'd the King, that he immediately fent Sir Richard Weston to Demand Satisfaction; whereupon Dr. Turner made a Speechin his own Vindication, alledging, That what he had faid was for the Good of the Kingdom, and not Reflecting upon any our in particular, with much more to the same Purpose: And the further Debate of the matter being referr'd till another time, Dr. Tunner in the mean time with-drew himself, and fent a Letter to the Speaker to excuse his Absence. Sir William Waller speaking his Opinion about Grievances, laid, That the true cause of them was because (as was faid of Lewis the 11th) all the King's Council rode upon one Horie. (Thereby, alluding to the D. of Bucking bam's fole Management of all Affairs.) Put for all these Discourses, the Commons taking the King's Necessities into Consideration, Voted three Subfidies, and three Fifteens; and that the Bill should be brought brought in, affoon as the Grievances represented were redreffed. They likewise Consider'd of the matter of the D. of Buckingham, and the mif-employing of the Revenue. But the King observing they did not make such haste as he Expected, in answering his last Message, Summons both Houses together; and by the Lord-Keeper complains to them for not Punishing Dr. Turner and Mr. Cook, and likewife for fearching his Signet-Office; and justified the D. of Buckingham to have afted nothing of publick Concernment without his special Warrant; and therefore forbid them to Concern themseves any farther therein, and Blamed them for being too sparing in the matter of Supply, and for Ordering the Bill not to be brought in, till their Grievances were heard and Answered, which he would not Admit of. To which the King himself added, He must also put them in Mind, That his Father, moved by their Counsel, and mon by their Perswasson, broke the Treaties, and that be himself was their Instrument towards his Father, and was Glad to be Instrumental in any thing which might please the whole Body of the Realm; nor was there any in greater Favour then thanthe Duke whom they now Traduced; but that now finding him so far intangled in a War, that he could make no Honourable nor fafe Retreat, they made Necessity their Priviledge, and set what Race they pleafed upon their Supplies; a Practice not very Obliging towards Kings: And whereas Mr. Cook told them, It was better for them to Dye by a Foreign Enemy, than to be Destroyed at Home; indeed he thought it more Honourable for a King to be Invaded, and almost Destroyed by a Forreign Enemy, than to be Despised at Home The Commons in Answer to this, presented the King with a very Dutiful Remonstrance, acquainting him, That they gratefully Acknowledged his Majesty's Expresstons of Affection to his People and Parliaments; that they had taken. Mr. Cook's and Dr. Turner's Words into Consideration, and might have given a good Account thereof by this time, if His Majesiy's Message had not Interrupted them : That they had the Presidents of former Parliaments for Searching Letters of his Majesty. and his Secretary of State, the Signet-Office, and other Records upon the like Occasions: That it was the unquestionable Priviledge of Parliaments to Complain of any Person of any Degree; and their Proceedings in Relation to the Duke should not Prejudice either Crown or King. dom. That they were willing to Supply his Necessities Liberally and Faithfully, if Additions might be made of other things which concerned his Service, and were now in Consultation amongst them. The King having received this Remonstrance, returned this Answer to it, That he would have them in the first place Consult about matters of the greatest Importance, and they should have time enough for other things afterwards. Not long after this, the Earl of Bristol (being Ordered by the King to be Examined by a Committee of Lords, about his Negotiations in Spain, and having been in Prison, and prohibitted access to his Majesty ever lince his Return) Petition'd the House of Lords for his Liberty, or to come to a Tryal; who applying themselves to the King, he granted a Writ for the Earl's coming to Parliament, but with a Proviso, That his Perfonal attendance should be forborn: Whereupon the Earl fent another Retition to the Lords, that he might be heard, both as to his Restraint, and of what he had to fay against the Duke. At this the King was much concern'd, and let the Lords know, That it me his Royal Pleasure that the Earl of Bristol might be Jent for as a Delinquent, to answer his Offences to the House, and his Scandalizing the Duke of Buckingham, and the King likewise, by Restlection. Upon this the Earl was brought to the Bar, and being ready to be Impeached of High-Treason by the Attorney-General, the Earl said, My Lords, I am a Freeman and Peer of the Realm Unattainted; I have something to say of high Consequence to His Mayesiy's Service, and I beseech your Lordships give me leave to Speak. The Lords thereupon bid him go on. Then, said he, I accuse that Man, the Duke of Buckingham, of High-Treason. And immediately he prefented presented Twelve Articles against him. This unexpected procedure of the Earl's, caused the Attorney-General to draw up a Charge against him, consisting of Eleven Articles of matters of divers Natures. And beside these Articles against the Duke, the Earl of Bristol, exhibited Eleven others against the Lord Commay. The Earl likewife gave in his Answer to each particular Article of his Impeachment. And now whilft these two Peers were thus Contesting, the House of Commons presented an Impeachment against the Duke, confishing of twelve Articles, to each of which the Duke made Replies: But that not Satisfying the Commons, they drew up another Declaration of Grievances against the Duke, whom they refolved by all means to bring down; which Declaration was read before the Bill of Subfidies: Which fo Incenfed the King, that he Dissolved the Parliament the very next Day, and thereby loft Four Subfidies and Three Fifteenths, rather than the Duke should be farther Queflion'd by the Parliament, tho' one of the Articles against the Duke, was for a strong Presumption of his having Poisoned the King's Father. And thus ended this King's Second Parliament. After this Diffolution, the King Committed the Earl of Bristol to the Tower, and Published first a Proclamation for Burning all Copies of the Commons Declaration, and then a Declaration shewing the Grounds and Reasons of his Dissolving this and the former Parliament. There were feveral Occasions at this time which required confiderable Sums of Money; for besides the Palatinate, there was great Likelihood of a War with France. upon occasion of the French King's using the Vaunt-Guard (one of the King's Men of War, lent to the French King to go against Genoa) with fix other Merchants Ships, (turn'd into Men of War) against the French Proteflants in Rochel, expresly contrary to Agreement; and the King being extreamly Troubled at it, demanded Satisfaction of the French King; who Deferring to give it, the King seized a rich French Ship, and the French King Arrested the Goods of the English Merchants in France  $\mathbf{O}$  0 4

of ENGLAND.

France, to the Value of about 300000l. tho afterwards Restoration was made on both sides. But the Insolem Practices of the Priests and Jesuits belonging to the Queen, especially her Confessor, soon caused another Rupture, for he imposed upon her as a Pennance, to wait upon his Servants at their Dinner, and to walk on Foot in a rainy Morning from Sommerset-House to St. James's, and from thence to Tyburn, to offer up her Prayers for the Souls of the Romilh Martyrs, i. e. Traytors, or Jefuits, that had been Executed there, himself the mean while ricing by her in his Coach. But these Arrogancies being unsufferable, the Queens French Domesticks were paid off, and fent Home. Hereupon the French King (tho' this was no more than what himself had done before, in fending back all the Spanish Courtiers that came with his Queen) Arrested all the English Merchants Ships that lay in the River of Bourdeaux; this was fo ill refented by the King, that the Peace fo lately patch'd up, was now turn'd into an open War: And the King thereupon made use of those Forces against the French which were defigned against the Spaniard; complying now with the Defires of the Rochelers, who had humbly Sued to him for Aid and Protection. But the Fleet defign'd for their Relief, not going out till after Michaelmas, (a very improper Sealon to fend out a Fleet of great Ships to Sea) encountred only with Storms and Tempelts, and return'd Home again without doing any thing, leaving the poor Rockellers in a worse Condition than they were before.

The Affellment of the Loan (again fet on Foot fince the Parliaments Diffolution) being generally Oppofed, the People of lower Rank were Ordered to appear in the Military-Yar near St. Martins in the Fields, to be Lifted for soldiers; it being thought fit, that those who could not with their Puries, should affish the King with their Persons. But several Gentlemen and others of Ability, for refusing the Loan, were Committed Prisoners, to the Fleet, Marmaisea, Cate-House, and other Prisons: Sir John Edior, who Petition'd his Majesty, declaring that he could prove by many Presidents, That all manner of Aids and Taxes in former Kings Reigns, were never Levied but by the general Consent of the Nobility and Commons Assembled in Parliament: Notwithstanding which, he was Committed to the Gate-House.

Dr. Sybthorp, and Manwaring, two Emineut Preachers at Court, instead of Preaching the Gospel, Preach'd up the Necessity and Duty of the Lam: one of them Assembled.

at Court, instead of Preaching the Gospel, Preach'd up the Necessity and Duty of the Loan; one of them Afferting, That the Prince hath power to Direct his Counfel, and make Laws; and that Subjects, if they cannot exhibit Active Obedience, in case the thing Commanded should be against the Law of God or Nature, yet ought to yield Passive Obedience; and in all other Cases they were bound to Active Obedience. Therother was more express to the Purpose, and affirmed, That the King's Royal Command in imposing of Loans and Taxes, though without Confent in Parliament; did Oblige the Subjects Conscience, upon pain of Eternal Damnation. Which Position being highly Applauded at Court, the Sermon of Dr. Sybthorp, call'd, Aphilolick Obedience, was approved by Dr. Land, (then Bishop of London) and an Express sent from the King to Archbishop Abbot to License it, which he refusing, the King suspended him from his Archiepiscopal See, and a Commillion was Granted to five Bilhops, to execute his Office.

And now the D. of Buckingham to clear his Reputation and shew his Diligence in his Admiral-ship, with some difficulty compleated his Naval Forces, consisting of 6000 Horse and Foot, in Ten Royal Ships, and Ninety Merchant-Men, with which he set Sail from Portsmouth, June 27th, 1627, and Published a Manifesto of the King's Affection to the Reformed Churches in France, and his Displeasure for the last Misemploying of his Ships against the Rochellers. But after all, through the Duke's ill Conduct, or Obstinacy (in going before St. Martin's Castle, in the Isle of Rhee, against which his Council diswaded him, rather than against the Mede, another Castle in that Island, which they might in all likelihood likelihood have carried, and would have been a fafe place of Retreat in case of Necessity ) this great Design Mil. carried, with the Death of near Two Thousand common Souldiers, Thirty Prisoners of Note, and Forty four Colouis taken. Yet to make some Amends for this Mifcarriage, a great French Ship was taken upon the Coasts of Holland, Laden with all forts of Ammunition to a great Value. Also Sir John Pennington took 34 rich

French Merchant-men homeward-bound, and brought 'em all safe into England. The lowness of the Exchequer, the late Miscarriage at the Isle of Rhee, and the present distressed Condition of the Rochellers, being laid before the Lords of the Council, it was thereupon resolved to call another Parliament, and Writs were forthwith issued out accordingly. And the Parliament met the 27th of March, and the King tells them, "That the greatness of the Danger requires a " fpeedy Supply, and hopes they will prove such true Patriots, as not to deceive his Expectations. The first thing the Commons went upon, was the Grievances of the Nation; and therein the chief thing infifted on, was the Case of those Gentlemen imprisoned for refusing the Loan; and who, notwithstanding their Habeas Corpu, were remanded to Prison: After the Debating where of, the Commons resolved, Nemine Contradicente, 1. That no Min englet to be Restrained by the Command of the King or Pray-Council, without some Cause of the Commitmeni. 2. That the Writ of Habeas Corpus ought to be granted upon request to every Man that is Restrained, the by the Command of the King, the Privy Council, or any other. 3. That if a Free-man be Imprisoned by the Command of the King, the Privy-Council, or any other, and no cause of such Commitment expressed, and the same be returned upon an Habeas Corpus granted for the faid Party, then he ought to be Delivered or Bailed. After which the Parliament drew up a Petition against Popilis Reculemts, to which the King gave a full and Satisfactor ry Answer; and then the Commons granted the King Five Subfidies; at which he was so pleased, that he sent them Word He would deny them nothing of their Liberties which any of his Predecessors had Granted. And thereupon the Commons drew up that Memorable Bill called Petition of Right, which, after many Debates about it, passed both Houses, and was Presented to the King, to which the King answered, The King willeth that Right be done according to the Law, and Customs of the Realin, and that the Statutes be put in due Execution, that his Subjects may have no canse to complain of any Wrong or Opwellions, contrary to their just Rights and Liberties; to the Preservation whereof, he holds himself in Conscience as well Obliged, as to that of his Prerogative. But this Answer not being thought Satisfactory, upon their further Application to the King, he sent them this short but full Answer, Soit Droit Fait come il est desire: i. e. Let it be done according to your Desire. Which Answer was received with great Joy, by both Houses, and the Citizens of London, who expressed it by making of Bonsires, and ringing of Bells: And the King for further Satisfaction, received again into his Favour Dr. Abbot, A. B. of Canterbury, Billiop Williams, and others, and likewife caused the Commission of Loan and Excise to be Cancell'd in his Presence. But the Commons after this drawing up a Renonstrance against the Duke, and calling in Question the King's taking of Tunnage and Poundage, were Adjourned to the 20th of October, several Acts being first paffed by them. Much about this time Dr. Lamb (that had been formerly twice Arraigned, once for Necromancy, and another time for a Rape) was Kill'd by the Rabble in Lothbury, for which the City was Fined 6000l. He was a great Favourite of the Duke of Buckingham's, and commonly call'd the Duke's Devil, which made him the more Hated.

After the Duke's late Expedition to the Isle of Rhee, the Earl of Denbeigh Sailed with Fifty Ships for the Relief of Rochel, but being repelled with much Lofs, he return'd back to Plymonth, despairing of Success: Whereupon the Duke of Buckingham himself resolved to go again with a more considerable Navy; but whilst he was at Port (mouth haftening the fitting out of the Fleet, one John Felton, a Lieutenant, Stabb'd him to the Heart with a Knife, which he left sticking in his Body till the Duke himself pull'd it out, and Died immediately after; Felton was foon Apprehended by the Servants, and laden with Irons; and being ask'd what induc'd him to commit so bloody a Fact, he boldly answer'd, He Kill'd him for the Cause of God and his Countrey: He had likewise fasten'd a Paper in the Crown of his Hat, to tell the World (in case he had miscarry'd in the Action) That his only motive to this Fact, was the Remonstrance of the Commons against the Duke; and that he could not Sacrifice his Life in a Nobler Cause, than by delivering his Countrey from so great an Enemy. For this Fact Felton was Condemned and Hanged at Tyburn, and his Body hang'd in Chains upon a Gibbet at Portsmouth.

However the designed Fleet set Sail under the Command of the Earl of Linesey, and came to Rochel-Haven, where there was a Barricado of 1400 Yards cross the Channel; notwithstanding which, the Earl adventured in, passing the Forts and Out works; but the Wind changing, drove the Ships soul upon each other: Which unhappy Accident made the Fockellers despair of Relief, and presently Surrendred the Town. And the Earl of Lindsey brought the Fleet set home again.

The Parliament after some Adjournments sitting again, the Merchaitts, who for resulting to Pay Custons, had had their Essects seized, made grievous Complaints, this made the King send for the two Houses to attend sim in the Banguetting-House, requiring them to pass the Bill for Tunnage and Poundage, for the better and more speedy ending all Differences. But they replyed, God's Cause was to be preferred before the King's, and in the first place therefore they would consult about the Establishment of Religion; and so returning, they appointed a Committee for that Purpose, and another for Civil matters; and many were Centured for reslecting on their Proceedings, and for Levving Tunnage and Poundage; but the King excused the latter as done by his express Command, in a time when the Nation was in Danger to be Invaded by Foreigners: And that such things had been often done in the Reigns of his Predecessors, when Money could not be speedily raised on urgent Necessites, in a Parliamentary way. However this and other Misunderstandings raised great Heats and Jealousies, which were Fomented to that Degree, that the Parliament was quickly after Dissolved, without passing the Bill of Tunnage and Poundage. Soon after which the King published a Declaration of the Cause thereof, and eleven of the Members were Summon'd before the Council-Table, and all committed to divers Prisons, contrary to the Petition of Right, so lately confirmed by the King.

Soon after this a Paper was dispersed, containing some Projects how the King might encrease his Revenue without the help of a Parliament; and upon Information that the Earls of Bedsord, Clare, Sommerset, and others, had dispersed some Copies of them, they were Committed: But Sir David Fowlis making it appear it was a Project of Sir Robert Dudley's, Son to to the Earl of Leicester, in Italy, sixteen Years since, and no ways intended at this time to create any Difference between the King and Parliament, they were released.

And now divers Threatning Libels against the chief Ministers of State were scattered abroad, and particularly one against Bishop Land, affuring him his Life was lought for, he being the Fountain of Wickedness, &c. This made the great Men fear the fitting of another Parliament: And it is faid Weston the Treasurer advised the King never to call any again. And a Book of Projects for Governing and raising Money without Parliaments, was presented to the King. In January an Embassador from Spain arrived at London, whose business was to treat of Peace, which was foon Concluded, as had been with France before. On the 29th of May, 1630. the Queen was deliver'd of a Son, who was Christened Charles; and Succeeded in the Kingdon: At whose ्रातील हेए ह Birth Birth, it is Remarkable, a very bright Star appeared at Noon-day; which being shewed the King as he easie from his Devotion, he greatly Rejoyced thereat, as taking it for a fortunate Presage: Scon after Dr. Leighton Writing and Publishing a Book Entituled, Sion's Plea. was Censured for it, and Sentenced to have his Note flit, his Ears cropp'd, and a Mark or Brand in his Fore-head, which was inhicted on him.

Anno 1631, Mervin, Lord Audley, Earl of Caffle-Haven, was tryed by his Peers, on the Petition of his Son and Heir, for a Rape and Sodomy, and being found Guilty, lost his Head on Tower-hill.

The King hearing of some Murmurrings and Discontents in Scotland, went thither in Person, hoping to give his People of that Kingdom Satisfaction; and being to lemnly Crowned at Edenborough, he called a Parliament: But they fearing the bringing in of Episcopacy, and the Form of Prayer, and other Services in England, seemed more and more to be Digusted. However the Kingla ving Confirred and Ratified some Laws, which the Scors construed to the worst Sense; And which was indeed in order to the establishing Episcopacy there, which King James the First had introduced Anno 1616. and which was apparent by the King's giving Order to the Dean of his Royal Chappel in Edenborough, to have Prayer read therein, according to the English Liturgy, &c.

In the Year 1632, the King (incited thereto by Billop Laud) set out a Declaration for Tollerating of Sport on the Lord's-day; which gave great Offence to all fober Men; and for refuting to Publish it, many of the best Ministers were Suspended, and deprived of their a Peace was soon Concluded; but they kept it no longer Renefices.

and after his Brother Charles his Death, King of England, for the Extirpation of Episcopacy, and Establishing of Oc. And at that time the Arch-bishop of Canterbus Presbytery. dying, Bishop Land was made Arch-bishop in his place. On the 13th of April, 1640. After twelve Years called Ship-money, which removed the Hollanders who had king promifed, That if they would Supply him to main-

Confederated with the French, from before Dunkirk; and the Flandrians, with the affiftance of the Spaniard; foon Routed the French Army by Land. The King Considering the good success of this Fleet, sent out an other which Sailing Northward fcoured the Seas of the Dutch Buffer, and spoiled their Fishing-trade, so that they were constrained to purchase their leave to Fish on our Coast, on Valuable Confiderations: Several Gentlemen being Diffatisfied with the raifing of Ship-money, and being done without consent of Parliament, refused to pay it; upon which the King referr'd it to his Judges, of whom Ten were for the Legality of it, and subcribed their Names to te Enrolled in the Courts of Westminster; (but Hutton and Crook refused) and thereupon Mr. Hamden of Buckinghamfhire, refusing to pay it, had Judgment given against him, which occasioned murmurings among the people; of which Dr. Bastwick, Prin and Burron taking the Advantage, writ Books reflecting on the Bishops and Government, for which they were sentenced to pay 5000l. Fine, lose their Ears in the Pillory, and Imprisoned during the King's pleasure. And Dr. Williams Eishop of Lincoln was fined 10000l. and Imprisoned in the Tower During pleasure; and left to the Censure of the High Commission Court, as to what concerned them; wherein the Bishop had very hard Measure, his Offence being chiefly that he approved not of Archbishop Laua's Exorbitant Actions.

And now new Troubles arising about the Book of Common-Prayer in Scotland the King marched thither with an Army, and the Scots met him near Berwick: But a Treaty being began, by means of the Scots Nobility, than the King's return to London; which occasioned Octob. 13. 1633. The Queen was delivered of he him to make a fecond Expedition; but by this time fecond Son, named fames, afterwards Duke of York they had entred into a folemn League and Covenant

After this a Fleen was fet out by the Supply of a Tax interval, a Parliament met at Westminster, to whom the

tain the War against the Scots, he would quit his claim of ship-money. And the Parliament seemed to have a great Disposition to comply with the King's defires; but it being demanded in the House of Commons, what supply the King expected? It was answered by Mr. Secretary Vane, Twelve Subfidies: (whereas at that time, the King only defird Six) This large Demand put the House into such a Ferment, made things look fo ill, that the King Diffolved the Parlia ment the next Day, having only fat 22 Days.

The Scots not yet quieted, enter into England with an Army, and having defeated the King's Forces at Newborn, feized upon New-castle and Durham; upon which the King is willing to hear their Grievances, and receives a Petition from them, wherein they require a Parliament to be called in England, without which they could have no Redres: Declaring their Intention not to lay down Arms, till the Reformed Religion was settled in both Nations upon sure Grounds, and the Caufers and Abetters of their prefent Troubles, Land and Strafford were brought to publick Juflice in Parliament. After which feveral Peers, the City of London, and divers other places, Petition'd the King for the fitting of a Parliament, whereupon the King Summon'd a nother Parliament to neet Nov. 3. 1640. when the People were every where in a Ferment and Prejudice, inveighing if not against the King, yet against his Ministers of State.

In this Parliament all Ceremonies in the Church were suppressed, except those used in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth; and the Earl of Strafford, Arch-bishop Land, and Bilhop Wren, were Impeached of High-Treason and committed to the Tower: Divers of the Judges that had declared for Ship-money were Voted Delinquents; and Judge Berkley Arrested by the Uther of the Black Court.

of ENGLAND. he removed divers Ministers of State and Officers in Truft, appointing a new Lieutenant of the Tower, which greatly displeased the Commons, insomuch that t. . Articled against the new Lieutenant to he Peers, we refused to meddle in it, it being the King's Prerogative to sat in whom he pleased. But not long after a multitude of pprentices and others came to the Peers House, clamouring to have the Lieutenant removed, and Threating on refular to turn all Topfy-turvey; they also demanded that the Bishops might be excluded the House of Peers: And then going into Westminster-Abbey, in their unadvised Fury, spoiled the Vestments, Organs, Sepulchres, and what else was comely and decent. And as they returned by White-Hall, uttered very opprobrious Threatnings against the King and his Counsellors; which made him Fortify his Paliace, and accept of a Guard of the Inns of Court Gentlemen, who offered their Service to defend his Person from any Insults. The Parliament hereupon apprehending a fear of Danger that threaten'd them, affumed a Guard for their Defence, constituting the Earl of Effex Captain of it, and appointed an extraordinary Affembly in the City of London; and foon after committed twelve Pishops Prisoners to the Tomer, which scared most, if not all the rest, from giving their Attendance; and many Ministers of State were Accused and Cenfured: And the Earl of Strafford, upon his Tryal, being accused of many things, and plainly answering all that by Articles was laid to his Charge, and the Court Adjourning without prefixing any time of meeting, the Commons proceeded to draw up and dispatch a Bill of Attainder against him, which the King with great difficulty, and some reluctancy of Mind, Signed; but the Warrant for his Execution he laboured much to defer, saying, He had heard the Cause, and believed in his Conscience the Earl was not Rod for High-Treason, as he sate in the King's Bench guilty of Treason, and yet he could not clear him of Misdemeanour; but hoped a way might be found out to satisfie The King being vexed at the proceeding of the Com Justice, and their Fears, without oppressing his Conscience: mons complained to the Peers, who promifed to Labour and had confulted about it with his Judges and Bilhops bemons complained to the tests, which will be the form the best and signed the Bill; as also a Bill for the fitting King and his two Houses. But matters yet running high of the Parliament during the pleasure of both Houses; which last was occasioned for satisfying the Scots, who required vast Sums of Money. However the Earl was Executed. tho' the King laboured much to fave him, propoling his perpetual Imprilonment, and many other things.

leen

He was attended at his Execution on Tower-Hill by the Arch-bilhop of Armagh, and to this Effect addressed him to the People; viz. That he was come thither to pay the last Debt he ow'd to Sin, with a good Hope of rifing to Rightconfres; that he Dyed willingly, Forgave all, and patiently submitted, declaring himself Innocent of the Crimes charged against him; wishing Prosperity to the King and People: He advised his Adversaries to repent of their violent Proceedings against him, saying, He thought it a strange way to write in Blood the beginning of Reformation, and Settlemen: of the Kingdom: however, he wished his Blood might rest, and not cry against them; declaring he Dyed in the Communion of the Church of England, for whose Prosperity he Prayed; and concluded with a Desire that the Spectators would pray for him. And then had his Head stricken off.

There having been about this time some Tumults made about White Hall and Westminster, and the King being inform'd they were encouraged by the Lord Kimbolton and five Niembers of the House of Commons, the King demanded those five Members, whom he accused of High-Treason, as also the Lord Kimbolton, a Member of the House of Peers; but they were refused to be delivered : Whereupon he came with about 500 armed Men to the House of Commons, where the Speaker refigned the Chair to him; but looking about, and not feeing those he expected, (for upon Notice, they were withdrawn) he declared his good Intentions to the Parliament, laying, He hoped they would fend him those Members against whom he had matters of high Concern. But they were so far from doing it, that they put the City of London in Arms, and Adjourned their fitting for five days; forbidding the Citizens to help the King to find out any of the accused Members; and so far were they from it; that the Parliament fitting again, they carry'd them in Triumph, and placed them in their Seats, shouting and threatning as they passed by White-hall; and to lessen the King's Power, Power, the Parliament sent Letters to the adjacent Counties, commanding the Militia to draw up in Arms: Whereupon they found that upon occasion, more than 20000 Men could be got in a Readiness. These proceedings made the King withdraw to Hampton-Court, whose absence much encreated the Parliaments Authority among the People; and to endear them to the Citizens, they adjourned from Westminster to London; and sent their Mandates to the Governors of Sea-port Towns, strictly forbidding them to Obev any of the King's Orders unless they were confirmed by This more weaken'd his Power than all their former Proceedings; which the King, by an early precaution in Garifoning those parts, might have prevented.

The King confidering that things were likely to go ill, and that he had given away his Power, and could not diffolve this Parliament, he endeavoured by mild Terms to win them to his Interest, and Writ from Windsor, protesting his good meaning towar is both Houses, and that he would be ready to any thing that might be for the good of his People: whereupon they fent Messengers to defire him to return to London; but for some Reasons he resuled it. Hereupon the Commons drew up an humble Remonstrance. which seemed so unreasonable to the Peers, as to what therein they proposed, that they rejected it, till they saw the Commons uniting against them, and then Messengers were fent to the King with it, who with some Reservation yielded to part of it, and denyed the rest; which not satisfying them, they proceeded to Petition the King, That the accused Members might be freed from all imputation of Guilt, which was Granted.

During the King's being bulie in Scotland, a horrid Conspiracy and Rebellion broke out in Ireland, which was difcovered but the Night before it began to the Lords-Justices, by Owen O Conally; by which means Dublin, and forne other places, were secured, and divers of the Conspirators apprehended: However it was carry'd on with fuch a Rage and Fury, by the Encouragement of the Popilin Priests, Monks, and Fryars, that nothing for a time but Slaughter and miserable Cruelties on the English and Scots were to be 594

ken in most of the Provinces; the Romish Priests loudly declaring that they were Hereticks, and ought to be Extirpated from the Earth; that it it was no more Sin to kill them, than Dogs, and a mortal one to Relieve and Protect them; giving the Sacrament to divers, on condition that they should spare neither Man, Woman, nor Child. faying, It did them a great decl of Good to wash their Hands in their Blood; and they were told, If any of the Murtherers in this Attempt were flain, they should immediately go to Heaven; to that nothing but Blood-shed and piteous Cries were to be feen and heard in most parts of that

Kinguoia. The King to Redress this, Solicited the Scots Parliament to iend over Forces; but they refused, Alledging, It was a dependant Kingdom on England; and if the English Parliament would make use of, and pay any of their Men, they might raife them; or otherwise they would not intermeddle: And the Parliament of England being flow in fending over Succours, about 200000 of all forts fell in this unparrallel'd Massacre; but Forces going over, the Cut-throats were every where Routed, many Slain, and the reil betook themselves to their Fastnesses; and the state of Affairs were restored to some good Order. The Contendings between the King and Parliament in England, continuing to increase, many that feared the sad Events, left the Land; others retired to lead private Lives. Mary, the King's Eldest Daughter, being Married to the Prince of Orange, by Approbation of Parliament, the Queen went over with her, and the King caused all Populh Priests to be banished the Kingdom, and the Penal Statutes to be put in Execution against Papists. Yet the Parliament proceeded to Tax the King about harkning to the Change of Religion, and that he had given cause to the Rebellion in Ireland, casting many Reflections on the Queen, which constrained him to publish his Declaration to wipe off these Imputations; but this doing little good, he retired with

Prince Charles his Son, the Palfgrave of the Rhine, the

Duke of Richmond, and others, to York; Summoning the Nobles, Knights of the Garter, and all such as held Tepure of the Crown, by Lands or Service. But the Parliament strictly forbid it . Yet many went, and among them several Members of Parliament.

The King seeing no good by fair means to be done, he Commanded all the Yorkshire Men to meet him at Howard-Moor near York, where there appeared about 6000; and with about 20000 he returned to York, Commanding the rest to return to their Respective Homes. In the mean while the Parliament was borrowing Money of the Londeners on the Publick Faith; and raising 10000 Foot, and 2000 Horse, they sent them towards York; of which the King had no sooner Notice, but with a slender Force he repaired to Hull, and demanded enterance; but Sir John Hotham, the Governour, appearing on the Walls, fell on his Knees, and entreated his Majesty not to desire that of him which he could not Grant, by reason of the Trust inposed in him by the Parliament, whereupon he was proclaimed Traytor; and the King sent to the Parliament to complain of this Affront, and require a Treaty tending to a Reconciliation, promifing to repair to them if they would leave London, and make choice of some other fitting place;

but they refused it. Whereupon he Proclaimed all those Guilty of Treason that affisted them either with Money or Supplies; and threatned to deprive the Londoners of their Charter, if they offended herein. Then he Fortified Newark and Barwick, and fought to gain Hull by Force, but failed in the Attempt: And the Parliament having proclaimed the Earl of Essex their General, the King repaired to Notingham, and there fet up his Standard, and gathered a confiderable Army; so that now to the great Trouble

of most People, War was prepared for on both sides, with much Vigor and Resolution; in which many Gallant Men lost their Lives. And Prince Charles seeing his Father's Affairs in a desperate Condition, Sailed for the Scillys, from whence he was Invited by the Parliament to return for London; but not thinking it safe, he went to the Hague, and continued with his Sifter the Princess of Orange till he heard the fad News of his Father's Death. In the mean while Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice, the King's Nephews, Sons to his Sister the Queen of Bohemia, came  $Pp_3$

over

over, and were Graced with Commands in the Army. After several Skirmishes, and the taking some Towns on both fides, the two Armies drew near each other, and the King perceiving himself Strong, upon the Earl of Worcefter's coming in with a considerable Force of Welch, resolved to out-march Effex, and reach London, and to that end got a days March before him; but Scorning to be pursu'd by a Subject, he changed his Measures, Faced about, and both Parties Facing, between Keinton and Edge-hin in Warmickshire, on the 23d of Octob. 1642, a sharp Battel was Fought between them, in which on both sides were slain between s and 6000 Men; and the Slaughter had been much greater. had not Night come on and parted them. After this the King took in the Town and Cattle of Banbury, and some other places. The Parliament to strengthen their Army, Voted, That all Apprentices that would Lift, should be Free from their Mafters, and afterward received into Service again; whereupon they gained considerable Recruits, Then folemnly invited the Scots to their Assistance; which the King by his Letters to the Privy-Council of Scotland, laboured to prevent, but in vain: Yet several of the Lords and Commons prefented a Petition to him at Cole-brook, and had answer, He would expect them at Windsor Castle, and defired them to haften the Treaty: But this they did to gain time till Effex was Recruited, which made the King haften to Secure Brainford, where happened a sharp Encounter, tho' at last he forced his way; but upon Essex's hastening with his Regular Forces, and the London-Militia, he retired, for fear of being hemmed in, to Oxford; and because this happened in a time of Treaty, the Parliament Voted to have no Accommodation; yet after allowed it, if he would leave his Army and come to them: But this was Rejected, and the War waxed fierce, fo that with various Success Towns were taken, and Farties routed on both fides, by turns, whilst the Counties of Norfolk, Stiffolk, Effex, Hartford, Cambridge, Ille of Ely, and the City of Norwich, were Authorized by the Farliament to Associate under the Lord Gray of Wark. And the Queen arriving with Officers, Ammunition, and Money from Holland, was received at York by the Earls of New castle and Cumberland. And these Disturbances at Home, gave the Irish an Opportunity to Rebel again at the Instigation of the Pope, who to that Purpose sent two Letters, one to Owen O Neal, and the other to all the Arch-bishops, Bithops, Nobles, and People of the Kingdom; Commanding those who had already appeared in the Quarrel, and Exhorting others to take Arms; wickedly approving the Massacre, and bestowing on them his Benediction, with plenary Pardons and Abiolutions for whatever they should act: so that much Blood was again shed, which caused (by the Mediation of those that were Peaceably inclin'd) several new Treaties to be fet on Foot between the King and Parliament; but they came to nothing, being still crossed by those that hoped for Advantages by the Distractions of the times. And the Lord Brook besieging Litchfield-Close, was there Slain; but his Soldiers took it, and the Earl of Chester Prisoner. And now they proceeded to draw up Articles of high Treason against the Queen, some of which were, That the pawned the Crown-Jewels in Holland; That she endeavoured to raife a Party in Scotland against the Parliament; and that the was in the Head of a Popish Army in England. This was carried to the Lords by Pym, who seemed at first to be Surprized, but after agreed to it. About this time Robert Yeomans and George Boucher, were Hang'd at Briftol, on pretence they defigned to betray the City to the King; and on the like pretence Mr. Tomkins and Mr. Challonor were Executed on the Account of London- And during these Heats, Arch-bishop Laud was Attainted of High-Treason, and lost his Head. And the Queen meeting the King at Edge-hill, went with him to Oxford, where having Recruited his Army, he marched to Gloucester, which he Besieged. And Prince Rupert having taken Bristol, and gained some other advantages, came to him. In the mean while Effex hasted away with the City Trained-Pands, and Auxiliaries added to his Army, and between the King and him a great Battel was Fought on Newbury-heath foon after; for upon his coming, having raised the Siege, he followed the King; and having view'd Pp4

view'd his Army, presently Engag'd; and after a sharp Fight, the King's Party had the worst: And now the Parliament getting the Fleet from Sir John Pennington made the Earl of Warwick Admiral, and watched the Coast to prevent the Landing of Foreign Forces: and Sir John Hotham and his Son being Tryed for intending to deliver Hull to the King, on some Disgust taken, were Condemned and Beheaded; and the Farliament proclaimed all Traytors that should affift the King against them with Horse, Arms, or Money; and Treason for any Member of their House to Desert them, and go to him. And foon after, the second Newbury Fight ensued, in which the King was worsted, and between 4 or 5000 Men Slain on both fides; after which the Uxbridge Treaty began: But the Parliaments Demands were fuch, that it broke off with out coming to any Agreement.

Whilst these and other matters happened in England, the Marquess of Montros, with a handful of Men performed Wonders in Scotland, overthrowing the Lord Burleigh, and divers others; bet not being Succoured as he expected, it on, diverted the Sects for a time from entring England. And upon the Parliaments passing the Self-denying Ordinance, the Earls of Effect, Manchester, and Denbeigh, Surrendred their Commissions in the Lords House, and 10000l. per Annum was Voted to Essex out of Delinquents Estates. And now Sir Thomas Fairfax was made General of their Army, and Oliver Cromwell Lieutenant-General of the Horse, and most of the Commission-Officers were Changed; and Col. Mitton Surprized Shrewfoury, one of the King's head Garisons. York being Relieved by Prince Rupert, the bloody Fight at Marston-Moor ensued; in which good were Slain, which occasioned the Surrendering that City; and Col. Massey D. feated the Prince at Lebury. But that which most Ruined the King, was Naseby Battel; where besides the flain, the greater part of his Soldiers and Officers were taken Prisoners; also divers of his menial Servants; his Coach, and Cabinet of Letters. This Battel was Fought in a Fallow-Field, on the North-West-side of

Nale-

Naseby, a mile broad; which Ground was wholly taken up by the Armies; so that the Battel was exceeding bloody, both fides being v. rv Conragious and Numerous, not being 500 Odds: And here the King, besides his Men, lost 12 pieces of Camon, 8000 Arms, 40 Barrels of Pouder, 200 Carriages, and his ba rage, besides his Treasure that should have paid his Army, or raised Recruits, and was never after able to recover the Blow; but faintly Strugled, whilst the Parliament Forces swept away almost all his Garisons, Oxford being the last of any Note, in which the King was closely Beliege i; and that City made a very flout Resistance, but there being no Army in the Field, that could relieve it, the King fearing a Storm, refolved to go thence privately, and cast himself for Projection on the Scots Army, that was advanced as far as Southwel; and thence to New-Cafele. The Scots promifed him Protection, and appeared very Joyful of his Presence among them, yet all was but Distimulation; for the English Parliament demanded his Delivery, and they wanting their Pay, which they could not by any other means forefee they should have, in confideration of 2000001. they Surrendred him Prisoner, and immediately marched back over the Tweed; in the mean while Oxford, Litchfield, Worcefter, Penaennis, the Island and Castle of Scilly, and many others, Surrendred; and the few Parties of Royalin's that made Head were frewhich cannot be very Grateful to English-men, I come to a close of this unhappy Reign. Having got the King in their Hands, they fent him Prifoner to Holmby-Castle, whilst many earnestly Laboured for an Accommodation; the Surry-men Petitioned, but were fet upon by the Soldiers, some Slain, and many Wounded; nor fared the Kentish-men better. At length a Treaty was set on Foot; but Letters were purposely scattered to fright the King away, intimating Defigns against his Life; for then he had a kind of Liberty, being brought to Hampton-Court in order to the Treaty. When eleaping into the Isle of Wight, he was there made Pritoner by Coll. Hammond in Carisbrook-Castle; and it was Voted, Νo quently routed. But briefly to pass over this Bloody Scene,

600

of ENGLAND.

No further Address be made to the King. But that was afterward Annulled, and the King's Concessions Voted Satisfactory; and things were in a fair way to an Agreement. But the Army Officers knowing their Committions lasted but with the War, dealing under hand with some defigning Men in the Parliament-House, who under pretence of a Publick Good, had all along along aimed at Self-interest, the Soldiers being by Interest and Promises made of their Party; all fuch Members as were for the Accommodation, were by Military Force excluded the House, and the King brought to Hurst-Castle, and afterwards to Windsor; and his Party went extreamly to wreck at Maidstone, Pon frast, Bow, Stratford, Kingston; and Colchester, after a brave Resistance, being taken, Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Liste were shot to Death, tho' Quarter had been given them.

And now those Meabers that were left in the Houseof Commons, contrary to the Consent of the Lords, being backed by the Army, made an All [as they called it] for the Tryal of the King; and Erected a Tribunal, called by them a High Court of Justice, to that end, of which John Bradshaw, a Serjeant at Law, was President, and 56 others as Judges; and the King being called before them, and accused of Reveral Crimes, as that he gave cause for the Cruel Flood-shed in England and Ireland; that he had Proclaimed War, in fetting up his Standard against the Parliament; That he had commissioned his Son and others, to wage War; and therefore was pronounced a Traytor, a Tyrant, and an Enemy to the Common-wealth of England: To this Charge the King refused to Answer, or to acknowledge the Authority of the Court, offering his Reasons; but they were not admitted; and being several times brought before them, and urged thereunto, on his refusal, on the the 27th of Jan. 1648. the Sentence was pronounced against him, viz. That he the said Charles Steuart, was fallen from ail Dignity, was Guilty of High-Treafon, and to be put to Death, by Severing his Head from his Body, for being a Tyrant, a Murtherer, and an Enemy to the Common-Wealth. The Sentence being read, the Court stood up in Confirmation of it, as an Act and Refolution of them ail; and the King offering to speak, was Violently Hurried away by the Guard: And tho' the Dutch Embassador, the Score and most of the English Nobles, interceeded to stay Execution, he was on the 30th of Jan. 1648. brought from St. James's to White Hall, and there being attended (on a Scaffold before the Eanquetting-House) by Dr. Juxon Bishop of London, he made a Profession of his Innocency, and of his Faith, forgiving his Enemies, and praying to God not to lay his Blood to their Charge, seeming troubled that he had consented to the Sentence against the Earl of Strafford; and after this and much more to the like Purpose, he kneeling down, gave the Sign to the Executioner, by stretching out his Arms, and at one Blow had his Head serarated from his

George's Chappel. Thus, without President, seil King Charles, when he had Reigned 23 Years, 10 Months, and 3 Days, being the 24th Year of his Reign, and 49th of his Age. Put to Death by the Hands of his own Subjects, was carried to Windfor, and buried in a Vault in St.

Body; which being put in a Coffin covered with Velvet.

contrary to all Law and Juffice; universally Pitied, (but unable to be help'd ) by his People. He was one of the Chaltest Princes that ever sate upon the Throne, being all along so true to his Queen, that he never Defit'd his Marriage-bed. And had he not given too much heed to Buckingham, Laud, and some other flattering Parasites and Courtiers, who were continually Euzzing into his Ears nothing but Absolute and unlimitted Power, putting him upon Diffolving his Parliaments, and then raifing Money, and Ruling without them, as appear'd by his Twelve Years interval of Parliaments, viz. from Anno 1628, to 1640. whereby he lost the Love of his People; he had never been brought to that dismal Catastrophe, but might have Liv'd and Dy'd a Happy Prince. And this may be observed from this King's Reign, as well as from several before, That never any Prince fell out with his Parliament, and went about to Establish an Arbitrary Power,

No further Address be made to the King. But that was afterward Annulled, and the King's Concessions Voted Satisfactory; and things were in a fair way to an Agreement. But the Army Officers knowing their Committions lasted but with the War, dealing under-hand with some defigning Men in the Parliament-House, who under pretence of a Publick Good, had all along along aimed at Self-interest, the Soldiers being by Interest and Promises made of their Party; all such Members as were for the Accommodation, were by Military Force excluded the House, and the King brought to Hurst-Castle, and afterwards to Windsor; and his Party went extreamly to wreck at Maidstone, Pon fratt, Bow, Stratford, Kingston; and Colchester, after a brave Resistance, being taken, Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Liste were shot to Death, tho' Quarter had been given them.

And now those Mexbers that were left in the Houseof Commons, contrary to the Confent of the Lords, being backed by the Army, made an Alt [as they called it] for the Tryal of the King; and Erected a Tribunal, called by them a High Court of Justice, to that end, of which John Bradshaw, a Serjeant at Law, was President, and 56 others as Judges; and the King being called before them, and accused of several Crimes, as that he gave cause for the Cruel Flood-shed in England and Ireland; that he had Proclaimed War, in fetting up his Standard against the Parliament; That he had commissioned his Son and others, to wage War; and therefore was pronounced a Traytor, a Tyrant, and an Enemy to the Common-wealth of England: To this Charge the King refused to Answer, or to acknowledge the Authority of the Court, offering his Reasons; but they were not admitted; and being several times brought before them, and urged thereunto, on his refusal, on the the 27th of Jan. 1648. the Sentence was pronounced against him, viz. That he the said Charles Steuor, was fallen from ail Dignity, was Guilty of High-Treason, and to be put to Death, by Severing his Head from his Body, for being a Tyrant, a Murtherer, and an Enemy to the Common-Wealth. The Sentence being read, the Court stood up in Confirmation of it, as an Act and Refolution of them ail; and the King offering to speak, was Violently Hurried away by the Guard: And tho' the Dutch Embassador, the Scots and most of the English Nobles, interceeded to stay Execution, he was on the 30th of Jan. 1648. brought from St. James's to White-Hall, and there being attended (on a Scaffold before the Eanquetting-House) by Dr. Juxon Bishop of London, he made a Profession of his Innocency, and of his Faith, forgiving his Enemies, and praying to God not to lay his Blood to their Charge, seeming troubled that he had consented to the Sentence against the Earl of Strafford; and after this and much more to the like Purpole, he kneeling down, gave the Sign to the Executioner, by stretching out his Arms, and at one Blow had his Head segarated from his Body; which being put in a Coffin covered with Velvet, was carried to Windfor, and buried in a Vault in St. George's Chappel. Thus, without President, sell King Charles, when he

the 24th Year of his Reign, and 49th of his Age. Put to Death by the Hands of his own Subjects, contrary to all Law and Justice; universally Pitied, (but unable to be help'd ) by his People. He was one of the Chaltest Princes that ever sate upon the Throne, being all along so true to his Queen, that he never Defit'd his Marriage-bed. And had he not given too much heed to Buckingham, Laud, and some other fattering Parasites and Courtiers, who were continually Euzzing into his Ears nothing but Absolute and unlimitted Power, putting him upon Diffolving his Parliaments, and then raising Money, and Ruling without them, as appear'd by his Twelve Years interval of Parliaments, viz. from Anno 1628, to 1640. whereby he lost the Love of his People; he had never been brought to that dismal Catastrophe, but might have Liv'd and Dy'd a Happy Prince. And this may be oblery'd from this King's Reign, as well as from feveral before. That never any Prince fell out with his Parliament, and went about to Establish an Arbitrary Pow-had Reigned 23 Years, 10 Months, and 3 Days, being er, but he not only found himself Mistaken, but also thereby made himself Miserable.

Before the breaking out of this unnatural War, amazing Sights were feen in the Air, of Firey Men and Horfes, running at each other with Launces, encountring with great Blasts of Lightning, and noise of Thunder. In Gloucester-shire Spectres were seen in a large Field not far from that City, drawn up in Battalia, suriously Engaging and then Vanishing, to the Amazement of the Beholders.

The Reign of King CHARLES The Second.

ING Charles the First being put to Death, the Relicks of the Parliament began to take out of the way such Nobles and others as they supposed would obstruct their Proceedings; and particularly Duke Hamilton, the Earl of Holland, and the Lord Capel were Beheaded for Treefon, pretended against them. And now to make their Fower the Stronger, they combined with the Army-Officers: And the Charles, Son to the preceding King, had an undoubted Right to the Kingdom, they proceeded to bar hin, and all the Royal Line, as they hoped, from the Crown, or any other from being King or chief Magistrate, unleis by Publick Act of Parliament so appointed; and that it should be Treason in any to attempt to further King Charles the Second (by them generally called Charles Stewart) in his Defigns to possess the Crown, by Proclaiming him, or any Affiffance given to him; taking great care not to admit the Secluded Members, left they should put a stop to the Current of their Proceedings; taking down every where the King's-Arms, and placing the Harp and Cross in their places, called the States Arms, and having taken down the late King's Effigies from the Royal-Exchange, they caused to be inscribed in the place where it flood, in Letters of Gold, Exit Tyranus Regum ultimus, Anno Libertatis Anglia, Restitutia Primo Anno 1648. Jan.

Jan. 30. All Titles in Processes of Law were altered; and instead of Carolus Dei Gratia, &c. was put in Custodes Libertatis Anglia, &c. The King's-Bench was called the Upper-Bench; and a new Stamp was made for Money, having on the one side the Cross, and on the other the Cross and Harp; inscribed, The Common-wealth of England, on the one side, and God with Us, on the other; also a new Great Seal was prepared, with the Cross and Harp on the one side, with this Inscription, The Great Seal of England; and on the other side, the Picture of the House of Commons, with these Words, In the sirst Tear of Freedom, by God's Blessing restor'd, 1648.

Things being thus Moddelled, whilst King Charles was in France, Solliciting for Aid to posses him of his Kingdoms, Fairfax out of some dishike to the Patliaments proceedings, laid down his Commission, which was given to Oliver Cromvel, who from this time laid the Projection of his future Greatness: And indeed, in his attempts on Ireland and Scotland he was so Successful as to reduce them to the English Obedience, with incredible Slaughter of the Natives. However King Charles was proclaimed by his Friends in England, and Ireland, and soon after in Scotland.

And now Money being wanting to maintain the Parliaments Armies, &c. the Crown-Lands, Dean and Chapter, and Bishops Lands, were Sold, with many stately. Houses, and most of the Castles in England Demolished; and all Persons expelled from Places of Trust in Church and State, that Subscribed not to be Conformable to the New-modelled Government.

The Scots all this while were Debating how to Restore the King, who was in the Isle of fersey, and coming to a Result, sent the Laird Libberton and Mr. Windram to him with Proposals, the Heads being these; 1. That he should Sign the Solemn League and Covenant. 2. That he should Pass divers Acts concluded on in the two last Sessions of Parliament in Scotland. 3. That he should recall the Commissions given to Montross. 4. That he should put from him all Papists, and appoint some place in Holland to treat with their Commissioners and give them a speedy Answer. And Sir William Fleming being sent by the King to the Estates of Scotland, Breda was appointed for the place of Treaty, and Commissioners were sent to represent the Kirk and State, who delivered what they had in Charge to the same Effect as has been mentioned. But whilst the Treaty held, the Marquess of Montross making new Attempts, was Surprized in Scotland; where with much Indignity he was brought to Execution, and Hanged on a Gibbet of extraordinary height, Dying with a Courage and Bravery suitable to that wherein he had Lived, and Quarters were set up in divers places. This being done in a full Treaty, greatly Displeased the King, because he had his Commission, and had acted in his Cause; but the necessity of his affairs, made him pass it over, and he Condescended to most of the Proposals.

The Parliament of England soon heard of their Treaty, and to prevent its taking effect, sent an Army under Cromwel into Scotland, and manning out a Fleet, Admiral Blake fell in with Prince Rupert's Squadron, finking and burning most of the Ships he Commanded for the King: however matters being agreed on, the King haftened to Scotland, and Landed at Spey, where feveral Lords came to him; and the Town of Aberdeen presented him with 1500l. which so angered the Estates, that they strictly forbid all other Towns under great Penalties to do the like. And coming to Edenburg, he was a second time Proclaimed King, July 16. Anno 1650. But the English o verthrowing the Scots Army commanded by Montgomery at Muscleborough, his Coronation was put off till January; when with much Solemuity he was Crown'd at Scone; and setting up his Standard at Aberdeen, made him felf Genera!!. simo of the Scots Army, and Fortifying Sterling, he removed his Court thither.

Whilst these things passed, the English Parliament (as they pretended) found out several Plots against them, for which Sir Henry Hyde, and Capt. Brown Bushel were Beheaded; and soon after, Mr. Gibbons, and Mr. Love, a Presbyterian Minister.

Crommel.

Cromwel perceiving he could not draw the Scots to a Battel, Transported 1600 Foot, and 4 Troops of Horse, over the Fife, who affisted by Lambert and Okey, routed Sir John Brown's Forces, killing about 2000 on the place, taking him and about 200 more Prisoners, and the King perceiving his Enemies prevail so fast in Scotland, calling 2 Council, it was agreed he should March into England, to try what Friends he had to affift him. But they came in very flowly, the Parliament having taken care before to prevent it, so that in a long March very few joyned him except the Lord Escreek's Son with a Troop of Horse, and the Earl of Derby with 250 Foot and 6 Horse; but whilst the King lingered by the way, Lambert being Guided over the Moors and Dales in Yorkshire, got before him, and Cromwel pursued hard after; yet after a sharp Dispute with Lambert, he gained the Pass of Warington-bridge, and fent to Coll. Mackworth to Surrender Shrewsbury, but he refused it; whereupon he marched to Worcester, and was recieved with much Joy into that place; but whilft he was Fortifying this Place, news came that the Earl of Derby who went to raise Forces in Lancashire, was overthrown by Lilburn, and most of his chief Commanders slain or taken Prisoners; and now the Trained-Bands from all parts gathering about Worcester, Cromwel and others came up with the Regular Forces, and Lambert gained the Pass at Upton, where the Bridge was broke down, by swimming the River, and rescuing a Party of their Men besieged by Massey in a Church, and by this means beat the King's Party, and entirely gained the Pass; and Crommel laid a Bridge of Boats over the River, but the King scorning to be cooped up with his Army, on the third of Sept. 1651, fallyed out of Worcester, and gave the Enemy Battle; but having Charged several times, and two Horses thot under him, over-powred by Numbers, he was forced to Retreat; but was closely pursued by the Parliament Forces, who thrust with his into the Town; and then the Cry being to Save the King, he had the good Luck to get away, with the Lord Wilmot; and coming to a Farmer's off his long black Hair with a Knife, for want of Sciffars; and after that was Secured a while in Boscobel-house by the Pendrills, Hudstone a Priest, and some few others, that were thought fit to be made acquainted with his being there; but 1000l. being tet upon him, and Search almost every where made, he narrowly Escaped one Evening, by getting out at the Eack-door, into the Wood, whilst the Searchers were entring at the Fore-door; and there he made an Oak-Tree his Palace, which snelter'd him till the heat of the Search was over. And at length, by the means of Mrs. Jane Lane, for whose Servant he went, and paffed by some of Oliver's Troopers as such. ter having escaped many Dangers, and passed through many Difficulties, he Landed at New- Haven in France, from whence he went to his Mother then at the French Court, In this Battle about 3000 were Slain, but a far greater Number were taken Prisoners; and most of the Scots fold as Slaves here, and to the Plantations. Their Colours taken, were hung up in Triumph in Westminster-Hall; and the Earl of Derby who was taken at his Overthrow, was

House on the edge of Stafford-shire, disguised himself, cutting

The Marquels of Ormond, and Lord Inchiqueen standing out in Ireland, levied confiderable Forces for the King's Service, and the former Belieged Dublin with a formidable Army, but being Negligent, and many of them raw Soldiers, Collonel Jones the Governour, Sallying first with a few, and then with the whole Garifon, railed the Siege, and took almost all the Plunder of the Camp; after which feveral other Towns were taken; and Crommel coming over with a sufficient Force, took Drogheda, and divers other places; in many of which the bloody Irith were put to the Sword, unless such as by hiding, found means to Escape his Fury; and in three Years time Ireland was Quieted and Reduced.

Beheaded at Polion in Lancashire.

Scotland and Ireland being thus Reduced to the Obedience of the Common-wealth of England, ( as it was then ffiled) the Parliament Refolved that Scotland shall be United to England, and Monarchy Abolified also in that Kingdom; and that Scotland shoul fend up Deputies, in such a Proportion as the Parliament should think meet, to represent them in the Parliament of England; which tho the Kirk party opposed, was notwithstanding done. After which follow'd an Act of Grace to all the People of England, pardoning whatever they had done, and all-Hostilities committed against the Parliament, provided they take the Engagement, which was, To be true and Faithful to the Common-wealth of England, as then Established, without King or House of Lords.

No fooner were these things over, and all things seemed Quiet at Home, but our Young Common-wealth found new Occasion for the exercise of their Arms abroad: There had been for some time a Grudge between them and the Senior Common-wealth of Holland, occasion'd by the Affashination of their Agent Dr. Dorislaus there; and afterwards by the Affronts put upon their Embaffadors, Oliver St. John, and Walter Strickland, by the common People in Holland, infomuch that these Embassadors not thinking themselves sufficiently Vindicated by the States, came away in great Discontent; and afterwards when the States

fent Embassadors here to Excuse themselves, and to defire a Pacification, they were answer'd with Demands of Reparation for their Herring-Fishing, and Question'd about the Business of Amboyna, and other things of that Nature. which made them go back re infecta. Upon this, the Hollanders resolving to be as Stout as they, set out a great Fleet for the Security of their Trade, under the Command of Van Trump: with instructions not to strike his Flag to the English Admiral, &c. Upon which, on the 17th of May, 1652. Van Trump came into Dover-road with 42 Sail of Men of War, and Blake the English Admiral encountred them with a far less Number, and tho' there was no great about 150 men Slain; whereas the English had not any Ship disabled, and very few Men kill'd. But this bad beginning did not so much Dishearten the Dutch, but in a little time, Van Trump was again at Sea, with 120 Men of War. But for all his haste, Blake was out before him with

matter done on neither fide, yet Van Trump had the worst of it, having had one Ship fink, and another taken, and

of ENGLAND.

600

The HISTORY. 608 with 70 Men of War, and Sailed Northward to interthey restore Van Trump to his place of Admiral again. supt the Dutch Filling-Trade, and to look after five Dutch Which they readily agreed to, and prevail'd with Trump East-India Ships about that time expected Home: and in again to accept it. With this Reinforcement, Van Trump the mean time Sir George Ascough arriving in the Downs being restor'd to his office of Admiral, got together a Fleet with the Barbadors Fleet, brought ten Dutch Merchants of 80 Men of War, and 10 Fire-ships, with which he Sail'd Ships, and four Durch Men of War along with him, whom to the back-fide of the Goodwin,; and Blake was in the he had taken in his way. Of which Trump having No-Downs with few more than 40 Men of War; who hearing tice, endeavoured to get between Sir George and the River. that Van Trump was coming to Fight him, resolved not to but by the changing of the Wind was Disappointed. Whereupon be returned to Holland to convey their East. Land Ships to the Sound; and in his way receiv'd advice that Plake had differfed their Herring-Filhing, and taken 12 Men of War that Guarded them; upon which Trump fent part of his Ships to Guard the Merchant-men, and with the rest Sailed to find out Blake, who was about the liles of Orkney: But a terrible Storm ariling, Trump's Fleet was so scattered that he came home but with 42 Sal: the most of the rest came in afterwards: But Blake came sale to Tarmouth with all his Fleet, and fix of Trump's Frigats that he had met with, and 900 Prisoners. In the Month of August following, Sir George Ayscough and De Ruyter Engaged each, other; Sir George had several of his Captains wounded, and some Ships damaged, but not one refuse the Engagement, and therefore Hoised up his Sails to find out Trump, and sentiout seven Ships to discover his Fleet, which were met by nine of the Dutch, sent out upon the same Errand: These meeting, first began the Fight; and the two Admirals hearing the Cannon, quickly advanc'd at the head of their Squadrons, the Fight being very furious, and lasting from two in the Morning till fix in the Evening, on the 29th of November. Tho' this Battel was fought with much Fury on both fides, yet the Dutch carried the Day by their Numbers: In this Fight the English had two Ships taken; one Burnt, and three Sunk; the Dutch (who had no great cause to boast) had a Flag-ship blown up, and all the Mariners and Soldiers therein Lost. but two; and several of their Ships very much Damaged. It is faid, That upon this Defeat, Van Trump in a Trium-Ship loft. What Lofs the Dutch had, was not known. phant manner, Sailed through the Channel with a Broom In October following was another Engagement on the side on his Main-Top-Mast, as if he had swept the Channel of of the North-Foreland, between the Dutch Admiral De all English Ships. But it was not long before they were Wit, and Admiral Blake, wherein great Courage was shown even with him again; for the Parliament having added Geon both fides; the Rear-Admiral of the Dutch was Boardneral Monk and General Dean to Admiral Blake: in Feed and Taken, and two more of their Ships were Sunk, and bruary following with 60 Men of War, fell upon the Dutch one Blo n up : So that the Durch nade what halle who were 76 Men of War, and had the Charge of 300 they could to get off; and were purlu'd by the English Merchants Ships to convey home-wards, and a furious Fight Fleet within 12 Leagues of the Maeze. After which, the for three days Successively, ensued; in which the Dutch lost English having preserv'd all their Ships, tho' some were eleven Men of War, and 30 Merchants Ships; and no less much Damag'd, recurn'd into the Downs in Triumph. The than 1500 Men kill'd: But of the English, many Ships Hogen-Mogents finding that if they went on at this Rate, were thatter'd, there was but one Sunk (the Samplon) but they were like to be reduc'd to poor diffressed States again, the Captain and most of the Men Sav'd: The number resolve to re-inforce their Fleet Considerably, the King of of the English slain in the Fight, were very near as ma-Denmark ( whom they had Solicited to take their Part) ny as those of the Enemy. promiting to affilt their with 20 Ships of War, provided About

About this time the Duke of Gloucester was sent by the Parliament (who had kept him in the Isle of Wight, ever

Parliament (who had kept min in the incompleter fince his Father was Reheaded ) to Dunkirk, whente he was Conducted to the Princess of Orange his Sister at Breda; and after he had ben there a little time, he went to Paris to his Brother and his Mother.

On the 20th of April following, General Cromvel, with M. G. Lambert, and M. G. Hierrison, and some few more of the Officers of the Army, went to Westminster, and entred the Parliament-House while they were fitting, and after a short Speech made by Cromwel, declaring the Ne cessity there was for Dissolving them, he declared them to be Disfolved, and required them to Depart; but the Speak er was unwilling to leave the Chair, till Harrison took him out by the Arm, and Cromvel commanded the Mace to be taken away, and not to be carried before him any more: and caused the Doors of the Parliament-House to be Locked, and a good Guard to be placed there, to prevent the Assembling of any of the Members. And then in the room of this Rump-Parliament thus Dissolved, a Council of State was Conflituted, confifting of the chief Officers of the Army, and fuch of the Members of the late Parliament u they had a Kindness for; and in this Council of State the Supreme Authority of the Nation was faid to Confift, and

The Dutch thought this Change might be to their Advantage; but they found themselves mistaken; for the new Covernours omitted nothing that might advance their Markine Preparations, and sitted out the Fleet with great application, and with success, that the one of the Freith Generals (Dean) was sain in the Fight, yet the Project were again Defeated, six of their best Ships being borner, and two blawn up, and elever first and two Hops

Obedience thereunto required, as fully as to the Parliament, when Sitting, and Judges, Sheriffs, Juffices, &c. and all other Civil Officers, to act in their respective Offices as before, till a new Representative should be chosen.

Borne, and two bl wn up, and eleven Ships and two Hops taken; and 1350 Prisoners, whereof Six were Captains of very good Note; and of the Ships that were taken, on was a Vice-admiral, and two were Rear-admirals. The English English had not one Ship lost or disabled; and (except General Dean) but one Captain slain.

And now a new Parliament was Summoned, chosen by Crompel out of the Several Counties of England, of the

Cromvel out of the Several Counties of England, of the most Religious and Sanctified Persons he could Nominate: This was called the Little-Parliament; and indeed they did Little, except it were making an Act against Tythes, and an Act for Marriages by a Justice of Peace; and then being weary of their Power, they gave it up to Oliver who had given it to them. And now another fort of Government comes next: For the Officers of the Army had drawn up a new System, and presented it to Oliver, defiring him to take the Government upon him, under the Title of Protector of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland: He at first made a shew of refusing it, (tho' every one believ'd there was nothing that he desir'd more) but being surther pressed to it, he accepted of it, and was that afternoon install'd at Westminster.

Tho' the Durch had been already severely beaten, and were extreamly Solicitous for a Peace, yet that they might get the better Terms, they resolved to try the Fortune of War once more; which yet prov'd more in-auspicious to them than the former, for in the next Battel, which was on the 29th of July, 1653. Admiral Van Trump was Slain, and 33 Sail of Ships sunk to the bottom of the Ocean, out of which 1200 men were Sav'd by the English, taken up out of Boats, and swimming in the Sea. This was so great a Mortification to the Dutch, that the States were afraid of a general Revolt: And therefore they forthwith apply'd themselves to Oliver for a Peace, which in the Infancy of themselves to Oliver for a Peace, which in the Insancy of his new Government, he was willing to Grant upon reasonable Terms; tho' they were reduc'd to so low a Condition, that he might have made what Terms he pleas'd. The Success the English had against the Dutch, made other Nations fear Cromwel. The Spanish Ambassador coming early to Congratulate his Authority, and the Fortugals cause in a Splendid Embassy to sue for Peace: Nor were the French backward to own his Power. So that he had now no apprehension of Trouble, but only from the Royalists; to Q q 3 suppress whom, a Plot was soon after found out of seve. ral Persons for an intended Assassination of the Protestor and feveral Persons Executed for it. The King about this time went into Germany, and Solicited several of the Princes there for affistance, but with little Success. Ireland being wholly reduc'd to Obedience, the Marquels of Or. mond, and the Lord Inchiqueen having timely withdrawn themselves and Embarqued for France, an Itinerant High Court of Justice was set up, and several of the chief Rebels that began the Massacre in Forty-One, were Try'd and Executed for the same, among which, that notorious Villain Sir Philem O Neal, was Hang'd and Quarter'd, and his Head plac'd upon Dublin-bridge. Some attempts for a rifing having been made by feveral of the Nobility of Scotland, they were utterly Defeated by General Monk, who was made Commander in chief of that Kingdom. And now the Protector having (according to the Articles of Government) called a Parliament, who beginning to Question the Power by which they were called, they were foon diffolved again, and feveral of the Royalists taken up about a new Conspiracy. The Protestor about this time having a mind to some of the Spaniards Indian-Gold, sent a Fleet and Army to surprize Hispaniola, in the West-Indies, but failing in that attempt by the ill Conduct of General Venablers, they went from thence to the Island of Jamaica, which they took, and which has continued ever fince in the Power of the English, being now a very rich and flowrithing Plantation. And General Blake being with his Fleet in the Streights, and coming before Tunis, and fending to the Governour to demand Satisfaction for the Wrongs done by their People to the English, and that the English Captives there might be deliver'd to him, had return'd for answer, That their Castles of Guletto and Porta Ferina were both well Mann'd and furnished with Ordnance, and therefore they did not fear him: Where upon Blake with his great Ships, and their Seconds, came into the Bay of Porta Ferina, within Musquet-shot of the Castle, and fired with such fury upon them, notwithstanding the frequent Discharges of fixty Great Guns upon his Ships, Ships, that in two Hours the Castle was made Defenceless. and all their Guns dismounted; at the same time Burning Nine of their Ships which he found in the Road. This Noble Action strook such a Terror not only upon Times, (who were willing then to Submit to Blakes Proposals) but also upon Algeirs and Tripolo, that they quickly came to a Treaty, and a Peace was made very much to the Advantage of the English. About this time there having been an horrible Maffacre made upon the Poor Protestants of Piedmont, by the Command of the Duke of Savoy, we the instigation of the Popish Priests and Jesuits; the Protector espous'd their Quarrel, and not only sent to the Duke on their behalf, causing his Edict against them to be recalled, but likewise caus'd a solemn Day of Humiliation to be kept, and vast Sums of Money Collected throughout all England for their Relief, and fent it (or at least part of it) by Sir Samuel Moreland to them; which midenOliver be look'd upon abroad as the great Patron of the Reformed Religion. Upon the War made with Spain; Byathe attempt upon Hspaniola and Jamaica, before-mentioned, a Peace ensured with France; by which (among other Articles, the King and his Royal Brothers were excluded that Kingdom. After which, Rear-Admiral Stayner with a part of the English Fleet, set upon eight Spanish Ships within four Leagues of the Pay of Cadiz, the Admirals Ship, in which was General Don Marco del Porto with 600000 pieces o Eight, ran ashore in the Bay, the Vice-Admiral Command ed by Don Francisco de Esquevel, and having in her 1200000 pieces of Eight was taken, as was also another Ship Commanded by Don Rodiques Calderon; both the were fet on Fire, one by the Spaniards themselves, to prevene their being made Prisoners, and the other by accident Two other very rich Ships were taken and kept; and fever: of the Spanish Nobles being taken, were brought up to London; but Oliver being fatisfied with the Treature take in the Ships, dealt very Generoully with the Spanish Nobles, and after a small time of detaining them here, sent the home without Ransom. The next Year General Blan lying with some Ships near Cadiz, to watch for they Qq4 attended with very great Success; and kept his Army under him in so exact and strict a Discipline, that they seem'd rather a Body of well-govern'd Citizens, than an Army

turn of the Spanish Plate Fleet, had intelligence that they were put into the Bay of Santa-Cruz, and failing thither. he discern'd the Spanish Fleet, to the number of sixteen, bar ricado'd in the Bay; but this did not hinder Blake, but that the next Morning he failed into the Bay, and whilft some of his Ships pour'd their Broad-fides into the Ca. itles and Forts, he and Stayner fought the Spanish Fleet. and obtained an intire Victory; but perceiving he could not bring away the Spoil, set them all on Fire, but one that was Sunk. But that which is most wonderful in this Noble Action was, That the Wind which blew strong into the Bay, after the Fight was over veer'd fuddenly about to the West, and brought out all our Ships safe to Sea. This News was so grateful to Oliver, that he sent Blake's Jewel of 500! with Gratuities to the rest of the Officers. After this Grommel called another Parliament, which would fain have had him taken the Title of King upon him; but he deciming it, he was by the Parliament folemnly invefted in the Protectorial Dignity in Westminster-Hall. . But the Royalists yet gave him some farther Disturbance by their Endeavours to reflore the King; tho' they were unhappily betray'd, and feveral of them Executed, among whom were Sir Henry Slingsby, and Dr. Hewet, with feveral others of less Note. In pursuance of the Peace formerly concluded with France, the English and French Forces hid Siege to Dunkirk, which the Spaniards endeavouring to relieve, were totally routed, and Dunkirk foon after taken, and put into the possession of the English. And now on the fatal third of September, in the Year 1658. O. Goer Crommel Dyed, in the Sixty-third Year of his Age, and the Fifth of his Protector-thip; He was Born in Hun-Mag'on, and was the Son of a fecond Brother of Sir Oliver Commed, of Huntington-shire; his Mother was the Daughter of Sir Richard Stewart of the Isle of Ely; and his Wife was Elizabeth the Daughter of Sir James Bourchier: By whom he had liftie three Sons, of which one Died Young, and four Darghters. By his Reputation in Arms, he was Courted or Feared by most of the Princes of Em rope; he was a Man of fingular Courage and Resolution, of Soldiers: Swearing, Drunkenness, and Profaneness, the common Vices of other Camps, were not to be found in His defire of Glory excited him to make attempts in other Countries, by which a great Renown accrued to our Nation in all parts of the World. In thort, had he not been a Usurper, he might have been compard with the best of our Princes: But his Usurpation, and the indirect means he used to obtain his Power, spoil'd all his Good Qualities. After his Death, his Son Richard was Proclaimed Protector, but he enjoy'd his Power but a short time, the Army calling again the Rump Parliament, which flrait-way put an end to his Protector-ship; and now the Stone began to rowl, it stayed not there, for Sir George Poth having raised some Forces for the King in Cheshire, and being subdued by Lambert, Lambert turned the Rump out again, and let up a Committee of Safety in Order to the fetting up himself; to prevent which, General Monk in Scotland declares for the Rump, and comes with his Army into England to restore them; and having effected that, brought in again those Members that had been Secluded by the Army before the Tryal of the late King: Thele Members being restored, issued out Writs for the Calling of a New Parliament, to meet the 25th of April following, and so diffolved themselves. The King, who had Notice of all these Proceedings, with drew himself out of the Spanish Territories, and went to Breda, from whence (at the opening of the Parliament) he sent over a Declaration, promising Liberty of Conscience, Pardon to all Offenders, and Satisfaction to all Interests. Upon the reading whereof, the Parliament unanimously Voted, That a Message be sent to his Majesty, to thank him for his Gacious Dcclaration, and to desire him to return to his Kingdom;

attended

which he did upon the 29th of May following, being received with the Universal Joy and Acclamations of his People. Soon after which, several of those that had sate in the High Court of Justice for the Tryal of his Father. were themselves Tryed and Executed: Of which Number were Thomas Harrison, Hugh Peters, Daniel Axtell. John Cook, Thomas Scot, Gregory Clement, John Jones, John Carem, and Adrian Scroop, who Suffered, some at Charing-Cross, and some at Tyburn. The Bishops were also now restored to their Diocesses, and the Common-Prayer

Ordered again to be Read in Churches.

But now an over-cast of Sorrow happened; for the Virtuous Princess, Mary, Princess of Orange, coming over to fee her Brother now lettled in his Throne, fell Sick of the Small-Pox and Dyed. And in January after the King's Return, one Venner a Wine-Cooper, with divers other Desperate Persons, sell upon the City of London, being opposed, many on both sides were Slain, and the rest being taken or dispersed, Venner, with eleven more, were Tryed, Condemned, and Executed in divers places of the City. And on the 30th of January, the Carcasses of Cromwel, Bradshaw, and Ireton, were taken out of their Graves, conveyed to Tyburn, and Hanged up for feveral Hours, then their Bodies buried under the Gallows, and their Heads set on Westminster-Hall. And soon after the Duke of Gloucester, the King's youngest Brother, a Prince of great Hopes, and a firm Protestant, Dyed; and on the 234. of April 1661, being St. George's Day, the King was Crown ed at Westminster with much Solemnity and Splendor, having the Day before made a magnificent Cavalcade from the Tower of London to White-Hall. The Army hereupon was Disbanded, and the Parliament in Ireland Dissolved, every thing appearing in a tendency to a lasting Sertlement, by a good Understanding between Prince and People : For the Parliament that had been Affembled, being Dif folved, and another called, the Peers were restored to their Antient Priviledges, and the Militia declared to be Vested in the King as his right. The like was also declared by the Parliament of Scotland, who refigned the folemn League and Covenant, and passed an Act for the Attainder of the Marquels of Argyle, upon divers Crimes laid to his Charge, whereupon being brought to his Tryal and Condemned, that Kingdom. About this time a Convocation in England was affembled to adjust and fettle matters of Religion; and foon after the folemn League and Covenant, which the KING had taken in Scotland, was burnt by the common Hang-man he lost his Head, much Lamented by the greater part of

in London and West minster, and then all over the Nation; and a pretended Act for the Tryal of King Charles the first; used in the same manner in West minster-Hall.

The French and Spanish Ambassadors being at Court, upon Notice of the arrival of the Brob Ambassador, extraordinary from Sweeden with their Coaches went to receive him at his publick Entry on Tower-bill, and contending for precedency, a sharp Encounter happened; some were killed and divers Wounded; The Spaniard obtaining the better, by the help of some English, who for good Rewards (tho' the King expresly by his Proclamation forbid any of his Subjects to intermeddle) dreffed themselves in Spanish Habits; which Encounter, had not the King interceeded as Mediator, had at that time in all Likelihood created a War between the two Nations, as being highly Resented at either Court. James, Duke of Ormond, being made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and another Parliament called there, that long haraffed Kingdom, was brought to a good Settlement. And now a Match being Negotiated in the Court of Portugal between the King and Donna Catharina, Infanta of that Kingdom, her Dowry was settled, and in Lieu thereof, the English had Tangier, which became afterwards a great Charge to the Nation, without any Profit: So that the Earl of Peterborough having taken Possession of that place on the Continent of Africa for the King, the Lady came over Royally attended, and the King going to Portsmouth, was there Married to her with much Pomp by the Bishop of London; and afterwards came to White-Hall, and was Joyfully received.

Sir Henry Vane, and John Lambert being Tryed and found Guilty of Treason, for things done before the Refroration, being excepted out of the Act of Indemnity, the former was Beheaded, but the latter Reprieved, and kept in Prison till he Died: and Archibald Johnson, Lord Warrestone being taken beyond the Sea, and brought over, was Sentenced as a Traytor by the Parliament of Scotland, and Executed on a Gibbit at Edenborough 22 Foot high. A Conspiracy being timely Discovered in Ireland, divers were Imprisoned, and some Executed, which altogether dashed their further Intentions and kept the Kingdom in Quiet a considerable time. And, in the North of England, another much about the same time being discovered, one Gibbons, and Baker were Tryed, found Guilty, and Executed whereupon the rest Dispersed.

another much about the same time being discovered, one Gibbons, and Baker were Tryed, found Guilty, and Executed, whereupon the rest Dispersed. The Commons in Parliament having Voted the King a Supply of 2500000/, great Naval Preparations were made, which caused our Neighbours the Dutch to sear a Storm, and therefore they thought it convenient to provide for their Safety; and indeed, a Misunderstanding happening between both Nations, an Order of Council was made, giving Letters of Reprifal against them, and about 112 Sail were taken by our Frigats, Men of War, &c. most of them being adjudged Lawful Prizes; and hereupon the King fet out his Declaration, touching his Proceedings for Reparation from the Subjects of the States: Whilst these things were doing, a Butchman, under the Disguise of a Sweed, coming from Guinea, publickly reported De Ruyt. rer the Durch Commander, had Destroyed all the English in the Factories on that Coast, which for a time caused much Confernation among the Merchants trading thither, but it proving Falle, he was Sentenced and Whipt through London. However, the Parliament being Prorogued, War was Proclaimed on the 2d of March 1664, and a General Fast succeeded, for a Blesting on the King's Forces to be employed against them; and De Ruyter attempting with his Fleet to Plunder the English Plantation of Barbadoes in the West-Indies, was beaten off; but whilft many Encounters happened at Sea, a worse Calamity befell at Land; for by reason of the great Heat in the Spring, and but little cool breathing Winds to purge and purify the Air, about the beginning of May, 1665, a Plague began fearfully to Rage, so that in London that Year 97:06 Persons of alf Degrees dyed and of these were accounted 68506. of the Plague. However the War was carryed on with great Vigour, and on the 3 d of June, the Duke of York being Admiral of the English Navy, the two Fleets engaged, and after a long and obstinate Fight which continued many Hours, bloody and doubtful, the Dutch gave way, and such as got off stood to their own Coast: The English having taken, burnt, sunk, and shattered about thirty of their Ships, and slain and taken Prisoners about 8000; the not without Loss confiderable on our own parts which was chiefly occasioned by most of the great Ships crouding about the Admiral, to screen him from the Eury of the Enemy, and prevent his being laid on Board by Fireships: Those English of Note who lost their Lives in this Engagement were the Earls of Falmouth, Portland, Marlborough, and the Lord Muskery, Sir John Lawson dived of his Wounds foon after, and 2063 Dutch Prisoners were brought to Colchester, whereof 13 were Commanders. Hereupon a publick Thanksgiving was performed for this Victory: the King likewise Conferred the Honour of Knighthood on fuch Sea-Commanders as had eminently Signalized their Courage and Conduct in the Action.

The Plague still continuing to Rage, a Fast was Proclaimed solemnly to be held every first Wednesday in the Month, till it should cease; and First were continued in the Streets of London and Westminster for three Days and Nights, to purify the Air; whilst the King &c made his progress through the greater part of England, the two Houses of Parliament attending him at Christ-Church in Oxford; and upon his laying before them them the necessity of a supply to maintaine the charges of the War, the Commons Voted him 1250000l. And Michaelmas Term by Proclamation was Adjournd from Westminster to that City: But the Plague abating, the Parliament and Courts of Judicature, returned to Westminster, as did the King and Queen.

The French King envying the growing greatness of the English, more than any love he had for the Dutch [ as it afterward plainly appeared] Joyned with them and was foon answered in the same Language at the Instigation of others.

The Fleets being abroad, Prince Rupers, and the Duke of Albermarle, then Joynt-Admirals of the English, the latter with a Squadron of fifty Ships, the former being to the Westward with the rest, engaged 80 of the Dunch on the Coast of Flanders, and maintained the Fight two Days; when on the third, Prince Rupert coming in, the Fight continued very Bloody, till the Evening, with much Loss on both fides; and then the Dutch frood away to their own Coast. In this Fight the Royal Prince was ftranded on the Galloper, and burnt by the Dutch: Sir George Ascough, who Commanded her, being taken Prib ner and carryed into Holland. About fix or feven Weeks

Ships in the Fly, and the Town of Bandaris upon the Ifland of Scheling, and four French Men of War falling in with our Fleet, militaking it in Foggy-weather for the Dutch, one of them of 54 Guns was taken. On the Second of September, 1666, being Sunday, began the dreadful Fire of London, at one Faringdons, a Baker's

after, there happened another Sea-Fight, and the English

chased the Dutch to their own Coasts, and on the 7th of

August, Sir Robert Holms burnt divers Dutch Merchants

House in Pudding-Lane, the back-side of Fish streetbill: It continued Burning until Wednesday Night following, and that time destroyed the greatest part of the City. But the best Account of it being Engraven on the North-side of the Monument Erected in the perpetual Remembrance thereof, take as followeth; In the Year of Christ 1666, the second Day of September, Eastward from hence, at the Distance of Iwo hundred and two foot (the heighth of this Column) a terrible Fire broke out about Midnight; which driven on by a high Wind, not only waited the adjacent Parts, but also very remote Places, with incredible noise and fury. It confumed eighty nine Churches, the City-pilh Faction, in the Gates, Guildhall, many publick Structures, Hospitals, Schools, Libraries, a vast Number of stately Edifices, Thirteen thousand two hundred Dwelling-houses, four hundred Streets. Of the fix and twenty Wards it utterly deftroy'd fifteen, and left eight other shattered and half burnt. The Ruins of the City were four hundred thirty fix Acres, from the Tower by the Thames fide to the Temple-Church, and the North-East Gate along the City-Wall to Holbourn-Bridge. To the Estates and Fortunes of the Citizens it was merciles, but to their Lives very favourable, that it might in all things refemble the last Conflagration of the World. The Destruction was sudden, for in a small space of time the same City was fen most flourishing, and reduced to nothing. Three days after, when this fatal Fire had baffled all humane Counfels and Indeavours in the Opinion of all, it stopt as if were by a Command from Heaven, and was on every file extinguished. This Dreadful Fire was both begun and carried on by Papiffs, as appeared by Hubert's own Confession, who was Executed at Tyburn for the same; and also by several Depositions given in to the Parliament: Whereupon the following Inscription was Engraven round about the Pedestal of the Monument, viz.

This Pillar was fet up in perpetual Remembrance of the most dreadful Burning of this Protestant City, begun & carried on by the Treachery and Malice of the Po-

ber in the Year of our Lord, 1666, in Order to the carrying on their horrid Plot, for Extirpating the Protestant Religion, and Old English Liberty, and introducing Popery and Sla-

Which Inscription being Razed out in K. James's Reign, dred was Lt up again fince the late Revolution. And three Dutch Men of War near the Texel. A Rebellion breaking out in Scotland, Forces were fent thither, which put 1500 of the Rebels to Rout, and Tome of the Ring-Leaders being taken were Executed, which put an end to that Difturbance ; and an Act paffed for the Speedy Re-building the City of London. The Dutch at tempting Burnt-Island in Scotland were beaten off, but their whole Fleet coming to an Anchor in the Gun-fleet, and finding us altogether unprepared, several of their Fi gats entered Chatham, and the I hames River, and burn leveral Ships, tho' with the Lois of two of their own: But Sir John Harman with 16 Sail engaged 30 Fremi Men of War near Martinego, and burnt and Sunk oth greater part of them. Whereupon at a Treaty held a Breda, all fides grown weary of War, a Peace was Concluded with France, Denmark, and the States General which was Solemnly Proclaimed, and foon after with Spain And upon the Address of the Commons, the Laws were pa in Execution against Reculaires, and Assemblies of Noncon formists, with much Heats for a considerable time.

Squadron

And now large Supplies were Voted the King by the Parliament, and War declared against Denmark, and a hip of 52 Guns belonging to that Crown, taken on the Conf. of Scotland, whilst Capt. Robinson took and destroyed three Dutch Men of War near the Texcl.

In the beginning of 1668, Great Tumults happend in the Suburbs of London, by an Infurrection of Apprendices, and ill Persons joyning with them, so that much much was done under pretence of pulling down Barndy-Hofes, upon which eight were Condemned for High-Treason and four of them Executed. The Duke of Albertal dying, the King undertook the Charge of his Funeral which was very Magnificent, being Interred in Westmin which was very Magnificent, being Interred in Westmin of the Abbey. And the same Year Dyed Mary, the Que Moder of England, at Columbe in France; and in Dutche's of Orleance, the King's Sister, coming over to the him, after a short stay, she upon her Return dyed at a Class in creasce.

There being now Peace near Home, the King refolt to Chaffize the Algerines for their Intolency, and in C der to it sent Sir Thomas Allen with a strong Squadron of Men of War, who took and funk divers of their Ships, and compelled them to renew the Peace they had lately broken, and to deliver up a great Number of the English Captives. And much about the same time Goll. Blood. with other Accomplices Gagg'd the Keeper of the Jewel-House in the Tower, took away the Crown, and had carried it off, had not speedy pursuit been made; and being Imprisoned for this, whilft the People were expecting what Punishment would be inflicted on him for so unprefidented a Crime, the King freely pardoned him. And now Orders were given out, upon view, for the Repairing and better Fortifying all the Sea-ports; for the King very much refenting some new Affronts put upon him by the States-General of the United Netherlands, a second War began to Threaten; but Money being wanting, which is the main Engine and Sinews of War, the Exchequer was thut up, which caused a general Murmurring, and much Loss to many People. To palliate this, the King declared. That nothing could have moved him to it, but only the looking upon his Government under the Threatning of the States-General and other Neighbouring Princes, without his appearing in the same Posture; but seeing the Necessity was inevitable, It was needful that some extraordinary Course should be taken till Money could be otherways procured. After this, the King published a Declaration of Indulgence, to fuch as Diffented from the Established Religion. And now the War being fully resolved on, Sir Robert Holms, who was cruifing with five Frigats, about the Isle of Wight, fell in with the Dutch Smyrna-Fleet, and other Ships coming from the Streights under the Convoy of fix Men of War, between whom there happened a fmart Engagement, upon their refusing to strike and low-er their Flags, which continued till Night, and the next Morning renewed, and five rich Dutch Me hantmen were taken, and their Rear-Admiral (for want of more Assistance) sunk; and the rest got home. This first blow given, War was Declared, the French King joyning with us in it, being Obliged by the Treaty to fend a Squadron of his best Ships, which was Commanded by the Count d' Estrec, as were the English by the Duke of York; and standing over to the Coast of Holland, a fierce Engagement foon happened, with much Effusion of Blood on both fides; for either part being Emulous of Honour, fought with extraordinary Eagerness, till at last the Duch stood away to their own Coast, and the English after them as near as they could for the Shallows; but under the shelter of a Fogg they got into their Harbours. In this Fight the English lost the Noble Earl of Sandwich, and the Royal James; and long they had not lain on the Flemish Coast, but the Durch Recruited and came out again; but after two other Engagements, with much Loss on either fide, a Peace was concluded; and the King hereupon became Mediator for the like Accommodation between the Crowns of France and Spain, labouring by his Embalfadors, to compose the Differences between them, Commanding at the same time his Subjects not to enter into the Service of any Foreign Prince without his Leave,

The Parliament now fitting, gave the King 5849col. for the speedy Building thirty Ships of War; whereup on he resolved to enter into an Allyance with some Princes abroad, that they might be able to put a frop to the Torrent of the French King's Conquests in Flanders. And to render the Union stricter, he Married the Lady Mary, his Neice, and eldeft Daughter to his brother, to the Prince of Orange, and proceeded to raise Forces; so that in a short time he had a confiderable Army on Foot, and the Parliament promised, That if the King would enter into an actual War with the French King, they would stand by him with their Lives and Fortunes. So that finding. the French King still went on with his Conqueits, King Charles delayed not to fend feveral Regiments to the Aid of the Confederates in Flanders, and laid a Prohibition on Freich Goods. Hereat the French King being somewhat Martled, hoping to break the Measures of England, made Proposals of Peace to the Dutch; and they Understanding that the Parliament had taken up a Resolution to give no more Money till Satisfaction was first had, and their Fears and Jealousies removed; and not thinking for this Cause sit to rely on England, since the Misunderstandings rendred it no longer it self, did clap up a Peace in a very short time; and the rest of the Consederates sollowed their Example. However, before the Peace could be Ratissed, the French took several Towns, and at last Bessieged Mons, this made the King Command the Duke of Monmouth, and Earl of Osfory, to joyn the English Forces under their Command with the Prince of Orange, who so bravely Behaved themselves, that they forced the Duke of Luxemburg's Camp, and raised the Siege, with the Slaughter of some Thousands of French, and had done greater things if all Hostilities had not thereupon been stopped.

Things being thus fettled Abroad, greater Disturbances threatned at Home; for about this time a wicked defign was discovered to take away the King's Life, and involve the whole Nation in Blood and Ruin, which was carried on for a considerable time by the Papists. The first Discoverer was Titus Oats, but his Evidence was little Credited till fuch time as Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, who had taken Oats's Depositions, was found Murthered at Primrose-Hill with a Sword run through his Body, tho' by a visible Mark about his Neck, it appeared he had been Strangled: So that this giving a sufficient Ground of Belief, (Oats's Evidence being also further Corroborated, by Letters found in the Custody of Edw. Coleman, Secretary to the Duke of York) the Parliament proceeded strictly to Enquire into the matter; so that the Commons often fat from Morning till Night, to Consult how to Prevent the Danger, and make a thorow Discovery; and having Voted and entred into their Journal, That it was their Opinions, that there had been and was an Execrable and Helish Design carried on by the Papists, for Assailinating the King, Subverting of the Government, and Destroying the Protestant Religion. A Proclamation was flued out for Banishing Papists and reputed Papists ten Miles from the City of London and Westminster; and all Roman-Catholicks were turne tout of the Guards, and the Parliament Addressed the King, That the Duke of York might be remove Rr2 removed from his Presence, and Counsels. But the last was!

not Granted.

And now divers Persons being taken up and Imprisoned on the account of this Plot, one Staly a Goldsmith's Son in Convent-Garden, was first Executed for saying, He would kill the King; then Edw. Coleman, the Duke of Tork's Steretary; then Ireland, Pickering, Grove, Whitebrend, Fennick, Gaven, Langharn, and others, as Concerned in the Plot; and Green, Berry, and Hill being acenfed by Prance and Bedlow, for the Murther of Sir Edmundbiry Godfrey, were Tryed at the King's Bench-bar, Condemned and Executed. And then the Commons called the Lord Treasurer to an Account, who had been accufed by Mr. Mountague fometimes the King's Embaffador at the Frence Court, for holding a private Correspondence with France, but he relying on the King's Pardon, the Business inded in a long Imprisonment in the Tower, after much ftir had been made about it. And the King in Hopes the better to please the Commons, and satisfie the Nation in General, new modell'd his Council, making it to conflict of 30 Persons, Fifteen of them to be Certain, and the rest to be Elective at pleasure, ten out of the Nobility, and five Commoners, befores a Lord-Prefident, a Secretary of Scotland, and fuch of the Princes of the Blood Royal as should be at Court; with which the next Day he acquainted the Parliament; and of this Council the Earl of Shoftsbury was made Prefident.

But notwirk anding this Alteration in the Council, it had not the defired effect which the King intended; for the Parliament were fill folicitous in fearthing to the bottom of the Popish Plot and the more effectually to do it, voted, That the Duke of York's being a Papilt, and the hopes of his coming as such to the Crown, have given the greatert countenance and encouragement to the designs of the Papilles, &c. And therefore ordered a Bill of Exclusion of the Duke of York from the Succision of the Crown, to be brought in. But the King and the Dukes party were for offering Expedients for securing the Protestant Religion, the the Duke should come a Papith to the Crown. But this would not content the Commons. And there arifing fome heats between the Lords and Commons about the Bishops Voting in Capital Cases, the King thinking he could expect but little from them, Prorogued them to a more convenient season; but in a little time after disolved them, and called another, which he hoped to find more to his puapose. But during the interval of the Parliament, Sir George Wakeman was tryed for the Popith Plot, and acquitted, before the Lord Chief Justice Scrozes, whose carriage was fo different in this Tryal from what it had been in those before, that he was shrewdly suspected to have some very feeling Reasons for it: For after this Tryal, Scrogs was more violent against Oats and the Whigs, than he had been before against the Papists. And now there was fet on foot a new Popish Plot to sham the o'd one, and put a Plot upon the Presbyterians; which was called The Meal-Tub Plot; ( the Papers relating to it being found under Madam Celiers Meal-tub ) the delign whereof was, To leave Papers and Libels of dangerous things against the Government in the Houses of the most Eminent persons active in the Discovery of the Popish Plot, by them called Presbyterians, and then to inform the Government that such persons where these papers were lest, were dangerous persons to the King and Government; upon which their Houses being search'd, and these papers found there, it should have been sufficient evidence to condemn them. The Tryal how this would do, was first made upon Colonel Mansfel, a worthy Gentelman, who was Profecuted for it, but the examination of it being left to Sir William Jones the Attorney-General, his Report was, That Mansfei was innocent, and Dangerfield (at that time the Papilts Tool, and who had left the Papers in Mansfels Lodgings) was guilty: Upon which Dangerfield was committed to Priion, where he mad ae thorow discovery of this cursed intreague; and Sir Wil. Jones was turn'd out of his place, for his honest that now the whole Defign of the Government feem'd to be to tham the Populh-Plot, and fet up another in it's room,

Report. And indeed from this time forwar, the Duke of Took and his Creatures ruled all things under the King, fo

Rr3

aguait

against all the honest Gentlemen in the Nation. For the Parliament having oppos'd the Duke's Succession, his Defign was to destroy all those Gentlemen that were active against Popery, and to bring Popery in, Perfas & ne fas. And this appear'd plainly, not only in Scotland, where the Duke reign'd as High-Commissioner, and by whose Means the Earl of Argyle was Try'd, Condemn'd and delign'd to be Executed, had he not Providentially made his E. scape, but in England also; as appear'd by Dangerfield's Evidence first, and afterwards by Fitz-Harris his Plot: For after several Prorogations of the Parliament before they sat, viz. from the 17th of October 1679. to the 21th of Ollober, 1680, they then fat; but found things had been carried on fo high against the Interest of the Nation, by a fort of Men that were called Tories, and that joyn'd with the Popish Party to stiffe the Popish-Plot, and in advancing Arbitrary Power, declaring their Abhorrence of Petitioning the King for the litting of the Parliament, that they resolved to make Examples of some of them, Voting against Sir George Jefferies, Sir Francis Withens, and some others; who were preferr'd by the Court, for being against the Interest of the People: In this Parliament, after a full Hearing by the House of Lords, the Lord Stafford, one of the Popilh Lords in the Tower, was found Guilty of High-Treason, Condemn'd and Executed. But the Parliament being high for the Bill of Exclufirst, it having Paffed the House of Commons, the King first Prorogued, and foon after Dissolved them. But presently illues out Writs for calling another at Oxford the 21th of Murch following, which was 1681. In the mean time? one Fitz-Harris an Irishman, speaks to Everard his Countrey-man, and one of the Discoverers of the Popish-plot, to write him a villanous Libel against the King and the Duke; this Libel was to be Printed, and put into the Pockets of the most Active Men in the Kingdom against Popery, both Lords and Commons; who were thereupon to be taken up, and Try'd for High-Treason; Everard writes this Libel, and brings Fitz-Harris to his Chamber to hear it Read; but first Discovers the matter to Sir William Waller, and plants him in his Closer, where he might hear the Libel Read, unknown to Fitz-Harris; after having heard the Libel, Everard asks Fitz-Harris how he lik'd it, who told him very well. Upon this, Sir William Walter goes to the King, and discovers the whole matter to him; the King feem'd to be very well pleas'd, and orders Fitz-Harris to be taken up and Committed to Prison, which was accordingly done: Tho' Sir William was afterwards told, when he went from the King, that the King was highly displeas'd with him for this piece of Service, and said he had broke all his Measures. Fitz-Harris being taken and Committed Prisoner to Newgate ; he was Examined by Sir Robert Clayton, and Sheriff Cornilb, and feem'd willing to discover the whole Design the next Day. But the next Day he was remov'd to the Tower, and there kept a Close Prisoner. And now the Parliament met at Oxford, where one of the first things they Debated was the Business of Fitz-Harris, who was Impeached by the Commons; but the Lords refused to join in the Impeachment; which the Commons look'd upon as a Denyal of Justice; and finding the Delign was to stille Fitz-Harris's Evidence, in whole Plot some Persons of the highest Rank were Concern'd, they Voted against the Tryal of Fitz-Harris by any inferiour Court whatfoever. This being the Posture of Affairs, the King on the 28th of March Dissolves the Parliament, and immediately took Coach and went to Windfor, leaving both Houses in Amaze, and the City of Oxford in great Confusion, as was the whole Nation This Dissolution foon after upon the News of it. was follow'd by a Declaration, as his Father had done before him. This being done, the Bufiness was to bring in a new Plot to destroy the Protestants, but Fitz-Harris must first be taken out of the way, being Try'd before Pemberton ( who was made Lord Chief Justice, as was supposed for that Purpose) and soon after Executed at Tyburn, with Oliver Plunker, the Titular Primate of Armagh, for the Popish-Plot.

About this time the City of London having chosen Rr4

of their Sheriffs, Men of Integrity, to wit, Henry Cornish, and Slingsby Bethel, Esquires, which was a means of having Good and Upright Juries, the Enemies of the Government could not fo well carry on their Defigns, which made them uncasie, and resolve to have better for their purpose next Year; but were therein again Disappointed, for the Citizens chose Thomas Pilkington, and Samuel Shute Esquires, two very honest Gentlemen; and this was the Reason that when they design'd to introduce their Protestant Plot by the Tryal of Stephen Colledge, ( a Joyner by Trade, but an active Man in the Discovery of the Popissi-plot, and therefore most commonly known by Name of the Protestant Joyner) they were disappointed by the Grand-Jury's bringing in the Bill against him Ignoramus, it being only fworn to by some Witnesses of the Popish Plot in Ireland, who being Discountenanced were reduc'd to extream Poverty, and now were by the Tories hir'd to Swear for Bread. But the Popish Faction, resolv'd to go on with their Show; and therefore Colledge was Committed Prisoner to the Tower, and soon after a Bill preser"d against him at Oxford, where they had a Jury to their Mind, who found it Billa vera, whereupon he was had down to Oxford, and Tryed for a Defign to Seiz the King there at the fitting of the Parliament; and tho' he made an excellent Defence; notwithstanding all the Foul play that was offered him, yet he was brought in Guilty, and foon after Executed, declaring his Innocency, and that he was the first but should not be the last, that suffer'd for his Zeal against Popery, in which he was a true Prophet. The Earl of Shaftsbury was next Indicted of High-Treason, but the Evidence against him being only some of those Baffled Witnesses, and other Profligate Persons, whom the Grand-Jury could not believe, and therefore brought in the Bill Ignorance. This was a great Mortification to the Popish Party, who defir'd nothing more than to take off this Noble Lord; and therefore finding the great Obstacle to their Deligns were Juries, it was resolved by the Faction to take away the City Charter, and thereby their Power of chuling Sheriffs: And accordingly a Quo Warrantowas brought against the Charter of London, which was Profecuted with that Earnestness, that notwithstanding the Learned Pleading of the City Council in the behalf of the Charter, Judgment was given against it; and their Liberties and Franchifes feized into the King's Hand. And the Mayor and Sheriffs were appointed by the King, and acted by Commission from him, during his Pleasure. About this time the Duke of York going by Sea (into Scotland, to fetch back his Dutchess whom he had left there ) in the Gloucester Frigat, she was unhapping cast away upon the Lemon-Sands, and many Worthy Gentlemen were Lost in her; but the Duke, by the affiftance of a Yacht come to help them, got off just as the Ship was finking, being, reserv'd by Divine Providence as a further Scourge to these Nations. About this time also two Famous Embasfadors came into England from Princes never known to have fent Embassadors here before, the one from the Emperor of Fez, and Morocco, whose Business was to establish a Peace in relation to Tangier, and the other was from the King of Bantam in the East-Indies, who presented the King with several Diamonds, and other things of great Value.

The HISTORY

And now the World began to see the Cause of the City Charter's being taken away; for the Duke of York and his Party, that now ruled all things at their own Pleasure, were resolved to take off all those Gentlemen that were most Zealous for the Protestant Religion, and that in Parliament had been most forward for the Bill of Exclusion. And this was to be done by Pretence of a Plot to take away the Life of the King and the Duke, and alter the Government; and this was pretended to be executed at the Rye-House in Hartfor-shire, as the King should come back from New-market, and was faid to be prevented by a Fire happening at New-Market, which caused the King to come away fooner than he intended, and fo before the Conspirators were ready. This Plot was Sworn by one Keeling, who had been conversant among the Diffenters. For this pretended Plot the Earl of Effex, the Lord Ruffel, Lord Howard of Escrick, Collonel Sidney, and Mr. Hambaen of Buckingham-shire, were taken up; and several others of less Note, among whom were Walcot, Rouse, and Hone; which were first Tryed and found Guilty; and foon after Executed at Tyburn; Walcot declared himself Invocent of any design against the King, or his knowledge of any Plot; some Words he Confessed had been spoken in his Company by those that were Witnef fes against him, and which he did not discover; Praying God to forgive those who had Causleshy brought him to that undeferved Death. Rouse spake much to the same Purpose, that he had heard Words about the Feasibleness of feizing the Tower, but knew of no fuch Delign: But these were but Prologues to the more fatal Tragedies that were after to be afted. For the Lord Ruffel was next brought to his Tryal; where the Lord Howard of Eforth and Coll. Rumfey were the principal Witnesses gaint him, the Lord Howard told a story of a Counsel of Six for carrying on the Delign, confifting of himself, Coll. Sinney, Mr. Hambden, the Lord Ruffel, the Earl of Effex, and the Duke of Monmouth; and Rumfey gave air Account of a Declaration taken out of Ferguson's Bofom, and read at Shepheards: The Lord Ruffel answerd every Particular, and declared his own Incocency; but while he was at his Tryal, there was News brought that the Earl of Effex in the Tower, struck with the Horrour of a Guilty Conscience, had cut his own Throat; and this was improved by the King's Counsel as an Argument of the Lord Ruffel's Guilt, (as it is believed the Plot had been laid before-hand) and accordingly the Jury brought him in Cuilty; and he was therenpon Condemned, and foon after Beheaded in Lincolns-Inn-Fields; whose excellent Speech and Behaviour at his Death, declaring his Innocency to the very last, made very few of the Numerous Spectators, (unless it were those of the Duke of York's raction) go away with dry Eyes. This Noble Lord was the eldest furviving Son of William Earl of Bedford; and was a Person of great Honour and Integrity, and Zeal for the Protestant Religion; which (what ever was pretended) was his true Crime, he being the Person that carried up the Bill of Exclusion to the House of Lords; and faying in the Honfe of Commons, when Popery began to be Rampant, If I carrie Live a Protestant, I am resolv'd to Dye one. The Proceedings against him appeard so Unjust, and his Impocency so clear, that the Parliament fince this last Revolution took off the Attainder against him; and his present Majesty has, since his coming in, Created his Noble Father Duke of Bedford, as some Compensation for the loss of so Incompensable a Son, as the very Words of the Patent has it. Having told you how the News of the Earl of Islex's having cut his Throat in the Tower, it will be convenient to give some Brief Account of it. That Noble Lord was taken out of his own House at Caisho-Berry near Watford, and Committed to the Tower upon this Plot, where he fent for his own Servants to attend him, and his own Cook to dress his Meat (being Jealous perhaps of Sir Tho. Overburies Fate) and also sent for his own Wine for his Drinking; and hearing that the Lord Ruffel was to be Try'd that Day, order'd one of his Servants to go and take Notes of the Lord Ruffel's Tryal, and bring to him; but so it was, that that Morning that the Lord Ruffel was Tryed, the King and the Duke went to the Tower, where they had not been for several Years before; whilst they were there, the Duke was for some time absent from the King; and soon after he was come to the King again, there was News brought to his Majefly whilst he was in the Tower with his Brother, that the Earl of Effect had cut his own Throat; The King was extreamly Surprized at the News, and immediately gave Order to the Lord Allington the Constable of the Tower, that his Lodgings should be shut up, and no one suffered to go in, till the Coroners Inquest had sate up. on the Body: But notwithstanding this Order of the King's by the Direction of Some Body else, the Body was stript and wash'd, and so was the Room also, before the Coroners Inquest came, and his Cloathes taken away, which when the Coroners Inquest defir'd might be brought brought to them that they might fee them, were told. They were to fit upon the Body, and not upon the Cloaths, and so were deny'd the fight of them. And when they were about adjourning till the next Day before they gave in their Verdict, they were told, they must give it in presently, and not stir till they had done it, because the King flay'd for it: And fo they were hurried into a Verdict of the Earl's being Felo-de-se: And when from some Information of a Rasor thrown out of the Window of the Earl's Closer, and some other Concurrent Circumstances, one Mr. Lawrence Braddon went about to Discover that the Earl was Murder'd, and did not Kill himself, he was prosecuted for it with the greatest Violence imaginable, as if the Discovery of the Earl's Murther, had been the Arraignment of the Government: After this the Honourable Algernoon Sidney was also Try'd as one of the Council of Six, and for Writing and Publishing a Libel, (tho'it was only found in Writing in his own Closet) and not proved to be his own Writing neither, but by the Similitude of Hands; which Writing (had it been prov'd his) was only an Answer to Sir Robert Filmer's Treatise of Absolute Monarchy, (which had been the Delign not only of this, but of the two preceding Reigns) yet this Evidence (such as it was) was lufficient with such Juries as then were pack'd for their Purpose, to find the Collonel Guilty, notwithstanding the Learned Defence he made for himself: So that he was Condemned and Beheaded, dying with a Greatness of Mind worthy of himself. The Duke of Monmouth, (who was also one of the Lord Howard's Council of Six) had for some time absconded, but now upon his Submission to his Father and his Unkle, was admitted to Court; but being urg'd to make a fuller Discovery and Confession of the Plot, which he affirm'd he knew nothing of, he fell again into his Unkle's Displeasure, and consequently into his Father's, and so was Banished from the Royal Presence. Several others who were faid to be concerned in this Plot, fled beyond Seas, and were Out-lawed for not appearing here in Court; among whom was one Holloway

a Bristol-Merchant, who was taken at Nevis in the West-Indies, and brought over hither: He was wrought upon by some of the Duke's Creatures to make a Confession, and he should have his Pardon; and when he had! own'd enough to Hang himself, he was offered the Benefit of a Tryal, which he refused, and flung himself upon the King's Mercy, and so was Executed. And not long after Sir Thomas Armstrong, Master of Horse to the Duke of Monmouth, (who upon the Proclamation put out for apprehending him) had fled into Holland, was taken out of Leyden by Surprize, and brought to London, and Committed to Newgate, and it being Termtime, was soon after carried to Westminster; where that infamous Wretch, Sir George Jefferies, being at that time Lord Chief Justice, order'd him to be Executed the Friday following, he being already Out-lawed. But Sir Thomas boldly Demanded the benefit of the Law. which was on his fide, for by a Statute of the 6th of Edw. 6. it was Enacted, That if any Person Out-law'd for Treason being beyond the Sea, shall within one Year after such Out-lawry render himself to the chief Justice of England, he should Reverse his Out-lawry and take a Tryal: which Sir Thomas then desir'd, it being his Case. But the Cheif Justice over-rul'd it, and would not admit of his Plea, nor let him have Counfel to Argue it: But gave a Rule of Court for his Execution the Friday following; the Impudent Chief Justice charging Richardfon in a Jeering manner, to see that Sir Thomas had the full benefit of the Law then: And accordingly he wasdrawn up on a Sledge to Tyburn, and there Executed, Denying his Knowledge of any Plot whatfoever against the King. But Sir Thomas's Death was Voted Murther by the Parliament since this happy Revolution. The pretence of this Plot gave them a specious Ground to Persecute the Dissenters, the Goals throughout England, being at this time filled with them, and Multitudes Cited to, and Excommunicated by the Spiritual Courts, for Nonconformity; Executing upon them all the Vengeance that was possible: Some being punish'd as Rioters; some for Treasonable Words, and some upon Actions

Actions of Scandalum Magnatum, and Fined Exorbi. tantly, beyond all Law or Reason; of which last Sir Thomas Pilkington and Dr. Oats, were Severe instances, each being Fined 100000l. to the Duke.

But a little before this time, the Vertuous Lady Anne, youngest Daughter to the Duke, was Married to Prince George, the King of Denmark's Brother; the Match being generally liked by the People, he being a Protestant Prince. And the Hamborough Company, in Gratitude for Favours receiv'd from the King in Relation to their Charter, erected his Statue of grey Marble, in the midst of the Royal-Exchange, in the Habit of a Roman Casar.

This was the State of the Nation, when upon Monday the fecond of February, 1684, the King was taken with an Apoplectick Fit, which if it carried him not out of the World then, 'tis certain it did the Friday following; Dying in the 54th Year of his Age, having Reigned 36 Years, and some few Days.

He was a Prince that very much indulg'd himself in taking his Pleasure; and was very unlike his Father in this, That he was a great Lover of Women, and kept variety of them, as the Dutchess of Cleaveland, Nell Grynn, and the Dutchess of Portsmouth; the last of which was made use of by his Brother, to make the King do whatever he had a mind to have done; for so much was the King taken with her French Charms, that he could deny her nothing: And therefore advancing of Favourites, was done by her Mediation; and even Parliaments themselves Prorogu'd or Dissolv'd, if she had a Mind to have it fo: He was not a Prince Bloody or Cruel in his own Nature; yet by the Ascendant his Brother had over him, many worthy Persons lost their Lives in his Reign. He was a Prince of very good Natural Parts, had they not been Vitiated by giving himself up so much to the satisfaction of his Lusts. His making War with the Dutch, and joyning with France against them, weaken'd the Protestant Interest, and has made the French so Formidable to Europe. And having carry'd on his Brother's Designs in Masquerade, as long as he thought Conveni-of ENGLAND. ent, he dyed of a sudden; but whether Naturally, or by some Foul Play, I will not determine, tho' the latter was much Suspected. However, the Nation had a real Kindness for him, and the News of his Death fill'd all Eyes with Tears, and all Hearts with Sadness, (except those of the Papists, and some Tories that were worse than they) But this proceeded chiefly from the Fears and difinal Apprehensions the People had of the ensuing Reign.

In the Eleventh Year of this Kings Reign, a Prodigious Whale came up to Greenwich, and run it felf on shore there, foon after which Oliver Cromvel ( then Protector ) died.

In his 17th Year 3 Blazing Stars appeared, of different shapes and colours, which were look'd on to be the Denun-tiators of ensuing Judgements.

In his 18th Year, was a great Plague in London, of which died far more than ever did in any. Flague before, and in the next Year the greatest part of the City of London was Confumed by Fire. In the 33d Year of his Reign, on the 18th of May, 1680, a great storm of Hail fell in London and the parts adjacent, the Hail-stones being of an extraordinary biguess, some of them nine inches about, and generally as big as Pullets Eggs, with the figures of Stars, and other curious works upon them, being also very hard: Several Rooks in the Temple-garden being kill'd by them; and many Sky-lights in London broken to pieces by their violent failing upon them. Soon after which a Prodigious Flazing-Star appeared in the West for several Weeks together.

In the 37th Year of his Reign there was a great Frost, that continued from the beginning of December to the end of February; in which time the Thames was frozen so hard, that Booths were erected upon the Ice; and all forts of Commodities fold in them, infomuch that it was called Blanket-Fair: Alfo a Bull was baited upon the Ice; and Coaches ply'd from the Temple stairs to Westminster in Hillary Term.

The

The Reign of King JAMES the Second.

ING Charles the Second being Dead, on the same day in the afternoon, being February the 6th. 168. his Brother James Duke of York was Proclaimed King. And upon his coming to the Council, He declared, that fince it had pleased God to place him in that station, to succed so good a King, as well as so kind a Brother, he thought it fit to declare his Endeavours to follow his Brothers Example, more especially in that of his great Clemency and Tenderness to his People; and make it his Endavour to preserve the God vernment both in Church and State, as it is by Law Established: And then comends the Church of England's Principles and Members; telling them, He knows likewise that the Laws of England are sufficient to make the King as Great a Monarch as he can wish: And therefore as he will never depart from the just Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown, so he will never invade any Mans Property.

This Speech of the Kings to his Council, was forthwith Printed and Published, and received everywhere with great Applause; many hoping their fears were greater than there was occasion for. But how he kept to this Declariation, ( which had he done, he might have been happy ) the sequel of his Reign will shew.

There was now no longer Occasion for the King to been to him. Diffemble what he was; and therefore what his Brother King Charles had acted in Masquerade, King James re 100000l. for Scandalum Magnatum against the Duke of folved to do bare-fac'd; and accordingly the next Sunday Tork, and to be kepta close Prisoner till the Fine was paid; after his accession to the Crown, he went publickly to which mighty Scandal was, for saying, The Duke was Mass; (which Convinced those, that before would not reconciled to the Church of Rome: Which now the King believe him to be a Papilt) and I have heard it Reported, acknowledged. But this must not serve Oats's turn; a Fine That the Duke of Norfolk carrying the Sword before him, and Imprisonment was no sufficient Compensation for the refign'd it at the Door; upon which the King told him Lives of the Popish Martyrs that suffered in his Brother's His Father would have gone further with him: To which Reign; and therefore the King having him now within the Duke smartly Reply'd But your Majesties Father is Clutches, an Indictment for Perjury is preferr'd against would not have gone so far: And so went to the Protestant Chappel. In a few days after, the King Published a Paper of his Brother's dying a Roman-Catholick, and of his Receiving the extream Unction and other Ceremonies of the Roman Church, before his Death, atteste! by one Huddleston a Popish Priest: And also a Paper taken out of King Charles his Strong-Rox, shevving that hovvever he appear'd otherwise outwardly, yet in his heart he was a Sincere true Roman-Catholick. The Cuftoms and Excise dying with King Charles, being granted only for his Life, the King puts out a Proclamation commanding the paying of them till they should be granted by Parliament. Which was his first Specimen how well he intended to preserve Mens Properties, when his very first Publick Act of Government, vvas a Notorious violation both of Mens Properties, and of the Lavvs of the Kingdom. Soon after this, his Brother (King Charles the Second) vvas Buried, but with so little Pomp and Solemnity becoming the Majesty of a King, that he was as it were thrown into his Grave in the dead time of the Night, accompanied by fevv Persons; as if his Corps had been in . danger of being Arrested for Debt : He was interred indeed in Henry the 7th's Chappel, but without any Stone to cover him: So that never any King that died possess of a Throne, was so meanly Buried. Yet was it well enough for King Charles, whose latter part of his Reign was as Dark as his Burial was Obscure. But this notes the Gratitude of the King to so kind a Brother as he had always

A little before King Charles died, Dr. Oats was fined

Outs; and the Perjury assign'd is Double; first, That Ireland (one of the Executed Jesuits) was not in London from the third of August, 1678, till the 14th of Sept. next following; whereas Oats at the faid Ireland's Tryal, Swore, That he was at a Confult about killing the King in the middle of Angust. Secondly, That Oats was at St. Omers all April and May, 1678: Whereas at the Tryal of Harcourt and White-bread, &c. he Swore they were at a Consult the 24th of April, concerning killing the King, and establishing the Popish Religion. Ireland at his Tryal, which was in 1678, urged the first Point, and Harcourt, & Whitebread, & c.at their Tryals in 1679, pleaded the focond; but Oats prov'd both so incontestably at their feveral Tryals, that it was both to the Satisfaction of Judge and Jury, and of the whole Nation. But now the Case was alter'd, the Design was to invalidate the Feeigh Plot, and to punish Oats for justifying it. And they were pretty fure to carry it, having fuch a Jury as would befure to find him Guilty upon any Evidence, and against the most Substantial Evidence to the contrary; that Mirror of Injustice, Jefferies being Judge. The Witnesses against him were the St. Omer's Youths, now better instructed than they were before, who all remembred their Lesson to a T. and swore Oats was at St. Omer's all April and May; and the Popill Stafford-shire Witnesses (at that Tryal counted as good Witnesses as any in the World ) Swore Ireland was in Stafford-shire, of thereabouts, in August and September. As to this last, I find a Passa e in Cook's Detection of the four last Reigns, that justifies Oats's Evidence beyond all Peradventure, which I will here Infert, and leave to Posterity to judge of: It is briefly this;

One Mr Benjamin Hinton, a Goldsmith in Loxbard fereet, was Ireland's Cashier; and Mr. Hinton going out of Town at that time in August 1678, met Ireland ne or about Barnet, coming for London, where Ireland will him be had extraordinary Occasions for Money, and ang'd Frieton to go back with him, but Hinton told him his Alma could do Ireland's Business as well as he, and 641 his occasions would not permit him to go back. I asked Mr. Hinton of the Truth of this, to which he would not give me any Answer; but be this true or false, it's entred into Hinton's Book of Accompts, Paid to Mr. Ireland's own Hands; whereas the other Entries are, Paid by his Order. And 'rie faid Mr. Hinton's Man would Depose he Paid these Moneys to Ireland himself. Mr. Hinton afterwards failing, a Commission of Bankrupt was Sued against him, and his Book of Accompts was delivered, and kept at the Widow Vernon's Coffee-house in St. 1845tholomew's-Lane, on the Back-side of the Royal-Exchange, where any one may see the Truth of this Entry. I am affored Mr Hinton was in Court at Oats's Tryal, to have testified this, but was terrified from it, for fear of being Undone.

But how true soever Oats's Testimony was he was found guilty of Perjury, upon both Points, before Jefferies his Colleagues, and had Sentence to be Whipt from Aldgate to Newgate on the Wednesday, and on the Friday from Nergate to Tyburn, which was fo feverely Executed, that he received at his two Whippings 13000 Stripes; besides which he was to stand in the Pillory sive times in the Year, and to be a Prisoner during Life. And foon after Mr. Dangerfield was Sentenc'd to undergo the like Punishment; (which yet had a more Fatal Issue) for discovering the Meal-Tub-Plot, of which I have spoken in King Charles his Reign. For Dangerfield returning back from his last Whipping, was run into the Eye by one Francis, which touching his Brain, he dy'd of the Wound in a few Hours: For which Francis was afterwards Hang'd.

Soon after the King's coming to the Crown, care was taken to provide a Parliament fit for the King's purpole (to which way had been made the latter end of his Brother's Reign, by Quo Warranto's against Corporations, and by the surrender of Charters) and they met the latter end of May: Where the King made the same Speech to them for Substance, which he did at first to his Privy Council; adding, That he expected they should settle his

The HISTORY

Revenue during his Life, which he must not suffer to be Precarious. And the Parliament answer'd his Ends, fettling the Excise and Customs upon him during his Life, (which indeed he took before, without their giving him ) and gave him other Moneys beside.

During the fitting of the Parliament, on the 11th of fune, the Duke of Monmouth arrived at Lime, in Dor-fet shire, with three Ships, whereof one was a Man of War of 32 Guns, and about 80 Men; and having Landed and taken possession of the Town without any Opposition, he Published a Declaration, wherein he Declared he came over to restore the Kingdom to it's Antient Rights and Priviledges, which were all invaded by the Duke of York, and his Adherents, the Instruments of his Tyranny, charging him with the Murder of the Earl of Effex, and of the late King, Ge. And inviting the Nobility, Gentry, and Commons, to come in to him, and to affirt him for the recovery of their lost Liberties, and bringing the Duke of York to speedy Justice. Tho at the Duke's Landing his Complement wanted of an Hundred, yet upon Notice of his being Landed, he quickly encreased, so that in a few Days lie was several I houfands strong; fo that leaving Lime he went to Taunton, encreasing still as he went. King James in the mean time having his Parliament by him, first puts out a Proclamation for apprehending of Monmouth, and offers 5000! as a Reward for any that should take him; and the Parliament to thew their Loyalty made an Act at tainting him of High-Treason: And besides this, the King feet feveral of his Forces down against him, under the Command of the Lord Feversham. The Duke of A bermarle in Devonshire had rais'd the Militia of the County for the King, and brought his Forces within a quarter of a Mile of the Duke, who prepar'd to Fight him: But the Duke of Albermarle perceiving that his Force were inclin'd rather to Fight for Monmouth than against him; with I we With f me Precipitation, without doing any thing, being fearful of being puriod by Monmouth, Which if Monmonth had done, he had certainly put him to the Rout, and taken all his Arms, which was the only thing that Monmouth wanted. The King's Forces were now come into the West, and at Phillip's-Norton met with the Duke of Monmouth, between whom and the King's Forces there was a brisk Rencounter; wherein the King's Forces retreated with Loss, Monmouth's Men firing fiercely upon them. Soon after the Dake marched to Cansham-bridge, intending to go for Bristel, but hearing the Duke of Beaufort was with a Eody of Men to oppose him in his way, he turn'd about and went to Bridge-water, whither the King's Forces followed him; and lay at a place called Sedge-moor; there in the dead time of the Night, on Sunday the 5th of July, the Duke with a Guide Marches against the King's Forces, with 3000 Foot and 1000 Horse; and falling upon them, a very fierce Fight enfued, the Duke's Foot fighting incomparable well, but his Horse hardly ever came up; and his Foot having spent all their Ammunition, and being put in Diforder by the King's Horse, in the end were put to the Rout; the Duke of Monmouth himself, with the Lord Gray, and some others, making their Escape, and riding towards the Borders of Hampshire, where on the 8th of July the Duke was taken, as also the Lord Gray, and a Noble Brandenburger that came over with him. They were all brought to London with a itrongGuard, on the 13th, and the D. after having been Examined at Whitehall was Committed to the Tower, and being already attainted by Parliament, a Warrant was figned by the King for his Execution, and on the 15th of July he was Beheaded on Tower-hill, many pittying of him, but none being able to help him. But this was one Specimen more of K. James's Love to fo good and kind a Brother as K. Charlesthe Il had been to him, cutting off the Head of his beloved Son. After the Duke's Defeat at Sedgmoor, many of his Followers were taken and put in Prison; and then the Chief Justice Jefferies was fent down to keep the Assizes there, where he acted to many barbarous things, that 'tis a shaine to Name them, and Posterity will scarce believe them: For in the Counties of Dorset and Sommerset,

S I 3above above three Hundred Persons were Executed, and their Heads and Quarters were fet upon Poles, and placed both in all the chief Towns, and in the Roads and Highways for many Miles together, both to the Terror and Annoyance of Travellers as they past along. And thus it is that King James performs his Word to his Privy-Council, at his first coming to the Crown, of his endeavouring to follow the Example of his dear Brother in all things. especially in that of his great Tenderness and Clemency to his People. But it is not all the Blood shed in the West that will Suffice; there are still other Victims to be offer'd up; for upon Tuesday the 13th of October, 1685. Alderman Cornish was taken off of the Exchange, ( where he was following his Business without any apprehension of Danger towards him, thinking his own Innocency a sufficient Defence) and committed close Prisoner to Newgate; and on the Saturday night following had Notice to prepare for his Tryal on Monday, at which time he was Tryed for High-Treason, in promising to affish the Duke of Monmonth, the Lord Ruffel, Sir Thomas Armstrong, &c. against King Charles the Second, in the Year 1682. The chief Witness against him was Rumsey, who Swore, That the Declaration for a Rifing being read, Alderman Cormilb being prefent, and being ask'd how he lik'd it, he answer'd, Very well; and what poor Interest he had; he would join in it. And yet this Fellow at the Lord Ruffel's Tryal, Swore Cornill was not there when the Declaration was read, nor knew nothing of it. However, the Aiderman's Death was refolved on, and both Judge and Jury being agreed, he was found Guilty, Condemn'd, and on the 23th of the same Month executed in Cheapfile, over against the Guild-Hall of the City, Declaring his Innocency as to what he was Condemn'd for, to the very last: And indeed Heaven it self attested it for him, for his Execution was follow'd with fuch a dreadful Storm of Wind, attended with I hunder, Lightning, and Rain, as the like has caree happened at that time of the Year, in the Memory of Man. His true Crime was, That he was a Zealous Protellant, Protestant, that had serv'd the City Faithfully in his Shrievalty, and had Examined Fitz-Harris in Nowgate, and had like to have discovered the Depth of that cursed Design against the Protestants. The same Day also one Mrs. Gaunt, a Woman of great Goodness and Charity, was burn'd at Tyburn, for relieving a Lieutenaut under Monmouth in the West, himself being the Witness against her, for which he had his Pardon. And now the Parliament met again, and the King tells them how he had Defeated Monmouth, and that leveral Popish Officers had been very useful to him therein; that he could not be without their Service; and that the Militia was not sufficient, without keeping up a standing Army; and hopes they will help him to Defray the Charge; but the Parliament address to him to Disband his Popish Officers, and offers to pass an Act to Indempnify them from the Penalties they had already incurr'd inferving without having taken the Test appointed by Law: This Address of the Commons was very surprising to the King, who expected from them absolute Obedience without Referve: But the King was much more Surpriz'd when he understood that the Bishop of London had made a motion in the House of Lords to take the King's Speech into Confideration, as fearing the Lords would concur with the Commons in their Address. But the King was refolved to prevent it, and therefore first Prorogued, and soon after Diffolved the Parliament; who had been so large in their Supplies the first Session, that now (too late ) they faw he was able to live without them.

The Parliament's questioning of the Popish Officers, had put them all into a Fright, but the Parliament being Diffolved, they were all at ease again, and nothing but Popish Officers, and Priests and Jesuites are seen about the Court; who were grown to an unparallell'd degree of Impudence. And yet to find Fault with them, was a Crime next to High-Treason.

But the King finding the Penal Laws and Tefts stand as a mighty Obstacle in his way, was resolv'd to remove them: In order to which, the Lord-Keeper North dying, while while Jefferies was keeping the Bloody Assizes in the West. at his return back, he had the Seals given him, with the Title of Lord-Chancellor, as a Reward for his good Service in destroying the Western Hereticks; and as an encouragement to him to destroy the Penal Laws and Tests. the great Bulwark against Popery. And therefore difpenfing Power in the King, is that which must be fet up in order to effect it. And the Judges must be dealt with, to give their Opinions for it. And I have been certainly told, That the King Closetting Sir Thomas Jones about it, Sir Thomas was not enough thorow-paced, but boggled at it, and told the King He could not do it: to which the King answering, He would have twelve Judges of his Opinion. Sir Thomas Replyed, He might have twelve Indges of his Opinion, but he would scarce find twelve Lawvers of his Opinion. But the King was as good as his Word, and made fuch Judges as gave their Opinions, That the King might dispense with the Penal Laws and Tests out of Parliament.

The Bayist's having always look'd upon the Church of England with an evil Eve, did fo now more than ever, they having writ feveral Elaborate and Learned Books, in opposition to the principal Errors of Popery, which they were never able to answer: But they were resolv'd if they could not deal with them one way, they would another; and therefore the King granted a Commission for Ecclesiastical Assairs, expresly contrary to Law, thereby to Curb them. This Commission was Granted to the Arch-bishop of Canterbury. the Lord Chancellor Jefferies, the Earl of Rochefter, the Earl of Sunderland, the Bilhop of Durham, the Bilhop of Rochester, and the Lord-Chief-intrice of England: But the Arch-billiop of Canterbury refuling to act in it, the Enthor of Chelter was added: Before these Commissioners the Bilhop of London was Cited, and Suspended, for not Suipending Dr. Sharp, for Preaching a Sermon against the Corruptions and Frauds of the Church of Rome.

In Ireland the King having recalled the Duke of Ormond from his Lieutenancy, made the Earl of Clarendon Lieutenant, tenant, and Sir Charles Porter Lord-Chancellor, who after their arrival there, declared (according to their Instructions) that the King would preserve the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, inviolable, as the Magna-Charta of Ireland. But at the fame time the King having given to Collonel Richard Talbot (a Man not at all belov'd by the Protestants) an Independent Commission to reform the Army, and he turns out those Officers that were firm to the Protestant Religion and the English Interest, and puts: Notorious Irish Papills in their Room, and serves not only the Officers, but even the private Troopers and Soldiers that were Protestants, in the same manner. So that one of the best principled Armies in the World, both with respect to Loyalty, and a firm adherence to the Protestant Religion, was turn'd out and Disbanded, and a parcel of Irish Popish Cut-Throats entertain'd in their places; which feemed strange to the English Protestants there, and not at all agreeable to what my Lord Clarendon, and Sir Charles Porter had told them; who were not themselves pleased with it, but linew not how to help it.

But in England the King having established his Dispensing Power, puts forth a Declaration for Liberty of Conscience; pursuant to which, the Goals all over England, that were fill'd with Protestant Dissenters, were clear'd, and the Diffenters fet at Liberty: Who having been long oppres'd and almost ruin'd by severe Prosecutions for several Years together, were now glad of a little Ease; tho' the most Judicious among them faw clearly enough it was not fer their Sakes, but to introduce Popery, that this indulgence was principally Granted; and therefore were always afraid of the Snake hid in the Grass. The Episcopal Clergy, who. in the late Reign, and the beginning of this also, had been very severe to Dissenters, began now to see they had been only Tools in so doing to the Papilts, and had carried on their Work for them; and now that their Eyes began to be and it mey would be so no more, they would fain have made I of the Diffenters to pull down the Church of England; by aggravating the ill Usage they had received from them to many. Years : And that now was

was their time to call them to an Account, and be even with them for it; and feveral of the Diffenters (who were very Honest, tho' michaken Men.) were by these specious

Pretences drawn in to joyn with them.

The King was so fond of his Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, that he Publishes it a second time, with an Injunction to have it read in all Parish-Churches; and the Bishops of the respective Diotesses were to see it done. But the Arch-bishop of Canterbury, and several of the Bishops, looking upon this as a thing contrary to Law, not only resused to do it, but humbly Peritioned the King to hear the Reasons why they could not comply with that Order. But this was looked upon by Jesser, then Lord-Chancellor, Father Peters, (then made one of the Privy-Council) and owners of the Popish Faction, as a Crime next to High-Treason; and therefore for their Contempt they were Committed to the Tower.

It was now more than a Year that had passed since the King's Declaration for Indulgence came forth; and the Prince and Prince is of Orange having been privately founded how they ficed affected to the Test and Penal Laws, they being the next Heirs to the Crown; their Opinion feemed to be, That the Papifts should by Law have Liberty for the private Exercise of their Religion without Disturbance, but that by no means the Tests should be taken off, to let them in to have a share in the Government. This it was that touch'd the Papifts to the quick, for they faw that the King was well fireken in Years, and upon his Death (which they knew not how foon might happen) a Protestant Princes was the next Heir, who would foon pull down all that Babel, which they had been Building; and therefore some other Provision must be made for andther Popith Saccessor.

And nothing could do this fo well as a young Prince of Wales, during whose Minority (if the K Die) they might Govern themselves, pery, as in the days of Old.

This being resolved on, the old Darches of Modena, makes her Offering to the Lady of Loretto, of whom the implores, Implores, That the Queen of England may have a Son (for a Daughter would fignify nothing) to be Heir of the Crown of England. By Vertue of these Prayers, and the Queen's going down to the Bath, and drinking the Waters there, the was faid to be Impregnated; and nothing was now to be heard among the Popilh Fattion, but drinking the Young Prince's Health, even before he was Born; for that it would be a Son, there was no body question'd, as taking it for Granted that was the Delign. And all things were carried on by the faction in order to it's Birth.

The Princess Ann of Denmark being not very well, was advis'd by her Physicians to go down to the Bath, for the Recovery of her Health. And the Arch bishop of Canterbury, and several others of the Eishops being in the Tomer, and the Bishop of London suspended from his Office, and other concurring Circumstances being ready, it was now look'd upon to be a good time for the Queen to cry out, which was accordingly so well managed, that on Sunday the 11th of June, 1688, a young Prince of Wales was said to be born: Which was published with so much Joy, both throughout England, Scotland, and Ireland, and by their Embassadors in all Foreign Courts, that they abundantly overacted it.

The great Point of a Popish Heir being thus secured, the Popish Faction begun to go on with a high Hand, turning out Dr. Hough (whom the Fellows of Magdalent Colledge in Oxford had chosen for their President) and all the Fellows too, because they would not accept of a Papish, whom the King would have imposed upon 'em by a Mandamus; in Sidney Colledge in Cambridge, Father Francis was put in; and in University-Colledge in Oxford, Obadiah Walker the Principal, declar'd hunself a Papish. The Head of Christ-Church, put in by the King, was also for fame Profession. Nor was any Preferment to unless he were a Roman-Catholick.

In Scotland the sing had iffeed out a Proclamation for Tolleration in Religion, recommending his Roman-Catholick Subjects particularly, to the Protection of the Government there, and tells them he expects his Will should be Obey'd absolutely, and without Reserve.

m 2.1

But in Ireland the King would ailow no Liberty of Conscience to the Protestants; for they were turn'd out of all Offices and Places whatsoever: And the Earl of Clarendon recalled from his Lieutenancy, and Talbot, who had already reformed the Army there, and made it perfectly Popish, was for that good Service made Earl of Tyrconnel, and Deputy of Ireland. Sir Charles Porter also, the Lord Chancellor, was turned out, and one Alexander Fitton, a Papish, who had been fetch'd out of Goal in England, and made a Knight, is now made Lord-Chancellor in his place. 1 have before told you of the Committing of the Seven Bishops to the Tower, (which were the Arch-bishop of Canterbury, the Bilhop of Bath and Wells, the Bilhop of Bristol, the Bishop of Peterborough the Bishop of Chichester, the Bisnop of St. Asaph, and the Bishop of Elv) and of the Eirth of the pretended Prince of Wales while they were there; the Bishops having by their Habeas Corpus been for at Liberty, were Tryed for a high Mildemeanour in Trinity-Term following; and notwithstanding the new Modelling of the Judges, and that one of then ( Judge All bone ) was a known Papift, yet Mr. Justice Powet, to his lafting Honour, did both Learnedly and Zealoully defend their Cause, so that the Jury acquitted The publick Rejoycing that was made for the acquittal of the Bishops, was not Confined to the Cities of Lendon and Westminster, but upon the News thereof being brought to Hounfloe-Heath, where the Army lay, the King being at that time treated by the Earl of Feversham (in his Tent) it was received with a general Shout throughout the whole Army; the King not knowing the Reason of that Shout, was very much Startled at it, and fent the Earl of Feversham out to enquire the Cane, who upon his Return, told the King, Townshin with Soldiers Joy for the acquittal of the Laops: To whom the King reply'd with some Discomposure, And call you that Nothing? This being indeed enough to let him see how vain a Delign he had undertaken, to set up Popery by a Protestant Army.

The King was now busie in modelling all the Corporations in England that fend Burgeffes to Parliament, to get a Parliament fitted to his own Turn, in order to take off the Penal Laws and Tests, no other obstacle now lying in his way; when on a sudden he was allarmed with the News of the great Preparations making by the Dutch, both by Sea and Land: Upon which account, the King fends to his Envoy at the Hague to put in a Memorial to the States General to know the Reason. The French King also, who was concern'd at it, orders his Ambassador there to deliver in a Memorial upon that occasion, wherein he tells the States, There are fuch Bonds of Friendship and Alliance between his Malter and the King of Great Brittain, as will oblige him (the French King) not only to affilt the King of Great Brittain, but to look on the first Act of Hostility committed against him (the King of Great Brittain) to be a Manifest Rupture of the Peace, and a Breach with his Crown. This left no longer any doubt in the mind of the Prince of Orange and the States General, of the private League between England and France. Which was a sufficient Ground for the Prince of Orange to rescue these Kingdoms (to which (in Right of his Princess) he was the next Heir) fron Popery and Arbitrary Power. For he faw plainly that the Supposititions Prince was Introduc'd to wrong him and his Princess of their Right to the Succession, and to subject these Kingdoms to Popery and Slavery, and by consequence all Europe besides. The Dutch took no notice of the French King's Memorial, but gave King James's Envoy this Answer, that they had Arm'd in-Imitation of his Britanick Majesty, and the other Princes; and that they had thereby given no just occasion of Offence, in Arming when all other Princes where in motion; and that they were long fince convinced of the Alliance that the King his Matter had treated with France, and what had been mention'd to them by Monfier le Count d'Avaux in his Memorial. After this Answer, King King James expected no good from the Dutch, and lookt upon them, as if they had already declar'd War against him. And now the Eyes of all England were turned to Holland, and expected Deliverance from thence; without which they faw themselves Ruined; nor did his Royal Highne's the Prince of Orange deceive them, but Landed with an Army of about 14000 Men, at Torbay near Exeter, on the Fifth day of November, 1688. A day deservedly Famous in England for two eminent Deliverances from Popery. Scon after his Landing he went to Exceter, where he was received by the People with Shouts and Acclamations of Joy as their Deliverer, as indeed he was: After some little stay there, he came forwards towards the South; but King James to oppose him, fent down his Army to Salisbury, whither he also went himself; but part of the Army going over to the Prince, the King was so Startled at it, that he thought not himself there out of Danger, and so return'd to London again; and as the Prince came forward, he was in all places look'd upon as a Blesling sent from Heaven to rescue 'em from Popery and Slavery.

In the mean time King James to prevent (if it were poslible ) the impending and growing danger, Restores all the Fellows of Magdalen Colledge, and puts out his Proclamation for vacating all New Charters, and restoring of old ones, and Particularly the Charter of London was carried in great Point to Guild-Hall by Jefferies, and given the Citizens again. But for all thele good things there was no body now thank'd him, as being the Effects of his Fear, and not of his good will. The Prince's coming mearer and nearer to London, the Nobility and Gentry at every Place Flocking to him, and Congratulating him; King James first sends away his Queen and pretended Prince to France; and in a little time after withdraws himself from White-i'l.ill, and goes to Feversham, where attempting to go a-board, he was feiezed and rifled by the Country People, and after his being known, he came back to London again, and was well received; but the Prince being then at Windfor, and defigning the next Day for London, King James by a Message was desir'd to with-draw himself to Ham near Kingston, to avoid those Inconveniences that might Ensue: But the King rather chose to go to Rochester, having the Princes Guards with him to secure him from the Insults of the People; there he staid two or three Days, and then Privately Embark'd himself for France; where he soon after arivid.

King James being thus gone away, upon the Prince's coming to London, he was defir'd by the Nobility and Gentry to take the Government upon him, thereby to suppress the Disorders of the common People, which was then very Great; but by the Prince's Order soon brought to be quiet. The Mass-Houses were every where puli'd down, and the Prietts and Jesuits, with the whole Popish Crew, put to the Scamper. Jefferies being dropt by his Master, was shifting for himself, but taken by the Mobb in a Seaman's Habit, was carried before the Lord-Mayor. and from thence fent to the Tower, attended by strong Guards to keep him from being torn in Pieces by the incensed Mobb, who follow'd him with Threats, Curses. and Execrations; where fometime after he drank himfelf to Death, and fo sav'd the Hang-man a Labour.

The Prince of Orange having the Government put into his Hands, Summons fuch Gentlemen as were Members of King Charles's last three Purliaments to meet at Westminster, to consult what was fir to be done for the Nation: which they accordingly did, and defir'd the Prince that Writs might be iffued out for the calling a Convention of the Estates (in the Nature of a Parliament) to meet in January following: Which being done, the Convention met at the time appointed; and entering into feveral Debates about the present States of Astairs, they came to this Refult, That King James by privately withdrawing himfelf out of his Kingdoms, had Abdicated the Throne, whereby it was become Vacant.

And so ended the Four Years Reign of King James

the Second.

An Account of what Remarkably Occur'd since the Reign of King WILLIAM the III, and Queen MARY the II. to the Year 1696.

ING James (as has been mentioned) having Left the Land, and that in Parliament being taking for an Abdication, and the Throne declared Vacant, William and Mary Prince and Princess of Orange, were Proclaimed King and Queen of England, France, and Ireland, &c. before Waite-Hall, and in the City of London, with the Joy of the whole Nation, on the 13th of Feb. 1688, and with Convenient speed they were Proclaimed with the like satisfaction in all the Principal Places of their Dominions; and the King returned the Parliament a Gracious answer to their Declaration, expreffing himfelf highly fatisfied with what they had done, promiting to the utmost his Care and Protection for the Preservation of the Established Religion, Laws, and Liberties; and that he should always be ready to Concur with them in any thing that should be for the Good of the Kingdom; and to do all that in him lay to advance the Glory and Welfare of it; and thereupon he proceeded to quiet disorders in all places of England that had risen on this Revolution. But Ireland was in a dangerous Condition; for the Earl of Tyrconnel had stopped almost all the Ports, and was raising numerous Forces of Irish, for the Service of King Fames; so that those who would have fled into England, or Scotland, were for the: most part retirained, and obliged to continue under the dreadful Apprehenfions of another' Massacre, being every' where in the Countrey Robbed and Spoiled of their Substance, and a great many Imprisoned.

The State of which Kingdom the King earnestly rescommended to his Patiament, desiring them to hasten the raising such Supplies as was requisite in order to reduce it to Obedience. The Lord Eishop of London, with about one Hundred of the City Clergy, waiting on the King,

King to tender their humble Duty, he gave them an affurance of his Affection to the Church of England, and of all Encouragement to them; concluding that they might depend upon his Word. And an Act passed about Removing and Preventing all Questions and Disputes about the Assembling and sitting of the Parliament; and the King issued out his Proclamation (to leave the Irish without Excuse) That is they would lay down their Arms, and Live quietly, they should have their Pardon for all things pass, and enjoy their Estates; but if they continued still in Arms, declaring them Rebels and Traytors, and their Lands and Possessions Forseited, &c. But this Proclamation being not Publish'd in Ireland, had little effect; tho in the North the Protestants secured London-Derry, Sligo, and other places, in expectation of being Aided from England.

And now the King, to ease his Subjects, consented that the Duty of Hearth-Money, that had long been a Burden to the Nation, might be taken off, which was very pleasing to the People. Thomas Pilkington Esq, who in the late Reign was Fined 100000l. upon an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, brought against him by the then Duke of Tork, was now chosen Lord-Mayor of London, in which Honourable station he continued near three Years.

And now the Coronation being appointed, on the 11th of April it was performed with great Splendor and Magnificence, occasioning great Demonstrations of Joy in the People: and soon after the Crown of Scotland, was by the Commissioners of the Estates presented to the King and Queen, which was accepted, and the usual Coronation Oath of that Kingdom taken.

And now Admiral Herbert standing with a considerable Squadron to the Coast of Ireland, sought with about 40 French Men of War in Bantrey-Bay, in this Engagement Capt. George Almer of the Portland, a Lieutenant, and 64 Scamen, were Killed, and about 240 Wounded; the Enemy losing a greater Number. And then at the humble Request of the Parliament, the King declared War with France.

In Scotland Duke Hamilton was made High-Commission T t oner;

oner; where the Duke of Gonedon held the Castle of Edenborough for King James, and the Viscount. Dundee hat a considerable Force in the Field, to second him; and many hot Skirmishes were Fought; till at last in an Obstinate Fight Dundee was killed, upon which the Duke of Gourdon not finding himself longer able to hold the Castle, delivered it up to Sir John Lamer, upon Articles. Ind tho' Collonel Cumon, Buchanon, and others, kept up the Party in the Field for a while, at length they were dispersed, and Scotland entirely Quieted.

On the 24th of July the Frinces of Denmark was brought to Bed of a Son, and on the 28th he was Christened William, by the Bishop of London; the King and the Earl of Dorset standing God-Fathers, and the Marchioness of Hallifax God-Mother; and then the King declared the Young Prince

Duke of Gioucester.

King James being Landed in Ireland, with some French Forces, and a confiderable number of Officers, Arms, and Ammunition, had with a numerous Army belieged Londons Derry, which was Defended by the Inhabitants and others, till it was reduced to the last Extremity by Famine; but then Providence so ordered it, that Major General Kirk sen ing in Shipping with Provision, the Siege was raised.

The Befiegers in lying before it, and by the Befieged's falling on the Rear in drawing off, having lost 2000 men; and Dr. Walker, a principal Man in Defending that place, coming over, the King Ordered him 5000l. as a mark of his Bounty, with an Affurance of greater Advantages. And on the 12th of August, the Duke of Schomberg Landed with the English Army at Carickfergus in Ireland, and soon Reduced divers Places, compelling the advanced Parties of the Irish to retreat before him, and held a Winter-Camp on the Plairs of Dundalk, which being Moorith and Foggy, many Callant Men dye 1 of the Flux, and other Sicknesses. Eut the Iniskiang-men, who frequently went abroad in Parties, did considerable Service, by cutting off the Irish Rapparees.

Whilst these things passed, the King for weighty Reafons dissolved his first Parliament, and casted another to sit at West minster the 20th of March, 1690, and the Commons challen chiling Sir John Trevor their Speaker, the King told both Honses, among other things, That his Resolution was to go for Ireland, his Presence being necessary there, for Reducing that Kingdom: Signifying it was his Pleasure to leave the Government in the Queen's Hands during his Absence; and accordingly before his Departure an Act was passed to that Purpose. And the King of Denmark at this time assisted the King with 6000 Danish Soldiers, under the Leading of the Duke of Wirtemburg, who did notable Service. Charlemont having been straightly blocked up, Capitulated; and other places were Reduced by Force.

And now the King having fettled Affairs in England, left White-Hall on the 4th June, and on the 14th Landed at Carickfergus in Ireland and haftened to order the Army, and Marching to the Newry, had News that the Enemy having fet Fire to their Straw, had Decamped, and quitted that strong Post. This at first scarce gained Credit, but Scouts being fent out, and the Report confirmed, the King changed his March, and fent Orders to the Forces at Armagh and Fevergee to march by the great Roads towards Dundalk, in which some of our Men fell into an Ambush of the Enemy, but behaved themselves with that Courage and Bravery, that most of them got off, having flain the Commander and brought away his Horse; and the King marched towards Drogheda, where he found the Enemy Encamped along the River Boyn, above the Town; and as he was viewing them, a Six-pounder grazed on his Shoulder, which only rased the Skin; but as soon as it was Dreffed, he took Horse and Commanded Count Solmes to find out a Ford above the Enemy, and pass the River, which he Successfully did; and obliged those that Guarded it, after a hot Dispute to retire: And upon notice of this, the whole Army passed at other Fords, the Foot wading, some to the Arm-pits, sustaining all the Enemies Fire, and not returning it till they came close up with them, and falling furiously on, soon gave them a general Rout; but in this Encounter Duke Schomberg and Dr. Walker, late of London-Derry, were Kill'd, and about 300 of leffer Note, on our Part: The Enemy lost 3000, and were were pursued 4 Miles; and upon this Defeat Drogheda Surrendred, and K. James with part of his broken Army hasted to Dublin, and from thence he went to Waterford, where foon after he took Ship and Sailed for France; and the King of England coming to Dublin, was received with all imaginable Demonstrations of Joy; and a great many Protestants who had been Imprisoned, were set at Liberty, the Papil's difarmed, and the Affairs in those Parts fettled, and many places that stood out, Surrendred. The Brals and Copper Money K. James had Coined, as passable in that Kingdom, was called in, or fet at the Value of the Metal only: Sheriffs appointed, and the Face of Justice reltored.

Whilst these things were doing beyond the Seas, an Engagement happened between the English and French off Beachy, viz. on June 30. in which the Dutch Squadron being forward to gain the Weather-Gage of the Enemy, received great Lois, many of them being Eurnt, or fo flattered that after the Fight they fell into the Hands of the Enemy; the English red Squadron not coming up, as was expected; for which Miscarriage our Admiral, the Earl of Torrington, was I ryed, but acquitted; and after the Fight, the French infulted our Coasts, burning Tingmouth a Vi age of Fishers Cors, and doing some other Damage; after which they retired to their own Coast; and one Godfrey Cross, an Inn-keeper in Kent, for going on Board the Enemy, and giving Intelligence, was afterward Try'd, Condemned, and Executed near St. Thomas's Waterings, in the Kentish-road from London. And this Year the King besieged Lymerick in Ireland; but by reason of the Strength of the Place, advancing of the Seaion, and great Rains that over-ho ved the River Shannen, on which it is feated, having in vain summoned it, he drew off, and returned to England. But our Fleet Handing to that Coast, and the Earl of Marlborough on board it, with confiderable Land-Forces, and joyned upon Landing by part of the Army already there, they took Cork and Kinfale with little Loss; at the Siege of the first, the Noble Duke of Grafion, amongit others, prelling too forwards on the Works, was Stain by a finali Shot.

A Plot was foon after Discovered to have set the City of Dublin on Fire, and in that Hurry to have fallen on the King' Forces in Garilon there, and by a milerable Slaughter to have Surprized it; but some Letters intimating the Intention, being found by the Care of the Lord Sidney and Conningsby, whom the King had appointed Lords-Juflices; the Mischief was prevented, by securing Suspected Perions.

And now the Parliament of England waited on the King with their humble Addresses of Thanks for the great Things he had done for these Kingdoms, and to Congratulate his happy Return and Success; and the King was not flow by Marks of Honour and Prometion, to Gratify those that had well-behaved themselves in the Service; and among others, Coll. Cuts was Created Baron of Gowran in the Kingdom of Ireland; he also appointed his Privy Council there, and all other Officers of State, Judges, and Magistrates; restored such as had been outed, and appointed force new Fishops, causing a Regulation of the Clergy in General.

The Winter thus pailing on, the King prepared to pass the Seas, to be at the Congress of Princes and Embassadors. appointed at the Hague, to Concert the Measures for carrying on the War against France; and after he had passed several Acts, and Prorogu'd the Parliament, he Embaro'd with a splendid Train of Nobility, and with great Difficulty, by reason of the Ice, it being January, I anded near Maesland-sluys; and being Complemented by the Deputies of the States, passed to the Hague, where the States General and Council of State, with other Colledges, made their Complements to him; as also the Foreign Ministers: and to make his Reception the more Magnificent, three Triumphal Arches were Erected, one by the States-General, and two by the Magistrates, with fundry Motto's and Devices, Expressing the great things he had done and what more Glorious were Promised from his Heroick Virtues, too many here to Enumerate; and in the Evening the Cannon, Illuminations, Fire-works, and shouts of the People, spoke more loudly the Welcome of a Prince that Tt3 has so well deserved of that Nation. And at his first appearing in the Assembly of the States-General, taking his Place at the upper-end of the Table, he with many Obliging Expressions declared his Assections and good Inclinations to them, in a most Elegant Speech; which being deliberated on, the Heer Van Wickers President of the Assembly, in the name of the rest, made a suitable Answer, and the Duke of Brandenburg, and other Princes-being met, a League and strict Amity was agreed on, for restoring the Peace and Tranquility of Europe, in reducing (by Arms) the Grand Disturber of it to Reason, and a Restitution of what he had wrongfully, either by Surprize, or Vioolence, taken from the Consederates: for which War had been Proclaimed by them.

Whilst the King was thus busy beyond the Seas, some ill-affected Persons were Designing at home to betray our trengths into the Hands of the Common Enemy, by giving account of the Ports, Shipping, and what else might facilitate an Invasion, and on this account the Lord Presson, John Albron and Elmund Fliot, were seized in a Smaok, as they were passing out of the River of Thames by Captain Billon, and Papers of Dangerous Consequence tound, with which they were designed for France; for which the two shift being Tryed and found Guilty of High-Treason, Alton was Executed.

The King having appointed the Baron D' Ginkle chief Commander of his rorces in Leland, having received Supplies and Stores from England, he belieged Ballymore, which furrendied upon Difcretion: And having Garifoned it, the Army marched, and fet down before Athlone, where they had put up Franch Colours to make him believe the Carifon mostly consisted of that Nation: However a Breach being made, and succeeded by a vigorous Attack, the Base Town was soon won, and the other followed the same Fate in a short time, tho' their whole Army lay behind it; and the Soldiers suriously entring, a great many were put to the Sword.

This was no fooner Repaired and Garifoned, but the Army pursued the Retreating Enemy, and in a long-Contested tested Battel at Aghrim, gave them a total Rout; so that they never considerably appeared in the Field after it; St. Ruth the French General, was flain with a Cannon-shot at the beginning of the Fight, and all their Cannon, Baggage, Ammunition, and Hunder of the Camp, fell to the thare of our Men. And being Refreshed, they marched to Galloway, which place after a confiderable Battery, was Surrendred on Articles, and the Garifon marched to Lymerick, which was the next place befieged; but holding out Obstinately, and having in it a numerous Garison, it was thought fit after a confiderable Siege, to grant advantagious Articles, and as many as would, had leave to depart the Kingdom. And with this Town all Ireland was reduced; for those sew places that held out, Surrendred mostly of their own accord: And the Lieutenant General having fettled the Affairs there, and returning to England, was by his Mijesty Created Earl of Athlone, and highly Treated by the City of London, &c. Whilit this time was taken up in Reducing Ireland, the Confederates imployed their Arms recover the Towns the French had taken in Flonders, &c. And the Duke of Brandenburg was fuccessful in taking Keyferwart, Mentz, and Bon, places of confiderable Strength; and Prince Waldeck fought the Mareichal D' Humiers at Forg Village; where the English, under the Command of the Lord Marlborough, did Wonders, in Hopping of the Torrent of the Enemy, who supposed to have Surprized the Confederate Camp, killing a great many of them, and iraking them Retreat. But the French ravaging the Palatinate, cording to their wonted Barbarity, they burnt Newstadt, Frankendale, Petersham, Lambesham, Wachenheim, Darmstein, and afterward Spires, Worms, Heidleberg, were partly burnt and demolished, which hastened the King to head the Army in Flancers. And by this time the Duke of Savoy, took Carmagnole, and gave free Liberty to the Vaudois to Live quietly under his Protection.

of ENGLAND.

The King by divers Marches and Encampments, endeavouring to draw the French to a Battel, polieffed himself of Beaumont in the fight of their Army, Commanded by the Duke of Luxemburg, and demolished the Fortifications, but with the loss of 400 men they-took Montaielian but were beat out by the Cannon of the Castle which they in vain for some time had affaulted, and Prince Lewis of Baden, Commanding the Emperors Forces, gave the Turks a great overthrow in Hungary, Killing about 23000 men, and taking the greater part of their Cannon and A Person hired by the Duke of Luxemburg to blow up the King's Bombs, and fire the Ammunition Waggons, being apprehended, and Confessing the Attempt, which only fir'd three fombs, had his right Hand cut off, then being half Strangled was burnt. And as the King was standing under a Tree, to view the Enemy, a fingular hand of Providence appeared in his Prefervation, for he had no from thepped afide to give some Orders, but a shot from a Cannon rent the Tree in the Place, where a Minute before he had stood. And now the French Court (which had to often aimed at his precious Life, and found it difficult to be attempted in a fair Field) practifed with divers Villains to compass the King's Destruction by Treachery, to which end the Sieur Grandvalle, had received several Sums of Money for encouragement, of the Marquels of Barbelieux, the French King's Secretary; and brought two others, viz. Dismont, and Leafdale, into the Conspiracy, and often they defigned to shoot him as he Rode out to view the Troops; and the Duke of Luxemburg had Orders to fend a party of Horse to setch them off, when this wicked Deed should be done, but God prevented it by a timely Discovery: for Grandvalle being Apprehended and Tryed by a Court-Marshal, was on plain Proof and his own Confession, found guilty of Treason; and being Drawn, Hang'd, and Quartered, his Head and Quarters were fet up on Poles without the Camp.

1 t 4

วกร

And now our Fleet under the Command of Admiral Ruffel, being fooner abroad than the French expected, so that on the 19th of May, 1692, the Admiral got light of the Enemy about fix Leagues from Cape Barflew, who not thinking us so strong, bore down upon him, having the Weather-Cage, the Wind at South-west; and about Eleven in the Morning, Tourville, the French Admiral, engaged ours, who who bore upon him with the Red Squadron, and the Fight continued hot till about three in the Aiternoon, when the French being greatly Shattered, stood away with all the Sail they could make, to their own Coaft; and being closely pursued, the Blew Squadror engaged them again, about fix that Afternoon; which continued till ten at Night, when they made a retreating Fight, wherein some of their Ships blew up, and others sunk; and Vice-Admiral Delaval, getting in under Cape de Wick, with Light Frigats, Fire-Inips, and Armed Boats, in spite of the Fire the Enemy made from their Ships, run them on Ground. Capt. Heath laid the Royal Sun of France on board with his Fire-Ship, being a French Admiral of 104 Guns, and burnt her. Capt. Green burnt the Conquerant of 102 Guns, and another of 80 was burnt by the boats, in which a great many fick and wounded men Perished. And Admiral Russel sending Sr George Rook into La Hogue with light Frigats, Firellips, and Armed boats, he burnt 6 that Night, and 6 more the next morning, 3 of them being Three-Deck-ships. carrying from 60 to 70 Guns; and one of 56 Guns, was overfet and lost; and others were deltroyed in other parts: fo that about 21 of their biggest Men of War were burnt: and of Crafts, Frigats, and Transport-ships, 30; and this without the loss of one Ship on our part; and this was alfo done in the fight of their Land-Army, drawn down on the Coast of Normandy, to assist K. James in his then Intended Invasion of England. And of note on our side were only Kill'd Rear-Admiral Carter, and Coll. Hastings of the Marine Regiment. This Victory, as it much amazed the French, caused great Rejoycing in England; yet to repair the Difgrace, the Duke of Luxemburg befieged Namur, to whose Relief the King prepared to March his Army, but in the mean while it Capitulated and Surrendred : yet the Castle and new Fort held out a great while longer; so that they Loft above 5000 men in the Siege; and the King having often dared the French to Battel in open Field, & they as often declining it by Counter-marches, and strong Encampments, he agreed to Attack them in their Camp at Enghein, tho' by the narrownels of the ways, the Passage to it was extrem difficult. This was vigorously attempted and carryed on by the English and Danes, with such Courage and Bravery, that the French at first were beaten from Post to Post, and we were at the point of forcing an entrance into their Camp, had they been timely fuccoured by other Parties that were appointed to full ain them, but did not ; for that from the Hedges, Out works, and Cannon advantagiously plante! on the Hills, over-powering our Men, after a hot Dispute, they found a necessity of retreating, leaving many Gallant Commanders dead behind them; tho' the Enemy had little cause to boast, their whole Army narrowly escaping an intire Defeat; and their number of Men and great Officers killed, wounded, and taken Prisoners, much exceeding ours: for 10 or 12 of the old Regiments suffered extreamly, so that they owned to lose 500 Officers, and about 5000 private Soldiers. And foon after the Prince D'Erichment feil on a French Party sent out of Namur of 300 Foot and 200 Dragoons, totally routing them, and taking 400 Prifoners; accong which were 30 Officers which were carryed to Huy, and in this Encounter the Marquess De Hecquincourt was lain; and the Duke of Leinster arriving with frem Supplies from England, and being joyned by a Detuchment from the King's Camp, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Talmath, they marched towards Nemport, and 4 Regiments were fent to Possess themselves of Furnes which successfuly they did, and 2000 Pioneers ordered to fortifie it, and foon after Dyxmude fell into our hands with the Villages and dependant Territories, and feveral Skirmishes happened with various success to the end of this Campaign. And on the 8th of September 1692 an Earthquake happened in England giving 2 or 3 Quick Shocks yet with little harm, and was felt almost at the same time in Ireland, France, Holland, Flanders, and other places ; it lasted about a minute. The King of Englana was then in his Camp at Grammen in Flanders, Dining in an old decay'd house, which shook very much, and every one apprehending it would fall, he was Perswaded to leave that Ruin-threatening-Fabrick; but the Surprize was foon over, and no haim happened there. The

The Campaign now being ended the King by the way of Holland returned to England, and found all things peaceable and well Governed by the Queens prudent mammagement, not only in England but in the other two Kingdoms, where War and Tumults ceasing. Trade began to Flourish.

Whilst these things passed a very great the tof Turkey and Streights Merchants, Dutch and English, let Sail richly Laden under a Convoy of Men of War Commanded by Sr. George Rook, and in the Streights unexpectedly tell in with the French Fleet: But though our Ships fell into this Ambush, yet ours and the Dutch Men of War, behaved themselves with such Conduct and Courage, as also did the Merchantmen, that whilst the trench were making up and the Dispute lasted, most the latter by running along the Shore got into Harbours, and others came back again with Sir George, who made a very good Retreat, so that the French got but little; though had they not been over hasty in appearing, in probability the greater part of them might have been Encompassed by their whole Fleet.

The King, as is said, being returned, after Congratulations, a day of Thanksgiving was appointed for Gods singular Providence that had protected him in the greatest dangers to which he had exposed his Royal Person for our Sasety. The Winter was spent in making Levies by Land and great Preparations at Sea. The Parlia nent chearfully giving such Supplies as were necessary to carry on the War.

Early in the Spring the Streights and Turkey Flect put again to Sea, but entering the Streighte mouth, such a violent Storm arose, as blew many of the Ships cleaverly out of it, and divers were Lost and much damaged, yet many got safe to their proper Ports.

In March the King passed over to hasten an early Campaign and the Elector of Bavaria, being appointed Covernour of Flanders sent the Duke of Arco to Complement him on his arrival; and Parties being abroad, divers Shirmishes and Bickerings happened with various Success in a village called Malterne 100 Newburghers took 80 French Prisoners of War and brought them with their Arms, Horse, and Baggage to the general Rendesvouz. However they sent an Army to Ravage the Palatinate, and burnt divers places of note; and to divert the Spanish Forces in Flanders, a vigorous War was pushed on in Catalonia, the Duke D' Nougilles Commanding in chief; but met there with many Disapointments by our main Fleet's appearing on the Coast. yet drawing off a part of the Army for that Service. The Duke of Wirtemburg with a confiderable Eody of Horse and Foot forced the Enemies Lines, and Entering French Flanders, for several Miles put the Country under Contribution, railing a Million of Livres taking in divers small places. and much Booty. This Constrained the Duke of Luxemburg, General for the French King, to Endeavour by one Exploit or other to draw him back, and first with 50 Squadrons of Horse and ten Battallions of Foot, and some Fieldpieces, he attempted to fall on a part of the Garison of Liege an M.estrich, being about 18 squadrons of Horse and some Regirents of Foot Commanded by Count Tilly, but upon notice retired over the River Sare, Leaving three Squadrons to scure his Retreat, which beat back the French advanced parties. But this was only as a Forerunner to greater Action; for the King Marching to releive Huy, had notice in his way of it's furrender, and thereupon Strengthening the Carifon of Liege Marched near Helpan, and halted to get Intelligence of the Enemies further defign; and some hours after had notice they appeared from the high Grounds of St. Gertruden-Landen; to that upon notice from the Scouts that it was the Vaunt-Guard of their Army, all things were ordered to Receive them, if they adventured to make any attempt; which they foon after did, and a terrible fight enflued, which lasted from Sun-rising to Sun setting; in this Battel the King was in all parts, giving the necessary Orders, and acted the part not only of a brave General, but alio of a Couragious Captain; but in the Conclusion, the Confederate Army, being over-powered by Numbers, the French being 80000 and the Confederate but 40000; they were forced to recire, and left the French Masters of the Field, the their loss was more than that of the Confederates.

Such another Encounter the French made in Savey, where Monsieur Cathat Commanded for France, in which the Duke of Schomberg fighting Valiantly at the Head of his Battalion, was llain, and the Savoyards compelled to leave the field; but the French notwithstanding this Success found themselves in so bad a Condition, that being compelled to pass the Mountains very late, for Recruits and Supplies of Necessaries, abundance of them were lost in the Snow and deep Pits, with Carriages and Cannon.

Tho' the French on these Occasions boasted of some Success by Land, their Naval Forces, fince the last Overthrow, were but flenderly Recruited; and Admiral Russel having notice by a Swede there was a great Fleet in Conquet-Bay, Laden with Corn, and Naval Stores, fent Capt. Pickard with another Man of War, and a Fire-ship, to get an account of them; which struck such a Terror, they supposing there Ships the Vaunt-Guard of our main Fleet, that cutting their Cables, they run on the Flats and Rocks, into our Hands, others funk by the Shot, to that there were computed about 50 Sail to have been Loft; and foon after the Admiral had Orders to joyn the Spanish Pleet on the Coalf of Catalonia, to prevent the French Deligns on that fide; which brought fuch a Terror on the French main Fleet under the Command of Monfieur Torville, that he immediately got into Thoulon, and there lay penn'd up, not daring to flir till the English Fleet returned. Being in those parts they brought a Terror on Argeirs, and other Pyratical Governments, fo that they fent their Submissions, and appeared very desirous to be at Peace with England. However a fufficient Squadron being left in the narrow Seas, Commanded by the Lord Berkly, he attempted the French Coalt, and Landed some Men at Cammaret-Bay, under Lieu:enant-General Talmash, but they had drawn thinher such great Bodies of Horse and Foot strongly Intrenched, that the English with some Loss were constrained to retire; in this Action the Lieutenant-General received a Wound in the Thigh with a Musket-shot, and Dyed of it at Plymouth greatly Lamented, as being an expert and Generous Commander. But for this Disappointment not giving over, they stood in before Diep, and laid that Famous Town in Athes, and then throwing in about 250 Eombs into Havre-de-Grace, fir'd a great part of it, and afterward Bombed St. Maloes, and Callis, and tent in Machines to blow up the Works, guarding the Entrance of Dunkirk Harbour: which had fome, tho' not the withed Effect: And to Sailing along the Couft of France, brought fuch a Terror every where, that they were forced Night and Day to be on their Guard.

The King in this Year 1694, labouring by the often moving his Camp to bring the French to battle, but not able to do it, caused Huy to be Beneged, which with little refiftance he took and Garifoned; and the Prince or Paden with the Saxon and German Troops palling the Rhine, cut off divers in the Kear of the French Army it retiring before him; fo that he raifed Contributions and returned unoppoied; and after this on all hands the French parties Sconting abroad, were mostly deleated by the Contederates, killed and taken Priloners, bringing in great Booties of Cattle, &c. And whilst the French advanced I mewhat near the City of Leige, the Garison Saliyed, and took between 7 and 800 Horley entirely deteating two squadrons or their forrage Guards. These and the like matters ending this Campaign, the King returned, and was Welcomed home with the Universal joy of his People. But all their joy was foon turned into Asourning: For the Queen tell fick at Kenfington on the 22 of December 1694, and in a little time her Diftemper was known to be the small Pox, a diffemper Faral to the Royal Family; of which on the 28th the Dyed, in the 33d Year of her Age, and in the Flower of her Strength and Beauty, to the great affliction of the King and three Kingdon the lay a confiderable time in State, and then was Interred among her Roy, Ancestors in Henry the 7th's Chappel at Wetminster with a most Solemn Fameral Pompa Stately Mauloleum was Erected in the Abbey, whereon very remarkably a Robin-Redbreast for many weeks usually sat Singing. Not only the English Court, but most in Christendom, went into the deepest Mourning, and Condoleances were made not only by the Parliament, but the Foreign Ministers, &c.

67

The Clouds of forrow being a little blown-over, the King confidering of hiss-weighty affairs abroad, appointed 7 Able Ministers of State, Lords Justices in his ablence, to administer affairs of Government, and having fertled all things to the best advantage, passed to the Army in Flanders which drawing into the Field very Numerous Marched towards the strong Town of Namure, Situate on the Muse and sambre, and after a Vigorous Seige, carried on by the King with all Imaginable pravery and Gailantry, the? Mard al Boussers had thrown himself into the Town; and even in the tipht of Vineroy, at the head of an Army of an Hundred Thousand Mich, first the Town, and afterwards the Ca-

file was compelled to Surrender to the King.

This tedious Siege in a manner ended the Campaign, so that little else of moment happened, the French altogether declining a fartle, and the King having settled Affairs, upon his return made a Progress through most parts fingland. The Parliament beingdiscleved, a New one was caned, and uncert sing among other things, particularly upon the King's Recommending that important affair to them at the opening of the Sessions, took into Consideration the State and badness of the Coya, and coming to a refult, an Act passed for calling in the Clipped Money, and ke-coyaing in milit'd Money, according to the true Weight & Standar, and Mints were set up in divers parts of the Kingdom for the better ordering a speak supply of it in every part of the Natiog.

'a hill there things were doing, a make things happy and early to us, our Enemics were contriving our atter dell'ruction, divers were fent from France, to joyn with those already here, and one of the most wicked Conspiracies contrived, and a long time fecretly carried on, that any Age has known, or Hitrong made mention or; for whilf a Denga was laid in the French Court to havade the Kingdom, their Emmillaries here were framing a Design to deltroy the King's Life, by a villanous Affaifination, and Sir George Barclay brings over a Commission to encourage them in it: The Conspirators, many in Number, had divers Meetings, fometimes at one Capt. Porter's Lodgings, and others at the Nagg's-Head in Govent-Garden, and in Leaden-Han-Street, at the Sun in the Strand, the blew-polls in Old-Spring-Garden, in Pickadilly, and other places and leveral Perions as a Commerce from their Body, were appointed, as Knightly, Porter, King. &c. to view the Ground, in the King's palloge to Richmond, a place he utually Frequented, to acquaint the reliewhich was the most Convenient place to let upon him in his Coach, and cut him off; and accordingly they viewed the Avennues about Brentford, Richmond, exc. and concluded on the Narrow-lane between Bremtord and Turnham-Green, was the most convenient to do it in, where the Guards could pass but tew a Thealt; and with this, upon their return, they acquainted Sir George Barclay, Sir William Parkyns, Robert Charnock, and others, who approved it.

The Design thus laid, they sex: Consulted in what manner it thould be done, and came to a Result that one Party with 7 or 8 chosen Men inpul Assistance the King in his Coach, whilit two other Parties attacked the Charls, their Number in all being upwards of Forty; and the 15th of Yebruary 1695, being Saturday, a day the King usually went a stunting that way, was the first appointed time; and they prepared for it accordingly: But Providence so Ordered it that he went not abroad that Day, of which they had notice from two Orderly Men, as they fliled them, viz. Durance and Chambers, who Fat Kenfington concealed for that Purpole. Then they had other Meetings upon it, and appointed to be in a Readiness the Saturday following, and met accordingly, and were fetting out, when again they had Notice the fame hand of Providence had Dilappointed them. This flartled them into new Fears that their wicked Defign had taken Air, especially upon notice the King's going abroad was studdenly put off, and the Guards were come back inhafte, their Horles Eoaming, and Keys, one of the Conspirators heard them Mutter something which gave him and the rest a Jealousy to missruit a Difcovery was made, as indeed Providence had Ordered it; whereupon they Dispersed and gave over the Design. For Capt. Pendergrass being acquainted with this bloody Defign from Capt. Porter, about the 13th of February. at the Plew Posts in Spring-Garden, and struck with Horrour at so Stupendious a Wickednels, acquainted the Earl of Portland with it, intreating him to Discover it to the King, which he did; and Pendergrafs was thereupon introduced by him to the King in his Closet, where he opened the nature of the Conspiracy, with the Circumstances, but was a long time pressed to it before he would name the Confpirators, which at last he did, under Promise he should not be brought in for a Witness, unless he would voluntarily do it. This was feconded and confirmed by Monfieur De la Rue, who was introduced to the King by Brigadier Lewlon, who gave in the Names of those he knew: And much about the fame time came Expresses from the Duke of Wirtemburg, that the French Forces to the number of 22000, were drawn down to Callis, Dunkirk, and other Sea-ports, where there lay about 502 Transport-thips, and a great many Men of War to conduct them for their I anding in England with the first fair Wind, with the late K. James at the head of them. The Duke of Eerwick had been in England, and was returned with an account of what Pie arations their Friends were making here for their Reception, which made the French King fay, he never knew a Defign merfairly laid, for afforance of Success; and his Ministers bragged of it in Foreign Courts. And indeed a great part of the Fleet did put to Sea, before we had Notice of them; but were driven back by contrary Winds, and then lay expecting the Sign at Dever-Clifts that King William was Affaffinated; and it was given out in France, that he was drawing towards his end, and that they wen scredthat they beardnot of his Death: At other timer times it was faid he was Ki. 23 a Hunring, Sc. which makes it plain their intended Invation depended chiefly on their intence Affatfination; for K. William alive to face them at the Head of his victorious Troops that had often beat them at their own Doors, they could have little Hopes to prevail; but they on the other hand expected to find us all in Contunon, as they gave it out we were, it the Affathination had taken; but were thrangely thanked when they law Admiral Ruffel with about 60 Men of War blocking up their Harbours, and threatning to burn them with his Fire thips, which conftrained the Land-forces to Difimbark, and at length with Shame, Loss, and excellive Charge, gave over their Enterprize, which the French thought before to eaty, that they faid, K. James was not coming to invade England, but to take the quier possession of his Forone; as drive taking had fent him large bundles of plaunble Declarations to be dilperfed at Lis Landing, with a Promile to hupply him with more Troops as he flaw Occasion and Scotland as well as England was to have been invaded.

Whill there things were doing beyond the Seas, givers of the Compirators were Sched here, and imprifonce before the King put out his Prochamation, as Charock, bartram, Oranes, Embery and others; and the King going to the Houfe of Peers, and fen ing for the Commons, acquainted them with the Compiracy and included invalion: Whereupon they Congratulated his Safery, and declared their Abhorrance of the Villanous and Satbarous Benga, Solemnia.

ly Promiting to affilt him to the utmost against the Late King, and De his Royal Person against all his Enemies; and if he should come by a Vio. lent Death, (which God forbid) to Revenge it upon the Papills, and foon after entred into an Alfocustion to the fame Purpole; as fince all the Cities and Corporations, &c. in his Dominions have done; Expresses were fent immediately away to Scotland, and treland, the Sea ports stopped, and all Suspected Persons with their stories and Arms secured; and an Act passed for the continuing the sitting of the Partiament, it the King should chance to Dye. till the next Heir in Succession should come to the Crown to Dissolve it. Thus things being pretty well recured, and the King's Proclamation out for the Apprehending divers of the Comparators by Name, and 1000l. Reward with Pardon for fuch as thould come in Votastarily and make Discovery, most of them that were known to be in it were Apprehended.

On the 11th of March, Robert Charnock, Edward King, and Thomas Keys, were Tryed at the Old-Bailey on a special Contrabon, and upon full Evidence being found Guilty, they received Sentence as ... Sale or & gh-Treaton, and on the 18th were drawn to Tyburn and there Hang'd and Quarterel, Charnock and King boldly Confessing it in the Papers they left, and Keys made no De-nyal of it.

The next was Sir John Friend, a Brewer in the Minories, he took his Tryal for High Treason at the Old Bailey, and being found Guilty, as was also the next Day Sir William Parkyns, both of them received Sentence as the fore-going; and at their Execution, owned the Fact in General, and many Particulars, and were nevertheless Absolved by three Non-jurant Parsons, for which Prefiniption two of them were Committed, Tryed, and Fined.

The next that came on the Stage for this Horrid Confpiracy, were Ambrofe Rookwood, Robert Lowick, and Charles Cranburn; who were Tryed at the King's-Bench-Bar at Wellminlter, April, 21, 22, for High-Treason and the Fact being plain; they were found Guilty, and received Sentence; and according to it they were Drawn, Hang'd, and Quarter'd: Cramburn and Rockwood Contets'd what was Sworn against them; and Lowick said, he would willingly have affifted King James, had he Landed. The Heads and Quarters of these, and the others Executed, were fet on the Gates of the City, as terrible Examples of Offended Justice.

Two more were also brought to Julice on this Account, viz. Mr. Peter Cook, and Capt. Knightly; the first found Guilty upon a ling hearing, and the latter Pleaded Guilty to the Indictment, and both receiving Sentence, have hitherto found iparing Mercy.

Things being at this pats, the King having given Audience to the Venerian Ambailadors, who paffed through London in great State; and difmiffed them; Prorogued the Parliament, and leaving the management of Affairs in the hands of the Lords Juffices, went to the Army in Flanders. And the Duke of Savoy, contrary to the Mind of the Confederates, clapped up a Peace with France: No Memorable Transaction, except a Eattel between the Elector of Saxony, and the Turks in Hungary, has hitherto happened as to his Campaign, and Peace more than War, is at present the common Discourse.

And thus have I brought down this Hintory to the Year of our L O R D 1696, being the Eighth Year of the Reign of his most Excellent Majesty, King WILLIAM the Third, whom God grant Long to Reign.